

J. BOB TRAXLER, Eighth District Congressman, opens Tuesday's public hearing on rail abandonment in the Thumb at Caro High School. The meeting drew approximately 125 persons who heard rail and government officials make their cases for and against abandonment.

State, federal subsidies seen key to local rail future

Planning that calls for state subsidies has begun, designed to keep rail service coming to Cass City and the Thumb, it was revealed during a public hearing called by Eighth District Congressman J. Bob Traxler (D-Bay City) held Tuesday night in Caro.

The plan was revealed during a presentation on Grand Trunk Western's proposal to abandon 66 miles of trackage from Imlay City to Caseville.

According to Thomas Trimbach, Railroad Planning Coordinator with the State Department of Highways and Transportation, sufficient funds are available to keep the line operating.

Trimbach told approximately 125 persons who jammed their way into the warm, humid auditorium at Caro High School, that plans are on the drawing boards to negotiate with Grand Trunk to keep the line open. He said Michigan should have the funds available through federal sources as well as its own to do the job.

During a recess, Trimbach refused to discuss the plan in great detail and did not estimate just how large a subsidy would be needed to keep the line going.

a number of options it could use in maintaining service on the line. "If Grand Trunk couldn't do it, we'd look for another carrier to operate it," Trimbach said. "If another carrier couldn't do it, we could go to Conrail. We have a number of alternatives to work with." It was pointed out that in order for the Imlay City-Case-ville line to qualify for a federal subsidy, under Conrail, its abandonment request before the Interstate Commerce Commission would

Under a recent change in the Railroad Reorganization Act, such abandoned lines could qualify for Conrail subsidies.

Subsidy was the key word on the mind of John H. Burdakin, Grand Trunk President, who addressed the meeting.

He said without some sort of outside help, there is no answer_but_to_abandon_the-

"The Imlay City-Caseville line showed a loss of $147,000 in the year between July 1, 1973, and June 30, 1974," Burdakin said. "The number of carloads . . . during this period totaled 942. We estimate that to eliminate this loss, we would have to increase our traffic volume 127 per cent or 1198 carloads.

"We must have financial relief," he continued. Burdakin called such unprofitable lines a "cancer" and said the only solution is to remove it. He said subsidization either through federal, state or local governments or by private industries is the rolling. "If one wants to dance, he must pay the fiddler," Burdakin said.

only way to keep the trains

FIGURES QUESTIONED

Responding to Burdakin, Michael Davidson of the Public Counsel's Office representing shippers in formulating a final reorganization plan, questioned how the $147,000 loss figure on the GT line was calculated.

"Is the figure based on costs of operating the line itself or based on system wide costs," he asked.

He called the rail situation in Michigan "deplorable" and demanded to know the relationship between Grand Trunk and the Canadian National Railway, hinting at illegal collusion.

Burdakin said Grand Trunk is "completely independent" of Canadian National and denied any close ties.

One plan of subsidy would call for payments on a 70-30 formula, with the lion's share coming from Washington. This would apply only if the ICC okays the abandonment.

Many local observers at the meeting questioned where the subsidies, especially those referred to by Trimbach, would originate. Trimbach did not elaborate.

RAIL SERVICE NEED

Losing the rail line would markedly increase shipment costs, Porter Barnett of the State Department of Agriculture told the group.

To build or not to build?

Board delays action on athletic field improvements

The Cass City Board of Education decided Monday at its regular meeting to delay action on improvements to the athletic facility at the park while looking more closely into the merit of a new facility at the high school.

There appears to be a strong leaning towards a new site among board members, but none seem wholly committed to the present park site

The indecision probably stems from two basic condi-

The first is that the board is ot sure just what the axpayers in the district eally want. The second is that there is ot now even a "baseball ark" figure about the cost of the new facility.

Trustee J.D. Tuckey received material quotes on lighting the field and it's probable that these lights will be less than earlier "guesstimated" figures that were floating around. The lights, of course, are just one facet of the project. Trustee Dean Hoag said that he favored looking very closely at a site at the school. To me it doesn't make sense to have this land and then put money into the park, he

We should have some cost figures, he continued, and then do what we can. We don't have to build everything at once.

The board actually was voting for more investigation when it tabled the leasing agreement with the village that has been under study for several months.

It was estimated that it would be two years before new lights and other improvements could be completed and the board seems resigned to a 1977 target date. Supt. Donald Crouse was given the green light to contact the architect that designed the Marlette facility. He will be seeking some very rough estimates of the cost for a facility at the school and checking the qualifications and charges of the firm.

Board members say that there has been little response to the question by persons they have talked to.

GYM FLOOR

Commercial Floors of Flint is working on a new floor for the Intermediate School gym but it appears that it will not be completed until several weeks after school starts.

The reason is that the floor requires several coats of finishing and must be sanded.

After each coat is applied several days are required for drying purposes, said Supt. Crouse.

> In other summer repair work, the board was told that work is in progress on the Campbell Elementary roof. The cost is $17,825.

The board also opened two bids for bread for the hot lunch program. Each firm was low on two or more of the taken while the administration checks the amounts used and can let the contract to the bidder which promises the biggest total savings to the

A contract was let without bids for two years. Allen Merchant was granted the right to farm the school land for $40 an acre per year for two years. The board acted because Merchant wanted to plant wheat this fall. At the end of the two-season cycle the land will be bid again, trustees decided. In another action, the board approved the purchase of a 60-passenger bus instead of a 66-passenger bus as previously ordered. The body was made by mistake and since most of the school buses are 60-passenger now, the board agreed to the change. There will be slight reduction in the cost to the district.

