Christmas in the Village celebration on tap

by Tom Montgomery Editor

The Christmas season in Cass City kicks off in earnest this weekend, and everyone is invited to share in the fun.

The annual Christmas in the Village celebration is scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 6, with activities for the entire family, from the wildly popular chili cook-off to a colorful lighted winter parade — now in its ninth year — in the evening, to visits with Santa and Mrs. Claus.

The day's events kick off at 10 a.m. with a large craft show that runs through 4 p.m. at Cass City Junior-Senior High School. Dozens of crafters sign up to showcase their wares each year, offering visitors a wide variety of Christmas gifts and other items.

Last year roughly 60 crafters signed up for the show, matching the annual holiday extravagana's most successful year ever, in 2011.

Once again, the Cass Theatre will be showing a free matinee both this Saturday and Saturday, Dec. 13, courtesy of Thumb National Bank. The doors will open at 1:30 p.m. and the movies will start at 2 p.m. The theatre will be showing "ICE AGE: The Meltdown" this week and following "Marmaduke" the Saturday.

Another popular attraction is the Christmas in the Village Chili Cookoff. Now in its 11th year, the event is sponsored by Knights Insurance Agency, Cass City, and pits the area's best chili chefs against each other with a year's worth of bragging rights at stake.

Here's how it works: cooks at local businesses will be preparing their best chili recipes — from mild to wild. Visitors can wander through town from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., tasting each one after purchasing a ticket to participate in the event. Trial slated for Huron Co. woman charged in fatal drug overdose

by Tom Montgomery

The Huron County woman charged in the fatal drug overdose of her boyfriend in March 2013 is scheduled to go to trial April 21.

That was the date set in Huron County Circuit Court, where Amanda I. Vanvalkenburgh, 23, is charged with a felony count of delivery of a controlled substance - causing death. Vanvalkenburgh, of Elkton, previously waived her right to a preliminary examination in Huron County District Court last month.

The March 27 incident took place at an apartment complex in Elkton, report in Sanilac County over the skinny build. where Vanvalkenburgh allegedly injected her boyfriend, 19-year-old Ryan A. Shemka, with methadone, resulting in an overdose.

According to Huron County Sheriff's Department reports, deputies were dispatched to the complex to investigate a report of a man who was unconscious and not breathing.

Sheriff Kelly J. Hanson said dispatchers worked with occupants of the apartment to initiate CPR. An Elkton Ambulance crew arrived and took over the life-saving efforts, but Shemka was pronounced dead at the scene a short

"It was learned that the victim...who had been temporarily residing at the apartment, had fallen asleep with his girlfriend in a closet used as a bedroom," Hanson said. "This was apparently after the two had spent several hours intravenously injecting each other with methadone and consuming

The investigation by deputies and the Elkton Police Department resulted in the request for a search warrant for a Colfax Township residence, where officers seized several methadone pills and a small amount of cash.

Bad Axe attorney Walt Salens has been appointed to represent Vanvalkenburgh, who could face up to life in prison if convicted.

Her bond was initially set at $3,500 (10 percent cash), but Huron County District Court Judge David B. Herrington later revised the amount to $10,000 (personal recognizance) at the request of Prosecutor Timothy J. Rutkowski, who cited the severity of the alleged crime.

Sanilac County Sheriff's deputies reported the robbery occurred at the Sunrise Marathon Station in Worth Township Saturday just before 6:30 p.m. A 19-year-old female clerk at the business called 911 at 6:26 p.m., according to Sgt. Nathan Smith.

"The initial investigation revealed that a male subject wearing a red hooded sweatshirt, dark colored blue jeans and black face mask entered the front entrance of the store and produced a black in color semi-auto pistol," Smith reported. "The male demanded money from the clerk, which she provided him from the register. The male subject then left the store and was observed by witnesses to be running southbound

There's no shortage of giving in village

You don't have to tell Cass City area residents about giving — just ask any family in the area whose friends have organized a benefit for them in a time of crisis or illness.

