Farmland values set to skyrocket

Agricultural land values in the Cass City area are destined to rise from 44 to 83 per cent, according to a report filed last week with the Tuscola County Board of Commissioners.

The report represents increases in values over the past two years based on sales in the region.

Hardest hit of area townships was Ellington, where farmland values will rise 83 per cent. The increase is slightly less than a predicted 93 per cent earlier in the year by township Supervisor Fred Bardwell.

The average selling price of land per acre in the township ranges between $625 and $750. The value applies to unimproved land, excluding buildings or tiling.

In Elkland township, farmland values are destined to rise 52 per cent. Average per acre price is $750, according to the study.

In Elmwood township, unimproved farmland values skyrocketed 78 per cent. Per acre prices range from $750 to a high of $1,200 in the northwest quarter of the township. In Novesta township, farmland values will rise 61 per cent where per acre values range from $625 to $700.

Kingston township farmland escaped with only a 44 per cent increase carrying a value of $625 an acre. In spite of the hefty increases, so far there's been little indication of a "revolt" similar to the one that erupted last year over increases in residential land values throughout the county.

At that time, supervisors threatened not to spread the added value and complained of lower values in Huron and Sanilac counties for similar types of land.

Since then, land value studies have reportedly been performed in both Huron and Sanilac counties. Whether or not this will satisfy Tuscola supervisors is in doubt. But according to Cmmr. Maynard McConkey, if supervisors don't spread the additional value, the state holds the threat of applying a factor to all property, including residential.

A factor is a flat rate increase imposed without regard to the property classification. Last year, five Tuscola county townships went the factor route. "It's a decision of the supervisor whether or not he wants to spread it," McCon-

Supervisor Edwin Karr said the increase will be spread in Elkland township.

If it weren't, he said, all property owners would suffer under a factor. "We have 27.8 per cent of our land in agriculture and 51 per cent in residential with the rest commercial and industrial," Karr said. "To go dential property unfairly."

Fremont, Watertown, Dayton, Indianfields and Arbela. didn't spread added values last year and chose a factor

Ellington township Supervisor Fred Bardwell said he plans to spread added agricultural values. With an 83 per cent increase, he says his township's total tax bill will jump from $5,417,000 to around $9 million.

"It's going to hit the people on the poorer land harder than the ones on the good land because the poor stuff is selling now for almost as much as what we call good farmland," Bardwell said.

Bardwell says he expects a flood of complaints at Board of Review time in March, but there's really little the town-

"You can only take a factor two years in a row and then you have to add the value," he says. "The state's going to get what's theirs sooner or later,"

What might have been a joyous Christmas for the John Wolak family of rural Kingston turned into tragedy Thursday, Dec. 23, when their 12-year-old son, Patrick, was killed when the car in which he was riding slammed into a snow plow on M-81, four miles northeast of Caro.

Witnesses told Caro State Police the death car, driven by the youth's sister, Susan, 20, was southwest bound when it spun out of control and slid sideways into a northeast bound snowplow driven by Albert Curtis, 63, of Kingston Rd., Deford.

The boy was pronounced dead at the scene, officers said. Miss Wolak was listed in fair condition at St. Mary's Hospital in Saginaw Monday morning.

Curtis was uninjured.

The youth's death was the 26th on Tuscola county roads

Commissioners okay transportation study

THE SHATTERED interior of this auto bears mute testimony to the force of a Thursday afternoon crash that killed Patrick G. Wolak, 12, of rural Kingston. His sister, Susan, 20, driver of the auto, was listed in fair condition at St.

Mary's Hospital in Saginaw, Monday.

Tuscola County Commissioners voted to join in a study gave its stamp of approval to years. of area transportation needs with Huron and Sanilac counties during their regular cials. The only change came meeting in Caro Tuesday,

The resolution authorizing participation in the State Highway Department-sponsored study passed by a narrow 4-3 vote, with commissioners Kenneth Kennedy, Richard Dehmel and J. Benson Collon casting "no" votes.

Basically, the three objected to the study because they viewed it as another version of Dial-A-Ride which they've turned down in the past. They said even though the study is entirely state financed, it appeared to be the start of another program for which the county would have to find money when state coffers went dry.

