

For $1,146 Ellington to use landfill

Residents of Ellington township will use the Cass City Sanitary Landfill and the village of Cass City will have an extra $1,146 to use for dump operation.

An agreement between the township and the village, engineered by Trustee Bernard Ross, was revealed by President Lambert Althaver Tuesday night at the regular meeting of the council.

An agreement providing $1.50 for the 764 persons in the township was signed by the Ellington board.

Official approval by the village was delayed because a clause prohibiting general contractors from using the landfill was inadvertently omitted.

When this is added, it is expected that the agreement will be placed into effect.

Essentially, the one-year contract lets Ellington residents use the facility on the same basis as Cass City and Elkland township residents are using it now.

SIDEWALK HASSEL

One of the council's sidewalk improvements has made a property owner irate, Althaver reported. Mrs. Harry Crawford who owns the building where Wash King Laundry and Detroit Edison are located refuses to pay for sidewalk installed five years or so ago.

Mrs. Crawford claims that the new walk isn't as good as the old one it replaced. The council has placed the charge on the tax rolls and turned it into the county where it is listed as a delinquent tax.

Normally, sidewalk assessments are due within three years after it is installed. In other business concerning sidewalks in the village, a new walk on Houghton in front of the Methodist Church and Parsonage was authorized with the church paying 50 per cent and the village the remainder of the cost.

Gulp! computer goofs

The computer made a mistake, Al Witherspoon told members of the village council Tuesday night, while discussing the retirement program for village employees.

As a result, what was thought to be an unexpected windfall in the first year the program was in operation, proved only to be a delay in the charge to the village.

The first year the cost of the retirement-insurance program was some $900 under what was expected.

This year the plan was budgeted at $2,500 on the basis of the previous year's experience.

But the mistake by company officials was discovered and as a result the increase for this year and the deficit to be covered from the previous year has placed the total bill at nearly $5,400, the council learned.

Witherspoon pointed out the bill now was the same as outlined to the council before the plan was adopted.

Probe pool, park problems

FROM THE
Editor's Corner

Big names in the printing business were scarcely known outside the trade a decade ago. Most of the big suppliers were American firms that had been in the machinery supply business for many, many years.

While many of the old names, Harris, Kelly, Mehlie, have survived and in some instances consolidated. . . other companies now supplying printers are known to practically everyone.

With big booths at the Print 68 Amphitheatre in Chicago were DuPont, 3M, Kodak and IBM, all with sparkling displays.

It was billed as an international show and it truly was. Manufacturers from England, Germany, Japan, Italy and Sweden were present.

Japanese technicians were prominent everywhere. . . both with presses and with cameras. The cameras they used to photograph new competing machines on display. . . taking as many as 20 close-up pictures of various features of units running at the exhibition.

"They'll have a copy of this press in about a year," one company representative said somewhat bitterly.

Besides the excellence and efficiency of the machines, the one facet of the show that impressed was the enormous expense.

There were literally hundreds of presses running throughout the show. . . some of giant size printed on stock that cost somewhere in the neighborhood of 15 cents a sheet at the rate of about 4,000 per hour. . . others printing 16-page papers at the rate of 25,000 per hour.

All of this waste paper had to be removed and a representative confided that for each barrel carted away from the booth the owner was charged $6.50. Some of the presses fill a barrel in 15 minutes or so.

Another manufacturer told about getting a part for a machine. Since he is not allowed to touch it inside the Amphitheatre he said that it cost $42 to have it taken from his plant to the show and over to his display where his mechanic installed it.

The victim was found in a ditch along the north side of the road.

The car was traveling west on Riley when it left the road. There were no witnesses to the crash, but it was known to have been raining at the time of the accident.

In another one-car accident, Kenneth Rosenstangel, 23, was injured but not hospitalized Saturday after his car left Colwood Road at M-81 in Ellington Township.

Rosenstangel told Sheriff's deputies that either his left front tire blew or something went wrong with the front end. He had been traveling north on Colwood at 35 miles per hour when he went into a skid, and his car left the road.

The front end of the Rosenstangel car was demolished. Berniece Irene Beller, 40, of Akron, was injured when the car she was driving was involved in a collision with a vehicle driven by Nancy Jane Hunter, 24, of Cass City.

The Beller vehicle was backing out of a parking place when struck by the Hunter car, traveling north on Leach, 1/4-block north of Main. Both vehicles were damaged.

Mrs. Beller was treated by Dr. H. T. Donahue and released.

Changes in the operation of the Cass City wading pool are necessary if the village is to keep it operating, Dr. D. E. Rawson told members of the village council Tuesday night at its regular meeting at the municipal building.

The health department is not happy about wading pools generally, Rawson continued, and to operate we must empty and fill it every day.

To meet the standards set and keep the popular park wading pool operating, the village will use a stand-by pump to quickly empty the pool so that it can be refilled and used each day.

The wading pool was one of several minor problems concerning recreation that was aired by the council.

Because of the late start of the summer recreation program this year the program will run five weeks instead of six, the council decided.

Vacations late in the summer keep attendance down, experience of previous years has shown. The five-week program was okayed for this year only and it is expected that the normal six-week program will be resumed next year.

NEW PARK

The new park in southeast Cass City is not yet in operation, but Little League diamonds are expected to be ready in about two weeks, Rawson told the council. The Lions Club has indicated that it would like to help with this park's development, instead of paying for the purchase of the land, it was revealed. Telephone poles for the backstop at the diamond will be installed free by General Telephone.

