95 per cent federal funding

Sheriff department pushes for $60,000 crime unit

The Tuscola County Sheriff's Department hopes to increase its arsenal against an ever-increasing crime rate with a mobile crime unit designed to help detect and preserve evidence. The project, which includes a van-type vehicle, equipment and personnel, is expected to cost over $60,000.

Ninety-five per cent of the cost, however, would be picked up with federal dollars earmarked for such projects if the county receives a grant -for which it applied. The county's share would total just over $3,000. Sheriff Hugh Marr is pushing hard for the unit. He says if the grant application is approved, funding would begin next July 1 and the project could be operational in the county by next fall. The County Board of Commissioners, bristling under recent criticism that it isn't doing enough to help law enforcement agencies do their jobs in the county, has agreed to participate in the program. The project Marr hopes to includes a 20 by imple

Marr says the primary use of the mobile unit would be to detect, preserve and protect evidence. The van alone is estimated to cost $8,000, with total personnel costs to operate it at $33,241.74 annually. - In-the-grant-request, Marris also asking for a police car counties with their large urban populations. Marr maintains some of their crime problem spills into the rural areas.

According to figures supplied by the sheriff in the grant request, the crime rate rose 33 per cent between 1973 and 1974, with increases recorded so far this year. Marr cites a need for more technical investigation techniques to help offset a lack of adequate manpower.

In addition, a large amount of seasonal tourist traffic into and through the county compounds the problem, he says. The unit is similar to a mobile crime van now in use in Lapeer county, Marr said. Federal funding for the grant is funnelled through the Michigan_Office_of_Criminal Justice Programs in Lansing, and must meet state guidelines before it is approved.

KINGSTON ELEMENTARY school students prepared to give 200 bales of hay destined for the Detroit Zoo a rousing send-off last week. The hay, which will feed one bison for one year, is to seek re-election

With nominating petitions scheduled to begin circulating soon, nearly all Cass City village office holders whose terms expire next March have said they plan to seek re-election. Only trustee James Ware indicated he is undecided about seeking another term on the village council. Trustees who have said they plan to seek four-year terms are Richard Hampshire and Nat Tuttle, Hampshire was first elected in 1973 for a two-year term. However, a change in local election procedures added a year to his term and extended terms of all councilmen to four years.

Tuttle, who was appointed to council in July, 1973, to replace Bernard Ross who resigned, will also be seeking a four-year term of his own.

Ware said late last week he hasn't made up his mind about another stint on the

Owen-Gage voters to decide fate of $1.6 million bond issue

Voters in the Owen-Gage School District will go to the polls Saturday to decide the fate of a school bonding proposal and, according to some, the fate of their district as well.

Voters will be asked to as a chance for school approve a $1.675 million bond supporters to insure the issue that would construct a district's future existence. new high school building to replace the present 1913 facility. Present plans call for new classroom space totaling 37,660 square feet and including seven classrooms and a new gymnasium.

School officials say the proposal can be floated for a total of 5.4 additional mills. If approved, major construction would probably begin with the end of classes next spring.

Backers of the proposal see the election as crucial. They contend that a new high school building is needed immediately.

Last year, the State Fire Marshall's office demanded major renovations be made on the building that included closing off the top story. Remodeling costs were budgeted at $20,000.

The district is working against a fire marshall's order which allows the 1913 building to be used this school year before another inspection is made.

Backers of the issue fear if the building proposal is defeated, the district will eventually be split among Cass City, Lakers and Unionville-Sebewaing districts. If this happens, they contend, local control of education would be lost.

Supt. Ronald Erickson stresses this point. He maintains the most vocal opponents of the bond issue actually want to see the district go under. He says many of those working to defeat the proposal have students attending neighboring districts.

Erickson sees the proposal transfer their land to neighboring districts who say Owen-Gage facilities are poor.

Still others say if the "The junior-senior high district goes under, communschool building proposal is ity organizations such as the probably the first realistic opportunity that the voters Owen-Gage Senior Citizens Club might disintegrate due have had to reflect their to a lack of local interest. opinions since the separate

Kingston kids

help Detroit Zoo

There'll be one fat, happy bison at the Detroit Zoo for the next year, thanks to the efforts of Kingston Elementary School students.

The 130 elementary students collected 200 bales of hay and shipped it to the zoo as part of a bicentennial project designed to help build self-esteem and as a way of showing pride in their school, according to Douglas Kramer, Elementary Principal.

