Cass City couple whose seven-year-old daughter has diabetes is organizing a golf outing, auction to boost research efforts

Fore Kylie

by Tom Montgomery Editor

Kylie McKee may appear to be a typical seven-year-old — full of life with energy to burn – but the Cass City girl lives with a potentially lifethreatening disease.

McKee, the daughter of Earl and Becky McKee, was diagnosed with Type 1 diabetes at the age of four.

The McKees noticed some troubling health issues with Kylie early on and were quick to seek medical attention, enabling them to begin the challenging task of managing their daughter's diabetes. However, they have hope that researchers will soon find a cure for the disease, enabling Kylie and thousands of other Michigan youngsters and adults to live normal lives without dependence on insulin.

Towards that end, the McKee family has organized a golf fundraiser to generate money for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF).

The first-ever Fore Kylie Charity Golf Tournament is slated for Sunday, Aug. 9, at Rolling Hills Golf Course in Cass City. A shotgun tee will kick off the event at 10 a.m.

The cost is $65 per person and $260

According to the Centers for (CDC), the prevalence of diabetes among Michigan adults increased by 40 percent between 2001 and 2010.

According to Huron County Sheriff Kelly J. Hanson, the incident was reported Monday shortly before noon.

"Our office was dispatched to a farm work shed at 2585 Bad Axe Rd....which was the scene of a believed semi-trailer maintenance accident," Hanson said. "Apparently, farm workers there heard an explosion noise come from the shed. When they went to see what the noise was, they found fellow co-worker Kenneth J. Meldrum, age 47, of Bad Axe, underneath a work bench, as if he had been thrown there.

"It appeared as if he may have been airing up a trailer tire and the rim exploded and separated, impacting with him. It threw him nearly 14 feet, where he came to rest under the work bench," Hanson said. "It was believed the tire and rim were then stopped by that work bench.'

Cemetery Walk are again inviting research, writing scripts, and area residents to take a trip back in time this fall to "meet" several of Cass City's notable citizens.

Preparations are well underway for the third annual event, and officials are encouraging those planning to attend to purchase their tickets early - the tours sold out quickly for both of the previous cemetery walks and are expected to this year as well, in spite of plans to again expand attendance at the popular event. In all, 200 tickets will be up for grabs, an increase of 50 over 2014.

Ticket prices for the cemetery walk have been increased from $7 to $10 and go on sale Monday, Aug. 24, at Rawson Memorial District Library. There will be no early sales, and tickets will not be available at the event.

"I've had people calling me. In March people were asking me when tickets were going to be available," said Rawson Memorial District Library Director Kate Van Auken, who is again spearheading organization of the local cemetery walk along with Katie Jackson, Doris Jones and Jim Ware. Also playing a key role each year have been Elkland Township Cemetery Sexton Steve Wright and his crew, who have fully supported the project.

The 2015 Elkland Township Cemetery Walk has been scheduled for Sunday, Sept. 27, with a rain date of Sunday, Oct. 4.

Four tour groups will simultaneously take the tour at 2 p.m., with another four groups scheduled for 4 p.m. Each tour will include wagon transportation for those unable to physically walk the tour route.

Since the dawn of time, people have had opinions on everything from politics to the best way to make fire to whether a club or spear is better for hunting the wooly mammoth.

online.

Please play it safe in the water, folks

The dog days of summer are upon us, prompting many to take a dip in order to cool off and enjoy time with friends and family, whether it's at a Lake Huron beach or in your own back yard.

Have a good time, but please take a few moments to consider every precaution that could make the difference between a great summer memory and a life-changing tragedy.

Trooper Mark Swales, the community service trooper at the Michigan State Police post in Caro, is reminding all area residents of the dangers related to drowning – the nation's fifth leading cause of accidental death for all ages and the second leading cause of unintentional injury among children ages one to 14.

In fact, nearly 350 youngsters ages five and under drown in residential swimming pools each year, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC), and an estimated 3,600 children go the emergency room after near-drowning accidents each year.

"Kids drown quickly and quietly," said former Michigan Department of Community Health (MDCH) Director Janet Olszewski. "A drowning child cannot cry or shout for help. If a child is missing, always check the pool first – there's no time to spare."

Even a near-drowning incident can have lifelong consequences. Kids who survive near-drowning may suffer brain damage — after four to six minutes under water, the damage is usually irreversible.