FORMAL USE

One of the first formal uses for the addition of the woods at the Recreation Park will be by the Cass City Girl Scouts who will use the area for a three-day day camp outing in August.

Plans will be worked out with the park committee, the council decided.

OKAY ORDINANCE

Another recreation related measure was adopted by the council Tuesday. It is an ordinance controlling and licensing private swimming pools.

The ordinance was reviewed at a previous meeting of the council and passed Tuesday. It calls for a building fee of $7 and annual inspection fee of $2.50. The complete ordinance is published in this issue.

One killed, two injured in accidents

Helen Irene Kelley, 44, of East Dayton Road in Caro, was killed Tuesday, June 18, when the car she was driving left Riley Road, hit several tree stumps and hit a tool shed.

Tuscola County Sheriff's deputies found the car next to the tool shed, located 40 feet north of the roadway. The car apparently hit the stumps, then left the ground, as indications were that the car was approximately seven feet off the ground when it struck the building.

The victim was found in a ditch along the north side of the road.

The car was traveling west on Riley when it left the road. There were no witnesses to the crash, but it was known to have been raining at the time of the accident.

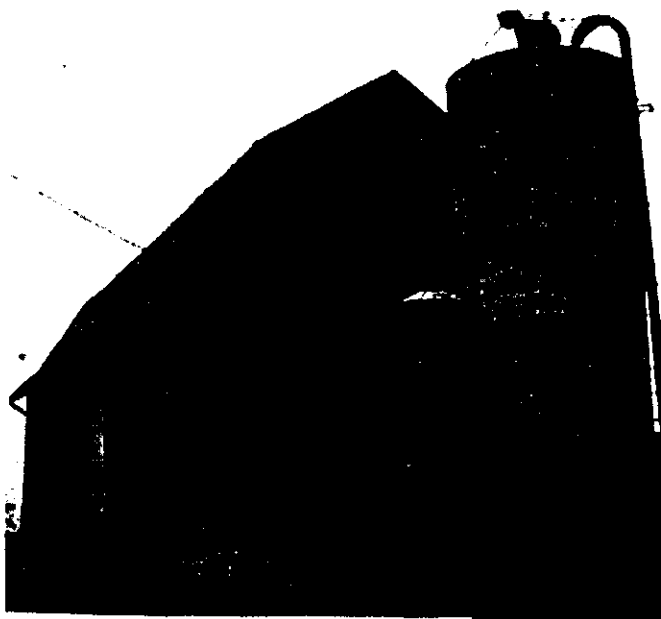

In another one-car accident, Kenneth Rosenstangel, 23, was injured but not hospitalized Saturday after his car left Colwood Road at M-81 in Ellington Township.

Rosenstangel told Sheriff's deputies that either his left front tire blew or something went wrong with the front end. He had been traveling north on Colwood at 35 miles per hour when he went into a skid, and his car left the road.

The front end of the Rosenstangel car was demolished. Berniece Irene Beller, 40, of Akron, was injured when the car she was driving was involved in a collision with a vehicle driven by Nancy Jane Hunter, 24, of Cass City.

The Beller vehicle was backing out of a parking place when struck by the Hunter car, traveling north on Leach, 1/4-block north of Main. Both vehicles were damaged.

Mrs. Beller was treated by Dr. H. T. Donahue and released.

Loomis barn haven for lazy cows

BY LARRY WERNER

Some cows sure have it easy. Or, if it isn't one thing, it's the other.

Dave and Don Loomis run a dairy farm, west of Cass City on Cedar Run Road. They started in 1950 with six cows, raised as 4-H projects. Today they are building a barn which looks like a modern business building and which promises to take all the fun out of dairy farming.

With tile floors and electric heat, the Loomis "Astrobarn" is a glaring example of what has happened to the old-fashioned dairy farm.

And the cows on the farm will be living the life of Riley as a result of the modernization.

"We decided that we would have to modernize to stay up with the times," Don said. "Ten years ago, you wouldn't have heard of such a thing."

About 1 1/2-mile north of Cass City Road, on Cedar Run an unpainted barn, with all the traditional cracks and creaks of a vintage, early 20th century dairy shed, appears to be hiding in shame. For, not 300 feet away stands the old gray barn's replacement --- slick and sassy, a genuine sign of the times. Just inside the attractive yellow brick building, Dave will point with pride at the paneled office. The floors aren't finished, yet, but he will show you a sample of the tile-like material which will adorn the floor and ceiling, and he will assure you:

"This material doesn't need wax to keep a shine on it." After you have gotten over the wild idea of a farmer being concerned about the shine on the floor of his barn, take a look at the heating plant. The Loomis barn uses electric heat to maintain an even temperature for the contented cows. "It is actually very economical," according to Dave. "Compressors that cool milk generate heat which is utilized by the furnace to heat the parlor in the milkhouse."

Next to the compressors is a water softener. "The machines stay cleaner if they are washed with soft water," Dave explained. The next stop on the tour is enough to prompt Old MacDonald to turn in his milking stool and get a job with IBM. The milking parlor is completely tiled. Tile, the brothers

220 students for Cass City

Owen-Gage board begins redistricting

The Cass City School District will receive approximately 220 additional students and $4 million of taxable property when the dissolution of the Owen-Gage district is completed.