SCHOOL BOOKS

"Reading Is Fundamental" program sponsored by the AAUW will be conducted at Deford School this year. Students in the Deford school in the program will be given three books, one book at a time, in three distributions. After the program is completed the results will be $3,000 in the black. The figure Finally, the board adopted hot lunch guidelines as required by the Federal government. It allows free lunches to students of families of limited income. The school is returned 621/4 cents for free lunches and 121/4 cents for a half pint of milk.

It looks as if hot lunch prices will not be raised this school year as Crouse reported the program was some tabulated and the program is subject to audit, he

Elkland to study ambulance future

The Elkland Township Board agreed to study the possibility of taking over prime sponsorship of ambulance service in Cass City during its regularly scheduled meeting held Monday night at the fire hall.

The board and a delegation from Cass City Village Council heard a presentation from Roger Little, who operates the present ambulance service in the village. Hills and Dales General Hospital Administrator Randy D. Howard and hospital board presdent Jim Bauer.

Little presented basically the same pitch he made to village council two weeks ago-that under proposed state legislation, he could not continue to operate an ambulance service due to increased expenses.

What the delegation is seeking is a commitment. from the township board to act as a sponsoring governing body for federal grant monies to fund ambulance opera-

Little told the board that the program would be funded on a 70-30 basis, with the lion's share coming from Washing-

He warned that without such a program, Cass City could be left without ambulance service of its own. He said as a private operator, he could not afford to continue offering the service under the proposed law without assistance, due to stiffer regulations regarding equipment and personnel.

The largest expense will probably be the ambulance itself, estimated to cost around $20,000. Township authorities appeared interested, but made no firm commitments other than to continue discussing it. The board wants to meet again with the delegation and with Sanilac County Commis-sion Chairman Lloyd Sever-

Sanilac county recently became involved in assisting local ambulance services and the board wants to learn some of the problems involved in such a program from Severance before plunging into it themselves.

No firm date was established for the next meeting. Township Supervisor Edwin Karr questioned why the Tuscola County Board of Commissioners refused to act as sponsoring agency for federal ambulance aid.

Little said he did not know. Earlier this year, Commissioner Maynard McConkey had said the county board was reluctant to get involved with aiding private ambulance operators because it would interfere with private enter-

Under Little's proposal, the township would furnish the ambulance and Little would continue to operate it, using Emergency Medical Technicians trained through a program at Hills and Dales.

The EMT courses are scheduled to get under way later this year.

The vehicle might be housed at the present location --Little's Funeral Home--if possible. Little said housing it at the fire hall should not be ruled out either.

Howard told the board it has about a year's lead time before the new law is expected to take effect. He said Huron County Civil Defense Director Michael Gage is willing to assist setting up a Cass City ambulance program.

He indicated to date cooperation from Tuscola County Civil Defense authorities regarding an ambulance program has not been overwhelming.

Township authorities want to know much more about any ambulance program before they get involved. A series of meetings are expected before a vote is taken.

Time right for time clocks-commissioners

Salaried Tuscola County employees will be punching in and out soon following approval of time clocks by the County Board of Commissioners during their regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday The clocks won't be used to calculate weekly salaries, but will be used to keep track of regular and overtime worked. Commissioner Maynard McConkey said the time clocks will be installed in the lobby of the courthouse, the Sheriff's department and the basement of the jail for use by Service. All employees, except department heads, will be expected to use the clocks, McConkey said.

the Cooperative Extension

Sentiment for installing the devices came to protect the board from possible union grievances filed over the number of hours actually worked. In the past, employees have filled out time sheets, McConkey said.

"With the clocks, there'll be no question," he said.

He said the clocks are not going in as a retaliatory move by the board against the three county employee unions, but as a better system of keeping records. McConkey added that the board believes the work is getting done, and emphasized the reason for the clocks boils down to record-

Cost of the three clocks is estimated to be around $1,200. It is not known when the clocks will be installed.

McConkey said the clockswill be especially useful in calculating overtime hours. Time clock records could also be used during future contract negotiations.

"We'll have to prove our points." McConkey commented.

CETA

The board approved two more grants under funds received through the Comprehensive Employment Training, Act (CETA) and channeled through the County Road Commission.

The board okayed a grant for Gagetown of $4,500 per year that will allow the village to move Police Officer Jack McCampbell from parttime to full-time status.

Also approved was a grant of $8,629 to hire a maintenance man at the county animal shelter.

A third position for Vassar Schools will also be considered if funds are available.

OTHER BUSINESS

In other business, the board went on record as "interested" in acquiring an 8,600 sq. ft. building near the Caro Regional Center that is presently owned by the state. Under a pilot program, the county could sink as much as ating long lines.

$10,000 into renovating the structure which it would get back in lieu of rent The building would be used to house expanded social services offices, McConkey said. A final decision on the building is not expected for some time.

The board also approved leasing 120 acres of farmland to Leonard Russell of Akron for $7,575 for the 1976 crop year. The land is located adjacent to the Medical Care Facility and the Intermediate School property.

Sheriff Hugh Marr told the board the county would be faced with a $250 per month rental charge for the county's LEIN machine, used in checking criminal records.

Previously, the tab had been picked up by state authorities. The switch is scheduled to begin in Jan-

He also asked the board to approve moving the squad room to the basement of the jail, due to crowded conditions in the present facility.