Water safety experts say that the most important precaution is active supervision. Although a majority of parents say they supervise their children while swimming, many acknowledge they engage in other distracting activities at the same time – checking email, talking, eating, reading or taking care of other children.

Education is another key to safety, according to Swales. "To reduce the risk of drowning, it is important for parents to teach children proper water safety at a young age," he said.

And, it goes without saying that certain activities – drinking, for example – don't mix with swimming, diving or boating. According to the U.S. Coast Guard, in 2012, alcohol was the leading factor in water-related deaths, What's the takeaway? All those Facebook Likes are making us act drunk and mean, not to mention faceless, which is ironic. (But that's just my opinion.)

We all possess ideas, perspectives, beliefs, viewpoints and opinions. That won't change. And it's safe and logical to say we all believe our opinion to be the astute, intelligent and correct one. That's okay.

Disrespecting others is not. It has, however, become the norm – or at the very least commonplace.

Call me naïve or behind the times or even a wooly mammoth, but that makes me sad. Because in addition to opinions, we all have feelings. And words – whether spoken or on a screen – can hurt. If you were here, I'd tell you that to your face and we could talk about it, the old-fashioned way, maybe even over Sunday dinner.

Wouldn't that be nice?

Jill Pertler is an award-winning syndicated columnist, published playwright and author. Don't miss a slice; follow the Slices of Life page on Facebook.

I've mixed these 2 up before; these being the words diameter and circumference.

In last week's Rabbit Tracks, I wrote that deBeaubien Lawn Service (see letters to the editor starting on this page) discovered an unexploded firework that "appeared about 8" in diameter" behind the high school.

What I should have written is that the explosive in the photo I was shown looked to be about the size of an 8" oblong circle, which would be the explosive's circumference.

My apologies to anyone affected by my being a dim-wit.

On the other hand, I was pleased, as a newspaper man, that the Chronicle's Rabbit Tracks blurb created an uproar (again see letters to the editor starting on this page) on the social media networks.

While no pleasure was taken from hurt feelings between community members, I do feel pretty good that reports in the Chronicle were able create a flow of dialog on the subject, which is one function of any news agency. As the Chronicle's former publisher – my dad, John Haire - always told me: "It's when people stop commenting on what you write, that's when you should start to worry."

while operator inattention was the leading factor in water-related injuries.

Swales encourages area residents to keep in mind these additional safety tips:

*Only swim in areas supervised by a lifeguard or adult. *Stay within designated swimming areas. Don't swim near piers, pilings, platforms, docks, fishermen or tethered boats.

*Never swim alone, and don't swim too far from shore. *Heed warning flags at public beaches. A red flag means conditions are hazardous and you should not swim.

*Children or inexperienced swimmers should wear a U.S. Coast Guard-approved flotation device (PFD).

*Pay attention to local weather conditions and forecasts. Stop swimming at the first indication of bad weather.

*Always enter the water feet-first. Never dive headfirst into the water, especially in areas you're not familiar with.

*Beware of rip currents and undertow. If caught in a rip current, swim parallel to the beach until you are out of the current, then swim to shore.

*Never leave a child alone near a pool – not even for a minute to answer the phone or doorbell.

*Designate a responsible adult to watch the pool as the lifeguard.

*After swimming, remove all toys from the water and deck to avoid attracting young children into the pool unsupervised.

Keep a phone and lifesaving equipment – a pole, rope and personal flotation devices – near the pool.*

*Enclose the pool completely with a self-locking, selfenclosing fence with vertical bars.

*Never leave furniture near the fence that would enable a child to climb over the fence and into the pool.

Remember, play it safe out there. After all, you can't put a value on an ounce of prevention when it can save a life.

Report led to false accusations in town

Things printed in last week's Chronicle have precipitated a letter from us in regards to the actual events of July 8, 2015.

At approximately 10:25 a.m., our son, Mike, was mowing around the back of the high school (a little history: we have been mowing the schools for years. After every fireworks display there is always paper debris in the grass). On the 8th, Mike was mowing as usual, when he drove over what was an undetonated firework, which exploded. There was a loud bang, and a witness stated he looked over and there was a 20-foot cloud of smoke around Mike's mower.