That spirit of giving locally is evident throughout the year, but especially during the Christmas season, and we're confident the community will come through as it always has for those who are struggling financially and in need of a helping hand.

You don't have to be wealthy to make a difference. Helping others could mean as little as donating a few dollars to Revive Ministries in town to help fund the organization's regular food pantries, or dropping off a new toy or article of warm clothing at Curtis Chrysler Dodge Jeep Ram in Cass City, which annually serves as the Cass City Rotary Club's Christmas for Kids headquarters.

Perhaps you have an elderly neighbor who could use a ride to the grocery store, or whose sidewalk needs to be shoveled and salted?

Or maybe you have a couple of free hours in your weekly schedule and could volunteer for a food or tov drive in the area.

Speaking of giving, we'd like to tip our hats to the Cass City business community for its generosity in making the local chamber of commerce's Christmas in the Village celebration a hit every year.

This year's event is slated for Saturday, Dec. 6, and we hope everyone will turn out for a full day of activities ranging from a craft show, chili cookoff and a free matinee at the Cass Theatre, to the lighted Christmas parade and community gathering featuring free goodies and visits with Santa Claus.

The celebration is made possible by contributions from several area businesses and organizations, and don't forget all of the hard work that goes into the event, most of it courtesy of a small army of volunteers.

As we said, Cass City knows all about giving. It's a tradition built on caring, compassion and a willingness to share and go above and beyond whenever a need arises.

It's what makes this community a wonderful place to live, especially during the holidays.

Slices of Life

A.M. or P.M. – When it comes to time, it's all in the details

"Does anybody really know what time it is? Does anybody really care?"

The idea of time and running late have been an issue since at least 1969 when the band, Chicago, sang this snappy tune. The lyrics came to mind this morning as I was lying in bed. I'd just rolled over to enjoy a luxurihusband asked, "You know your clock is wrong, don't

I sat up with a jolt. The red flickering lights said 6:21. Facebook. "It's really about 6:37," he said.

"Since when?" I asked, suddenly very wide-awake. "At least a couple days now," he said observantly.

I truly hadn't noticed. I only set my alarm when I have an early morning meeting, which is a rarity. Otherwise, I subscribe to the freer practice of "I wake up when one of the kids pulls on my toes" routine of life.

It's not that I don't value clocks. I've got one on my bedside table. There is another on my husband's side. We've got one in each of the kids' rooms. There are four in the kitchen, two on the computer, one in my van. And, of course my smartphone is up to the minute when it comes to time.

Still, I never really know what time it is. None of our clocks are set exactly the same. Even the ones in the kitchen. One will read 7:29 when the other across the room says 7:32. This may not seem momentous, but three minutes can be a deal breaker when you are running late for the school bus.

And a 16-minute discrepancy on your bedside clock is equal to an eternity by anyone's early-morning stan-

When I am on my A game, I set my clocks about five minutes fast. Even though I'm aware 5:05 really means 5:00, I operate like I don't know and believe this little trick helps me get to where I need to go on time. Some of the time. I don't pretend to understand the psychology of it. I'm just going with the flow and hoping not to be too late (versus slightly so).

More often than not though, time has its way of getting away from me. I don't think I'm alone. Who hasn't raced to an early morning work meeting or from work to the fifth grade music program hoping to get there before the final song is complete? I know I'm guilty of participating in similar true-life reality challenges at least twice a week.

If I do find myself with a handful of extra minutes, I feel the necessity to fill them with a quick run to the post office or a speedy zip through the car wash. Or maybe I just check my email or update an app. Whatever the activity, I am always challenging time, pushing the limits and trying to squeeze an extra second or two out of every minute.

In other words, running late.

So when I suddenly lost 16 minutes this morning, I was in a familiar spot. I dove out of bed and into the shower faster than you can say "snooze button," and didn't give my alarm clock another thought.

Until precisely at 6:30 this evening, when it finally went off. So much for me and clocks.