Supporting the measure were Commissioners Maynard McConkey, Paul Nagy, Charles Woodcock and Margaret Wenta. They said it would be wise to make the study with an eye to transportation needs five or 10 years from now.

With projections of gasoline selling for as much as a dollar a gallon by 1980, McConkey said making a study wouldn't "Admittedly, doing something like this on a threecounty basis isn't always the most satisfactory way to go," he said. "But I think it would be good to look at it."

"If It Fitz . . . ' Recall that galosh

BY JIM FITZGERALD

World Series, Reggie Jackson reminded me of some other kid's galosh.

You probably find that hard to understand. If you are disgustingly young, you might even know what a galosh is.

A galosh is a high overshoe. Reggie Jackson is a millionaire baseball player. And this column is about remember-

How good is your memory? Jackson said he had hit 280 home runs in his major league career and he remembered every one of them. He remembered who the pitchers were and what kind of a pitch he slammed out of the park.

I find that hard to believe. Jackson said it was easy for him to remember every detail of every home run because home runs are his bread and butter. But I figure I've written about 2,400 newspaper columns. They are my bread and butter. And it is hard to remember what I wrote yesterday. Last year is impossible.

A voice from the bleachers might yell that I can't remember because I've never written any home runs. Jackson probably can't remember his singles, either.

There are always a lot of mouthy jerks in the bleach-was in the womb. For me, Life began at the age of five as I was walking home from Jefferson School with some other kid's galosh on one foot.

That is my earliest memory. All that occurred before that day is a blank, and there are countless gaps in the years since then. But I've never forgotten the reckless abandon with which I got mud Jefferson School was torn down several years ago. It was in Port Huron. That town, as I remember it, is crumbling in the face of dratted progress.

I delivered mail in Port Huron and, so help me, they have leveled my entire route. The same fate flattened most of my newspaper route.

Urban Renewal, that brutal bulldozer of boyhood memories, has replaced dozens of worn but warm homes with a few cold office buildings, I wonder where all the people went and if they are getting their mail and newpapers all belt. Anyone remember? If my wise-guy son reads that his dad used to wear a garter belt he will fall down laughing and say I am kidding. But I can close my eyes and see again my long underwear bulking out between the tops of my stocking and the bottom of my pants.

The other thing I remember most is our kindergarten band. I played the water whistle. Is there such a thing as a water whistle today? I don't think so.

My whistle was shaped like a bird and you filled it with water and then blew through the tail. A shrill, gurgly noise came out the beak. I have always thought that Lawon that strange galosh. I rence Welk must have played

When you are five years old this is a terrible thing. But it makes a lovely memory.

When you write a column like this, you can write about yesterday, today or tomorrow. When I write about today, I am usually angry about something. For tomorrow, I and hopeful, but leery.

Innovative engineering sends Walbro to top of field

In the last 25 years, because of the innovative and technologically advanced thinking of Walbro Carburetor Division engineers, Walbro Corp. has become the small engine carburetor capital of the Hugh Lautner, director of the Carburetor Division's engineering and research center, and Dick Charmley, new chief engineer, reviewed some of the new carburetor ideas now in final stages of development or in early stages of production.

The first carburetion idea mentioned was a new downdraft carburetor that had been, Lautner said, designed with the cooperation of the engineering staff of Onan Corporation, subsidiary of Studebaker-Worthington.

He described it as a compact, space-saving unit that meets the cramped space requirements of motor home generators and utility engines in lawn and garden equipment. Though small outside, the new Walbro Down-Draft Carburetor is capable of high output capacities that meet the fuel delivery requirements of a broad variety of twin engines, ranging from 18 hp to 25 hp.

Chief Engineer Charmley said that Walbro had recently put two new outboard engine carburetors into production, one a big-capacity, two-barrel

He said that Walbro also has in development new carburetor designs for motorcycles, snowmobiles, and other recreational vehicles.