Kramer said the pupils spent about six weeks collecting the hay which was shipped to Detroit Monday.

"We had heard that the Detroit Zoo was having financial trouble and the kids wanted to help out," Kramer ex-plained. "So we decided to adopt a bison. I understand there's enough hay in the shipment to feed a bison for an entire year."

Kramer said the kids wanted to do more than just send money. He said area farmers readily donated two or three bales of hay each, including farmers who didn't have children enrolled in the school. "The response was just terrific," the principal said. The shipment was sent to the zoo thanks to a truck donated by Fred Ruggles, arural Kingston area farmer and former maintenance man 'at the school. Estimated worth of the hay was set at $270. Persons who wanted to help but didn't have hay donated money to pay for the gasoline to truck the load to Detroit. Kramer said the donation was one part of a larger project to involve elementary students with the bicentennial. Other activities include picture drawing and theme writing contests, for instance. Meanwhile, that satisfied munching you hear is a contented bison. In his own way, he's saying thanks.

Mail volume at the Cass City Post Office has been running at seasonal levels, with the greatest rush expected in the days just before and just after Christmas,

Postmaster Grant Glaspie said this week. Based on last year's figures, when 70,000 first class postage stamps were sold during December, Glaspie said about the same number of cards, letters and packages are being handled as were processed in December, 1974. "We've found that we're handling fewer cards, though, than we did three or four years ago," Glaspie said. "I think it's due primarily to the increased cost of cards and higher postage."

would hit its peak around the middle of this week. He added increase of three cents per ounce for first class postage set to take effect Dec. 28, a heavy load is expected just after the holiday. "Large bulk mailers generally want to take advantage of the lower rates just prior to an increase," Glaspie said. He said Christmas mail volume has fallen from a high of nearly 160,000 pieces of mail in 1968 and 1969, to around 70,000 now. Packages are also down, he said, probably due to fewer servicemen stationed overseas today than during the height of the Vietnam War in 1968. Locally, he said, mailings within Cass City itself have dropped sharply. "I think more people are simply wishing each other Merry Christmas in person," Glaspie said. He doesn't blame it all on higher postage rates, how-card you could buy for a dime or 15 cents years ago now costs maybe 50 cents," he said. "I think the cost of the cards has a lot to do with it." Glaspie said window schedules will remain unchanged during the holiday season, due partly to the financial pinch the U.S. Postal Service finds itself in these days.

No additional deliveries are anticipated either. All mail received at the Cass City Post Office by Dec. 24 will be delivered that day, the postmaster said.

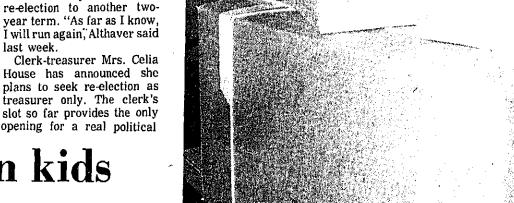

It's a big change from the days when the Post Office made special deliveries of Christmas packages and cards on Christmas morning.

"Back then, we'd even send rural carriers out to deliver something we thought was a Christmas gift or a card," Glaspie said.

OWENGAGE CITIZENS FOR COMMON SENSE

It's the week before Christmas, and all through the town people with questions seem to abound. Questions about millage and taxes, too, so now you'll get just one man's view. (It's parodies like this that make "poetry" taboo at the Chronicle.) QUESTION: What do you see next year for the football field?

ANSWER: When it comes before the village voters in March I feel that the many volunteers who worked on the park gridiron will have a sentimental attachment to it and swing the vote in favor of the lease (in effect saying, yes, keep the football field at the park.)

When it comes before the voters in the school district the reaction will be, hey, man, I feel that the school is the place for the field, but no taxes, no taxes, no taxes. That will keep the field at the park where we will get new lights and not much else

What's going to happen when Owen-Gage goes to the polls to decide whether to tax themselves for $1.75 million down by a narrow margin.

ANSWER: Despite all the arguments, the propaganda letters from both camps. I suspect that it may be trivial, personal incidents affecting individual voters that may decide the outcome.

There's a hard core group wanting to close the district because they feel there isn't enough educational opporlunity (or chance to acquire There's another that it). wants Owen-Gage at all costs. But when it gets right down to it something that probably doesn't amount to much could be the key. Here's a personal example of what I'm talking about.