Reporter's notebook KISS? Not when it comes to DNR by Tom Montgomery Editor

One of the first things they teach you in journalism is the importance of KISS when you write.

Nope, I'm not talking about a PDA (public display of affection) or anything related to Gene Simmons, Paul Stanley and outlandish face paint. The acronym stands for "Keep it simple, stupid." It's also a design principle stating that most systems work best if they are kept simple, rather than made complicated; therefore, simplicity should be a key goal in design and unnecessary complexity should be avoided.

Guess the folks at the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) never heard of it.

Maybe my level of stupidity is just increasing with age, but have you figured out the latest hunting regulations/license structure?

'Okay, so I have to buy a 'base' license before I can buy a deer license, and I can't hunt deer with it but I can shoot rabbits and squirrels? Oh, I have to then buy a deer license, which will allow me to take one deer. What if I then want to buy a second license? I see, if I want two licenses, I have to buy them in a combo deal first instead of opting for the license that allows me to shoot one deer..."

Seriously, folks?

And that's just the tip of the iceberg. The last time I took a look at the state's fishing regulations, I pretty much gave up trying to figure out in what body of water I could attempt to catch trout, with what bait, at what time of the year, without being led out of the woods in handcuffs. Need proof? Here's the DNR's intro to understanding inland trout salmon regulations and maps:

"Color coded maps have been developed to assist anglers in locating inland waters that contain trout and salmon and the regulations that apply. See pages 46-50 for a description of regulations concerning streams, gear restricted streams, and inland trout lakes. Stream Types 1-4 and gear restricted streams are differentiated on the maps by color (Type 1 are green, Type 2 are yellow, Type 3 are orange, Type 4 are blue, and gear restricted steams are red). Please note that some gear restricted steams have split regulations. Any lake regulated by Type (A-F) will be labeled in red text and the lake will appear shaded in dark blue or will appear as a blue dot on map..."

What the....? Yeah, that's a good idea, publish instructions like these and expect people (well, guys) to read them anymore than they do the paperwork that comes with that new lawnmower or leaf blower.

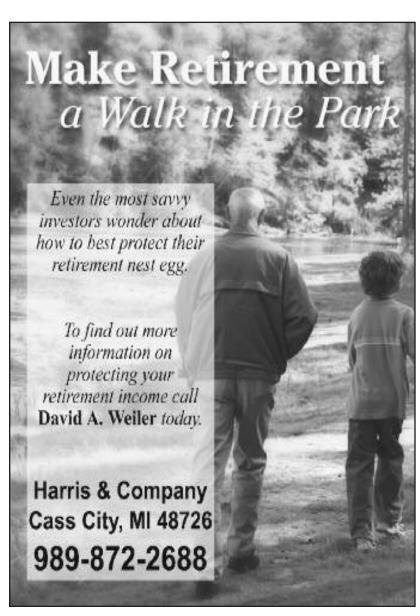

Okay, I realize this is all supposed to be about wise stewardship of natural resources, but is it really necessary to create this sort of confusing mess AND charge an arm and a leg to hunt in your own backyard? Hopefully, most sportsmen will try to make sure they're enjoying their sport legally.

But I wouldn't count on it any more than I would predict that the state's education "experts" are likely to come up with an easy-to-understand and score standardized test featuring clear-cut objectives and which doesn't penalize well-performing schools. Having results that serve a useful purpose wouldn't hurt, either.

Anyway, it seems to me the DNR would have much better luck getting more folks outdoors, hunting and fishing, if they just simplified things a little (or a lot).

In the meantime, I'm seriously considering taking up another hobby where the regulations are a little easier to understand, like building my own space capsule for a solo manned flight to Mars.

