No early relief seen for soaring hospital room rates

$57

By Jim Ketchum

It's costing more each year to get sick in the United

Increased expenses for malpractice insurance, supplies, labor and fuel costs all make room charges continue to soar. And there's no early sign of relief on the horizon.

In five years at Hills and Dales General Hospital, rates for a private room have jumped from $38 per day to $70, an 84 per cent increase. -When-the-hospital-opened 15 years ago, a private room cost only $16 a day.

ago, you could obtain a it costs $64, just twice as $10,000.

$14 in 1960 and $28 in 1970 now costs you $60.

These rates went into effect April 15 following word that hospital malpractice insurance rates would jump from around $18,000 to $46,693. Administrator Randy D. Howard says malpractice insurance premiums alone are responsible for most increases in room rates.

Since November, 1973, room rates have been boosted five times. Rates have gone up twice in 1975 alone.

"'Malpractice insurance payments are the major factor involved in room rate Semi-private rates have increases," Howard exalso skyrocketed. Five years plained. "Just this week, we paid our umbrella malpracsemi-private room at Hills tice insurance bill and that and Dales for only $32. Today went up from $2,500 to hospital's major malpractice policy that more than doubled this year.

> The hospital also faces other financial pressures that are eventually reflected in increased room rate charges. Anything made out of plastic has jumped in price. X-ray film, for instance, went up 22 per cent in one year, Howard said.

Overall, he said, the hospital experienced an inflation rate of 16 per cent, compared to a national figure of around

While wages and salaries increased eight per cent, other costs, such as fuel, went out of sight, Howard said.

A check of other area hospitals shows similar rate increases since 1970.

> COPING WITH INCREASES

Howard says small hospitals are finding it increasingly hard to cope with increased costs and rising room rate charges partly because they are small and -partly because too many small hospitals duplicate too many services.

"It's harder to keep small hospitals going because the public demands certain services," Howard said. "For example, an O.B. (obstetrics) department doesn't make money because too often it isn't being utilized. You have too many peaks and valleys in usage for it to be a moneymaker,'

He said intensive care wards and emergency units are also hard to operate at a break-even point because they aren't used enough on a regular basis. Another problem in hospital operation comes with Medicare and Medicaid. Howard explained while Blue Cross reimburses the hospital 100 per cent of its billings plus two per cent for replacement of equipment, Medicare and Medicaid reimburse only 100 per cent of the cost, with nothing for replacement.

Payments, especially from Medicaid are often months late, causing problems keeping a cash flow going, Howard said.

"Right now Medicaid is holding between $25,000 and $30,000 due us for some unknown reason," he said. 'Most of it is due to their procedures and paperwork."

SOLUTIONS

Howard suggests part of the solution of rising room rates in particular and health care costs in general lies in ending duplication of services at small hospitals.

He favors having smaller hospitals specialize in one or two areas that would eliminate the need for an O.B. ward in each facility, for instance, or a cardiac unit.

He said part of what he calls "needless duplication" rises from special interests who wanted a full-service hospital in spite of its costs. 'We can't play the game of selfishness anymore." he said, "Regionalization is the only way in the world that we can stabilize health care costs. By 1980--just five years away-experts are saying average room rate charges are going to hit $200 a day. We have to do something.'

The regional concept would, in effect, make each hospital part of a huge assembly line that would do part of a job and send a patient on to the specialized facility that could adequately do its job.

It would also help cut malpractice insurance rates for both hospitals and doctors, Howard said.

"Another area that would help cut costs is central purchasing," he said. "Purchasing is a major aspect in hospital operations and this is where cost-cutting could work.

IRS estate rulingdue next week

A decision is expected before July 1 on whether or not the estate that will fund the lion's share of a new Cass City municipal swimming pool is taxable, following a meeting with Internal Revenue Service representatives in Detroit Tuesday.

According to Trustee Dr. D.E. Rawson, who attended the meeting, Tuesday's hearing produced no final answers -only a promise that a final ruling would be forthcoming within a week.

Prior to the meeting, Eighth District Congressman J. Bob Traxler intervened in the long-stalled estate by sending a letter to Donald Alexander, IRS Commissioner, urging the estate be declared non-taxable.

Traxler acted following a request from State Sen. Alvin J. DeGrow (R-Pigeon) who based his action on an account of the situation published in the June 5 edition of the Chronicle.

In his letter, Traxler urged quick action.

"It is my hope that this matter can be resolved as quickly as possible and that the clear intent of Mrs. Stevens' bequest will be recognized for what it is: a donation for non-profit and non-political purposes."