Schools are divided in the world of high school sports by high school size into classes A-B-C-D. Cass City is present-Iv .: C'', A few more students and we become "B".

In C we are at the top of the allowable size group, in B we are at the bottom, constantly competing against schools in State competition twice as large or more than we are. As a basketball nut with a personal interest, I'd just as soon not see Owen-Gage students arrive full force for a few years.

Now that doesn't make much sense and most of you would regard it as stupid, or at least of so little importance as not to be worth considering

And you are right. But if I were entitled to a vote in Owen-Gage and all else were equal, that would tilt the scales in my mind.

How many voters in the Owen-Gage district that formerly were connected with Cass City harbor trivial (to us) reasons for wanting nothing to do with the school? How many feel they received the short end of the stick at Owen-Gage? Answer me that and telling you the outcome of the vote would be a snap.

millage have been spanked soundly and votes to break up the district defeated even more soundly.

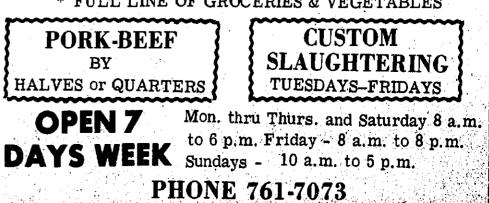

But the money will speak more loudly than the school district loyalty and I'll guess that the bond issue will go

Riding comes easy for 10-year old Cammie Gaskill

It's no secret that Cammie Gaskill likes horses. She loves them and spends as much time as she can grooming, feeding and riding on the farm owned by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Gaskill, located four miles east of Owendale.

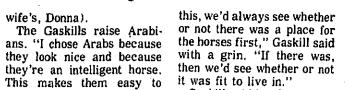

So it wasn't that much of a surprise when 10-year-old Cammie took top honors in the girls' division competition sponsored by Huron county's Indian Trails Riding Club this year. In winning, she bested competitors nearly twice her Gina finished second in halter class at the Huron county show last summer and sixth at the county fair, and Lisa is already looking to the day when she can enter competition. All three are involved in 4-H, as is their father, who is an advisor.

They'll have a tough match, though. Last summer, during contesting at the riding club, Cammie was kicked in the leg and suffered a wound that would require stitches to close.

When asked whether or not she wanted to go to the hospital or finish contesting, she boldly stood up and said she wanted to finish contesting. She remounted her horse, finished her routine and then went to the hospital.

"She was more afraid of the stitches than she was of riding," her father said.

At age 10, Cammie has managed to train a half-Arab pony by herself, working long hours with the patience of a trained veteran. She has memorized characteristics of each horse and knows how each needs to be handled.

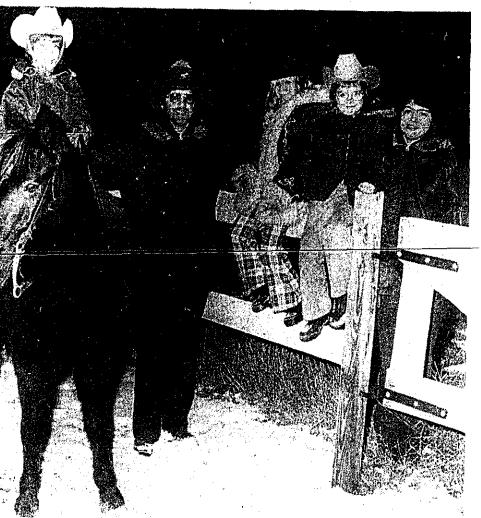

How do her parents feel about it?

"You might say we're proud of her," Gaskill said with a wide grin flashing across his face. "Really proud."

I dislocated two fingers and a thumb the other night writing Christmas cards. Faced with the option of doing a share of the cards or sleeping in the back of the station wagon in our unheated garage, I grabbed at the first pen J could find.

My wife isn't content just to pick out a card with an appropriate message, sign our names and send it off. She wants each card to contain the personal touch--a note of some sort wishing everybody the same sentiment they could read on the other side of the card.

Maybe she thinks because I'm a professional wordsmith that I'd love it. That's similar to assuming a jackhammer operator would want to tear up the driveway just for kicks.

