Sanilac courthouse election date still clouded

Confusion reigned this week over when to schedule a special election on a proposed addition to the Sanilac County Courthouse in Sandusky.

County Clerk Walter Behn said Monday the election will definitely be held in December, but the date is still uncertain. Behn said he is working with conflicting election statutes and that a decision had not been reached at press time.

Behn said by law, the election must be held between 120 and 130 days after the filing of petitions seeking a vote. Last week, petitions bearing over 4,000 signatures were certified by the county

This would place the vote sometime between Christmas and New Year's Day.

At press time, Behn was seeking a legal opinion from County Prosecutor James Marcus on the situation.

However, he added, if no one protests setting the election outside the framework, the election is legal once it's held. In addition, no one can claim the petitions were invalid after the election is fact, Marcus said.

Elections officials struggled through last week, seeking a way around the Christmas-time vote which all agreed was poor timing. The emotionally-charged issue has mushroomed into one of the most interesting political battles in Sanilac county in recent years. It began last July 2, when the County Board of Commissioners voted to go ahead with constructing a $1.5 million annex to the courthouse which would nearly double the size of the facility. The project has received active support from Commission Chairman Lloyd Severance, Decker, who says the need for additional space is paramount.

Severance and the commission have said the building can be built out of federal and state revenue sharing funds with little likelihood that increased taxes would be drive have said they simply want to give county voters a chance to decide for themselves whether or not they want the addition.

In a statement released Wednesday, Sept. 10, Behn said technical errors, including an unnotarized signature of a petition circulator, were noted. However, these were offset by the fact that almost 95 per cent of the signatures on the petitions are legal. 'Any action on my part in the acceptance or rejection of the petitions as county clerk is subject to review by any aggrieved party via the route of a writ of mandamus in the Circuit Court," Behn said. "The prosecutor has pointed out in several places in his opinion to me that the decision is the Clerk's to make and is subject to suit in court if any party so desires,'

CETA coordinator blasts state records requests

The Sanilac County coordinator for Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds (CETA) has blasted state labor officials, charging they are more interested in red tape than with running effective employment programs.

Leonard Hool made the charge during Thursday's Thumb Area Manpower Consortium administrative board meeting held in Cass City.

The department has requested that employment applications filled out by persons seeking CETAfunded jobs be made available to the department for inspection.

Hool contends these applications should have been filled out when they registered for employment at a local Michigan Employment Security Commission office. All persons hired under most CETA programs are required to register with MESC, Hool

He said it appears that the consortium is turning into a policing agency for the state Department of Labor.

'Here you're operating ioi six months and then they (Dept. of Labor) come along and say you've been doing it all wrong," Hool said. "To start digging back and say let's back up and comply doesn't make sense." Hool contended that rules for such procedures were never received by employers using CETA personnel or by the Consortium until only recently. He claims to spend time chasing down applications from each individual employer would be a timewasting exercise.

"In some cases, applications may not even exist, especially with some small villages," Hool said. "We have a right to question these things and I don't think it's our responsibility." Consortium Executive Director Frank Lenard played down the problem, suggesting that an effort be made to find the old applications but if they didn't exist, nothing could be

"I still maintain that they should contact MESC for these applications," Hool

In the course of the discussion, Lenard revealed some problems with MESC in referrals. In one instance in Tuscola county, he said, one ineligible applicant was qualified and eventually hired.

"It doesn't look like MESC is a reliable source," Hool replied.

He said from now on, things should change.

"I think the regulations should be clear and prompt, not coming along six months or a year later," Hool continued. "If we don't say something now, it's going to get worse before it gets

Arnold Schweitzer, Consortium treasurer, agreed that the request for old applications is an added burden and said his office wouldn't spend a lot of time searching for

The board also voted to give Lenard authority to hire a filing clerk to replace Gloria Bartnik, Cass City, who is leaving prior to Nov. 1.

In other business, it was reported that to date, the consortium has received $5,821,156 in federal monies since it was formed. Of that total, $2,663,698.38 has been spent, leaving $3,150,453 to be spent in the remainder of the fiscal year which runs through June 30, 1976.