Both Lautner and Charmley spoke of the new Walbro WS Series as a highly significant advance in carburetion technology--developed specifically for today's increasingly high-powered professional

"In designing it," they said, "--we increased its pumping capacity up to 100 per cent in order to assure dependable performance under extreme operating conditions. We also increased the fuel filtration for some time. area as much as 400 per cent in order to cut down time in

It may be so. But, since Watergate I ask myself: Is labor really that cool toward the cabinet or is it another rip-off?

How do I know that it wasn't an elaborate public relations ploy, I tell myself. Perhaps big labor realized that there was no way of getting the men they announced as preferred candidates into the cabinet.

Maybe they would have been satisfied all along with the eventual choices of the president. But, by pushing for one candidate and then have another placed in office the administration can't be accused of domination by big Perhaps this isn't the case at all. But, as I said, I'm skeptical.

That's the legacy of Watergate and all of the other rip-offs, Republican and Democrat, that are reported in the nation's press with monotonous regularity.

Don't accuse me of being anti-labor. I'll readily concede that I'm just as skeptical about big business in its relations with government as I am big labor.

I'm sure that the powers in charge can come up with a good, plausible answer. Whatever it is I'm sure it would leave me (you guessed it) skeptical.

I'm also a little skeptical when I see those stories about how we are so much better off in real dollars than we were five, 10 or 20 years ago.

Stories like this tell what the current wage earner can buy with an hour's work today as compared to yesterday. KETCHUM'S KNAPSACK

Sleep with a gas mask

By Jim Ketchum

You can sleep well tonight because the U.S. Army is protecting you from the Red Menace and the Yellow Peril. Now all we need is someone to protect us from the U.S.

If you can believe recent reports, the Army conducted germ warfare tests for at least 15 years beginning in 1950. And since no other country would cooperate, the Pentagon brass decided to use America as its testing ground and its citizens as guinea pigs.

Which only shows how ungrateful the rest of the world really is. I mean, weren't we pouring billions into the Marshall Plan to rebuild Europe? And with all those countries lying prostrate anyway, the least they could have done was donate Austria or Denmark for the tests.

In those days, the Top Brass might have even settled for Luxembourg, providing they could find it.

And if Europe wouldn't cooperate, we had Africa and all of Latin America to call on. For a few gringo dollars, they'd have done anything for us. (Isn't foreign policy wonderful?)

With no cooperating allies, the least we could have done was try dropping germs on North Korea, China or Outer Mongolia. Since we have diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union, they'd probably have said no anyway.

Lacking that kind of creativity, the Army chose instead to turn their pesky little germs loose on such diverse population centers as New York City, San Diego and Mechanicsburg, Pa.

No doubt, they reasoned New Yorkers will put up with anything. And since nobody ever heard of Mechanicsburg, no one would miss it. And if comething went wrong in San Diego, they could blame it on the Navy or the Marines.

One of the real creative aspects of the tests included dropping a germ-filled light bulb from a subway train in New York. After all, light bulbs fall off subways almost as often as people do in New

With half the waking population of the city on the subway at any given moment, what better place to spread pneumonia and Slobbovian Jungle Rot.

Which is what happened. At another sight, they dropped germs from airplanes to invade cities. Think of how much trouble the Army engineers must have had tying little parachutes to each germ.

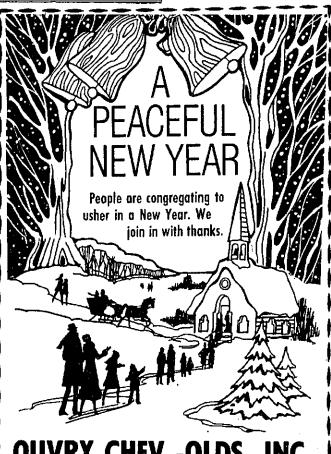

Nowhere is it recorded that the germs shouted "Geronimo" as they were pushed out of the tail section of a C-130. It must have been cute to watch zillions of little olive drab uniforms darkening the skies of Mechanicsburg. They were probably mistaken for coal dust or other air pollution and ignored.

The Army says it's through with germ warfare experiments for now. The generals say they'll be nice boys and promise not to bombard any more Americans with germs if the defense budget isn't cut.