Through the use of hands-on agricultural lessons, Cass City Middle School teacher Jenifer Green brings not only science to life for fifth graders, but also language arts, reading, math and technology. Her agriculture-based lessons are so popular that former students often make return trips to her classroom to reminisce about the projects and what they learned. For those reasons and more, the Michigan Farm Bureau (MFB) has named Green, of Cass City, the organization's "K-12 Educator of the Year". MFB honored the 20-year veteran school teacher during the Dec. 2 awards ceremony at the MFB 90th Annual Meeting in Grand Rapids.

Hundreds of area residents flocked to Cass City Saturday for a day full of family activities in conjunction Village celebration. Saturday night's community gathering drew a big crowd, with residents warming up in the Cass City VFW Hall and enjoying a variety of snacks, while youngsters — more than 250 of them waited their turn to visit with Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus.

Cass City sophomore Josh Jensen is week's recipient Schneeberger's Athlete of the Week award. The ladies of the Presbyterian church are very much pleased with the result of their Christmas bazaar and feel that their finances have been greatly increased through these efforts. The excellent line of fancy work which the ladies displayed, along with their home made candy, the supper served Thursday evening and the entertainment of Friday evening, netted them $175.00, while the rummage sale which they have conducted gave them $125.00 returns. Thus the ladies in less than two weeks added $300.00 to their treasury.

Robert Warner sold five spring pigs 7 months and 10 days old Saturday which averaged 276 pounds in weight. The largest one tipped the scales at 320 pounds and was probably the largest hog at that age ever purchased here. For the five pigs he received a check for $89.60, and had the local buyers been able to ship their stock to the Buffalo markets, Mr. Warner's check would have called for a larger amount.

When John Crocker telephoned the Chronicle that Paul Bien and Ray Meiser had been lost while hunting near his farm, the boys planned to get something on John. They have it now. John, they assert, had started home from viewing a new piece of land he recently purchased when he came across a fox trail. This he followed for some time and finally discovered he couldn't locate himself. The boys claim he didn't find his home until late that afternoon and that he was lost on his own farm.

Falls can be preventable

Officials with the Injury and Violence Prevention Program of the Department Michigan Community Health (MDCH) and the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging (OSA) recently observed Falls Prevention Awareness Day.

Falls are the leading cause of fatal injuries for Americans age 65 and older. Nationally, more than 18,000 older Americans die every year because of a fall, and that rate has increased dramatically over the last ten years.

"The good news is that through identification and reduction of risk factors, falls are preventable," said Nick Lyon, director of the MDCH. "By raising awareness and encouraging preventative measures to protect against falls, we can help keep older adults safe in Michigan.

Fall-related deaths are on the rise, with the numbers reflecting a 118 percent rate increase from 1999 to 2012. In 2012, falls resulted in 740 deaths for people age 65 and older and 14,425 hospitalizations due to fall-related injuries.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), falls among older adults cost the U.S. health care system upwards of $30 billion annually.

"Falls are not a normal part of aging and most of them can be prevented by taking a few simple steps," said OSA Director Kari Sederburg. "I encourage everyone to...spread the word about this important issue and learn more about how to keep yourself and your loved ones safe from

Studies show that a combination of interventions can significantly reduce falls in the older adult popu-

Experts recommend a physical activity regimen with balance, strength training, and flexibility components; consulting with a health professional about getting a fall risk assessment; having medications reviewed periodically; getting eyes and hearing checked annually; and making sure the home environment is safe and supportive.

Aging organizations across the United States have programs like Matter of Balance and Tai Chi which help older adults gain strength, improve balance, and increase confidence to help them stay healthy and preserve their independence. Call the Eldercare Locator at 800-677-1116 to connect with your local Area about these programs.

Some references claim that Cass City got its name from the Cass Jonathon Cass, who had fought in River, which was named after the Territorial Governor Lewis Cass, but articles in two early Cass City Chronicle newspapers state that the day, when Lewis was still a very town was named after Gov. Cass

The very first merchant in the area was a lumberman by the name of Nathaniel Clerk who had a store to

The story goes that his two daughters, Annis and Mary, suggested it to their dad, and he suggested it to the township board, and it was accepted.