Marr also commented on a new state law allowing persons to register to vote when they pick up their driver's license. He called it, "a bunch of baloney", saying it would burden the driver's license bureau with more work and slow down the process of issuing new licenses by cre-

No one would wonder honest taxpayers suggest it might save taxpayscream and stomp and suffer ers' money if these big bosses cut down on European vaca-Thoughtful citizens can tions, Lincoln Continentals

It is easy to understand this paradox, Mrs. Honest Citizen stands behind Suzie ADC in the A&P. She sees the 6-pack enough to suggest all those and the steak in Suzie's cart. But Mrs. Honest Citizen never sails in the same lagoon with _a__yacht__captained__by__an executive of a tax-subsidized corporation. So she isn't rocked by his waves.

You are always bugged more by the leaky faucet in the kitchen than by a flood in the next state. When your husband sighs at Raquel Welch, you laugh. When he ogles the gal next door, you're iealous. Ye Olde Philosopher has spake.

So what to do about this welfare problem which threatens to make Mrs. Honest Citizen sick long before it makes her poor? One of those seeking solutions is Daniel Kruger, a professor at Michigan State University. He's a member of a chromedome committee which has been studying the economic mess in Michigan. Recently, in a speech at the Michigan Press Assoc. convention, he unveiled a startling idea. He said his committee had seriously discussed the possibility of paying welfare families $5,000 each to get out of the state and stay out.

It might be cheaper than welfare for Mrs. Honest Citizen. And it might make things more comfortable for her in the A&P.

It is an interesting idea which could probably be improved. Which brings us to the Atlanta Braves.

Recently, to lure more people into the park, the Braves staged a free-money promotion, $25,000 was spread all over the ballfield in denominations, everything from $1 bills to a $1,000 bill. Selected customers were set loose on the field and allowed to keep all the money they could pick up in 90 seconds. You never saw shirts get stuffed so fast.

So why doesn't Michigan spread a few million dollars along several miles just over the Ohio border? Welfare families could be bused to various starting points and then set loose with the promise they could keep all the cash they could grab.

There would be no time limit. The only stipulation would be that once the money hunters stepped over the border into Ohio, they could never again return to Michigan. In the rare chance of a few cheaters, roadblocks could be erected, equipped with machine guns.

Not only would this giant give-away solve a vexing problem, it would also be a great show. It could easily be tied in with our Bicentennial celebration; what is more American than chasing money? Networks would bid millions for the TV rights. Monte Hall could emcee.

The only worry would be the bleeding hearts who would automatically accuse the state of degrading the welfare recipients. I'll admit it isn't very dignified to grub for money on the ground. But the ADC families would probably think it was worth it. And it wouldn't be just the money. After all, once they were in Ohio, they could root for the Cincinnati Reds instead of the Detroit Tigers.

Cass City board says no to maternity sick time

By a 5-2 margin, the Cass City School Board Monday evening voted not to grant sick time to a teacher for monthly pregnancy check-

The vote came after a meeting closed to the press and the public was held on a teacher grievance. The teacher wanted a half-day off monthly to visit her doctor who lives in Birmingham. It was the administration's position that this practice had never been allowed. Under the current contract, sick leave is accumulated to a certain number of days and then if not used a payment is made to the teacher. In Cass City it is much less than the daily rate paid on the job.

Voting for sick leave were Mrs. Geraldine Prieskorn and Dr. Edward Scollon. Voting against were: President Bob Hirn, Dean Hoag, Lynn Albee, J.D. Tuckey and Arthur Severance.

The teacher can now appeal the decision if she desires and observers will not be surprised at some sort of further action.

You'd have to think that if Stan Guinther attended a Tiger baseball game he'd be one of the guys in the centerfield bleachers. The true fans, some folks call them.

I deduced this after watching him at the Cass City Recreational Park last Thursday. He was sitting all by himself in the east bleachers of the football field watching the title softball game in the Church League.

He was so far back I had trouble making sure that it was Stan until it was confirmed by other fans standing in the traditional bleacher section in right field.

Dick Hendrick is one of the hardest workers I know. He took his vacation from his job at Gen-Tel this month and used it to do what he'd been looking forward to for about a year. No, not a vacation abroad. Not a tour of the United States. Not even a trip to Wilmot.

What the Hendricks did (she helped) was clean and refurbish the theatre. Sure, that's a self-interest project, but I still feel that Dick regards the theatre as "his baby" and puts plenty into it which is good for him, for theatre fans and for the business community.

Speaking of the business community, we've got an addition this week. It's Lee Hartel, veteran Walbro employee and, incidentally, a next door neighbor.

Hartel is opening the Cass City Studio and Camera Shop Friday in the location formerly housing Tyo's Barber Shop. He started fooling around with photos because it fascinated him and gradually expanded his skills and his work.

This summer he booked several weddings and the photo shop became a natural after Fritz Neitzel decided to semi-retire.

Candid. That's the word for Fritz Olson. Olson, who runs Cass City Vending, was named "vendor of the year" at a Boyne Mountain bash last week end.

He accepted with this tongue-in-cheek speech: Gentlemen, I greatly appreciate this honor. However, I don't know what criteria you could have possibly used to come up with my name as your selection. . . . and, frankly, I don't care. When I learned of his selection I suggested that perhaps the award went to the most profitable performer in the field and that just maybe he was making more money than I thought (and that would be a lot).