Give us more money to spend on weapons and we promise not to fool around with germs. Besides, tailors charge triple overtime to sew those little uniforms and parachutes. And did you ever try engraving dog tags for a streptococcus?

One car company uses the slogan "When better cars are built, we'll build them". The Army's version must be 'When better screwball ideas are thought up, we'll test them out'

Colwood Lottery Club members set sights on possible million dollar prize

Five area persons who decided to purchase a few lottery tickets as a lark could end up splitting as much as $1,893,000--if their luck holds. But Mrs. Ruth Batts, Mrs.

Reva Dillon, Doug DeRocco, Cy Pitcher and Irvin Pogel haven't started spending their winnings yet. They have formed the Colwood Lottery Club, not because they wanted to as much as they were forced into it.

According to DeRocco, owner of the Colwood Bar, it all started one night around the first of November.

"The five of us were sitting here and I had a few tickets left for that week," DeRocco recalled. "So we all decided to go in on them. It cost us $6 apiece and as it turned out, we won $15 plus the $50 on the finalist ticket.'

That finalist ticket is what really got the club rolling. It automatically put the group into contention for the Dec. 30 drawing where 10 finalists will be chosen for the grand drawing in January.

DeRocco found out when he went to register the ticket that it couldn't bear the five mit only one signature. "That's when we decided to form the club," Mrs. Batts said. Mrs. Batts is an employee at the bar. She was working the night the group decided to form the club. That involved signing a

WKYO owner

A $350,000 lawsuit has been filed against Tuscola Broadcasting Co. and owner Robert F. Benkelman in Tuscola

County Circuit Court. The suit, filed by Glenn Tryon, former general manager of the company's radio station WKYO in Caro, seeks $175,000 for each of two Tryon claims Benkelman violated terms of a contract which reportedly gave Tryon an option to purchase 24.5 per cent of the company's stock. The suit claims Tryon was fired last June 4 without 90 days notice as prescribed in the contract and that Benkelman gave him no authority in the station's operation.

Tryon's suit charges he contributed "substantial sums" toward the stock purchase which was refused by Benkelman.

Probe death of Caro pair

A Caro couple were discovered dead in their camper late Friday night as it sat parked in a rest area along Interstate 75, three miles south of Florence, Ky.

Authorities believe Clifton Hiser and his wife, Margaret, both 50, of 1690 E. Deckerville Rd., may have died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

The bodies were found after a Kentucky State Police officer failed to find signs of life in the camper around 11:30 p.m. Friday. He reportedly broke into the camper and found the pair lying dead in their beds.

A medical examiner said the Hisers had been dead since Wednesday.

There was no heat inside the structure when they were found. Police speculated a heater used to ward off the chill of 30 mile-an-hour winds may have led to the couple's

Thumb Railroad meets

Michigan Thumb Railroad management team held a meeting in Bad Axe, Friday, Dec. 17. Several announcements were made.

An advisory board to the management of Michigan Thumb Railroad will be formed by Jan. 1, 1977.

A staff for M.T.R. will be operational in the Thumb area in the first week of January, 1977.

The Pigeon Depot will house the staff pending formal approval from Grand Trunk and C & O Railroads.

The MFC had held up approval pending the outcome of a number of property transfer requests.

In late May, the State Board of Education approved a $1.4 million transfer to the Cass City district and in early July okayed two more transfers. But the procedure ground to a halt when Ingham County Circuit Judge James Kallman stepped in and nullified the transfers, claiming more than 10 per cent of the district was transferred without a vote of the people.

At year's end, at least one of the cases was tied up in the Michigan Court of Appeals. Both district dissidents and supporters girded for a long fight over whether or not the system would survive. The divisions grew more sharp as hopes for reconciliation seemed dimmer than ever.

1976 was more than just another election year in Tuscola county. While Republicans continued in firm control of county government, their hold appeared to be slipping.

Voters elected another Democrat to the Board of Commissioners, giving the GOP just a 4-3 margin. Republican Sheriff Hugh Marr won a razor-thin victory against Democratic Millington Police Chief Herbert Clancy. Clancy, a relative unknown outside the southwest portion of the county, was in contention until the last precincts reported results.