Traxler chided the IRS for repeated delays in handling the estate. He said Tuesday's meeting comes a full month after a meeting with a Mr. Landau, who promised Mr (Robert) Keating a decision "within a week.'

Dr. Rawson indicated if the decision is favorable and the estate is declared non-taxable, an outside chance exists that construction on the pool could begin late this year.

Subscribing the balance of the project's cost instead of holding a bonding election might speed things up, Rawson said, but until the final amount of the estate is known, it's too early to decide which route to go. In addition, another cost update of the project would be needed before any work could

THE FUTURE is brighter for Bambi, a two-week-old fawn found abandoned Saturday on the Carl Gibbard farm near Ubly. Shown feeding the animal is Carl Jr. The family plans to apply for a permit from the state to keep the animal until it can fend for itself.

Future looks bright for tiny 'Bambi'

Thanks to the big hearts of the Gibbard family of rural Ubly, "Bambi", a two-weekold fawn, has a chance to grow into a healthy, handsome buck deer. Things looked pretty bleak for the tiny fawn until Saturday. That's when Evans Gibbard discovered the frightened, hungry animal as he was mowing hay in a field near his home.

Gibbard's son, brought the deer, who barely escaped serious injury from the mower's blades, to their farmhouse with little idea what to do with the animal.

Conservation officials told the family to release the deer where they found it, which the family tried. The next morning, however, the shaky little animal was still in the same spot, quivering from fright and lack of food.

That was enough. According to Mrs. Thomas Gibbard, Evans Gibbard's mother, they brought the deer back to her home where plenty of warm milk and lots of love were waiting.

"It was still lying there Sunday morning right where they left it the night before," Mrs. Gibbard said. "We figured its mother must have abandoned him, so we took him back to the house.' Since then, it's been progress all the way. Bambi gets a baby's bottle filled with milk twice a day, along with water every six hours. The deer has filled out greatly since it was discovered.

Free parking plea gets village council okay

Cass City's gala Sidewalk Sale days scheduled in mid-July got a boost Tuesday night when village council authorized free parking in the business district during the three-day event. The move came during an otherwise routine session held at the Municipal building following a request from Clarence "Bud" Schneeberger, chairman of the event.

While council gave its official blessing to eliminating parking meter fees July 17-19, it did so with misgivings. In its resolution, council said the move will not set any precedents for future free parking days. Schneeberger requested a lifting of parking meter fees for the three days as an incentive to bring more shoppers into the downtown "I would think asking three days leniency isn't asking too much," Schneeberger said. He said lifting the restrictions would help all businesses during the event, designed to boost sales during a less-thanstellar business year. Village President Lambert Althaver said council couldn't simply order the police department to look the other way during the three-day period, adding that council should decide the question. He said parking meters were originally installed not as a source of income as much as to help create turnover of parking spaces along Main Street. Trustees said they wanted a complete study of how the free parking plan works from the Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the event, and from the police.

During its discussion, trustee Dr. D.E. Rawson suggested businessmen could rent a parking meter for a day and offer their customers free parking.

As it stands, shoppers will be able to park free July 17, 18 and 19.

Schneeberger also requested that one block of North Seeger Street be closed for the event to offer more stalls for sellers or art exhibitors.

Council balked at the move, citing problems that could be posed to fire or emergency

It did okay providing a 15-foot wide space along the west side of Seeger Street Main to Church for additional stalls. The sidewalk would still be open to pedestrians.

WASTEWATER TREATMENT PLANT

Cass City could be looking at an extensive reconstruction plan for its wastewater treatment plant within a year, according to a report Supt. Lou LaPonsie presented to council.

According to LaPonsie federal guidelines would call for the village to begin planning for expansion of the facility within the next year. LaPonsie said this could mean construction by the end of next year. How much it would cost and how much federal and state assistance would be available are not known presently, but part of the tab would almost certainly have to be picked up by local citizens in the form of bond issue. The village superintendent said extensive studies are already being made of how the present system is working and where improvements need to be made. With this data in hand early, chances of getting some sort of federal grant on the project at an early date would be improved, LaPonsie

Discussing another expensive item, LaPonsie said approximately $20,000 worth work is needed on the village water softening system. He said there is no immediate danger that the system will fail. Repairs needed are similar to those made every 15 years or so, he Trustees agreed the project isn't in this year's budget but would probably be needed sometime during 1976. La-Ponsie said the work should keep the system functioning without major repair for another 15 or 20 years.

STREET SIGNING

LaPonsie reported the village will have to share in the cost of installing completely new street signs under provisions of a 1971 act that would eventually internationalize all street signs.