Not so, says genial Fritz. I really think the award was presented to me as the hardest worker with the least to show for it among all the members of the association. Could it be that the real truth lies somewhere in between?

Anyway, last week I attended a show staged by a group of Midland amateur actors. It was a fine performance staged in the lavish Center for the Arts building that shows what you can build if you have enough people with enough money and enough interest.

The show, "Guys and Dolls", ran for three nights and the admission was $2 and I don't think that would pay the true cost of the rent for the building even though I'd guess there were nearly 1,000 persons at the performance I

As a Rotary Club talent scout I was impressed and maybe, just maybe, we'll all be able to enjoy the group in Cass City next year.

Maybe, I said. In Cass City we've had our moments promoting the finer things. Judging by Artrain you'd have to say that Cass City can go all out and support a really worthwhile program. Yet, the Gavel Club sponsored several groups of performing artists from Michigan State and the fine shows were poorly attended.

The Cass City Arts Council has made beginning strides, but it's been an uphill struggle.

Now we are talking about a group that will come to Cass City for expenses only. The actors are primarily college and advanced high school students. All the major roles are filled with artists with several years' experience. The troupe has big league sound equipment, big league staging, big league costumthere wouldn't be many attending unless a massive arm twisting ticket campaign was lodged. So what do I report to Rotary? Right here I trade my white charger for the gray one. I really don't know and am sitting right on the middle of the fence.

Staging a show of this type takes planning and work, work, work. It was obvious that the performers I saw last week have spent the entire summer getting ready for the threeday show. They played before an enthusiastic audience appreciative of their efforts. A visit here would be the first road trip ever for the troupe.

Certainly if they came we should be confident of giving them a reception like they get at home. That's not possible without a large crowd. There's no real doubt that we can do it successfully if we really want to.

Yes vote urged on special millage

August 8, 1975 Cass City, Mich. Editor.

Cass City Chronicle

August 26 is going to be a special day! Why? It will give the citizens of Tuscola county a chance to show our handicapped children how much we really care by voting for a new Darbee School, special rooms at local levels and the increase of many other special education services so desperately needed.

The present Darbee School is extremely inadequate. It has three separate buildings, three separate floor levels and no room for expansion. Darbee does not serve just the mentally impaired, but also serves the physically impaired as well. The facilities are outmoded - there are no ramps for wheelchairs, no room for physical therapy.

The number of children that our Intermediate District is serving is growing every day, but the facilities do not.

You may not have a child at Darbee or in a special education classroom, so you think - what does this election mean to me?

A lot. This election will not only provide a new Darbee School and classooms at local levels but will also provide

Subsidies seen key to rail service

He said that the cost of shipping a ton of corn from Cass City to Augusta, Maine, would jump from a current $16.50 by rail to $30 if shipped Barnett said last year, 700,000 tons of commodities were produced in Huron, Tuscola and Sanilac counties with a total value of $107 million.

"These types of viable lines can become profitable if they are operated on a timely basis and if service schedules are improved," Barnett said.
"This line is a vital lifeline for these rural communities and must be kept open. Without it, there is no hope of any new jobs coming into the

A request by the National Farmers Organization (NFO) to lease a wye at Cass City at the site of new elevator construction was also discussed.

Burdakin remained adament that Grand Trunk could not lease the wye to the NFO because it is part of the main

The NFO and local observers contend the wye is seldom if ever used and that if the lease were granted, as many as 500 more rail car shipments would be sent down the Burdakin contended that the NFO should construct its own sidetrack. He promised to study the situation further, however.

He said last year Grand Trunk failed to meet car demand on the track by 179 units and so far this year, it is 45 cars behind in orders. He added that 100 more cars have been leased by Grand Trunk and that an additional 100 are also under temporary lease to meet demand. Most of these, however, won't go into service until next year, he said.

Condition of the roadbed and bridges along the line was also questioned. Burdakin said considerable work is needed to bring the line up to standards.

Trimbach said it is not known whether or not any proposed subsidies would go toward repairing the roadbed or be used primarily to offset the line's operation.

"If the business is there," Burdakin said, "we'll rebuild the line."

Grand Trunk filed its original abandonment petition last Oct. 15. If the ICC approves the application, Cass City, Gagetown, Kingston, Deford and other communities along the line would lose rail service. Shippers contend the loss of the line would create an economic catastrophe in the Thumb area and have pushed hard to keep the line operincreased school psychology services, teacher consultant services for the hearing impaired and pre-school disability to mention just a few. Speech Therapy and School Social Work Services are also very important.

There has been a drastic increase in the demand for psychological testing in the Cass City District alone.

As a parent of a handicapped child and a concerned citizen, I cannot urge you strongly enough to attend an open house at Darbee School, Aug. 20 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. and to vote for the special education millage, Aug, 26,

William Jennings Bryan and Clarence Darrow, wherever they are, must be smiling these days, watching the progress of the Joan Little trial in Raleigh, N.C.

Miss Little faces a seconddegree murder count. She's charged with killing a prison guard. Her attorneys claim the act was self defense, that the jailer attempted to rape

Last week, Judge Hamilton Hobgood ordered the charges reduced from first-degree to second-degree murder. If she is convicted, she could not be sentenced to die.

The trial has attracted national attention largely because Miss Little is black and because of the death penalty. With this last possibility removed, the trial now boils down to a black woman on trial for murder in a southern state. With a white judge and whites on the jury, it's the setting for a novel or movie too good to pass up.