Anyhow, I received my allotment of cards, envelopes and stamps, along with a ball-point pen. Seated at the kitchen table, I soon fell into a pattern of writing just about the same thing on each card. Soon they became as original as a Milton Berle joke. "Can't I type these things?" I asked plaintively. "It would go faster."

"Of course not," my beloved spouse replied. "They have to be written by hand. Besides, they won't fit into the typewriter."

With some help from a pair of scissors they would, I thought.

As I ground out one after another, I couldn't help thinking about those mimeographed letters that go out as Christmas greetings each year from people who got sick of writing Christmas cards. They're generally too long and try to make the sender sound like a worldbeater. Most of them extol the virtues of belonging to their

10 per cent, AAA says increase coming in 1973 as cents a mile for fixed costs. The cost of driving for gasoline prices went up 10 to Michigan motorists has increased nearly 10 per cent in the last year, according to Automobile Club of Michigan. "It now costs state motorists 18.3 cents a mile to operate their cars compared to 16.6 cents per mile in 1974," stated Joseph Ratke, Auto Club touring manager.

Data on the expenses of operating a motor vehicle are included in the 1975-76 edition of the AAA pamphlet, "Your Driving Costs." Information is based on driving a 1975 intermediate-size Chevelle, an eight-cylinder Malibu Classic hardtop with standard equipment and an automatic transmission.

"The major reasons for this year's increased costs are that the average price of new, American-made cars has risen over last year and gasoline costs are up about six cents a gallon from 1974," Ratke pointed out.

Ratke noted that during a four-year period from 1969 to 1973, operating costs rose just have risen approximately 25 per cent. "For the motorist who drives 10,000 miles annually, operating expenses in 1976 will be $1,831--a $169 increase over costs for an intermediate-size auto last year," Ratke said.

An auto driven 20,000 miles will cost $2,636, or about 13.2 cents per mile. The reason for the lower cents-per-mile figure at 20,000 miles is that fixed costs (insurance, depreciation and license fee) remains about the same as for 10,000 miles. Auto Club also has noted that for every 10 cents per gallon increase in gas price, the per-mile cost of running a car rises one cent based on 10 miles per gallon, or one-half cent for 20 miles per gallon.

The AAA pamphlet pointed out that the 18.3-cent figure is computed on 6.45 cents a mile for variable costs (gas, oil 14 per cent with most of that and maintenance) and 11.85

The recently released book-15 cents per gallon. In the last let also compares operating two years, operating costs costs for various sized cars in both low-cost (rural) and high-cost (urban) areas. Based on annual mileage of 10,000, it costs approximately 12.8 cents per mile to operate a compact, six-cylinder model car in a low-cost area and 17.3 cents a mile to drive the same vehicle in a high-cost location, such as Detroit. Motorists should figure an additional 20-cents-per-day increase in operating costs for air conditioning.

Work Experience-one step down the road to a job

By Jim Ketchum

Finding a job can be the hardest work there is. Without any experience, job hunting can amount to one rejection after another with little chance at a future.

A Thumb-area program that's been renamed, refined and revived with federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) funds is trying to provide unemployed persons with that kind of experience.

Known as CETA Title I Work Experience, the adult portion of the program seeks to place unemployed persons 75 adults in the tri-county with no prior job experience area, placing them in lowon a series of steps that will hopefully lead to a job in the private sector of the economy.

Work Experience first came to the Thumb in the late 1960's as Operation Mainstream, later becoming the Neighborhood Youth Corps. With the demise of these programs, the idea was picked up under CETA and given new life.

paying jobs that could lead eventually to non-subsidized employment. One participant in Work Experience is Mrs. Edith L. Ricker, 48, of Gagetown. She works as a playground supervisor and library assistantteacher's aide at Gagetown Elementary School. She has been employed through Work Experience at the school about six months.

Mrs. Ricker earns the fed-Today Title I Work Expereral minimum wage of $2.10 ience is working with approxian hour. Her scale will jump to $2.30 an hour when the new federal minimum takes effect Jan. 1. She works 6.4 hours per day. According to Lyn Ford. program coordinator, cost of the program through next July should run approximately $393,000. She explained that persons such as Mrs. Ricker are paid through the Human Development Commission, which oversees Title I activities in the tricounty area. Mrs. Ricker costs the Owen-Gage School District nothing. Ms. Ford emphasized Work Experience is a temporary program "This is one point we really want to stress," she said. "Work experience is not a permanent job. It's only one phase of the program." She explained that most Work Experience clients remain in Title I for from six to nine months or until they have mastered what's involved in holding down a job and in establishing work habits. The program is also designed to help persons adjust to the idea of working and to provide them with basic skills that can be applied elsewhere. "From Work Experience, if sufficient progress has been made and if the slots are available, we can transfer them to either classroom training, on-the-job training or public service employment," Ms. Ford said. "If we can't do that, we work with program participants in every way we can to find a permanent job. But we aren't an employment service.