Cost to the village is expected to run in the neighborhood of $1,400, or 10 per cent of the total project cost. The remainder of the funding would come through a federal grant for which the village agreed to apply Tuesday night.

OTHER BUSINESS

In other business, LaPonsie reported that C.R. Hunt Construction Co., Cass City, has submitted a price of $3,200 for sealcoating one block of M Street and four blocks of Sherman. Original cost had been estimated at $3,900.

LaPonsie said to date, 1,300 feet of curbing has been poured, including completion on Elclare Street. Work is beginning on Houghton Street, he said, adding that Andrew Barnes Construction Co., requested partial payment for work done to date. Council approved the request, which will run about $5,000. Council approved a bid of 36.3 cents a gallon for gasoline and 35.4 cents a gallon for diesel fuel from Cass City Oil and Gas Co. The bid was the only one pre-

PARK LEASE

Pres. Althaver said Cass City school officials are willing to go along generally with the thinking of council regarding a lease for the football field and track at the village park.

He said plans are set to re-draft a proposed lease and to discuss it at the next regular school board meeting. Details are expected to be worked out at that time. In other business, a $1,000 check from Walbro Corp. toward the Cass City municipal swimming pool fund was accepted by council.

"If It Fitz...." OK, relatives, here it is ...

BY JIM FITZGERALD

The assignment was to sing "Florence McCool is Seventy" to the tune of "Old McDonald Had a Farm." I'll tell you, sometimes it is not easy being Irish.

It is also not easy to write columns on order. This was an Irish birthday party and funny things kept happening. After every laugh, someone would elbow me in the gut and say: "You'd better write something about that!" So here I am, with a sore stomach, writing under threat of being cut out of willsand off at parties. Please bear with me. . . . The event was a surprise party for Florence, my other aunt. Through the years I have written much about my Aunt Madeline, but not very much about Aunt Florence. Several years ago I did write that she and her husband

Since then Florence has changed her name and address several times, but she still receives occasional rocks through her window. The only consolation I can offer her is that someday her name may be a household word, such as Frankenstein. The party was hosted by Aunt Flo's daughter and son-in-law, Ginny and Don from Chicago. The last time I spent time with them was in Canada in a town where the law said you had to buy a sandwich before you could buy a drink. Don bought a cheese sandwich which he still carries in his pocket, 7 years later, just in case. The only non-relative at the party was Aunt Flo's stockbroker. That's class. He is so devoted to her he even provided lodging for Ginny and Don, and refrigeration for the cheese sandwich.

The party was held in a private room at Oakland Hills Country Club. Arranged neatly on a wall were photographs of about 50 handsome, middle-aged men. They were identified as past boyfriends of the guest of honor. My job was to stand in front of the plaque which revealed the men were really past presidents of the country club.

As you can see, this was a posh party arranged by my wealthier relatives. I caused ouite a stir by driving my economy car to my brotherin-law's home in a green velvet subdivision. When I parked in his driveway, his

Which touched off a familiar argument. I made the mistake of calling my mother a great voucher. "I know you think your mother can youch better than I can," my wife said, "and I am sick of hearing about it."

"It is only because Mother has more experience," I explained. "She raised 5 nutty kids and has always had more to vouch for than most

As always with these family parties, the final hours were spent singing. Terrible Jean and brother-in-law Jack are always asked to lead and I am always asked to go outside and guard the cars. But this time, in response to no demand, I insisted upon singing. I sacrificed my natural tenor and contributed a much-heeded bass, bringing "Down by the Old Millstream" booming gloriously up from my toes.

I thought it was magnificent. Out in the hallway, a passing stranger said he thought it was the plumbing. Oh, it was a marvelous Irish party. Happy birthday, Aunt Flo, we all love you. E.I.E.I.O.

Maybe today's dollar goes only half as far as it used to, but it goes twice as fast.

Armbruster drainage bill set for passage

require the state to pay local drainage assessments has been moved into position for passage by the Michigan House of Representatives by State Representative Loren Armbruster (R-Caro).

"Under the present law," Armbruster said, "property owners living in an area where a drain is being constructed or improved are assessed for the cost of the project according to the benefits each receives from area the state is not assessed for a portion of the drainage

"The result is that the property owners in the area must pay not only their share but also the drainage costs for the state land. I feel this is an unfair burden on the property owners living in the vicinity of state land I've introduced this

A bill (HB 5264) that would bill to correct this inequity," Armbruster said.

> He noted that while drainage improvements to state land provide benefits to the general public using that land, such as in the case of game areas and state parks, only the local property owners are paying for the benefit under present law. The Armbruster measure provides that a state institution, board or agency would be assessed for the construction or improvement of a "Although a state agency drain on state land. # Lditor's Corner

Michael Shpiece is an 18year-old from Farmington who was elected to the school board there with a novel election campaign.