This trial has attracted as much publicity to date as did the famous Scopes "Monkey Trial" battled out just a half-century ago this summer. While the cases themselves bear little similarity to each other, both stir up emotions, good and bad.

And each makes headlines. Sometimes, it looks as if both sides are taking advantage of the fact,

It's a three hour drive from beautiful blue-grass country around Lexington, Ky., to the hinterlands served by the Red Bird Mission at Beverly. It's also another world and Jeanne Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Alexander of 4426 Woodland St., Cass City, got a first-hand glimpse of just how different it really is.

Miss Alexander, 20, a junior at Alma College majoring in social work, spent over twoand-a-half_months_working_ with the poor of Kentucky's Appalachia through the mission. She undertook the project not only for completion of 300 hours of field training toward her major, but because she wanted to be a part of what she is studying.

"I'd just about had it with textbooks," Miss Alexander recalled with a sparkling smile one afternoon as she sat in a comfortable chair in her home. "I told my advisor I wanted to get some experience in the field and that I wanted to involve my Christian beliefs.

Miss Alexander believes that to serve others is to serve the Lord and she saw working with the poor as a way of putting that belief into action.

She applied for a spot at Red Bird, a United Methodist mission, and was accepted last spring. She arrived May 4, and spent the next two-anda-half months there.

"We did a little bit of everything," she said, "but mostly we spent the time in the field. I didn't want to be tied to a desk pushing a pencil."

The mission sits nestled in the heart of economically-depressed Appalachia, she said. Roads to and from the mission are poor, with access to some homes solely by foot.

Two coal mines offer the only employment in the region. Most of the adult men served by the mission have no job, no education and no hope of bettering their lives. Nearly all the families served by Red Bird are on welfare or food stamps. Some are second and third generation welfare recipients.

It gets depressing, she said. Deeply depressing.

The mission runs a school and a dental and medical hospital," she said. "Often, we'd bring kids into the dental clinic who'd never seen a dentist in their lives. There's among the people and distrust of hospitals or modern medical techniques. It made it difficult to help them.

Basically, she made visits to the homes of people being helped by Red Bird, assessed the condition of the home and the pressing problems of the families.

From these visits, she compiled a daily journal which she plans to use in a seminar on what they as students learned from the experience.

But the experience was more than just school work. It -was-a-look-at-another, often unsavory side of life.

The society of the area is developing into a sub-culture, Miss Alexander said. "Poverty is so engrained, so much a way of life that there really is not much hope among them," she said.

Few of the children ever complete high school, saying they don't need an education to collect food stamps. Still. most resent the idea of moving somewhere else. It's home and they want to stay

"We were located amid six of the 10 poorest counties in the country," Miss Alexander said. "There's a deep sense of frustration and discouragement among the people because they believe there's no way out.

PROBLEMS

In spite of a district of outsiders, Miss Alexander said she was accepted because she was with Red Bird Mission.

"The mission has a good reputation among the people," she said. "When you say you're with Red Bird, you're almost always invited right in.'

She said malnutrition is probably the biggest problem faced by the people of the area. Part of her job was to help develop ways of getting better types of food into daily diets.

''It was common to see little babies drinking pop and eating potato chips," she said. "For a lot of them, it's a treat and it makes them happy for a little while."

Another problem is a high incidence of alcoholism. The mission tries to meet the counseling need, but conditions often work against recovery.

Family planning is barely starting to take hold. Most Air pollution danger here?

Little of substance is known about the long-range effects of air pollution on Tuscola county's bean crop and without a massive research program, little can be done to combat the problem.

That's the assessment of County Extension Director William Bortel, commenting on a report by a team of Michigan State University scientists who said last week that the bean crop is facing a major threat from air pollutants.

According to team leader Dr. William Hooker, plant pathologist, measured ozone levels were over 100 parts per billion several times in late July, significantly above the EPA established air pollution alert-status level.

Bortel contends the problem faced by Tuscola county bean farmers is no greater than in past years.

"We know the ozone is here and we know most of it comes from cars," Bortel said. "Our problem is that we haven't had that much monitoring of the ozone.

He said each year concentrations of the gas have increased. It's too early this year to tell how much of an increase the beam crop will.

Se far he said, hardest hit spass have streethed from these to Quantitiese in the said portions of the county of the said the ozone and said settle out about 20 with a county of the said the ozone ozone.

rles downwind. To date, bean growers in the Cass City area have not faced as much of an ozone problem with beans and other sensitive crops as have western county farmers.

But the problem still exists countywide, he added. Bortel contends not nearly enough research has been conducted to know just how; bad the problem is and what to do about it. "We know we've got a problem," he said. "But we don't know just how bad is bad. As I see it, we need to do considerable research and then set up some kind of a program to combat it.'

Specifically, he said research should involve setting up chambers with filtered air to compare growth under optimal conditions with growth under prevailing conditions.

He indicated some county farmers have lost whole fields of beans in recent years due to air pollution damage.

"When we're talking five bushel to the acre beans, we're talking about a major loss," he said.

He blamed a lack of research funding as part of the reason for the problem. Over the long haul, a solution rests either with cleaning up the air or developing plants resistant to ozobe damage, experts agree: Breeding projects, however, take as long as 10 to 12 years to complete at great cost. fartel contends, agricultural research funding has been curtailed by both state and federal governments. Finding the money for research is the ffrst hurdle toward a solution to the ozone damage problems, he implied. In past years, tests in Tuscola county using tobacco-plants as indicators of polytion have been used in bean ds. No such plantings are carried by underway. Bortel storic affect researchers have fearned about as much as they can from the tests.