Earlier, Marr had beaten back challenges from four other GOP contenders for his job, including Cass City Police Chief Gene Wilson.

Bicentennial, hospital drive

Many observers saw 1976 as a turning point in county politics when the roots of a two-party system became firmly emplanted.

RAILROAD

The beginning of 1977 held the future of rail service to Cass City in the balance. A formal hearing on Grand Trunk Western's petition to abandon 66 miles of track serving the Thumb was scheduled to begin Jan. 31 in Cass City.

While area leaders were attempting to keep Grand Trunk operating the line, another group, Thumb Producers' Railroad, was attempting to gain control of trackage from Cass City north to tie in with other Thumb lines it hopes to buy.

Grand Trunk originally petitioned for abandonment of the line in October, 1974. The request has been tied up in the Interstate Commerce Commission ever since.

SMITH FIRING

One of the most controversial stories of 1976 was the firing of Cass City Patrolman Robert Smith. The police officer was dismissed in February on several charges, including falsifying a police report and conducting an improper investigation.

Smith claimed he was being harassed for wanting to organize the force into a Teamsters' union local. He unsuccessfully filed suit against the village with the Michigan Employment Relations Commission.

The suit dragged until late October when a ruling in favor of the village was announced.

NFO ELEVATOR

The National Farmers' Organization (NFO) announced in January it would construct a $1 million grain storage facility at Cass City. The plan became a reality this summer as the elevator was built just south of the village limits.

Presently, the facility has a storage capacity of 530,000 bushels, with a second and third phase of construction NFO officials say their goal is to give the power of setting commodity prices to the farmer which is one reason they constructed the Cass City terminal.

A parade, softball games, community pienic, displays, concert and fireworks highlighted the event and brought the largest crowds to the village since the 1965 centennial and the visit of President Richard Nixon in 1974.

A highlight of the event was formal dedication of the Helen Stevens Memorial Swimming Pool at the park.

Final accounting showed the celebration cleared over $1.400. Funds raised were split between the Zonta Club's drive to raise $20,000 for the pool and with the Arts Council which plans to renovate the second story of the Cultural

ATHLETIC FIELD

Cass City Village Council and the Board of education reached agreement this summer on a 25-year lease for the football field at the park.

The lease came after voters turned down extra millage to construct a new football field at the school. The school pressed for a lease before it went ahead with replacing field lights.

The lease insures the presence of the school at the park for 25 years with the option of renewal for another 25 years

Gen-Tel reviews 1976 advances

1976 was an encouraging year for General Telephone Company, according to C.R. Kowalski, Northeastern Division Manager.

General Telephone's Northeastern Division provides telephone service to over 94,000 customers in 32 exchanges throughout the Thumb area.

In 1976, General spent over $4,800,000 for service improvements in its Northeastern Division. Major improvements fell into three basic categories; cable plant additions, central office equipment additions and special customer projects.

In the cable improvement category, many miles of additional cable were placed in nearly all exchanges in order to provide for new service and the demand for more private lines. The majority of these cable additions consisted of over 164 miles of cable placed underground to protect the environment and to provide more dependable service by making the cable less susceptible to damage from foul weather. Central office switching equipment additions were also a great part of 1976 expenditures. This equipment, although not normally seen by the customer, plays a major role in providing telephone service.

During 1976, General was able to make available to all of its Northeastern Division customers a special limited one-party residential telephone service called "Life Line". The new service was designed for those who make very limited use of their telephone service but who want basic service available because of security, emergency or other generally limited uses. This service was available at a rate $2 less than the regular one-party service rate in an exchange.

Push button calling also became reality for more customers in the Northeastern Division in 1976. During 1976, every employee received new or refresher training either at their work location or at the company training headquarters in Muskegon.

In Michigan, General Telephone Company has over 600,000 telephones in service in 538 communities with over 3500 employees. The company operates in all or part of 62 of the 83 counties in the state.

Happiness that comes with a price tag is so easily lost.