He wants all school board meetings and all budget discussions presented and discussed in public. Evidently the voters in the district wanted it, too. They elected him in a six-candidate race recently.

The young board member is off to a rousing good start. The question that remains is will he remain wedded to open meetings or will a fatal illness strike him as it has so many before him and divorce him from this policy.

I call it the "club" effect. The one where our elected officials become so impressed with their own expertise that they feel compelled to make all the decisions and then tell us about it afterwards.

They club together in a tight little monarchy and tell the subjects what is best for them after they have reached a decision. . . .no one knows

Not that nearly 99.9 per cent of these persons aren't as pure as Ivory soap. Of course they are. They don't do it for personal gain and they reach decisions with the best of intentions.

I can't recall one single case when this wasn't true in Cass City or Tuscola county as long as I have been an observer here.

You don't have to be an Einstein to figure out that I'm not 100 per cent in agreement with this philosophy.
I've challenged it before, will do it again. But it's hard to show where I'm right and the club members are wrong. Once in awhile a case does come up to help.

The swimming pool question is one. As you know we've been delayed now for a year or so as the Internal Revenue Service challenges trustees over the tax status of a grant from the late Helen Stevens. Let me point out right here that no one could fault Bob Keating in his handling of the estate.

But the series of maneuvering behind the scenes never was completely aired until a few weeks ago when the Chronicle headlined it.

State Rep. Alvin DeGrow read the story and enlisted the aid of U.S. Rep. Robert Traxler and the action started. Tuesday a meeting with the IRS was to have been held and by the time you read this a decision may have been reached.

Isn't it logical to assume if all the details of the IRS snafu had been publicly discussed that maybe, just maybe, DeGrow would have read about it a year ago and the wheels started to turn then instead of now?

If you don't buy that, you can at least concede that airing the story early couldn't have been harmful and might well have been to the advantage of the hundreds and hundreds that would have loved to hit the pool during our current heat wave, can't

It would be pleasant to think that maybe there will be an object lesson here for all local elected officials. Few of us are so naive as to believe

There will be peace between the Jews and Arabs before that happens. So go get 'em Michael Shpiece...and stay out of the club as long as possible.

Armbruster said the bill was introduced with wide bi-partisan support and he expects action on it soon.

TROUBLE AHEAD

Champagne has varied effects -- sometimes it makes a man see double and feel single.

I hope it isn't a sign of the times, but I fear it is. In the window of the new utility building erected at Cass City Recreational Park you'll find jail-type windows. They are necessary, authorities say, to curb vandalism that got out of hand on other park buildings with lavatories. ++++++++++

Carpenter-Osentoski rites held

Miss Janice Marilyn Osentoski became the bride of John David Carpenter when vows were exchanged Saturday at 11:00 a.m. at St. John's Catholic church in Ubly. Rev. Fr. Joseph Morales performed the double ring ceremony.

Flower girl was Miss Tammy Lasceski, niece of the bride, of Kinde. She carried a basket of white daisies and baby's breath and wore a gown similar to the bride's. Best man was William Denzer of Saginaw, friend of the groom. Groomsmen included Robert Wilcox of

KETCHUM'S KNAPSACK I can be very friendly

By Jim Ketchum

Next time I see one of those television ads presented by my friendly neighborhood oil company telling me how many favors they're doing for me, I think I'll throw a carburetor through the TV us so many favors that now word is out we're going to pay anywhere from 75 cents to a dollar a gallon. The price pinch is scheduled to hit during the height of the vacation and travel season, just to make sure everybody gets gouged with equal zeal. It amazes me that the supply can suddenly start to

These companies have done

dry up just when summer arrives, after hearing all winter and spring that there were vast stores of gasoline just waiting to be sold. Other officials say there will still be gasoline--but that it will cost more. And more. And more.

On top of all that, I have to listen to how Exxon is guarding the future environmental needs of this planet by only drilling on calm days in the Gulf of Mexico. That's so the oil slick won't drift into New Orleans before it can be towed out to open sea.

I have to laugh when Standard Oil talks about its for Students method of injecting water under high pressure into the ground to recover more oil and natural gas. It's that same method that nearly caused the northern Michigan community of Williamsburg to sink into oblivion last year.

I must be a masochist at heart. Not only do I listen to the losing Detroit Tigers on radio, but I also listen to those Marathon Oil commercials about the nice people who work for the company and help little old ladies across the street, whether they want to go or not. Listening to the one about the ski patrol volunteer who saves idiots from avalanches in Alaska really gets me--just above my belt buckle.