It was also announced that subcontracts for Title I, II ing projects in the three and VI have been approved by the Department of Labor.

A rural Cass City man was arrested Thursday, charged with growing marijuana on his property.

Caro State Police arrested Daniel Alan Gettel, 24, of Hurds Corner Road, after allegedly discovering the marijuana growing behind a shed near his home. The plants were reportedly seven feet tall.

Gettel was placed on $1,000 personal recognizance bond when he appeared for arraignment Monday in Tuscola County District Court. Prepreliminary examination was set for Sept. 22, with preliminary examination scheduled for Oct. 10.

Police said the marijuana plants were growing in a pile of wood next to the shed. Cass City Police arrested two men early Friday morning, charging them with illegal possession of firecrackers.

Police identified the pair as Michael Richard Gaszczynski, 18, and his brother, Chester Felix Gaszczynski, 23. The two were apprehended after they allegedly set off a number of firecrackers in the downtown area between 1:30 and 2:30 a.m.

They were lodged in the Tuscola County Jail and released on $50 bond each. Arraignments were scheduled Sept. 22 in District Court. Cass City Police also reported vandalism at the village park Sunday. A picnic table was smashed and damage was done to restrooms. Windows in the building were reported broken, along with fixtures inside.

Police have no suspects. The larceny of 40 gallons of gasoline and a number of tires from Klein's Fertilizer Co., on Vulcan Street was investigated Monday by Cass City Police.

Police said the theft probably occurred sometime over the week end and that no suspects have been appre-

The Vanishing American

About half of the U.S. dairy farmers in business five years ago no longer are.

In Michigan, the nation's sixth-ranking dairy state, the number of dairy farmers has dropped from about 14,000 in 1964 to 7,700 last year. The number is expected to be 4,500 by 1980.

Whv?

Feed prices have increased some 72 per cent in the past two years. The cost of fertilizers has doubled. The price of fuel is nearly twice what it was in 1973. Interest rates for loans to enable farmers to expand their operations and update their equipment are higher than in 1973. And dairy farmers' incomes have not kept pace with those increases in their production costs.

While the number of dairy farmers—and dairy cows—is dwindling, output per farm is increasing through a trend to larger, more efficient dairy farm operations. This is what today's dairy farmers are doing to help meet the needs of the American consumer and to help ward off dependence on other countries for such milk products as cheese, butter and nonfat dry milk.

And that's part of the reason we at MMPA think this Vanishing American is important and it's why we think this great natural resource—the dairy farming industry—is worth preserving.

"If It Fitz . . . " Hook or club, Mr. Sportsman?

If you had your druthers, would you prefer a clout on the head or a stab in the throat?

Arnold Huizinga might well wonder. He went golfing in Grand Rapids the other day and came home with a 25-pound chinook salmon. He clubbed it out of a fairway Disney. Could the killer of stream with his 7-iron.

Arnold was pretty proud of his unique accomplishment. Did anyone ever make a hole-in-one - or even a decent putt - with a fishing pole? He posed for photos and his story made newspapers and TV shows all over the

'And that's when the fish began to smell. "Sportsmen" were not impressed with Arnold's feat. They were outraged. This must have confused Arnold who probably figured he was quite a sportsman himself. He had succeeded at one sport while playing another sport. How big a sportsman can you be? How many baseball players make touchdowns in center-

But Arnold hadn't considered the hunter's definition of "sportsman". In such sports as hockey and football it is easy to be a sportsman. Just don't call the cops when your opponent maims you. Good sportsmen never go to court. Instead, they simply turn a noble cheek and keep a brave eye out for the chance to maim the guy back.

Hunters and fisherman have it tougher becoming sportsmen. To the outsider, it appears that the "home run" hunting is to kill and the way to keep score is to count dead bodies. This is not a nice image to put before a sissy public brought up by Walt Bambi be a sportsman? This is not fair, the outdoorsmen insist. They do not go into the woods and waters to kill. They do it to get off the freeway and breathe the clean-fresh-air-of-an-all-night poker game in a Holiday Inn. They take their sons fishing because it is the American thing to do. If fish could talk, they'd probably speak Rus-

Hunters do not strap dead deer to their fenders and drive through town to show off. Did you ever try to get a 12-point buck into a glove compartment?