Common-Sense care for aged

DR. WILLIAM I WELCH

Experts in the care of always preferable to say "yes" rather than "no" to small children, unless there is a compelling reason to refuse them what they want. The result of such enlightened permissiveness is not only a happier child but the avoidance of needless conflict.

BETTER HEALTH

It would be a blessing if this lesson could be learned by many who care for the aged. In their zeal to do "what is best" for their charges, they impose rigid restrictions on harmless activities, insist on dietary deprivations that destroy appetites and primely forbid minor vices. In short, common sense is bungled and common humanity outraged. A 70-year-old acquaintance of mine for years had greatly enjoyed a Scotch and soda before dinner. But because his liver had reacted badly a year ago, thanks to the sideeffects of pills he had been given to "calm his nerves," he has been under strict admonishment for the last 12 months not to touch alcohol children agree that it is for fear his liver would act

That's a fair interdiction perhaps for a youngster whose liver is inflamed but a mindless "no" to a man not only no longer young, but one long since past the time of any reasonable threat of yesterday's pills.

A corollary of such unnecessary arbitrariness is the mechanical interdiction of eggs and butter because they threaten the "cholesterol count" of men and women long past the three-score-andten mark.

And it should be clear even to fanatical health nuts that the solemn warning, "You'll only cough if you smoke, Grandpa," is an empty threat to a convinced pipe-smoker on the dreary downslope of old age.

My old grandmother, bedridden with crippling arthritis for the last decade of her life, taught me the dietary principles of an abundant old age. Corned beef and cabbage, or buckwheat pancakes with sausages and syrup were her notion of an invalid's diet, even if it meant only a single forkful, followed by a dollop of mineral oil to hurry it along, and aspirin for her

Such swagger may not be for all oldsters, but even specialists in diseases of the stomach and intestines are learning that there are fewer and fewer mandatory dietary restrictions, and the wise ones know that even such should be carefully discussed with the miserable victims, so that every possible compromise may be reached that will allow inclusion of favored

To avoid such discussions is to risk, in any event, even minimal cooperation on the part of the patient.

It is a matter of established fact that food we like, and eat with gusto, is far more likely to nourish us well than all the "Balanced" pap our scientific imaginations can contrive. And it is no less true for our geriatric charges than for the rest of us.

In practical terms, a good geriatrician has been defined as a "doctor who listens to old people," I would add to that definition that he also is one who never forgets that even for the elderly, life is for

Douse car fire Dec. 18

Damage was estimated at $350 when a fire broke out in a car driven by Marilyn Morgan, Snover, around 9:20 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 18.

Elkland Township Fire Chief Jim Jezewski said firemen responded to the call two miles east of Cass City on M-81. Jezewski said the fire started in wiring under the dashboard.

Mrs. Morgan was unin-

Annexation, a decision on 1977 wages and fringe benefits for village employees and another review of the proposed 1977 budget were scheduled for Cass City Village Council at its Tuesday session this week. Approval is expected for annexation of the Charmont property, located along M-8i and Doerr Road at the village's west side. Annexation was part of an agreement that provided the property with village water and sewer services during its construction. Preliminary review of a $337,500 proposed village bud-three years of picnic weather were wrapped into a single summer.

Thus was the situation in the Upper Peninsula this past summer, called the driest in that territory since the City of Marquette began keeping records 104 years ago.

But, as the Department of Natural Resources reports, there's a hope that the summer of '76 doesn't repeat itself,

They dryness led fire control specialists to say conditions were comparable to those preceeding the infamous Prestigo, Hinckley and Thumb fires near the turn of the last century. The recent Seney blaze in Schoolcraft County burned 112 square miles and suppression costs exceeded $7 million-the largest figure ever recorded in the United States.

Other dryness problems included a disastrous wild berry crop and a sparse crop of fall mushrooms. In addition, some feeder streams which usually produced good late season catches of brook trout were bone dry, and some fish were lost when they were trapped in isolated poc-

Mrs. Brind 'home' after 38 years

Centennial farm owner recalls pioneer days

The Model T did it.

It changed everybody's life style and took people farther and farther apart. At least that's how Mrs. Dorothy Brind of rural Gagetown sees

Mrs. Brind moved back to her grandfather's centennial farm last fall after spending 38 years in Garden City. The farm borders the southern boundary of Huron county along Huron Line Road, with 40 of the original 80 acre homestead still intact.