The commercial that really does me in is the one by the oil company that can "be very friendly" now-now that they've squeezed 60 cents a gallon or better out of us. They couldn't afford to be friendly before because they were going broke?

Frankly, I haven't noticed a marked change one way or the other in service station friendliness. The only thing that's lighter is my wallet.

The crowning insult to our intelligence comes with the startling news that small American cars can suddenly get over 37 miles a gallon. Remarkable engineering breakthroughs? New emissions equipment? Nope. Just a change in the rear end gear ratio that could have been made five years ago.

The car makers now say we can have good gas mileage. The only thing is we'll all need a sardine can opener to get in and out of these engineering marvels. Back in 1951, a Cadillac could get better than 20 miles a gallon. But it just can't be done anymore, Detroit says. If the trend continues, our children and grandchildren will all be hump-backed from riding around in tiny cars. One good feature, I suppose, is that during a traffic jam, a motorist could tuck his car under his arm, walk to the nearest sidewalk, put it down and drive away.

In the meantime, join me in a snarl next time an oil company tells you how it's protecting your best interests. Because with friends like those, we don't need enemies.

House calls revisited

BY DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

Along with the renewed interest in home care rather than institutional care for the elderly, there seems as well to be a renewed recognition in some quarters that there is a place after all in modern medical care for the much maligned house call.

BETTER HEALTH

Not only in New York, where so-called reach-out programs have been instituted to find and treat the housebound ill, but in Chicago and Los Angeles as well, hospital programs are springing up, dedicated to caring for the elderly sick by means of the house call rather than counting on such patients to struggle into hospital clinics to spend their day waiting for an assemblyline once-over.

The care of the sick, which once included house calls as a matter of course, did so in part because there were (and always have been) patients who, though not requiring a hospital bed, still do need medical care and are too sick or disabled to make it to a doctor's office or a clinic.

Most old-time doctors included a spate of such among their patients and, in addition, did not consider it an imposition to drop by and take care of the acutely ill in their own bed at home.

It is widely insisted these days that if you are sick enough to need a doctor, you need all the back-up of an office or hospital laboratory in order to be effectively treated, and thus the homebound ailing ones are told to bundle up and get on over.

This policy has become such an article of faith in medicine's new morality that modern doctors make no bones about refusing house calls, and the unlikely possibility of a house call ever actually occurring has been reduced to a surefire oneliner among the nation's television comedians.

Although it is probably consistent with the hurried and dehumanized pace of modern life and the rapidly evolving changes in the patterns of medical care that the house call will never return to the ubiquitous place it once held, it has never in fact disappeared as completely as the popular notion would have us believe. And that is because there is a hard core of the chronically ill and disabled who require care in their own homes and a great many doctors who have continued to take it as their responsibility to care for There are also still a great many doctors who count on their clinical skills, sometimes with the help of housecalling laboratory technicians, to manage much acute illness at home. What staggers the imagination, however, in the reports of at least one hospitalbased, home-care program, is the estimated average cost of making a house call. Dr. Robert B. Mims, director of one such program at the University of Southern California Medical Center in Los Angeles county, estimates the average cost per visit as $52.00, of which 60 per cent is paid for by federal and state funds and the rest by the patient, third party insurers or county taxpayers.

from SAC training course

U.S. Air Force Second Lieutenant Glen A. Walls, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rex W. Walls of 5706 E. Sanilac Rd., Kingston, has graduated from the Strategic Air Command's combat crew training course at Castle AFB, Calif.

Lieutenant Walls, a KC-135 Stratotanker navigator, is being assigned to the 920th Air Refueling Squadron at Wurtsmith AFB, Mich.

That compares with hospital estimates of $63 per average outpatient clinic

Word had better not get around to private practitioners that a house call is worth $52 and an office visit worth $63. There just might be a whole new policy on the basis of figures like that.

The show gets underway at 9:00 a.m., with registration set an hour prior to the start. This is the club's fourth annual horse show and promises to be one of the largest yet, according to organizers.

A total of 25 classes are being sponsored by area merchants, including 12 classes in horsemanship (horse or pony), five in western pleasure, three in showmanship, three in halter grade and two in halter registered (all breeds).

Trophies will be awarded to all first place finishers, with ribbons for the top six places in each class. A high point trophy will be awarded for horse and rider, along with a trophy for the runner-up.

Judging the show will be Keith Forbush of Inkster. Forbush is one of the top judges in the state, according to Donna Seeley, one of the organizers of the event. Ms. Seeley said new events this year will include two bareback horsemanship classes.