Judith Murphy, manager of manpower services for the three counties, said so far that between 35 and 42 per cent of the persons who began in work experience programs eventually find jobs in the private sector of the economy. She says the placement rate would probably be higher if the economy were stronger and more jobs were available.

Gagetown Elementary Principal William Britt, who

Britt said Mrs. Ricker originally started as a cafeteria supervisor working only a couple of hours or so each day. At that rate, he said, she wasn't making her expenses just driving to work. Then she learned about Work Experience and met eligibility requirements. As a program participant, her Social Security and Workman's Compensation are paid, but she receives no other fringe benefits. She is paid strictly by the hour.

Ms. Murphy explained that Thumb area Work Experience participants work a 32hour week instead of 40 hours to allow them time to look for full-time jobs or take care of personal business. She said the schedule also allows participants to become adjusted to keeping regular hours and helps establish good work habits.

How has the program worked? Generally, officials are pleased, but they acknowledge it works only as well as the participant and the employer cooperate.

"Once in a while we get personality conflicts," Ms. Murphy said. "Someone will think his boss has it in for him or that nobody likes him, When this happens, we either get on the phone or send out a counselor to try and iron out the problem. About the biggest complaint from participants is when Work Experience comes to an end and they are either terminated or transferred to Title III or Title VI public service employment. "They get the idea that Work Experience is public service employment and that it's permanent," she said. "It isn't. There is a definite end." ENJOYS WORKING

For Mrs. Ricker's part, she is pleased with the program and how it helped put her to work. She explained she had been a housewife for 30 years before a divorce suddenly thrust her into the job mar-

"I'd been at home all that i nau no experience at anything and I really didn't know what to do," she said. "I was working a couple of hours a day for the school as a cafeteria supervisor when I heard about Work Experience. I got in touch with the people in Caro and they helped me get this job." Mrs. Ricker says her job has helped her decide what she wants to do with her life. "I want to work with children." she said. "I love being ever did before and I'm with them and helping them. This has really been a fulfilling experience for me."

Mrs. Ricker believes work gives a person purpose in life. She says now she could not be content sitting at home with few outside interests. "I have three children who are married and a 12-year-old son I still have to support." she said. "I have to be busy doing things. Right now have more hobbies than I library assistant. Both jobs give her contact with children and have helped her decide the future direction she wants her life to take.

"I'm very pleased with the program," Mrs. Ricker says. "I'm just hoping the school district can take over the position. I really enjoy it."

at-fault motorists made left turns in front of oncoming cycles or failed to yield, the study concluded the average motorist is untrained to pick out a cycle that, at a distance of only 100 yards, can be hidden behind a pencil held at arm's length. The study's recommendations include requiring cyclists to ride with lights on at all times and use of selective enforcement, or flooding high motorcycle accident areas with police in marked cars. This statistical profile of the person most likely to be killed on a cycle was drawn from the study:

• The typical motorcyclist was a 26-year-old male who driver has passed a driver died on a rural, two-lane road education course or a state between 3 p.m. and 2 a.m. on a May through September week end, with July the most dangerous month.

Improving Lakers next for Hawks

CASS CITY, MICHIGAN

CLARK HILLAKER is a top rebounder for his size. He goes high to try for an offensive rebound Friday against Sandusky. Number 40 is Jim Loding of Sandusky. Rick Tuckey of Cass City watches the action.

Sandusky stalled the clock teams were tied for the lead after three games and one of them is Cass City, thanks to an overtime 53-45 decision over Sandusky at Cass City High School last Friday.

It was a strange game in many ways. Cass City won although its field goal percentage was the lowest of the year (.39 per cent) and the team was outrebounded 48 to Coach Ron Nurnberger could point to flaws in the offense but he should have been pleased with Cass City's defense.

Sandusky came into the game undefeated and boasting scoring totals in the sixties and seventies and managed just 44 points against the Hawks.