We did a police report about the event, and to stop any panic in town, did not tell anyone except those necessary to complete the investigation.

We inspected the deck on the mower, which has a 3/16-inch deck (not $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch as stated in Rabbit Tracks). To be safe, we had the mower inspected by the dealer and paid them for this service. We did not ask for any monies from anyone to compensate us for this. Their privacy policy does not allow them to give out that documentation to anyone other than the owner of the machine.

We did talk to a school official, and with their aid, were able to canvas the area for any more fireworks. A small 2 1/2-inch round unexploded firework was found in the grass that had been fired but never detonated in the sky. It was removed by local officials. There was no 8-inch round ball found, as they don't use any that large in their show.

We talked to a Chamber member, who was skeptical of our story, although the events were well documented Please turn to page 8.

The federal duck stamp, required annually for all migratory waterfowl hunters age 16 and older, costs $27.50 via E-license, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) online hunting, fishing, ORV and snowmobile license sales system.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service increased the price of the duck stamp this year, the first price increase in 20 years, with plans to increase its focus on the conservation of wetlands with the additional funds.

As with all other non-kill-tag items purchased through E-License, those who buy the duck stamp online will receive the item as a PDF attached to an e-mail. Customers can save the PDF to their mobile device for display or size and print it for carrying afield.

Unlike other DNR items, the electronic Federal Duck Stamp is considered temporary and will be legal to hunt with for up to 45 days from purchase, during which time the customer will get a physical stamp in the mail from Amplex, the stamp distributor.

Stamps that are lost in the mail or returned due to an incorrect address will be replaced at no cost. It was a large rectangular box, hardly hidden in one of our spare bedrooms, and my eyes were instantly drawn to the brightly-colored packaging that silently shouted all sorts of really exciting phrases at me: "Extreme Commander 3!", "Twin 390 Turbo Engines!", "Speeds up to 210 Miles Per Hour!"

Okay, I made that last one up. The package claimed a top speed of 15 knots.

Still, I found myself feeling a little like I did on Christmas Eve when I was a kid, knowing this package had to contain the greatest toy ever. Reminded me of the gas-powered model airplane I received when I was 10 or 11. It was one of those planes connected to a pair of lines and a handle, enabling the operator to fly it in circles while turning around and around. I probably would have been really dizzy if I had ever managed to get the thing to work properly.

Fast forward to my latest discovery: turns out the three-foot long remote control speedboat in the big box was for me, although I later learned it was meant for some silly future celebration such as my 39th birthday.

Surprise! Well for me — it's certain my wife wasn't surprised that I had that thing out of the box and was charging the battery the next day.

What is it about toys that attract guys even after they've long passed their mid-life crisis and are thinking about retirement? Maybe it's the fact that many – if not most – of us never really grow up completely, although the toys we gravitate towards evolve over the years to one degree or another.

Yeah, I know there are some women out there thinking, "Oh, my husband doesn't act like that - he's too mature and dignified for...blah, blah, blah."

Whatever. Maybe you don't know him as well as you think? Or maybe he thinks he's too old to play with toys. That's a shame, because as far as I'm concerned, if you're too old to act like a kid, you're just plain too old.

In any event, it wasn't long before I loaded up the remote control with eight AA batteries and was admiring those monster Twin 390 turbo engines. I gathered everything I needed and headed down to our pond. It was evening and the water was like glass. Perfect.

I don't want to make any of the other guys out there jealous, but this is one of those toys that perform as advertised. The boat has a nice pick-up and, with the remote controller in expert hands, makes tight turns and figure 8s that make for some really cool wave jumping. The mini-rooster tails are cool, too.

Anyway, I guess it all boils down to just having the sort of fun you did when you were a youngster, that wonderful time when responsibilities pretty much centered on bringing home decent grades, keeping your room picked up, doing dishes occasionally and getting your backside home on time at night, regardless of how much fun you were having at the park with your friends.

These days I spend more time "playing" on my small tractor than I do with remote controlled boats. And, the truth is, I could easily say goodbye to most of the toys of my youth without going through too much withdrawal.

Just keep your mitts off my Rock 'Em, Sock 'Em Robots.

home care nursing company in Pigeon — became alarmed. "I decided to check her (blood sugar) here and it was too high for the meter," she said, adding the blood sugar range for a youngster should be in the neighborhood of 80 to 200 milligrams per deciliter – Kylie's reading was 623

"They're (diabetics) not producing any insulin at all, so it can cause death," Becky noted. "There are a lot of kids who aren't diagnosed and die."