Parents, members and leaders will get together Friday night, June 27, to prepare the area, including setting up the tent, ring and spectator area. Parents of club members will also be working the day of the show working around the ring with entries, tending admission gates and making sure things run smoothly, Ms. Seeley

Al Seeley will act as ring master, with Ron Kuenzli announcing on the public address system.

Fr. Morales no stranger to Michigan's Thumb

By Jim Ketchum

Rev. Fr. Joseph Morales, new pastor at St. Paneratius Catholic church of Cass City. is no stranger to Michigan's Thumb. He's been actively involved in the problems faced by migrant workers in the area since 1953. His Cass City assignment places him close to some of his early work in the United States in the days when English was a strange and confusing language.

Fr. Morales took a few minutes from a busy schedule to recall some of those early struggles and to reflect on what they mean today. He sat behind his office desk, lit a cigarette, and smiled as he remembered those years.

Born in Mexico, the 56-yearold priest came to the United States after a stint as a philosophy instructor at the University of Mexico in Mex-

"I came to this country May 20, 1953," Fr. Morales recalled. "At that time, there was a problem with migrant workers who were coming to this country and problems with them losing their faith. So the church got together and agreed to have an exchange of priests to minister to these migrant families."

Morales spent his first year working near Elkton. He soon discovered that if he were going to do an effective job, he must improve his English skills. He applied for permission to stay permanently, not only to learn the language but to continue his ministry,

The following summer he spent working with families near Reese and the next year near Alma.

CONDITIONS HORRIBLE

Morales recalled living conditions for the migrant workers in those years were

"If you passed a tiny shack that was falling down, you knew right away that Mexicans lived there," Morales remembered. "You would often find three families living in one small room with another, even smaller room being used for a kitchen. There were no facilities--noth-

Morales said he and a group of priests went to representatives of sugar companies, asking for help in their fight to improve the migrants' living standard. Over the Morales became years, known as a "troublemaker",

REV. FR. JOSEPH MORALES

"It got to where each summer the companies would say, Where is he (Morales) going to be this year." the

The fight continued and over the years, conditions did improve. Shacks were gradually replaced by sturdier structures with running water and electricity.

But as conditions improved. so did mechanization which made large supplies of unskilled labor unnecessary. Most of the large camps are closed today. Morales said.

Still, he is proud of what the group of priests accomp-lished.

"Ninety-five per cent of the workers were poor," he said. "As long as they made enough to survive on when they got back to Mexico, they hesitated to get into the fight because they might lose. They had the discrimination in mind that they experienced in Texas."

He said their attitudes helped forge a deep; scated bitterness against the Catholic church.

"Their faith was solid, but they were indifferent toward practicing it," he said. "Much of our job was to help build confidence in them toward the church.

Morales said discrimination was also strong among some pastors as well

"We would ask if we could use a church for a worship service and many times we would be refused because they were afraid it would be torn up," he remembered. "Other_times_we_would-begiven permission, but it was grudging. This was racism, When they used the word "Mexican", it was with the worst meaning."

ACCEPTANCE

Fr. Morales says he finds he is well-accepted by whites. even though he is a member of a minority group. Prior to coming to Cass City, he served as pastor of Unionville St. Joseph parish in 1966 and was named Episcopal Vicar for Spanish speaking persons late last year.

Since March 12, he served as administrator of Immaculate Conception parish in St. Charles. Morales said he especially hated to leave St. Charles because it was a

"The parish had financial troubles," he explained, "largely because the pastor they had died and they needed some direction. I felt we were making progress there and I really loved my work there. It broke my heart to have to leave.'

Fr. Morales described himself as a church liberal "when I have to be." Generally he considers himself somewhere in the middle of the road.

He thinks much progress has been made by the church in recent years to modernize itself and to open a dialog think the church has made a lot of progress but I think it's trying to hold onto its position now," Morales "Basically you have three groups within the church-one that won't move. another that is willing to move slowly and a third that

He said he especially likes the idea of saying Mass in the ioners involved, he said.

It's too early to tell exactly what plans he has in mind at

Student says thanks for help

Dear Cass City,

school diploma after fourteen long years, I am exceptionally proud of myself and of my home town, Cass City. Why should I be so very proud? The people of Cass City allowed me, an epileptic, to enter their public school. During the 40s and 50s most public schools disapproved of allowing epileptics to enter while Cass City did allow me to enroll. In the early 1960s, as my illness increased, my teachers, bus drivers, and schoolmates (Cass City) were always there to help when 1 was in need. In March of 1961. I had to quit public school and enter Regional Center in Caro, Michigan.