To improve their image as sportsmen, the hunters worked to get laws passed to make it tougher for them to kill. No machine guns allowed, for instance. No shooting pheasants until they are out of the gamekeeper's truck. No shooting within 15 feet of a waitress. No fair killing a female deer without first showing her your special permit. No fair bagging more than your legal limit - and the legal limit of everyone else in camp plus their relatives back home who cannot have been deceased more than 2 years.

This is what got Arnold Huizinga in trouble. He was mainly a golfer and he didn't know the law saying it's OK to kill a fish by putting a hook in its mouth and yanking - but it's illegal to kill it by hitting it on the head. Huizinga faces a maximum fine of $100 or 90 days in jail for being a lousy sportsman. The dummy thought a dead fish was a dead fish, no matter how it got that way. After all, what makes a hook in the mouth more sporting than a knock on the skull? The idea is supposed to

FROM THE Editor's Corner

Over the years many of my fondest convictions have slipped away, I no longer feel that the vast majority of our public servants are primarily concerned with the welfare of our nation. I no longer believe that if a guy is rich and in politics he has no rational reason for not being totally dedicated, totally honest in his job. I no longer believe that an athlete necessarily is promoted or paid on the basis of his ability on the field. I think that the Hank Aarons, the Denny McLains, the Babe Ruths in the twilight of their careers were on the field because they pulled the fans into the stands, not because they could play the game all that well anymore. That's not so bad I guess. After all it is a business and everyone wants to see the giants of the game. I feel that there are a raft of players in the minor leagues as good as or maybe slightly better than the journeyman ball player in the majors, kept from the big time by politics rather than talent. And that is too bad.

Over the v ears I've managed to slowly lose my naivete and my enthusiasm for many of the events in the world around me.

I've lost a lot of my convictions over the years.

One that hasn't changed is my conviction that human nature is the same the world over...changed only by our environment. A couple of microscopic examples that started me thinking about all this again popped up last week. The first was the raging battle in Harbor Beach about teaching S-E-X in the public school there. The battle was enjoined by a few concerned parents and there were the usual few who defended the teaching of the course.

The result? Almost identical to the solution in Cass City where the board took the course of least resistance and backed off.

The second is the current squabble about time clocks in the courthouse. The same issue was debated in Arenac county and the arguments were the same on both sides as are now being repeated in

The human reactions are the same. Unfortunately they won't change in areas a lot more important than whether or not time clocks are installed in the courthouse. When the dust is settled and the lid comes off the oil prices in this country, I don't for a minute feel that the powers that run big business will have a moment's compassion for the little guy struggling to make ends meet. All the lip service given to more money for exploration," "making our country energy self-sufficient" won't be able to disguise the ballooning profits that will come floating in as the big cartels take another nip in our standard of living. All the talk about full employment won't be able to alter the fact that the big unions will go after (and probably get) inflationary wage increase contracts. It's sad but this is the way it uniform hiring practices and openings in the courthouse personnel policies. According to Commissioner to outsiders. Maynard McConkey, the committee met with 21 department heads and asked for their cooperation in setting up McConkey explained that in the past, the county has had no standard hiring or personnel policies and that keeping involving record hirings was often not up to the program.

McConkey said one of the goals of a personnel department would be to post job first before they were opened

Another purpose is self-protection. "When you get involved with unemployment compensation laws, for instance, you need to keep close records and know as much as you can about who you're hiring '

Previously, departments have hired persons on an individual basis. Standardizing rules and regulations has been sought by the personnel committee for over a year.

Mary Doyen, Cass City, shop steward for Council 55, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said the union believes time clocks are a working condition and as such are negotiable.

No progress was reported

She said to date, union members are not using the clock in the courthouse and have not been asked to use it by their supervisors. Both sides met Thursday

The county board has stated the clocks were installed as a method of keeping track of employee time and not as a basis for figuring wages. The board has said time figures recorded by the clocks could be useful when the next contract is negotiated.