These estimates are based on a survey of the Owen-Gage district indicating to which districts property owners prefer to be annexed. Allen Fennell, superintendent of the Owen-Gage school district, compiled a tentative allocation of properties in his district as to how they will be redistributed. Property south of the Huron County line and east of Colwood Road will become part of the Cass City district, with properties north and west of these lines going to either the Laker district or Unionville-Sebewaing.

However, Fennell pointed out, the survey revealed isolated properties in the redistricting. Property owners whose preference did not conform to the overall plan will require further negotiations, Fennell said.

One or more elections will be needed to culminate the merger and reallocate properties. The election or elections will be held sometime during the 1968-69 fiscal year. This was decided at a meeting between the Cass City and Owen-Gage school boards, July 10.

"The reason for the meeting was to show to the board the parcels of land with which we are still having difficulty," Fennell said, "and to assure them that we plan to hold a vote on this matter."

Discussion of plans for dissolution of the district have been underway for several months. On February 28, the two boards met, and it was announced that Cass City was prepared to accept students of the Owen-Gage district.

At that time, Fennell was awaiting results of the survey. On June 10, a tentative map of the property transfer was presented. The map was derived from the survey.

Fennell said the map indicated "perhaps 200 to 220" students and property evaluation of "slightly over $4 million" will accrue to the Cass City School District.

The redistricting election is scheduled for sometime between July 1, 1968 and June 30, 1969.

"The original plan was to hold the vote after school is out next year," Fennell said. "But it was decided that students would not be taken out of school during the year; so we can hold the election at any time."

Fennell does not expect much action to be taken on the matter this summer.

Don Crouse, Cass City superintendent, said the Cass City board is very much in favor of the merger.

"The real benefit is larger enrollment in the school system," Crouse said. "As a school system grows, it can operate more efficiently. A small school cannot offer specialized courses; the enrollment is not large enough."

Cass City will have little difficulty accommodating the additional students, according to Crouse.

"A good number of the students are in the elementary grades," he said. "They will continue at Gagetown. There will probably only be 50-75 new high school students."

When the merger is completed, the Cass City district will take over the Gagetown school building. The Owendale building will go to the Laker district.

Funds to add classrooms to these buildings have already been approved by the Owen-Gage voters.

Elementary grades will remain at Gagetown, and high school students will transfer to the new Cass City High School.

The present tax base for the Cass City School District is $20,967,406. The addition of property formerly in the Owen-Gage district, will increase the total tax base for the district by approximately 20 per cent.

However, it is difficult to determine at present, Crouse said, how financially beneficial the merger will be. The district may receive more operating funds and consequently receive less state aid.

YOUTH PROGRAM TO BEGIN MONDAY

The summer recreation program for students who have completed kindergarten will begin at 9 a.m. Monday in the Campbell Elementary gym. The program is for children through grade 6.

Included in the activities will be a bike parade, arts, crafts and contests.

Directors of the program are Mrs. Barbara Tuckey and Jerry Cleland. Children may begin the program at any time. There will be no program July 4.

SPORTS FANS!

BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

By H. M. Bulen

Some baseball fans go a whole lifetime without ever seeing a triple play -- but fans who attended a minor league game in Ponca City, Okla., June 28, 1957 had the unusual experience of seeing not only one triple play, but two of them -- IN SUCCESSIVE INNINGS! . . . The first triple play came in the last half of the first inning, and then there was another one in the top half of the second!

What was the worst beating a pitcher ever took in one inning in big league baseball history? . . . Well, there was a poor fellow named Tony Mullane who pitched for Baltimore in 1894 . . . In one inning that season he was allowed to stay on the mound while 22 men came to the plate! . . . He gave up seven walks, 12 hits and 16 runs in that one inning!

Here's an interesting quiz for you. . . The following sports stars had movies made about their lives -- Knute Rockne, George Gipp, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Ben Hogan. . . Now see if you can name the actors who took the part of each of these sports stars. . . Rockne was played by Pat O'Brien. . . Gipp by Ronald Reagan. . . Ruth by William Bendix. . . Gehrig by Gary Cooper. . . And Hogan by Glenn Ford.

One For The Road:

Horse disappears from Army ranks

By Dan Marlowe

The horse is making a comeback, but not in the U. S. Army.

At a time when private ownership of horses is steadily increasing, the Army is out of the horse business. The papers carried the word the other day of the death of Chief, a 36-year-old bay gelding which was the last government-owned cavalry horse.

Chief, the equine equivalent of a man 108 years old, had been in retirement at Ft. Riley, Kansas, for many years. The current war in Viet Nam is carried on by Chief's many successors, the jeep, the truck, the tank, the plane, and the helicopter.

Mounted horse cavalry was used in combat by the United States for the last time early in World War II. The 26th Cavalry Regiment was all but destroyed by the Japanese on Luzon at Bataan, and the Cavalry as such ceased to exist.

The Army still makes use of 40 horses although it doesn't own them. Ceremonial funerals at Arlington National Cemetery still employ matched teams of blacks and grays which are used to pull the caisson with its casket to the gravesite. These horses are trained to ignore the distractions of military bands and the firing of graveside salutes.

The caisson section horses are trained, fed, exercised, and groomed by soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 3rd Infantry at Fort Myer, Virginia, which adjoins the cemetery. Caisson horses have always been part of the Army establishment in Washington. They are used in services for generals, admirals, and other officers down to the rank of warrant officer. They can be replaced by motor hearses if the family requests it, however. In recent years the most publicized appearance of the caisson horses was during the widely televised ceremonies attending the funeral of John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

Caisson horses observe strict protocol. The caisson is pulled by six horses with three riders mounted on the left. A fourth rider, usually the section sergeant, leads the way on a horse not hitched to the caisson. If the dead soldier was a general officer or had ever served as an officer in a cavalry or mounted unit, a black riderless horse is led behind the caisson.