Hot weather and stagnant air masses in the last two to three weeks have been blamed by MSU researchers for an increase in the concentration of ozone, especially in the Thumb area.

Damaged plants first have purplish-brown spots on the leaves. These leaves later turn yellow and eventually drop off the plant.

as seven children, Miss Alexander said.

"I think most men believe it's a symbol of their masculinity to raise large families,' she said. "They know they can't work but they can still prove they are men by raising large families. And I think the women get a sense of satisfaction out of bearing large numbers of children as well.' Miss Alexander said she was most shocked by the filth she encountered in many of the homes she entered.

"It's hard to say anything, though, because they don't accept_any_kind_of_criticism_ well," she said. "This is one of the big problems we find."

Yet, she added, there are many poor homes that are extremely well-kept.

HOW TO HELP

Helping takes many differ-it was too late to take it out there, so I chicken-sat all that night. I thought, this is really some kind of social workbabysitting a chicken."

But the next day, when we took the chicken to him, he was as pleased as could be. He may never eat the chicken because he thinks of it as one of the family. But we at least helped him out and brought him some happiness.'

Other times, helping involves just listening to a problem. Or helping could mean showing a mother how to stretch her food stamps a little farther for more nutri-

What did she gain from her experience, which ended July

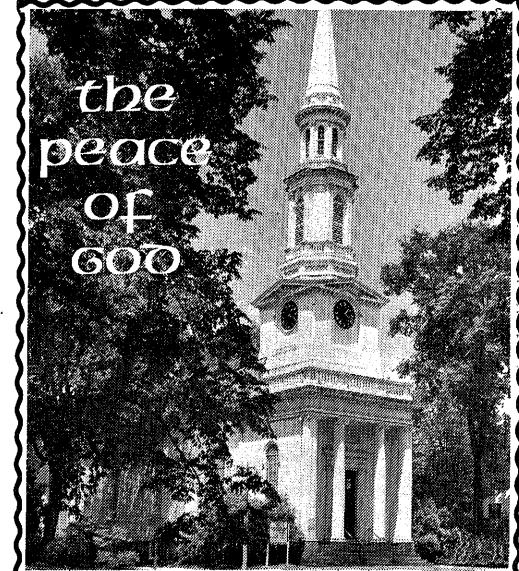

"I think I'd like to study nutrition more and I'd also until we found someone to like to do more one-to-one counseling," Miss Alexander, "But by the time we got it, a 1973 graduate of Cass City High School, said.

After she finishes school, she isn't sure whether or not a master's degree or taking a iob is next.

"Basically, I don't want a desk job," she said. "I want to be with people, helping them Christ said when you help the least of these, you help Him. I'd like to continue that."

Whether or not she goes back to Red Bird Mission, which has operated 54 years, isn't certain.

What is certain, however, is that Jeanne Alexander wants to be involved.

Ford's done pretty well

It's been just one year since Gerald Ford, a former Michigan Congressman, assumed the Presidency following the resignation of Richard Nixon. How has Ford done as President these past 12 months?

Pretty well, says Stuart Atwell of Cass City.

"I think he's done as good a job as Nixon did . . . probably better," Atwell says.

Atwell'says he thinks Ford has grown into his job and now has a better command of the office than he did last year. He says Ford has improved as a public speaker.

"The first time I heard him give a speech, I thought, my God, I could give a better speech than that," Atwell says. "But I think he's improving."

He says he agrees Ford's image as the guy next door is probably an asset, Atwell has lived in the Cass City area most of his life. He has one daughter.

Barrow show reviewed

When the final judging was complete at the 1975 Tuscola County Fair's Barrow Show, Douglas Graham of Mayville had the champion barrow. Graham also had the reserve champion barrow and reserve champion carcass. A very close competitor was George Swartzendruber of Bay Port, whose lightweight barrow edged out Graham's champion to win the champion carcass class placing. Trophies for these grand and reserve champion barrow, champion and reserve champion carcasses were respectively sponsored by Lee Brooks, Moorman Feed of Mayville, Rohrer & Supply Company, Red Rose Feed of ville, and Bauer Super Sweet Feeds of Richville. The competition was keen, reports Don R. Kebler, Extension Agricultural Agent, with George Swartzendruber having champion pen and Judy Tyrell of Ubly having reserve champion pen. The top three placing in the following classes were Lightweight Individual Barrows. Douglas Graham, George Swartzendruber and Dave DeSimpelare of Unionville; Medium Weight Individual Barrows, Douglas Graham, Judy Tyrell and Smith Farms of Unionville, and Carcass class, George Swartzendruber and Douglas Graham's two barrows.

Argyle, Wayne Feed, May-

Twenty-four Barrows were exhibited by sixteen exhibitors from the tri-county area. Assisting in making this show a fine success was Erla Packing Company, Ewald Trucking and Maynard Packing Company of Port Huron.

All-stars winding it up

It was a nip and tuck game all the way as the All-star Little League American division faced the National League division at Cass City Recreational Park Friday. The score was 6-4.

The National division scored first without benefit of a hit, but the American division went ahead to stay in the third with three runs on hits by Billy Harrison, Craig Tonti and Larry Harrison and a walk to Randy Severance.

The winners added two more in the fifth on a single by Sam Adams and three walks. The Nationals came charging back with three runs in the fifth on a walk to Kevin Woodward, an error and hits by Mark Deering and Dave Nye to make the count 5-4.