Union officials see the clock installation as harassment by the board.

No subsequent meeting has been scheduled. Some observers believe the dispute will eventually come before the National Labor Relations

4-H needs adult support

By Bernard Jardot

Never before have young people been more important to America than they are today. The 4-H youth program like many other youth groups is being challenged to continue and expand its programs to meet the needs of today's youth,

The President's Task Force on Rural Development commended 4-H for the emphasis on private initiative through productive individual projects and urged that these programs be intensified and expanded to serve more rural youth. Interest in 4-H youth

KÉTCHUM'S KNAPSACK

Selling the homestead

By Jim Ketchum

Edgar Guest may never achieve greatness as a poet, but he came pretty close when he wrote the line about it taking a heap of living in a house to make it home.

You might say we did a heap of living in 15 years. In that time, you get a chance to experience nearly every emotion there is and each one does something to you that you can't quite describe.

You change and at the same time remain the same. It's sort of like Guy Lombardo. He invented New Year's Eve and when he goes, he's taking it with him.

It's that way with lives, too. You change, you grow up, charge out into the world to make a mark and still know there's home to return to when things don't go just the way you planned them.

Sentimental tripe, to be sure. But I guess there's a little bit of the sentimental slob in me.

It's hard to shut it out when you finally pull up those last few roots to a spot you knew for nearly half your life as home. It's almost never done easily and never without a moment or two of waxing about what's happened in those years.

You think about the things you learned. Like how to plant and raise a garden, or the rudiments of mechanics or the elements of physics.

Like how cold it can get and still be able to wash the car without the water freezing. Or how long it takes before a fish would finally take a nibble at your hook in the river that ran in back of the place.

Or just how long long can get when you're waiting for someone.

Or what it's like when death intervenes for the first, ugly

Mostly, you remember the fun times you've had, either with friends and family or the quiet times you spent alone working on a project in the garage or re-arranging tools or just sitting on the back steps on a hot summer night, watching the stars.

You remember how much fun it was to rake up a big pile of leaves to jump in and later the smell of the smoke as they

This is getting pretty maudlin, but it's true. Now it's somebody else's turn to take a crack at building up some memories at the old homestead. Maybe it did leave a lot to be desired. And maybe there were lots classier houses available. But they weren't home.

No other house will ever quite match it.

Rugged life adds meaning to mission work for Karen O'Dell

There are lots easier ways to spend your summer than getting up before dawn, living under primitive conditions and preaching the gospel. But for Karen O'Dell, 20, of rural Cass City, there aren't many other ways that are any more satisfying. Miss O'Dell was one of 28 persons who volunteered to spend their summers working with Teen Missions, Inc., in rugged-Nova-Scotia, And-farfrom being a vacation, it was disciplined work.

But she's still happy she went. In fact, this is Miss O'Dell's third year of involvement with Teen Missions, so it wasn't a completely new experience for her.

"I just enjoy spreading the gospel," Miss O'Dell said during a recent week end home from her studies at Central Michigan University where she is a sophomore majoring in recreational education. "I just feel as though it's something I've been called to do.'

It was no picnic to be sure.

begins, volunteers are sent through a rigorous "boot camp" held at Merritt Island. Fla. As the name implies, conditions are similar to an Army boot camp.

CASS CITY CHRONICLE-THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1975

"We got up each morning at 5:30 a.m., " Miss O'Dell recalled, "And after breakfast they ran us through an obstacle course that included leaping across a ditch and climbing a 12-foot wall.

----We-had-no-running-waterand had to use water for washing from wells at the camp," she said.

Following the obstacle course, volunteers attended classes the rest of the day in everything from evangelism to brick laying. "Some of the people in our class went overseas where they would be doing more than just preaching," she explained. The purpose of the strenuous boot camp life was to stress unity, she said. Out of 400 volunteers who came to camp, only two dropped out. Following two weeks of boot camp, the volunteers split up Before any evangelistic work into groups of 20 or so.