Having received my high

I did not forget education while at the State Home, especially after meeting many people that were less fortunate than I. While at the State Home, I worked outside my building and went to school part of the day. They chose who attended school by their I.Q., working activity, and behavior. I always tried to help the other patients in a motherly fashion by washing their hair, reading and writing their letters, etc. I learned to respect and live with my illness, because before this time I always resented and was ashamed of my sickness. I helped the people at Regional Center because I wanted to be liked by others and they wanted to be liked The experience at Regional Center and Pontiac taught me respect for other individuals less fortunate than myself.

I wish to thank everyone that helped me receive my high school diploma. My classmates transported me to the Education Classes offered at Caro High School. If it had not been for these individuals, I would not have been able to earn my diploma this year Everyone who helped me should be proud of yourselves as you helped someone in need. Thank you and my prayers will be with every

There's not much left for a penny anymore

Yes, Virginia, there are still a few things in Cass City that you can buy for a penny. Darn few. And they're getting fewer and fewer all the time.

That penny in your pocket can still buy a few things by itself. Chances are good, though, that you could carry away one of each with little trouble at all.

One-of-the-few-things-you can still buy for a penny in Cass City is 12 minutes on a village parking meter. Some cities gave up penny meters years ago, prefering to use the nickel as the smallest

And, judging by the number of pennies retrieved by police during collections, the penny meter is still popular.

After the parking meter, however, the number of things still available for one cent dwindles rapidly. You can still get a few kinds of flat and lock washers for either a penny each or two for one cent, probably the last true

According to Mrs. Gladys Albee of Albee Hardware, these are the only items in the store still selling for a penny.

That venerable institution, penny candy, bit the dust in Cass City sometime last year, according to store employees at Ben Franklin. The cheapest candy went to two cents a piece sometime before Christmas, according to Mrs. Donna Spencer.

"Now when the kids come in with their nickel, we give them two pieces of candy and a penny and tell them to save it until they have another one and then come back," Mrs. Spencer said jokingly.

Dice in Detroit, roulette in Roscommon, crap tables in Cadillac, slot machines in Unlikely you say? Perhaps.

But a special House committee is moving full tilt on a "feasibility study" of a limited number casino gambling operations in Michigan. Rep. Casmer Ogonowski, D-Detroit, chairs the committee which has held public hearings and sent out some 600 questionnaires about gambling to city and county officials, law officers, touristrelated organizations and others who might be interested in the idea.

Early returns on the questionnaires, Ogonowski reports, indicate a two-to-one response in favor of a limited number of such operations in Michigan,

Backers of the idea figure legalized gambling on a limited basis could draw convention and other tourist business to the state, and pull dollars into the Michigan treasury. Casino gambling also could add jobs in a state hit by unemployment.

Opponents of legalized gambling--among them the Michigan Council on Alcohol Problems--question the advisability of adding a new activity to those gambling operations already sanctioned by the state. They include the state lottery, betting at pari-mutuel windows at four horse tracks and state-licensed bingo games.

"If lawmakers want to decriminalize gambling (remove criminal penalties), that is one thing," says the Council on Alcohol Problems. But "legalizing the business of gambling," is quite another thing, it says.

Pressman hurt in Monday accident

A 25-year-old Caro man was njured seriously Monday afternoon when his hand was crushed in a folding device on a press at Thumb Web Offset in Caro.

Ron Filion was injured as he reached into the folder to remove tangled paper, according to Maurice Bolzman, plant manager. The mishap took place around 1:30 p.m.

Filion was taken to Caro Community Hospital and later transferred to Saginaw General Hospital. At press time, it was not known whether or not his hand could be saved.

Filion is a former student at Cass City High School. Thumb Web Offset prints the Chronicle each week.

A GAGETOWN man, Bradley Joseph Goslin, 17, suffered multiple injuries, including two broken legs, when his car went out of control and smashed into two trees in a grinding single-car crash early Sunday morning.

Hospital room rates

Robert Korte, Caro Community Hospital administrator, agrees that malpractice rates have helped push up room rates at his hospital. He said a recent $5 increase was caused completely by the increase in malpractice

"We were pretty close to balancing before this came along," he said. "Our rates took a $36,000 jump April 1. We're hopeful that this increase will take care of things for the foreseeable future.'

Dale Simpson, administrator at Huron Memorial Hospital, takes a different view regarding malpractice insurance. He says it is not the major cause for increased charges at Huron Memorial.