The Americans added an insurance run in the sixth on a walk and hits by Kuck and Tonti.

Pitchers were allowed two innings each. The American moundsmen were Bill Harrison, Doug Hyatt and Tonti. The Nationals were staffed by Randy Stine, Scott Stine and Deering. Hyatt was the winner and Scott Stine took the Don Englehart had one of his off nights in the late game and Deford rolled to an 8-6 decision. Greg Reynolds and Alvin McKee rapped two hits for Deford while Rich Lowe countered with a pair of hits for the losers.

In an unusual play-off system Colwood got off to a fast start by besting Lamotte Monday, 9-6. However the loss doesn't mean much as the loser continues in the tournament without penalty.

In the unique system in effect this year the team that wins and the team that loses continues to play and one more defeat for either sends them to the sidelines. The game was a battle of home runs. Colwood slammed three and Lamotte picked up one.

While Don Englehart wasn't effective in the meaningless game last week, he was at his best in the play-offs when his team measured Deford, 15-2, in the 9 p.m. game Monday.

Church of Christ rapped the ball hard with Ralph Zinnecker and Dennis Little each slapping two hits. Louis Tibbits was a one-man gang for Deford with three hits including a home run.

Put-take pheasant hunters should plan on becoming early birds of sorts themselves or chance missing part of the 1975 season.

pheasant hunt

Noting that the 14-week put-take season starts Sept. 15, the Department of Natural Resources reminds hunters that they must obtain a special $10 permit in addition to their small game or sportsman's license to participate in the hunt this year. 'Small game and sportsman's licenses and application forms for the special permit are scheduled to be in the hands of license dealers by Aug. 22," said Vic Janson, DNR wildlife biologist. "But license dealers won't have the $10 put-take permits," Janson cautioned. "Hunters should fill out applications and send them along with their check (payable to 'State of Michigan') to the following address: Puttake Pheasant Program, Box Lansing, Michigan

"However, if forms aren't available by Aug. 22, hunters may still apply for a put-take permit by simply sending the $10 check and their return address to the program's box number in Lansing," he Janson said it may take the DNR about two weeks to process the put-take applications, so he stressed the need to apply early. However, applications may be completed anytime during the Sept. 15 to Nov. 14 and Dec. 1 to Jan. 4 season.

All pheasant hunters must carry both the permit and their small game or sportsman's license when pheasant hunting in the put-take portions of the 17 Southern Michigan state game and recreation areas.

The DNR, which plans to release 60,000 pheasants for put-take hunters, said money raised, from the permit sales will help support the put-take What causes heart attacks?

BY DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

BETTER HEALTH

The stress implicit in achieving what sociologists call "upward mobility" which often means forsaking a peaceful, small town for the competition of the city -- has long been popularly believed to be the real reason so many young "over-achievers" have premature heart attacks, while their small-town brothers live out their three score and 10 in good health.

Young men in a hurry to better themselves, who cannot relax and will not settle

How often one hears it said for less than the top of the heap, do seem to be more prone to coronary artery disease than their slowerpaced and less ambitious contemporaries, but just how this comes about is not > entirely clear. There is suggestive evidence that the stress of coping with upward social mobility, coupled with an aggressive personality, may be as important in a man's susceptibility to heart attacks, as are the more widely accepted risk factors such as cigarette smoking, blood cholesterol levels, high blood pressure and overweight.

In fact, six major studies of several thousand middleaged American men showed that only about 10 per cent of the men with two or more of the conventional risk factors developed coronary heart disease over a 10-year period. while 90 per cent did not.

It is clear that other risks may very well be influencing the toll of heart attacks among American men.

In a study in North Dakota, the rates of coronary heart disease were three times higher among men reared on farms who later moved to white collar jobs in the city as compared with men who either stayed on the farm or who took blue collar jobs in the city.

Similar findings were recorded in a study in California, and in neither study could the results be attributed to differences in diet, smoking habits, physical activity, overweight or blood pressure levels.

Other studies have indicated that the risk of coronary heart disease regularly increases with major change of residence, major changes of occupation and the pressures associated with moving into social circumstances that are unfamiliar and for which there has been no previous preparation.

In one study the coronary heart disease mortality rate rose among the residents of rural communities as those communities became urbanized. It seemed that the "mobility" of the environment changed the susceptibility to heart attacks just as effectively as if the inhabitants had pulled up stakes and gone off to fight the city.

Such correlations as these by no means settle the question of who will or will not have a premature heart attack, but there is strong evidence in support of the intuitive popular belief that such calamities may be seriously influenced by the stress of our lives and the way we struggle with that stress.

Cass City woman injured in freak 5-car accident Saturday

A Cass City woman suffered a fractured knee and facial lacerations in a freak five-car accident early Saturday afternoon at the main intersection of Port Austin.

Police said Mrs. Olta Webster, 75, Cass City, and Mrs. Lillie M. Edgerton, 80, of Detroit, driver of the car, were injured in the mishap. Both were taken to Huron Memorial Hospital for treatment.

According to Port Austin Police, the Edgerton auto was headed west on East Spring Street approaching the intersection of M-53 and M-25. Officers reported Ms. Edgerton, traveling in the right hand side of the lane, swerved to avoid colliding with a pickup truck that had pulled in front of her car driven by Craig Gow, 23, Whitmore Lake. He was uninjured.