KAREN O'DELL poses with a commemorative plate from Nova Scotia where she spent her summer working as part of a youth evangelistic team. This was her third summer in the mission field.

enrollment up slightly

Kingston Community School officials reported an increase of 18 students attending classes this year over 1974 totals in unofficial figures released this week.

A total of 438 students are enrolled in grades K-6, a drop high school enrollment (7-12) was reported at 474, an increase of 24 students. A total of 912 students are attending classes this year, compared with 894 last year.

The change in student population will have no effect in the school district's classification, officials said.

The Tuscola County Sher- tions processed, including 228 original licenses and 775 renewals. A total of 917 operator's license tests were administered.

During the month, the county jail received 132 prisoners and released 132.

Mrs. Gaffney attends traffic safety meeting

Mrs. Clara M. Gaffney of 6768 Elizabeth St. attended a two-day workshop at Kellogg Center, Michigan State University, as a local leader of Michigan Women for Highway Safety.

The workshop was held Sept. 2-3, and covered information on planning community programs for the control of alcohol abuse as it relates to highway safety and focused on the growing bicycle and motorcycle safety-problems.

MISSION WORK

It wasn't until boot camp that Miss O'Dell discovered she would be an assistant leader. She admitted being a little frightened at the prospect but soon discovered she enjoyed it.

"I was a cook and a counselor," she said. "I was one of eight co-leaders in the group.'

The group left Florida by bus with Nova Scotia as their ultimate goal. Along the way they slept in tents each night and conducted evangelistic work along the way.

Eventually, they arrived at Cape Breton Island National Park in Nova Scotia where they set up a permanent camp. The group stressed personal devotions early each morning, along with Bible study prior to going out as young evangelists.

"Generally, we had a good response from the people we met," she said. "There were some who would just as soon we hadn't come along because they were on vacation and probably didn't want to be bothered. But we did get a good response."

It showed mostly at services held during the evenings where a total of 58 commitments were made during the period from early July until late August.

The summer wasn't without its problems within the camp,

"As we went along, some of the kids in our group started griping and complaining until it built up to a point where we just had to have it out," she recalled. "So one night, we all sat down and let off some steam and after that, things went pretty well."

Another minor problem arose with the food. Since the group did not believe in wasting any food, everything had to be used one way or another, including left-over mashed potatoes.

"We didn't have any flour for potato pancakes, so I went ahead and just made them out of the mashed potatoes," she said. "Afterward I had one of our girls come to us and say that my cooking had generally been pretty good, but that the potato pancakes were just

EQUALITY

Both men and women in the camp were treated as equals, Miss O'Dell said, with the girls doing as much of the physical work as the men.

"No limits were placed on us because we were women, she said. She said dating was frowned on in the camp because it tended to break down the spirit of unity as a group and limited the scope of each person's friendships.

Discipline also extended to personal eating habits as well. No soft drinks or candy bars were allowed, she said. Drinks were limited to unrefrigerated water.

"Probably our biggest problem was homesickness,' she said, adding that part of her job involved counseling group members as well as witnessing.

Generally, she considers the summer a success.

"I enjoyed the experience of leading which was something entirely new," she said. "It was a challenge because there was no way to plan a day ahead of time. You just took each day as it came."

Does she plan to go on another Teen Mission camp? It all depends, she says. But don't be surprised if you see her slogging through boot camp and cooking more potato pancakes again next inviolable custom that its and duodenal lining. ritual succession seems to lives, many men and women with an active peptic ulcer of the duodenum find that freedom from their recurring bellvaches is often only possible if they eat six small meals a day instead of three big ones.

Doctors have frequently recommended six meals a day because such a regimen shortens the time during which the stomach is empty. An empty stomach harboring a duodenal ulcer hurts, and that same stomach with food in it feels better. The stomachs of people with a duodenal ulcer tend to advantage to be gained by empty rapidly and also to produce excessive amounts of gastric acid. When the interval between meals is long as it is on the three-meals-a-day schedule, the unneutralized

Betty Jones, home economist with the Dairy Council of Michigan, will conduct a Preschooler Nutrition Workshop Tuesday, Sept. 23, from 7:00 to 10:00 p.m. in the County Building, Bad Axe. The workshop is sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service whose programs and services are open to all without regard to race, color, or national origin. Workshop size is limited and pre-reg-

Although three square acid has more chance to get meals a day is such a nearly at the vulnerable stomach

It is thus quite reasonably govern the rhythm of our arguable that shortening the period between meals should reduce the time that the duodenal wall is exposed to the eroding effect of the stomach acid.