The couple wasted no time, taking Kylie to the emergency room at Hills and Dales General Hospital. They were then sent to Covenant Hospital in Saginaw, where the Cass City Elementary School third grader was admitted and spent the weekend undergoing treatment.

The family returned home to begin the process of implementing a strict regimen of blood sugar monitoring and diet limitations for Kylie. "She can have anything, we just have to count the carbs in it," Becky said.

"It's (diet) not what she eats, but how much she eats," added Earl, a medical equipment sales representative for Healthcare Solutions in Saginaw.

At first, the couple was checking Kylie's blood sugar a dozen times a day. "We would check before meals, in between meals, before bed, at 2 a.m.," Earl said, adding they were also checking the level before Kylie would participate in physical activities.

Kylie was also having to undergo at least four insulin injections a day, a practice made easier when the McKees began using a device that conceals the syringe so their daughter wouldn't see the needle coming – a sight that can be much worse than the pain from the injection itself, Becky pointed out.

NO MORE SHOTS

"She did shots for a year. Now she's on a glucose pump and a continues blood sugar monitor, and that basically gave her a lot of freedom," said Becky, who explained Kylie wears both the pump and monitor, which have permanent ports or inserts under her skin.

Tickets for cemetery walk on sale next month tery walk, Van Auken describes the activity as a walk-through history lesson featuring actors who tell the stories of a handful of past local citizens — each having left their own positive legacy in the community.

"It's just a different activity in a unique venue you wouldn't expect," she added.

The popularity of the event doesn't surprise Van Auken.

"I think it's interesting — not only do people here give back financially and volunteer-wise, but there's also a rich history, and people want to know more about it," she said.

The 2015 cemetery walk in Cass City will feature the following past citizens:

*E.B. "Chick" Schwaderer, portrayed by Dick Wallace.

Schwaderer, born in 1893, was perhaps best known for expertise in construction. His own company built roads (including paving por-tions of M-81, M-53, M-46 and M-24 in the Thumb), air strips and concrete bunkers at military installations throughout the state. He also constructed the first public swimming pool in Cass City and was instrumental in the construction of athletic fields, Hills and Dales General Hospital and the local library.

*Isabelle "Belle" Schwaderer, por-trayed by Norma Wallace.

Chick Schwaderer's wife, Belle was born in 1900 on the family farm near Greenleaf. She worked at Cass City State Bank, and her contributions to the community were many and included civic, church and "airplane spotter" activities. *Adam Benkelman, portrayed by Bob Battel.

Born in 1824, Benkelman was an apprentice cooper (barrel maker) as a teen and went on to become a skilled craftsman. A native of Belgium, he along with John Striffler built the first store in Cass City for Nathaniel Clark. It was Clark who suggested the name Cass City in honor of Lewis Cass, the second territorial governor of Michigan.

Barbara Hutchinson.

McCullough, born in 1904, was a teacher in Illinois and Alpena before coming to Cass City to teach at the then-new high school. She later worked at a local drug store purchased by her husband, Raymond "Mac" McCullough and his brother, Dale Churchill. Glenn "Scotty" McCullough. McCullough was also involved in many community organizations.

*Harold "Doc" Oatley, portrayed by Kim Glaspie.

Oatley, a long-time educator and active citizen, was well known for his leadership and influence in Boy Scouting. Born in 1908, he's credited with helping 15 young men earn scouting's highest rank — the Eagle.

*James Hitchcock, portrayed by Tommy Fulcher.

Born in 1830, Hitchcock was among the early settlers of Cass City, a tinsmith who turned his craft into a very successful business. He built Hospital and eventually went to the "Finest Opera House in the work for well-known Cass City Thumb" on the north side of Main Street between Leach and West streets.

*William Audley Rawson, portrayed by Joe Van Auken.

A farmer born in 1893, Rawson was elected Elkland Township supervisor and went on to serve as a state representative and state senator. His bill requiring traffic to stop for students ceeds expected to total $2,000 this entering and exiting school buses is year.