Until recently, only Chief remained of the thousands of horses once listed on Army rolls. When the 2nd Cavalry Division was activated at Ft. Riley for World War II, more than 6000 horses were stationed at that post alone.

In addition to the caisson horses on call, the Army has a dozen horses at Olney, Maryland, which are used to provide serum for vaccines employed at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research. And two mules are kept at the military academy at West Point for "moral purposes."

Aside from that, the mounted Indian scouts and the troops of cavalry with banners flying ride now only on television screens.

FOR SHERIFF

Republican Primary

August 6, 1968

In every political campaign, candidates have a tendency to make all kinds of generalized remarks, promising this and promising that and making the kind of remarks that you'd expect from someone who has "talk experience" only. I'm not much of a talker -- I believe in letting my performance speak for me and prove my worth as a candidate for re-election as your Sheriff.

HONESTY-INTEGRITY . . . this administration has been kept free of the kind of scandal and intrigue that others have been shamed with. I believe in honesty and integrity first and men who do not share this approach to law enforcement with me have no place on our sheriff's department.

DIVERSIFIED FORCE . . . believing that a county department should have deputies from all parts of the county, I have tried to employ deputies equally from all areas of the county. Our full-time men and women now come from Cass City, Unionville, Millington, Gilford, Vassar, Deford, Fairgrove and Caro.

CLEAN OPERATION . . . year after year state jail and financial inspectors have praised the operation of your sheriff's department and jail. I believe in operating as efficiently and economically as possible. In our jail, prisoners are treated humanely because I believe that our job is not to arrest only, but by personal interest and example to try to help rehabilitate offenders -- especially the young first offenders.

BROADENED SERVICES . . . from a small rural department, the sheriff's department has developed into a modern police and emergency force--one of the outstanding rural sheriff's departments in Michigan. Properly uniformed, better trained and more professional men operate your sheriff's department. I have felt it important over the last several years to improve communications, modernize the records system, increase and expand regular and main patrol and enforcement, take advantage of training available and to make greater use of services available from the state police. In addition, I have sought to broaden the number of special deputies to provide for any emergency.

EQUAL ENFORCEMENT . . . the people of this county have entrusted me with the duty of enforcing the laws--and this I intend to keep on doing. Sometimes political expediency has led candidates to "lay off" during election years. Our arrest records, our traffic enforcement files and our excellent record of clearing cases shows this department is not afraid to do its job and to do it as equitable and fairly with everyone as it is humanly possible.

COOPERATION . . . never has there been closer cooperation between the Sheriff's Department and other law enforcement agencies of the area. Cordial working relationships, not only in day to day contact, but in periodic joint-conferences as well, have made sure that the citizens of this county are getting the full benefit of all state, federal and local police services.

There are many other areas which I would like to visit with you about--but these are a few which I believe especially important as you make your decision at the primary. Being your sheriff is a round-the-clock job and the pressing work load will keep me from meeting as many of you as I would like. But, I hope that you will give me the opportunity to keep building your county law enforcement program. . . never has there been a greater need for experience, for honesty and integrity and for full-time devotion to the job. These I pledge to you.

Book Review 'Wanderer' tribute to Gibran's ideas

By Rev. R. J. Searls

Mrs. Little was absent from the library, and Mrs. Keating was in charge. She sent along three books which I choose to review in this column.

When I was in college, the 'in' thing to carry and to quote was 'The Prophet' by Khalil Gibran. Now he has a second book, heir of the first, 'The Wanderer'.

Despite their religious bent, these pithy sayings are easy to read. One warning: because they sound like the Bible, they should not be confused. Read them as beautiful literature, but avoid classifying them as Biblical.

I imagine that there have always been books like 'Books and the Teen-age Reader' by G. Robert Carlsen. The subtitle tells us more completely what we can expect: 'A Guide for Teachers, Librarians and Parents.'

The third book that I read for this week's column is a novel by Yael Dayan entitled 'Death Had Two Sons.'

In Beersheba, the town of Abraham, an old man lies dying. Once the dying man had been forced to choose one of his sons to be shot.

Personally, I liked the book; I found it to be sufficiently interesting and reasonably well written.

THE WANDERER, by Khalil Gibran, Alfred A. Knopf, N.Y., 1966, 92 pp. BOOKS AND THE TEEN-AGE READER, by G. Robert Carlsen, Harper and Row, N.Y., 1967, 218 pp.

These all may be obtained at the Elkland Township and Cass City Library.