But now it is clear that there is even more sense to such a regimen than was realized. With the curiosity characteristic of the scientist who is never satisfied with the obvious, Dr. Robert L. Blalock and his colleagues of Tampa, Fla., have found that the expected neutralizing of stomach acid is not the only, and perhaps not the major, patients who eat six meals a day. He measured the effect on the acid production of the stomach of the same amount of food, divided into three daily portions, and divided into six small daily portions.

When he measured on successive days the effect of the two diet schedules, he found that among patients with duodenal ulcer, the six-meals-a-day schedule evoked a much smaller acidproducing response than did the same amount of food divided into three meals.

The apparent advantage of six meals a day for patients with active duodenal ulcers is still not wholly clear. We know that peptic ulcers do not appear when there is no acid in the stomach. But there is no good explanation of exactly why or when excessive acid is produced. Nor is there precise knowledge of how psychological conflicts and emotional tension play their role in the formation of

But now, thanks to Dr. Blalock, we have encouraging evidence that food in the stomach not only quiets the pain of a duodenal ulcer but also that properly scheduled, frequent feedings can critically slow down the acid-producing mechanism in patients

When it comes to calling hogs, it's hard to top Mrs. Sally Goodall of rural Cass City, Mrs. Goodall has had lots of practice calling portly porkers and she's turned it into a prize-winning skill. Mrs. Goodall has captured the state hog-calling championship the past two years at the Michigan State Fair in Detroit and chances are good she'll hang onto that crown for a long time to come.

In fact, this year, she won both the hog-calling and husband-calling competition, besting 20 other competitors for a total of $30 in prize

TECHNIQUE

There's more to calling hogs than just opening your mouth and yelling, according to Mrs. Goodall. It takes practice, patience and a good set of lungs.

"The secret to calling husbands, for instance, is to use a two-syllable name with a vowel in the last syllable," she said. "In that way, you can make the last syllable

"With hog-calling, you use soo-eee, and you hold the last syllable and finish with pigwig-wig real fast."

Normally, she holds a call at least 30 seconds, sometimes longer.

Another secret Mrs. Goodall has perfected involves sucking lemons prior to the competition. This clears the throat and allows all the sound to come out.

"For instance, if the competition starts at 3 o'clock, I'll start sucking a lemon around 1 o'clock or so."

Surprisingly, she said, most of her competition in both hog and husband-calling has been female. This year, for instance, only one man called hogs out of seven contestants. He was from Ferndale, Mrs. Goodall said, and after all, how many hogs are there in Ferndale? A total of seven hog callers and 14 husband callers entered this year's state competition. Last year, there were eight hog callers and 13 husband callers. The winner is judged by applause from the audience as registered on an applause

Funeral services were held Wednesday for William A. Parrott, 85, of Cass City, who died at his home on Dodge Road Sunday.

He was born Feb. 11, 1890, in Holbrook, son of the late Joseph and Arta Keyworth Parrott.

He married Miss Faye McCullough, July 21, 1913, in Beaverton. The couple came from Mt. Pleasant to Cass City in 1928, when they became owners and operators of Parrott's Dairy, retiring in 1955. Mrs. Parrott died Jan. 15, 1971.

He was a member of Trinity United Methodist church for 47 years.

He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. William (Faith) Steinkraus of Metairie, La.; two sons, William and Gail, both of Cass City; two brothers, Earl of Kalamazoo' and Kent of Port Huron: 12 grandchildren, and 16 greatgrandchildren. Two sons, one sister and one brother preceded him in death.

Funeral services were held Wednesday from Little's Funeral Home with Rev. E.D.K. Isaacs, pastor of Trinity United Methodist church, officiating. Burial was in Elkland cemetery.