*Esther McCullough, portrayed by credited with saving countless young lives across the state and country. The Rawson name is well known, in part due to the family's generous donation of $60,000 to build the library at its current location at the corner of Pine and Seeger streets.

*Dr. Harry Crandell, portrayed by Dr. Crandell is remembered as a beloved veterinarian who treated farm animals of every size and description. Born in 1914, he was a staunch supporter of 4-H and the Tuscola County Fair for more than 25 years.

*Irene Freeman, portrayed by Kate Fernald.

Freeman, born in 1911, was a nurse who worked at the former Pleasant Home Hospital in Cass City before buying the hospital and operating it for 26 years. Also active in civic organizations, she later worked at the then-new Hills and Dales General physician the late Dr. H.T. Donahue.

While the walk is designed to be entertaining as well as educational, organizers also utilize the event as a fundraiser. All proceeds are donated to the American Cancer Society.

The walk generated $800 in its first year and $1,050 in 2014, with pro-

"The continuous glucose monitor links to our phones, so we know what her blood sugar is all the time," Earl said, adding if the levels exceed a basic range of 80 to 200, an alarm sounds.

Long-term, Becky explained, a blood sugar level that is too high can result in a variety of serious health problems down the road. A level that is too low – resulting in symptoms such as shaking, sweating and irritability – is more dangerous in the short-term because it could cause Kylie to go into a coma.

While the glucose pump has made life easier, it's far from being a "set it and forget it" device, according to the McKees, who must program the pump to deliver a certain amount of insulin every time Kylie eats (the dose is based on the number of carbohydrates in any given meal or snack). One of the biggest challenges is keeping a close eye on how quickly the doses can change due to growth, activity and other factors when you're dealing with a youngster, they noted.

The McKees decided to organize their own fundraiser after participating in a JDRF walk event last year in Bay City.

"It seems like Type 1 diabetes - it doesn't get the recognition (other diseases do)," Earl said. "You can't look at her (Kylie) and see something's not right. She does everything that all the other kids do."

"People just don't know what we have to do to keep her going," Becky added

In addition to busy schedules and the demands of Kylie's diabetes, the McKees have been busy contacting businesses and other potential donors in an effort to beef up the upcoming tournament. "We're looking at (getting more) teams, hole sponsors, silent auction items - any sort of donation," Earl said. "A lot of the businesses have been good. They've been supportive."

Becky agreed, adding other organizations have been generous, too. The Detroit Red Wings have donated an autographed photo of Dan Cleary, for example, while the University of Michigan has chipped in such as T-shirts and other clothing with the school logo. Golf courses in Ubly, Pigeon and Verona have all donated free rounds.

The McKees indicated they appreciate all of the support to-date. They have high hopes their tournament and others like it will make it possible for Kylie and thousands of others to live each day without having to keep tabs on blood sugar levels or doses of insulin.

In the meantime, Kylie seems to be taking everything in stride, focusing on the things she should be at this age: having fun and simply being a kid.

"I would say she's accepted it from day one," Earl said of her diagnosis. "She's done great, I think," Becky added. "She plays softball, she's in gymnastics. It doesn't hold her back."

Lock in propane contracts now

With propane supplies significantly above the five-year average, now is the time for Michigan's propane customers to lock in prices ahead of the heating season, according to the Michigan Agency for Energy (MAE).

'It may still be summer time, but signing propane contracts now – instead of waiting for the heating season - can result in significantly cheaper propane for customers," said Valerie Brader, MAE executive director. "To help propane customers, the Michigan Agency for Energy has useful tips on selecting a propane provider. (Our) consumer tips sheet covers pricing agreements, delivery arrangements, fees and other charges, the pros and cons of renting and owning a propane tank, contacts, and a list of helpful questions to ask before signing a contract."

Propane prices in Michigan and in 30 other states spiked during the 2013-14 heating season after cold temperatures and other factors led to tight supplies.

While propane prices are not regulated, MAE does monitor supplies and makes available weekly, statewide average residential prices on its website during the heating season. Additional information is available on the Michigan.gov/propane website.

Energy assistance is expected to be available in October for low-income propane customers, who are encouraged to call 211 at that time to be directed to an agency near them for help.

driven by a 47-year-old Snover man was traveling east on Cumber Road when he lost control of the vehicle,' Washkevich said. "The four-wheeler exited the roadway and struck the north side ditch bank, causing the (vehicle) to overturn and throw him off into the ditch.