Agent's Corner Milk products many and varied By Mrs. Ann Ross Extension Agent Today's homemaker doesn't have to wait until Dad milks the cows. She can store a wide variety of milk products right in her refrigerator and on her kitchen shelf, says Mrs. Ann Ross, Thumb Extension Home Economist. The most versatile milk product seems to be non-fat dry milk. It can be used in about as many different ways as its packaged. Use it in its dry form in cooking and baking. In baked goods, dry milk doesn't have to be reconstituted -- sift it with the dry ingredients and add the required water with the other liquid. You might watchers can whip it to use instead of cream -- just follow the directions on the package. For greater nutritional value, put extra dry milk powder in meat loaf and hamburger. It contributes additional body and calcium when you add it to fluid milk, too. You can even make your own mixes -- from white sauce to biscuit -- using non-fat dry milk powder. Condensed evaporated milk is also available. Substitute evaporated milk for cream in your coffee and for cream that's whipped in refrigerator desserts. People who use reconstituted evaporated milk as a beverage often mix it with flavorings like chocolate syrup. Condensed milk is another canned milk product. The sugar preservative determines its use. You'll find it handy to use in unbaked cookies and candies, and it's also good in cocoa and other sweetened beverages. Finally, there are the three perishable milks that require refrigeration. Fresh whole milk, fresh skim milk and 2 per cent milk are best known as beverages, but use them interchangeably in most recipes which call for liquid milk. Real milk is real milk - but it comes in different forms.

Commission tells plans for Thumb roads

The State Highway Commission has approved an engineering report on the proposed 14.7 mile extension of M-24 between Caro and Unionville in Tuscola County. The Commission said the extension will fill a need for an all-season state highway connecting Caro and communities to the north. Bids will be taken during the present five-year program ending in mid-1972, at a date to be determined later, on a project to link M-24 in Caro with M-138 (Unionville Rd.) six miles south of Unionville. This work includes: ---Reconstruction of nearly a half-mile of Ellington St. between south of Frank St. and M-81 in Caro, providing five 12-foot traffic lanes, curb and gutter within a 100-foot right of way. ---Reconstruction of nearly a half-mile of Cleaver Rd. just north of Caro, providing five 12-foot traffic lanes, curb and gutter within a 100-foot right of way. ---Reconstruction of nearly eight miles of Cleaver, Bieble and Unionville roads between north of Caro and M-138 south of Unionville, providing two 12-foot traffic lanes within a minimum 150-foot right of way. The engineering report also calls for reconstruction of the six miles of M-138 south of Unionville, providing two 12-foot traffic lanes within a minimum 150-foot right of way, and reconstruction of six-tenths of a mile of Unionville Rd. in Unionville, providing four 12-foot traffic lanes, curb and gutter within the existing 66-foot right of way. The Commission said, however, that because of limited construction funds, the M-138 and Unionville projects will not be scheduled until some time after mid-1972. Existing M-24 begins at I-75 northeast of Pontiac and extends north through Oakland, Lapeer and Tuscola counties to Caro, linking areas of diversified land use ranging from the highly urbanized Pontiac area to the sparsely settled farmlands of Tuscola County. Estimated cost of projects covered in the engineering report is $5.3 million, including $768,000 for acquisition of 106 parcels of right of way.

Local boy leaves for Alaskan trip

Phil Keating, 16, of 6401 Huron, Cass City, was one of 20 boys to leave Wednesday for a three-week excursion to Alaska.

The trip is under the direction of Edward J. Kuhn, teacher of economics at Hazel Park High School.

Phil and 19 other boys from across the country have earned at least one-third of the trip's cost. Parents may supply the balance.

Purpose of the excursion, according to Kuhn, is to give boys the opportunity to see and appreciate Alaska and to teach them to save for something worthwhile.

Kuhn's trips are revivals of the late George E. Buchanan's "On-to-Alaska" excursions. Buchanan, a Detroit lumber and coal dealer, had taken more than 500 boys on Alaskan trips before his death. Kuhn had gone on Buchanan's trip and has now revived the project under his own direction.

Phil earned money for the trip by working as a lifeguard at the community pool.

FOREIGN STUDENTS

Five in Cass City Wednesday, July 3, and will leave on Sunday, July 7. There are no special programs planned. It is the hope of the Council that normal family courtesy and hospitality will be accorded the guests in hopes that they will feel at ease.

Local officers of the Council are: Mrs. Donald Reid, chairman; Mrs. J. D. Tuckey, co-chairman; Mrs. Fritz Neitzel, secretary, and Alfred Goodall, treasurer.

Any families interested in being host to a foreign student should contact one of these officers or their parish pastor.

An ounce of accomplishment is worth tons of good intentions.

THE LOOMIS BROTHERS --- Dave (left) and Don --- show off their completely-tiled, heated milking parlor. Tile is easier to clean and not much more expensive than cement blocks, the brothers say.

WATER USED TO CLEAN the equipment in the Loomis dairy barn is prepared with water softening equipment, shown here. According to Dave, at right, soft water requires less soap than hard H2O.

ALTHOUGH THE COWS in the Loomis dairy barn will be treated like queens, there may be a time when one or two become sick. When this occurs, the hospital area above will be utilized.

Loomis cows have easy life in futuristic dairy barn explained, is easier to clean and costs about the same as cement blocks. And it is at this point that the tourist notices the split-level design of the ultra-modern structure.

The barn is built on three levels so that the cows need not climb to milking stations, located slightly higher than ground level.

Next is the hospital area -- complete with maternity ward -- and the "cold-covered" free-stall loafing barn.

The loafing barn is just that. There are stalls on both sides of the long, narrow living area. A conveyor belt will carry feed to the animals, who simply loaf and never again have to worry about roaming the pasture for food.

The feature one expects to find next is a sun porch for afternoon tea parties.

Loomis cows may not be planning any parties, but a sun porch is exactly what the brothers will show you.

A fenced-in patio adjoins the rear of the barn.

"This is for when the cows want to get out in the sunshine or get some exercise," Dave said.

"But this is as far outside as they'll ever go," Don added.