Sentence 2 in Circuit Court

Two men were sentenced to prison terms Monday when they appeared in Tuscola County Circuit Court before Judge Martin Clements.

William Anthony Enos, 19, Caro, was sentenced to serve from two to five years in Jackson prison after pleading guilty to an indecent liberties Enos will receive credit for 100 days already served. In his sentence order, Judge Clements recommended that Enos receive psychiatric counseling.

He was arrested in Indianfields township March 25. Tracy Arthur Miller, 29, Roseville, was also sentenced to serve from two to five years in Jackson prison after being found guilty of carrying a concealed weapon. Miller will receive one day's credit for time served.

An appeal bond of $20,000 was filed Monday. Judge Clements ordered Miller remanded to the Tuscola County Jail to await sentencing in two other felony cases in Oakland and Macomb counties, Sept. 19 and 26. He was arrested in Cass

City last Nov. 18. Two arraignments were heard in Circuit Court Monday. Roy Allan Fritz, 31, Davison, was arraigned on charges of receiving stolen property. He stood mute and a plea of innocent was entered in his behalf.

Pre-trial examination was set for Sept. 29, and bond of $750 was continued. He was arrested in Wells township May 19.

In a related case, Earnest Neil Bell, 24, Caro, was arraigned on charges of conspiracy to commit larceny and embezzlement. He entered a plea of not guilty and pre-trial examination was set for Sept. 25. Bond was continued at $750. Bell is charged in connection with Fritz with conspiracy involving the theft of cattle in Wells township May dismissed by Judge Clements. In his dismissal order, Clements noted that the complainant in the case "has received satisfaction" and that Eberline is seeking treatment for an alcohol problem.

In addition, Clements said Eberline poses "no serious problem to the community".

Cass City REMC: library to schools

By Jim Ketchum

If you teach in any public or parochial school in Tuscola, Huron or Sanilac counties, chances are good you already know about Cass City's newest business--the Regional Educational Media Center (REMC).

The center, located at 6410 Main St., opened its doors July 1, and supplies special education materials, including films and books, to school districts in the tri-county

The center consolidates a two-site operation formerly located in Caro and Bad Axe and the move to Cass City should help streamline things, according to Director Don Richards.

"We wanted a more centralized location and Cass City was the answer," Richards explained. "Our purpose is to provide each school district with educational materials either at cost or free of charge, depending on what they are and we felt we could do it better out of one office."

There are 22 REMC's throughout the state, Richards said. They were established following action by the Michigan legislature in 1970, with boundaries drawn in Michigan's REMC's are service organizations working cooperatively with one or more of the 58 Intermediate School Districts for the improvement of instruction in elementary and secondary public and non-public schools. Richards said Cass City's center serves 13 K-12 districts and 20 parochial schools in the three-county area, along with the staffs of the three Intermediate districts.

That translates into over 1,900 teachers and 37,500 students.

In a sense, the center is similar to a library, lending out both printed and nonprinted material. Over 2,000 films, for instance, are available_through_the_Cass_City-

It also offers a variety of audio materials such as telephone simulators that help teach children how to use the telephone.

It also provides projectors, tape recorders and cassettes, along with graphics and production services.

A big plus comes in cooperative purchasing, where savings of up to 30 per cent can be realized, Richards said.

What does it cost? Last year, the Region 10 REMC operated on a budget of $125,000. This year, expenses should run about $95,000, Richards said, primarily because it is now a one-site operation.

The money to fund REMC's throughout the state comes from federal, state and local sources. Schools contribute an average of $1.50 per student toward the funding. State funding during the present school year totals $1,000,000, with federal monies coming from two education bills passed by Con-

SAVINGS

A major reason for a REMC is to provide schools with equipment they couldn't afford to stock individually.

"It would be impossible for each school district to provide the range of services and materials we provide," Richards said. "And since we operate on a cooperative basis, we can do it a lot cheaper."

In addition to providing materials, REMC also provides audio-visual equipment repair through an arrangement with the Bay-Arenac Intermediate School District.