After the collision, the Edgerton auto hit the curb, causing the driver to lose control of the vehicle. The auto crossed the intersection and struck a parked car owned by John Fisher of St. Clair Shores, which was pushed into a second parked auto owned by Elmer Jantz of Sterling Heights.

Police believe that after striking the first parked auto, the Edgerton car's transmission was jammed into reverse due to a collapsed steering column. The vehicle backed through the intersection, striking a fifth auto driven by Thomas O'Dell of Port Austin, who escaped injury. The Edgerton auto finally came to rest in a parking lot nearby. The accident took place at 12:35 p.m.

OTHER ACCIDENTS

Two persons escaped injury Thursday when a car and tractor collided near the intersection of Crawford and Deckerville Roads in Novesta township.

Tuscola County Sheriff's deputies said a car driven by Richard Lee Snyder, 24, Caro, and a tractor driven by Michael Anthony Sieradzki. 350 N. Crawford Rd., Deford, collided as Snyder attempted to pass the tractor as the tractor began a left turn into a driveway.

Neither driver was injured and no ticket was issued. The accident took place at 1:30

Two drivers were uninjured Monday when their cars collided at the intersection of Main and Nestles Streets.

Cass City Police said a car driven by Victoria Lynn Zawilinski, 16, of 4355 Leach St., westbound on Main Street, attempted to make a right turn onto Nestles Street when it collided with a car driven by Leslie LeRoy Profit, 55, of North Cemetery Rd., Cass City, who was headed

RECOVER MOTORCYCLE

Cass City Police and Tus-cola County Sheriff's officers recovered a stolen motorcycle Saturday in a wooded area east of Cass City following a routine traffic

The cycle, reported stolen July 20, was recovered after Police Chief Gene Wilson found a part from the cycle in the car. The cycle was found underneath a blanket on Crawford Road about two miles east of the village.

Police are seeking an arrest warrant on a suspect believed

VILLAGE THEFTS

Cass City Police reported a rash of larcenies in the past week, most involving property stolen from homes in the village.

A quantity of antique coins, two watches, and an assortment of sheets and pillow cases were reported stolen from the Andrew Donnelly residence at 4445 Brooker St., Friday.

Police said a rear door to the home was forced open. Officers are unsure when the theft took place and have no suspects.

Two lawn chairs valued at $25 were stolen from the Fritz Neitzel residence at 6327 Houghton St., Thursday. The chairs were taken from the front porch sometime during the night, police said. No suspects have been apprehended.

Ron Patera of 5738 Severance Rd., reported an electric cattle prod stolen from a pickup truck while it was parked behind Auten Motor Sales Thursday. Police have no suspects.

Les Severance, Cass City, reported between 10 and 15 gallons of gasoline stolen slam with two suspects fleefrom his car while it was parked at the village park

Timothy Bang, Cass City, told officers four stereo tapes and a pair of shoes were stolen from his locked car while it was parked on a village street Saturday. Police have no suspects.

Dave Ware of Mac and Leo Service reported the theft of 55 gallons of motor oil taken sometime during Wednesday night, Aug. 6. Police said two suspects are being investigated but that no arrests have been made.

FORCED ENTRY PROBED

Forceable entry of the J.P. Burroughs elevator in Gagetown was investigated Thursday night by Gagetown Police Officer Jack McCampbell.

McCampbell said he discovered a broken window and footprints both inside and outside the elevator building. During his investigation, he said he heard a back door

Alternative to tickets?

A citation for driving with defective safety equipment might not mean a fine, if Democratic Sen. Michael J. O'Brien of Detroit has his seriously question whether slapping a monetary fine on a motorist whose taillight is out or whose windshield wiper is broken is an effective and efficient way of eliminating potential traffic accidents." O'Brien says.

What we really want to do is provide the motorist with a strong incentive for repairing or replacing the defective

O'Brien proposes letting motorists offer proof that the defect has been repaired in lieu of paying a fine. He also wants to let drivers' mail such proof to the appropriate court instead of showing up in

"There are probably quite a number of motorists who now have to return to a place hundreds of miles from their homes for court appearances," he says. "The whole process can be handled just as readily through the mail and it will probably unclog our crowded court dockets in the process."

O'Brien's proposed legislation would require waiver of a fine upon receipt of proof of repair. A waiver currently is up to the judge involved in the ing the scene.

McCampbell said a refrigerator door lock was found damaged. A money box nearby was not touched, he

No arrests have been made, McCampbell said.

MISSING PATIENT FOUND

An elderly patient at Provincial House who walked away from the facility Thursday afternoon was found about 500 yards from the building about three hours after he disappeared

Cass City Police said John Stotik, 80, was discovered missing around 3:30 p.m. Police were called shortly before 6 p.m., due to his condition. Officers reportedly found Stotik about 500 yards from the building in good condition.

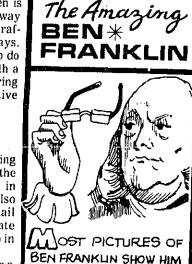

GASOLINE THEFT

Tuscola County Sheriff's officers are seeking warrants involving four suspects involved in an attempted theft of gasoline from a vehicle on Lanway Road near Kingston Monday.

Names were withheld pending the issuance of warrants. Deputies reported the car's owner, Homer Lanway, spotted the suspects as they attempted to siphon gasoline from the car, parked in Lanway's yard.

The culprits were apparently scared from the scene, but after police investigated, returned to recover a gasoline can left at the scene

The suspects later came to the Sheriff's office in Caro to turn themselves in.