It may seem unnatural to prevent cows from roaming outdoors, their exposure to nature restricted to ruminating on a small cement slab. But the Loomis brothers will quickly point out the advantages of this type of arrangement.

"The cows stay cleaner, and it is better for their health," Don said.

"Keeping feed in a silo is cheaper than keeping a pasture," said Dave.

"You have a more consistent feeding program year round from a silo," said Don.

"You don't have to go outside to get the cows for milking," Dave said.

The quick, rational answers suggest that the brothers considered all the angles before striking out on construction of their futuristic barn. In fact, they had been planning to simply remodel their old facility, but the expense of such a project convinced them that they may as well build a new one.

Dave and Don are certain that their project will yield increased production and decreased labor.

The new equipment should allow the brothers to milk 60 cows an hour. The days of stooping to milk their cows are over for Dave and Don Loomis, as these farming partners prove by their technological innovating that farming is no longer a leisurely family occupation.

"It's big business," Don said. "I don't think there are many bigger businesses."

Dave and Don agree that it is very difficult for a young man to enter the farming profession today.

"We inherited the land and got help from our folks," Dave said. "But it took years to build up the land to grow the crops to get production."

Dairy farming is growing rapidly, the brothers point out. And the individual farmers must modernize and move with their profession.

"Once we got started modernizing there was just no stopping," Don said.

While looking over his mammoth space-age loafing barn, and contemplating the day when the cows will be moving in, Don admitted, "In five years' time, they'll come out with something 100 per cent better than this."

More pupils eye more education

Cass City is showing a remarkable interest in post-high school education, evidenced by the fact that 56 per cent of the 1968 Cass City High School graduates have been accepted for some type of higher education.

Perhaps more surprising is the number who have been accepted at four-year academic institutions: 43 of the 102 graduates, according to Jerry Cleland, school guidance counselor.

"This indicates that not only students, but parents are becoming interested in further education," said Principal Arthur Holmberg.

Cleland points out that these figures are very impressive for a rural community like Cass City.

"We do not have an extremely well-educated populace," Cleland said. "There is not the emphasis on education here that there is in some towns. Thus, these figures are particularly high considering the type of community."

Besides the 43 members of the class of '68 planning to attend four-year colleges, six are headed for two-year schools and nine have chosen some sort of technical training.

The 56 per cent planning further education is considerably greater than the figures for as recently as 1960. In that year only 43 per cent applied for any type of post-high school training. The number eventually accepted and enrolled would be considerably smaller.

"I think very definitely, in the 30 years I've been here," Holmberg said, "that people have begun to realize the importance of education."

According to Cleland, the village has undergone a "minor cultural revolution."

But why? The community has not grown significantly. Why an increased interest in higher education?

"The community has changed from a strictly rural community to part-rural, part-industrial," Holmberg said. "People brought to the community by industry have added yeast to the ferment. Not only that, but native people have developed increased interest in the cultural areas."

Many villages in Michigan's Thumb and throughout the country grew out of farm settlements and have owed their subsistence to agriculture.

Agricultural communities have not traditionally been prime producers of college students. In Cass City, a growing interest in higher education has been accompanied by a loss of interest in farming.

Only four members of the 1968 graduating class expressed a desire to farm for a living.

"The only boys who tell us they are going back to farms," Holmberg said, "are those whose families have a strong tradition of successful farming."

The dramatic growth of interest in higher education will continue, if two types of institutions are attracted to the area: more industry and a junior college, according to Cleland.

"If industry would move in, and there were a junior college within five or six miles, the interest in education would increase," Cleland said.

Holmberg and Cleland agree that the construction of the new Cass City High School has had much to do with the increased interest in education. They point out that students enjoy school more, and the villagers' pride in the building has made the school the center of the community.

And so, an academic orientation, an interest in education beyond high school, has resulted in a greater production of college educated Cass Cityans.

But, those who leave for a college education, usually do not return. Cass City and other small towns cannot attract the college graduate.

In a survey of high school seniors taken in March, 50 per cent who were not planning to go on to school said they wish to live in Cass City. Of those planning on college, 34 per cent said they will return.

"The opportunities for employment are elsewhere," Holmberg said.

Cass City is producing college graduates but not retaining them. Needed, say a pair of local educators, is industry to provide positions for those with college degrees.

Until industry arrives, however, the village can pride itself on the fact that 56 per cent of its high school graduates are going on to school. And localites can boast that they are providing the cities with qualified personnel for the industry Cass City hopes to have someday.

CHARTER MEMBERS OF THE Lutheran Ladies Aid were honored Monday night at a 20th anniversary banquet at Crossroads Restaurant.

In addition 20-year pins were given to Mrs. Esther Iseler, Mrs. Eleanor Miller and Mrs. Helen Avery. Mrs. Esther Willy is now an honorary member who received a service pin previously.

Front row: Mrs. William Hacker Sr. and Mrs. Willy. Chairman of the banquet was Mrs. Olin Bouck, president. Twenty-two persons attended.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

Dear Mister Editor:

Most of the session at the country store Saturday night was took up on the subject of modern education. Clem Webster got the session off in this direction by reporting he had saw where they was getting a thing in the schools called the "talking page." The young'uns can talk their lesson and the lesson talks back. Clem allowed that one educator claims the talking page will do fer education what the portable radio did fer the Middle East. The only trouble with that statement, Clem said, was that he didn't know what the portable radio did fer the Middle East.