The REMC also publishes a monthly newsletter for teachers and school administrators explaining what is available and what new trends are developing in audio-visual instruction.

"We also act to teach the teachers how to develop the most effective use for the films and other materials they use," Richards said.

Richards and his staff of three_keep-tabs-on-materialcheck-outs and help teachers in planning their use.

Staff members include Bob Osborn, media technician; Jeanette Haley, audio-visual and Brunodine

(Bunny) Keyser, secretary. Also housed in the same office is the Special Education Learning Materials Service center (SELMS), headed by Carolyn Benscoter of Cass

Her department functions much the same as REMC, except that these materials are aimed primarily at mentally handicapped children.

Her staff aide is Maureen Stapleton.

Tuscola Intermediate School District acts as REMC's fiscal agent, keeping tabs on operations and helping to channel funding into it.

Richards, 42, and a Harbor Beach resident who plans to relocate in Cass City soon, is pleased with the move. He's hopeful that once certain "political problems" are ironed out, the office can expand from its quarters in the former Detroit Edison building on Main Street.

"Part of the problem comes in the fact that each Intermediate district would like to have us headquartered with them," Richards said. "But we really feel we can do a better job serving all the districts from this type of central location."

Richards worked 11 years in special education before becoming involved in REMC. Last year, when the operation was divided between Caro and Bad Axe, he served half-time as director of each.

"Our problem was that we'd get caught with time on our hands in one place and too much work in the other," he said. "There was also the problem of wondering what equipment was in Caro and what was in Bad Axe. The Cass City move was really the answer.'

Richards says he's impressed with Cass City and hopes REMC can become part of the community. He's confident it will

The Cass City Red Hawks got the preliminaries out of the way last Friday and now will settle down to the serious business of the fall. . . . the Thumb B Conference title

It all starts this Friday at the Cass City Recreational Park when Cass City hosts the Marlette Red Raiders. Both teams will be coming off non-league opening game victories. Marlette downed North Branch and Cass City whipped Yale, 9-0.

It will be a battle of the unbeatens. . . . which sounds a lot better than it really is. According to the scouting report on Marlette, the Red Raiders were not overly potent on offense. They are small and quick.

The same report could have been brought back to Marlette from scouts watching the Cass City-Yale fracas. Cass City wasn't too potent on offense but showed a stubborn defense that was the high point of the game, according to Coach Roland Pakonen. The Hawks rose up when they had to on defense, twice stopping the Yale eleven deep in their own territory. Once the Bulldogs penetrated, with the help of a the Hawk five but were turned back.

Coach Pakonen said that the lack of a consistent offense can be traced to breakdowns in blocking assignments.

It wasn't any particular spot that caused us trouble, he said. Eliminating these mistakes will be our top priority project in this week's Pakonen is also looking for a more balanced attack than he used in the opener. Ken Lowe carried the ball 37 of the 48 rushing attempts and his individual efforts kept Cass City in the game.

We need to break Mike Lowe up the middle to give our attack some balance, the coach feels.

Cass City staged a couple of drives of its own only to have the stubborn Yale defense rise up and stall the Hawks just as they appeared ready to cap a sustained drive for a The Hawks moved deep into the Bulldog territory in the first half only to be stopped inside the 10 to keep the game a scoreless deadlock.

Cass City learned its lesson when that march fizzled. The next time they got the ball deep into Yale territory Tom couple of costly penalties, to Smentek stepped back on fourth down and kicked a 27-yard field goal.

For all practical purposes, that was the ball game. Ken Lowe scored with less than a half minute to play when he intercepted a desperation Yale pass and ran it 30 yards for a touchdown. But that was a gift marker that made the final score look better than it actually was for Cass City rooters.

A look at the statistics indicates how close the game was. Cass City gained a total of 158 and Yale netted 152.

Spearheading the defense were Guy Howard and Wayne Brooks. Brooks was credited with 12 tackles and Howard On offense Ken Lowe picked up 123 yards on his 37 carries for a 3.3-yard average. Mike Lowe got 20 yards in eight tries for a 2,5-yard average.