"He was located by a passing motorist at 8:25 a.m.," she added. 'Local residents advised that they had last heard a four-wheeler going by on the road at approximately 1 a.m. on July 18."

The man, whose name has not been released, was transported to Hills and Dales General Hospital in Cass City. He was later transferred to Covenant Hospital in Saginaw for treatment of serious injuries.

"The accident remains under investigation," Washkevich said. "He (driver) was not wearing a helmet,

"Night out" event on tap

County Night Out. The event is slated for Thursday, Aug. 6, from 4 to 7 p.m. at the Tuscola Technology Center, 1401 Cleaver Rd., Caro.

The activity is being held in conjunction with the annual Caro Area Camp 911, according to Tuscola County Undersheriff Glen Skrent.

"We are 'piggy backing' the National Night Out with the Camp 911 event since some of the same first responders will be at the Camp 911," Skrent said. "MMR (Mobile Medical Response) hosts the Camp 911 and has two a year in our county. They teach kids about safety.

"Our all-hazards group decided to try the National Night Out event, but thought since it's the first one ever in our county, we would use the same date as the Camp 911 event," he added, noting the gathering will feature area police agencies, fire departments and ambulances crews, as well as demonstrations involving equipment such as the Jaws of Life.

Organizers hope to have the sheriff's department's emergency operations trailer set up, and plans call for the arrival of a Michigan State Police helicopter. The Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) will also be participating.

"It's a way for the public to meet the first responders (informally), instead of in an emergency," Skrent said.

The National Night Out is a community-police awareness activity that takes place throughout the United States. The event has been held annually since 1984 and is sponsored by the National Association of Town Watch in the United States and Canada.

Organizers say the annual community-building campaign promotes policecommunity partnerships and neighborhood camaraderie to make neighborhoods safer, better places to live. It also provides an opportunity to bring police and neighbors together under positive circumstances.

Businesses interested in helping to sponsor the Tuscola County event are encouraged to contact the sheriff's department at (989) 763-8161 (ext. 2235).

Blurb led to false accusations and the evidence was conclusive that the events had in fact happened as we have stated.

Having talked with the fireworks company, we were reassured. He was not injured, although we were scared about what may have happened, as others in town are now

We have talked extensively to the fireworks provider, and he is a very conscientious man. They did do a sweep of the area after the display on Saturday night, July 4. They did everything they are required by law to do. They used thermal imaging to canvas the area. Their number one concern is safety, being involved in fire fighting themselves.

The blurb in the Chronicle last week caused someone to post on social media that there was no blast, and that we were only looking for something free. Social media is not the place to air your grievance. Also, many false accusations were put out around town about us personally, and to that I say, there has never ever been any underlying agenda with our company, or either of us personally.

Our family has the utmost respect for the fireworks company. They have been very courteous and understanding of our initial panic. They have reassured us about the firework and what caused it to explode. We have talked to them since the piece in last week's Rabbit Tracks came out. We hope they will be back next year, as the firework's display was wonderful.

We care about the safety of the citizens in this town, especially the children. They should be encouraged to never touch anything that looks like a firework, and to let an adult or parent know immediately if they see anything they think looks suspicious.

The Chronicle was a little overzealous when reporting the events. We did not find out that the piece had been printed until Wednesday noon, when we received our paper in the mail.

We want to again assure everyone that our son was not injured. Many of you kindly expressed concern for his safety, and we thank you for that concern. This town is a safe place to raise a family, with a great school system.

Regards,

Shelley and Blaine de Beaubien Cass City

also say, "Don't slap away the hand that protects you." Sadly, it now appears the politically correct American military is doing just that.

Last year Marine Lance Corporal, Monifa Sterling, was court-martialed for posting a Bible verse on her office computer at Camp Lejeune, N.C. The verse: "No weapon formed against [me] shall prosper..." Isaiah 54:17. Charges stated that this passage of scripture could "easily be seen as contrary to good order and discipline." Really? This particular verse is one my wife and I claimed and prayed over our own Marine son while he served two intense combat tours in Afghanistan. Our boy returned safe and sound, declaring he felt the power of prayer from home.