But, anyhow, said Clem, this talking page fits on the top of a school desk and is about the size of one of them three-ring notebooks all the students used to carry. It has lessons in it and talks the instructions. If the student don't follow directions, the machine stops the lesson and repeats the part the student missed. He said this story claimed the students would talk back and argue with the machine where they wouldn't with the teacher. He said he wasn't shore this was doing the young'uns manners any good, but he had saw where they was fixing talking pages fer adults and they was a heap of husbands that would be glad to have somepun they could talk back to.

Ed Doolittle was agin these machines, said after the young'uns watched education television and all that stuff they learned everthing except how to git along with one another. They can quote from ever book but the Bible, Ed said, and give you the chemics fer toothpaste, but they can't patch the roof or wash a pair of socks.

And Ed, that don't never miss a chanet to talk about Government spending, said we wasn't gitting all these fancy school machines fer nothing. He told the fellers he had saw where Government spending fer education was up 92 per cent over 1950. He said he wouldn't object to it being up 192 per cent if it would teach the young'uns somepun except how to "capture" Columbia University. But the military was still rejecting one out of every four draftees on account of they was too ignorant to be soldiers.

Personal, Mister Editor, I ain't fitten to judge whether education in this country was going to heaven or the dogs, but I was in favor of gitting one of them talking pages fer ever member of the Congress. We could set them machines so's they can't spend more money than we was taking in. Ever time a Congressman tried to vote fer more deficit spending, his talking machine would make him go back and do that part of his lesson agin. But, come to think about it, it wouldn't take them Congressmen but one day to rig the machine backwards.

Yours truly,
Uncle Tim

Hostetler's Hodgepodge

Mud turtles or Michigan bedbugs

By Marion Hostetler

Behind the Counter Burn Injury

David Ware gave his niece, Laurie Ware, a tiny turtle for her birthday, and she thinks it's the finest pet anyone could have. She tried to do her great-grandfather a favor by putting her pet into bed with him, but Will wasn't very enthusiastic about that arrangement.

That reminded me of the story they tell about a drummer from Texas who was stopping over at the New Sheridan Hotel here in town in the days when the Sheridan Hotel was new.

It seems this stranger bragged so much about the glories of Texas that some young men about town went down to the river and caught a few mud turtles and put them between the sheets of his bed at the hotel.

That night the Texan came rushing down to the lobby, all excited, screaming, "There's something in my bed!"

The fellows who happened to be in the lobby that evening hurried up to his room, looked over the turtles, and told him, "Shucks, those are just Michigan bedbugs."

Recovering his self-possession in a moment, the Texan took a second look at the turtles, and murmured, "Young 'uns, ain't they?"

"Concealed under the carpet at the entrance of a church in Indiana, a pressure-sensitive switch activates a prerecorded greeting from the pastor, which is followed by a brief prayer and an invitation to worship in the sanctuary." A writer in the Christian Century calls this "the burglar alarm to end all burglar alarms."

The story in last week's Chronicle about the decrease of population in Decker included a statement by Baldy Baldwin to the effect that the decline of little towns all over the country is due to the fact that people have transportation, and they go to the big chain stores to shop.

I recently heard Rev. John Miller give the same explanation at greater length, in terms used by rural sociologists. (He pointed out that there was no such thing as "rural sociology" until the majority of the people had begun to live in the cities -- then it became popular to "explain" the minority that preferred country living.)

The sociologists' name for a community is "functional economic area," and today's functional economic area is a hundred times as large as such areas were in 1900. At the beginning of the century, the thing that mattered was "Where can I sell my produce?" Towns needed to be close together ... close enough that every farmer's team could haul a load of wheat to town within a reasonable length of time. In those days the factor that limited the size of the economic area was agricultural production.

The old economic area maps based on agricultural production are now being replaced with maps based on the economic areas recognized by consumers. Instead of asking a farmer, "Where do you sell your produce?" the map maker asks, "Where do you buy your groceries, your furniture, your implements?"

Claud Karr is old enough now to be philosophical about the changes taking place in the world, and he thinks it would be a good idea for the Presbyterian and Methodist churches in Cass City to merge.

It's true that today Methodists and Presbyterians watch the same TV shows, listen to the same radio sermons, buy the same brands of breakfast food, drive the same kinds of cars, and (I hope!) read the same newspaper columns. So I think Claud may have a good suggestion. Why don't you ask him to tell you more about it some time?

A small town is one in which everybody buys the newspaper to see how much of the news the editor dared to print.