It was a good thing that the defense was playing super ball.

For the team's offense was about non-existent for the first quarter and a half. With four minutes left in the first half, Cass City's meager offense had netted just eight points, four in the first quarter.

It looked like a long, long evening for Hawk supporters. But the club started to dominate from that point on and as the game progressed it became a matter of which would give out first. . .Sandusky or the clock. By the intermission the score was 29:21 and the catch-up race was underway. Cass City chopped the margin to six points by the end by Bliss put Cass City in front biggest victory of the young by three.

After Sandusky turned the ball over without scoring, the offense and Lowe was free for easy shots or free throws. When the three minute over-

Hawks had outscored the visiseason, 53-45. Lowe led the attack with 19 points, Bliss followed with Hawks went into a control ball 15. Lowe gathered in 17 rebounds and Clark Hillaker picked off 14.

Next on the Hawk list is time period ended, Lowe had an improving Laker team that netted seven points and the scored its first win of the season last week over pretors 8-0 to tuck away their viously undefeated Vassar.

JV'S STILL UNDEFEATED

The Junior Varsity continued undefeated with a key win over the Sandusky Junior Varsity in the preliminary, 44-40.

-The little Hawks jumped off to an early lead and then staved off a Redskin rally for the victory.

THE CROWD REACTED with joy when the Hawks rallied to tie the game in the last seconds and then went on to win in overtime.

Getting out-dated laws off the books is Bryant's goal. "There are so many left over laws on the books that aren't needed anymore," he says. "And we just keep piling others on top of them. The only time we examine the old laws is when someone calls a particularly bad one to our attention."

Bryant contends that "respect for the law demands rational and limited laws which are widely known, understood and accepted, and which are vigorously, fairly

Coy, he's not. Just being practical.

Zolton A. Ferency, the shaggy-haired lawyer who once chaired Michigan's Democratic Party, then left to help found the Human Rights Part (HRP), says he has no plans at this point to run for office. But, he adds, that doesn't mean he won't be a candidate.

The HRP person whose name commands some recognition across the state, Ferency noted recently that "after we see who and what is available, the need may be that I run for office." Ferency has been mentioned as a possible HRP candidate for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Dem-ocrat Philip A. Hart,

What is HRP all about? Ferency sees the party as an alternative to the twoparty system. "We must convince the people that voting is not choosing the lesser of two evils," he says. "I think the Human Rights Party is helping to provide that alternative.

DECLINE SLOWING

Just nine pupils in a school district in Michigan?

Yep. That's what the Michigan Department of Educa-1 tion reports for the student [population of Bois Blanc Pines School District on Bois Blanc Island in northern Lake Huron.

Needless to say, that's the smallest district in the state. And the next largest, the Oneida Township School District in Eaton County, has 10.1 (Both are non-K-12 school) districts.)

Largest of Michigan's districts is Detroit, with exactly 254,519 students more thanthe district on Bois Blanc' Island. Flint follows, with 41,486, and Grand Rapid chalks up 38,149.

These items come alonwith a report that well over two million students are enrolled in Michigan's public schools this year, a decline o some 13,065 from last year. The department says it'-

award

Mrs. Jeanette Shadko, a former Cass City resident, was one of six persons to receive the Governor's Award for Distinguished Public Employees in ceremonics held recently in Lansing.

Mrs. Shadko, a 1925 graduate of Cass City High School, received the award based on her "devotion to the principles of public service, substantive achievements, outstanding programming and participation in civic, social and professional activities." Mrs. Shadko became the first woman county extension director in 1974, working in Benzie county.

She has worked for Michigan State University's Cooperative Extension service the past 21 years and among her achievements has been her efforts with scores of elderly persons, making cer-be. One of his sayings became legendary in that busy pressroom: When the front page makes you happy - it's been a great day!

I'm one who has noticed that the great days seem farther apart. Nor can I blame on my ulcer the headlines that don't make anyone happy. Someone else said: men make the news; reporters only write it.

It's time to give thought to the roots of happiness. After all, what happens every day is simply the fruit of a million vines. Down at the roots is where the fateful choices are made which inevitably bring forth their fruit.

This is a mighty fine newspaper whose service to the community is to tell us what news men have made today. We also have some mighty fine churches. Their service to the community is to mold the faith and character of the men who will make the news tomorrow. Our churches are working at the roots of happiness!