American armed forces of yesteryear did not believe this way. General Washington was quite aware of God's providential hand during the Revolutionary War, and in one quote said: "I am sure that never was a people, who had more reason to acknowledge a Divine interposition in their affairs than those of the United States... which was so often manifested during our revolution ... " Andrew Jackson acknowledged the Lord's influence after the Battle of New Orleans in the War of 1812, stating: "It appears that the unerring hand of Providence shielded my men from the shower of balls, bombs, and rockets, when every ball and bomb from our own guns carried with them But the war on God begun by a mission of death."

The old adage says: "Don't bite the now being persecuted for their faith, edged God when he returned to the Psalm 2:1-4, 12: "Why do the hand that feeds you," but we might but I can tell you the victorious Philippines: "I have returned. By the nations rebel and the people plot in grace of Almighty God, our forces stand again on Philippine soil." General Dwight Eisenhower, upon ordering the invasion of Sicily, saluted his men and then bowed his head in prayer. Then, commenting to the officer next to him, said: "There comes a time when you've used your brains, your training, your technical skill, and the die is cast and the results are in the hands of God, and there you leave them."

None of the great and successful military leaders of our past could identify with today's godless service. The case of Monifa Sterling and others would never have been an issue. General Lucifer aeons ago has now come I don't have space to tell you of Douglas MacArthur, Supreme down to us and we foolishly side other Christian military personnel Commander of the Pacific acknowl- with him in the conflict. Such folly.

vain? The kings of the earth take their stand and the rulers conspire together against the Lord and His anointed One. The One enthroned in heaven laughs; the Lord ridicules them... Pay homage to the Son, or He will be angry, and you will perish in your rebellion, for His anger may ignite at any moment. All those who take refuge in Him are happy."

There are no atheists in foxholes. The American military above all should know this. And rather than pushing God's hand away, declaring war on Him, we should be seeking His strong arm of salvation - the only thing that will ensure our future. Blessings.

Area youth interview to serve as 4-H Ambassador representatives

Huron County MSU Extension officials recently revised the county's 4-H Ambassador Court Program and interviewed youths interested in serving as representatives.

"Understanding the long tradition of fair 4-H king and queen and the emotional ties that come with this tradition, a committee of adult and youth 4-H council members met to design an Ambassador Program (that) will take into account some of the aspects of Huron County's Royalty Program," said Cathryne Goulet, 4-H program coordinator, MSU Extension – Huron County. "The committee has proposed three tiers of the Ambassador County Program: Senior Level Ambassador Court - Junior Level Ambassador Court - Cloverbud Ambassador Court.

"The senior and junior ambassador tiers will take into account the members' active participation in Huron County's 4-H along with the ability to take on commitments and responsibilities, as well as being a positive representative of Huron County,' Goulet explained. "There will be three ambassadors chosen and recognized at the senior and junior tiers. Cloverbud ambassadors will be recognized as they have been in the past."

Navigating this danger is tricky, even for professionals, and should never be attempted by homeowners under any circumstance," he added. work is bad enough, but some homeowners go one step further and try to finish the job alone, which further impairs situational awareness. The third reason, he continued, is improper use of tools

'Homeowners who use incorrect, faulty or complicated tools may hurt themselves and others while attempting tree work. Chain saws, for example, are incredibly dangerous and easy to misuse. A common mistake is "Even homeowners who know their to use a dull chain saw, which forces Andersen said. "Many homeowners also make the mistake of using the chain saw to cut branches on the ground. This can result in chain saw kickback, and painful injuries, when the bar tip hits the dirt or other foliage. "Misused ladders are another common source of injury," he said. Andersen says there are three reasons homeowners should leave tree work to the professionals.

The first is lack of knowledge and training

"Safe tree work requires extensive knowledge of tree physics and biology, which can take years of experience and study to acquire," he said. "For example, felling a tree in a controlled manner is not as simple as cutting through the trunk with a chain saw. It requires establishing a drop zone, making precise cuts, and sometimes guiding the tree safely to the ground with ropes as leverage. When homeowners attempt this, many are injured or killed when the tree falls in an unexpected direction.

"Up-ended root plates or root balls are also unpredictable," Andersen added. "Severing the trunk of a fallen tree from an up-ended root plate releases tension, which may be strong enough to pull the stump and root ball back into the hole, trapping anything or anyone nearby underneath it.'