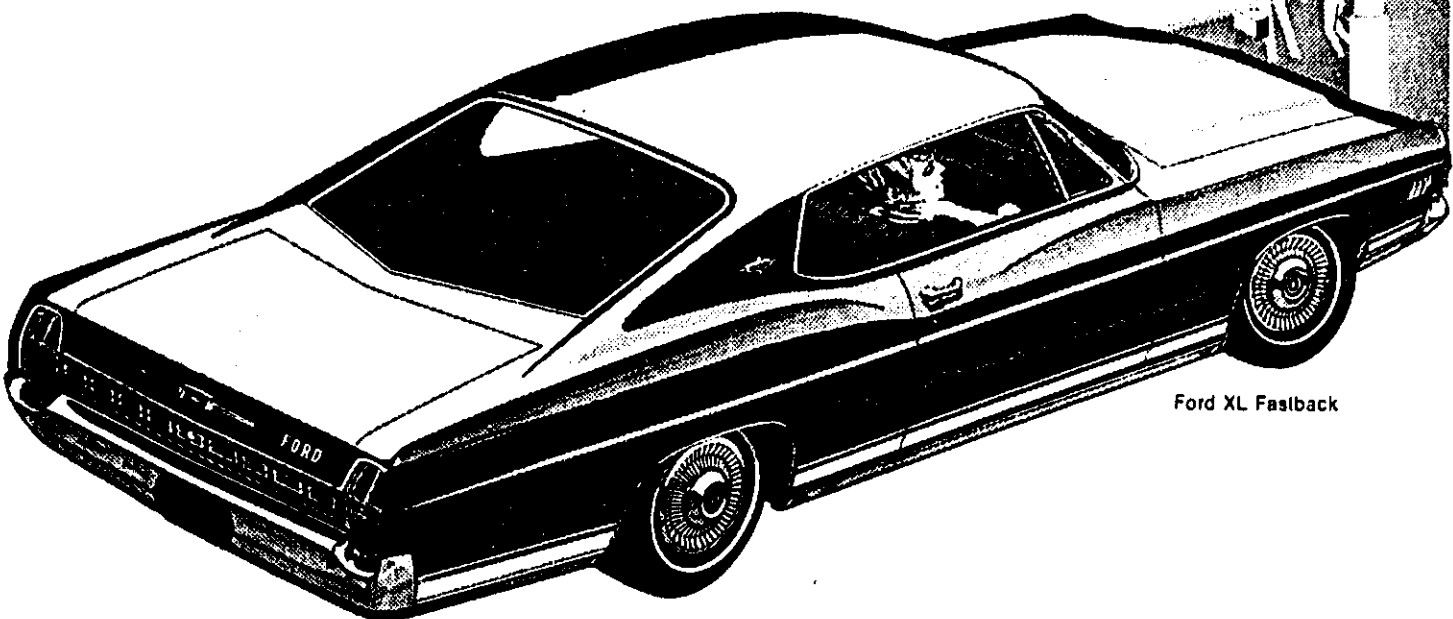

Help stamp out quicksand!

A minister's little daughter asked, "Daddy, when you're on the platform getting ready to preach, why do you always put your head in your hands?" "Why darling," answered her father, "I'm asking the Lord to help me with my sermon."

She looked thoughtful for a minute, and then asked, "Well why doesn't He do it?"

Around The Farm Some farmers don't know beans

We are all human and because we are we try to find out why abnormalities occur. When we try to analyze the problem we become a diagnostician of a sort but, do we always see what we are looking for? A good example of the message I am trying to convey stems from my experiences in the last two weeks. Our office during this time received a large number of inquiries and requests for farm visits all because of fields of poor beans.

"If It Fitz..."

Bury me not on the lone fairway

BY JIM FITZGERALD

A Massachusetts man has been buried beneath the 18th green at his favorite golf course. I guess he was dead. If I am ever buried on a golf course it will be because I committed suicide there and no one would drag my body away. Golf is an incredibly stupid game. Hit a ball and then look for it and then hit it again. I don't know why I play. Tennis is really my game but I can never get a court. It has been 24 years since I played tennis which will give you an idea how crowded the courts are - and how hard I've tried to get one. I often tell people I was once tennis champ of Port Huron. Usually, I tell them after I play golf with them. I want them to understand that golf is too slow a game for an athlete of my vigorous abilities. Any old man can play golf, I tell them with a sneer as I pay what I owe for losing 18 holes, 3 balls and 1 friend who was my partner. "Yes," the golfers with my money usually say, "but fat old men can't play tennis so it is easy to see why you switched to golf." That's another thing I've discovered about golf - a lot of wise guys play it. They are always saying things that upset my game and my stomach. For instance, I slam my usual drive smack down the center, at least 30 feet. "That won't hurt you," says Harvey Hustler. What he means is that lousy drive won't kill me, it will just leave me maimed and limping. It is the loudest shot he ever saw and 15 more just like it might get me on the green which is that pretty patch of grass with the hole in it in case I've never been there before. Another thing Harvey often says is, "You had the distance." This means I should have hit the ball 200 yards and, by golly, I did hit it 200 yards. The trouble is I should have hit it north but I hit it south. The reverse of this comes when Harvey says, "You hit it

Letter to Editor

Dear Mr. Haire,

Mom is writing this for me. Through your paper I hope you'll let me keep in contact with the world outside of St. Mary's. It's been a tough 10 days. I've had such bad dreams and when I sleep I keep falling into the water. But that's over now and I hope it never returns. Everyone has been so nice and I have received so many cards. Dad is putting all the money into a television fund. As soon as I get out of the I.T.C. unit I can watch TV. No radios or nothing are allowed in here because of all the oxygen. But the nurses do let me use my transistor radio with the ear plugs. That helps the time go.

Bill Spencer wrote and grumbled about how heavy the stretcher was when he helped put me in the ambulance, well after 10 days on IV's I must be a little lighter. Sunday I had chicken for dinner. So things are getting better.

If your Lynn sees Lynn Atwell tell her that maybe I looked real blah when she pulled me out, she should see me now. I think I'm growing a beard. My sideburns have been shaved off nearly to the top of my head.

The rest of my hair is too long and to keep moisture in my throat I suck on "tootsie roll pops".

That's all from Ken's corner in St. Mary's. Mom and Dad said it's up to me. I have to stick it out and try to walk. I'm not going to try. I'm going to walk.

Thanks. Ken Kennedy, Room 603, St. Mary's Hospital, Saginaw, Michigan.