Lewis Cass was born in 1782 in Exeter, N.H., the son of Captain the Revolutionary War and was with General George Washington in the encampment at Valley Forge. One young lad, the new President George Washington came to Exeter on a tour of the new country and actually shook hands with Lewis. George Washington and his father were his

Shortly after that, Jonathon was commissioned as a major and was assigned to serve under General Anthony Wayne. He would have fought in the Battle of Fallen Timbers, but suffered a kick from a horse, resulting in a broken leg. His leg never did heal right and it ended his military career. He then became a homesteader on his property, which was near what is now Zanesville, Ohio.

While Jonathon was away, the family stayed in Marietta and Lewis conbook he could buy or borrow, and he also worked in two different law eventually set up his own law office in Zanesville and became a circuit rider lawyer. He was the first certitraveled around the state, fording rivers and streams, and even camping out when accommodations could not be found. Wherever he went for a court case, people would come from miles around to witness the courtroom drama as one of the only the time. Court was held in taverns, barns or any other accommodations that were available as courthouses had yet to be built.

Lewis married Elizabeth Spencer, and during their marriage they had four children - three daughters and one son. Their names were Isabelle, Mary, Matilda and Lewis Jr. Lewis was a very dedicated family man, but his profession required him to be away from home more than he liked. Lewis became very involved in the Masonic Lodge in Ohio, and later started the first lodge in Michigan. A plaque in his honor stands in the Cass City Village Park, commemorating his contributions as a member of the Masons, a fraternal organization of high personal ethics.

Through his personal connections, Lewis learned of a conspiracy by Aaron Burr, the former vice president under Thomas Jefferson, and the one who killed Alexander Hamilton in a duel, to start a resistcolonel in the Ohio Militia along with Duncan MacArthur under General William Hull, the territorial governor of the Michigan Territory, to fight in the War of 1812 against British forces

The British had a system of enlistby giving them gifts, whisky, and paying them for the scalps of American settlers they killed. One of the Indian chiefs was named Tecumseh and had led a raid against settlers near the Raisin River, near where Monroe, Mich., is today, and "Remember the massacred them. Raisin" became the battle cry. Cass and MacArthur were livid because they knew they could have prevailed against the British.

> After his testimony, he was promoted to brigadier general of the U.S. Army and assigned under General William Henry Harrison of Ohio to continue the battle after his surrender sentence term had expired. Together with the success of Admiral Oliver Perry in defeating the British on Lake Erie, and their victory in the Battle Thames (Chatham, Ontario, today) the war was won. Chief Tecumseh was killed in the battle. Along with the British being now out of the picture, this helped to dampen the warring attitude of the Indians.

Lewis was then named the new tertinued his studies, reading every law ritorial governor by President James Madison for the Michigan Territory, which at that time included offices while still a teenager. He Michigan, Wisconsin and the eastern part of Minnesota over to the Mississippi River. Detroit became the center of the territorial governfied attorney in Ohio after it became ment, but was poorly equipped a state in 1802. As a circuit rider, he because the war had left the infrastructure and crops destroyed, the troops withdrawn, and the Indians not acclimated to accepting the new American authority. It didn't help that the first surveyors sent to the state got discouraged and left after taking a short sample and declaring forms of entertainment available at that Michigan was swamp and mosquito infested, and unfit for settlement. This upset Cass greatly and he petitioned petitioned, and Washington to send another surveying team and supplies to support civil order and survival. He was eventually successful and began to govern, establishing the state into counties, townships and villages in a similar fashion he knew from his knowledge of Connecticut. He was also successful in setting up the state's educational system and supporting the beginning of the University of Michigan.

> Cass was probably most noted for his ability to negotiate with the Indians. He took the time to learn their culture, and hated the way the British had used them. He was a teetotaler himself and very aware of what "fire water" would do to the Indians, and did his best to keep it away from them.

He developed a reputation among the Indians as being an honest and ance movement in the Louisiana fair negotiator, but also a brave and Territory.