Simpson says supplies are chiefly responsible for increased costs. Some have risen as much as 200 per cent in some cases. He also sees wages and salaries as another point of economic pressure. Officials of Michigan Blue Cross-Blue Shield agree that wages have contributed significantly to rising hospital room rates. "People must realize that for every patient, it takes three employees in most hospitals," Herb Conlan of Blue Cross's public relations department said. 'Wages have gone up for hospital employees at a much higher rate than for the public generally," he continued. "This is because they were so low before." Conlan added that demands for the best in health care and pressures from higher malpractice insurance rates have also forced rates up. He said Blue Cross attempts to work with hospitals by helping them live within their budgets and not paying overcharges for services. Computerized billing and centralized purchasing also helps cut health care costs, Conlan said. Conlan said approximately

Potential seen for epidemics in county

The potential for widespread epidemics of polio, measles and mumps exists in Tuscola county, thanks to a low immunization rate among school-age children.

Officials at the Thumb District Health Department, which serves both Tuscola and Lapeer counties, say the situation is being watched closely and that the danger is very real.

department acting director, immunization rates among school children have fallen to 50 per cent or less. And unless something is done to raise the rate, the county could be in for serious trouble. Bragg said this year, an epidemic of mumps broke out in Lapeer county, with 600 cases reported this year. He said the department set up a program to get into the school system to provide inoculations-to-stem-the-tide.--

Unfortunately, he said, it takes a crisis to get people moving.

"When polio vaccine first came out, there was a great rush to get everyone immunized," Bragg said. "I think this was because people had seen friends and relatives who had been crippled by it. Today, polio has been virtually wiped out and the danger can't be seen."

But it's there, Bragg said. He said ideally, the immunization rate should run over 80 per cent for school children. How to raise the rate is a question baffling department officials.

'We're really at a loss as to what we can do," Bragg said. "Publicity is probably one of the best ways to help. We want to get the message across that we can provide the vaccine and the personnel to administer it."

He said most physicians also provide immunizations as well

According to Bruce Bragg, are immunized at the health department offices in Caro. Bragg said response to the program still lags, however. Health departments don't generally go into schools anymore for routine immunizations--only in emergency situations.

Bragg questioned how strictly a state requirement that all children entering school must be immunized is really enforced. "Obviously with our rates so low, there must-be-a-problem-somewhere," he said.

He said county health officials are watching the development of a measles epidemic in other parts of the country. So far, no heavy concentrations of the disease have been reported in the Bragg said it's impossible to tell where the immunization rate among adults in the county stands, but added it is probably higher than school children, due to school immunization campaigns 15 and 20 years ago.

Health department offices in Caro hold immunization clinics twice a month. During July and August, clinic days will be the first and third Thursday.

Bragg said ideally, children from three months through persons 20 years of age participate, although anyone is welcome. He said calling for an appointment helps alleviate some of the waiting. There is no charge for the

in Church loop

After two weeks of competition teams in the Cass City Church League have proved that pre-season estimates of a wide open race were well founded.

Every team in the league has lost a game except Missionary which has two narrow wins in two tries, and no one really expects the league leaders to continue through the year without losing.

It appears as if the games will go to the wire before a champion is crowned.

TUESDAY GAMES

The Cass City Methodists got on the winning trail after two straight losses with a whitewash victory over Deford, 10-0.

Randy Kozan pitched a strong two-hitter for the winners and was helped by a two-run circuit clout by Ed Stoutenburg. Alvin McKee took the loss.

In the nightcap it was Lamotte over Colwood in a close game, 8-7. Mary Fishell edged Keith O'Dell to pick up the win. Jim Marshall and Fishell banged out a pair of hits for the winners. It was Smith night for Colwood as Dale belted a pair of safeties and Dave hit a home run.

THURSDAY GAMES

The Lutherans got back on the winning trail after losing to Church of Christ the previous week. It looked like a laugher for the winners as they led by 10 runs going into the fifth but it ended up a slugfest, 14-10, as the Catholics rallied.

Al Romig started for the Lutherans and allowed two runs before relieved by Nelson Willy in the fifth. Ron Nurnberger hit for the circuit for the Lutherans and Tom Smentek and Scott Gohsman slammed one each for the Catholics. Clarke Haire garnered two hits for the four-bagger for the losers.

One of the finer games of the week was played Monday as Colwood, with Dale Smith on the mound, measured Church of Christ and Don Englehart, 6-2.

Englehart did all he could to avoid defeat as he accounted for both his team's runs with two home runs. The Smith boys put on their patented act again for Colwood as Dale and Lowell each collected two hits.

In the nightcap it was an easy victory for Lamotte as they trampled winless Deford, 13-5. Marv Fishell bested Louis Tibbits on the mound. Jim Marshall provided much of the winners' firepower with two home runs. Alvin McKee picked up two hits for Deford.