Life was different in those days, Mrs. Brind recalled. 'Travel was restricted until the Model T Ford came along," she said. "People were friendlier and helped each other more." Mrs. Brind was born and raised not far from the farm her grandfather, Daniel Bearss, bought in 1869. He and his new bride, the former Jane Rockefeller, had come from Canada

"On their way here, they were married at the Ponchatrain Hotel in Detroit," Mrs. Brind said. "Her mother and father had given them an ox and wagon and some canned goods to start out with. Well, after they left Detroit and came this way, there were just trails at that

Mrs. Brind said as a little girl, she recalled hearing stories of how her grandfather had traded with Indians in the area. She said she remembers seeing some of the Indian baskets he had received as barter.

"My grandfather homesteaded this land when he was 16," Mrs. Brind said. "Back then, to acquire land, you had to clear so much of it and build a cabin on it. So he built the cabin and went back to Canada and moved back to the homestead a year later.' Mrs. Brind's father, Ralph

Bearss, was born on the farm, while she was born on another farm between Owendale and Gagetown.

Mrs. Brind and her husband, William, moved to Garden City where they lived 38 years. He was a Ford Motor Company employee.

Her father continued to live on the farm until his death at age 96 in 1969. After his death, Mrs. Brind found a number of old magazines and catalogs dating to before the turn of the century

In an 1897 edition of the Michigan Farmer she found in her father's effects, a report of the first successful crop of sugar beets ever raised in Michigan is fea-Old editions of the Sears-

Roebuck and Montgomery Ward catalog were also found. Among the items featured were copper boilers for $3.89, a folding bath tub for $5.89, a bridal outfit including 312 yards of silk for $4.50 and an electric cream separator for $59.95.

She also managed to locate the original deed to the land which had been preserved among family documents.

The original farmhouse has been torn down, replaced by the comfortable, sunny home Mrs. Brind occupies today. She moved back to the Thumb last fall.

"Garden City was too much for me," she said. Increasing taxes and crime led her to return to the centennial farm. "I'm real happy I did," she said. "I enjoy living here very much." Outside of being involved with the Owen-Gage Senior Citizens group, her home and family take up most of Mrs. Brind's time.

original deed to her centennial farm located on Huron Line Road west of Gagetown. The land was acquired in 1869 by her grandfather, Daniel J. Bearss. Also shown is a certificate from state authorities recognizing the farm as being continuously owned by the same family for 100 years.

CASS CITY'S wrestling team has lost only one dual meet this year. The latest victory was posted Wednesday over Marysville.

Second row: Coach Russ Biefer, Ed Zimba, Al Pratt, Mark Atkin, Dean O'Harris, Chris Reynolds, Rick Fader.

Third row: Brian Reynolds, Paul Guernsey, Ron Michalski, Steve Meeker, Steve

Fourth row: Craig O'Harris, Lloyd Newsome, Tom Dorland, Randy Rabideau, Gene Elliot, Steve Corcoran.

RANDY RABIDEAU missed a pin by a narrow margin here but the Hawk wrestler was credited with a pin later in the match against Marysville.

lottery is tops

Why Michigan

From nothing to tops in its field in just a bit more than four years. That's the success story of the Michigan lottery, which began its fifth year of operation only last month.

And with that birthday came the notation that the lottery has contributed some $300 million to the state's general fund (about 45 per cent of that goes to education) during its lifetime.

Michigan's lottery also is considered the nation's most successful, leading the dozen other states with lotteries in categories of total sales and per capita sales.

Nearly one 50-cent lottery ticket per week for every man, woman and chiid Michigan.

Figures from the Lottery Bureau show 1975-76 weekly average sales of more than 8.7 million, or 0.96 per person. That compares with 0.86 tickets per person per week (the next highest) in Connecticut, and only 0.43 per person per week in Pennsyl-

Lottery sales nationally totaled nearly 2.2 billion 50cent units, for a gross of $1.08

Why is Michigan's lottery so popular?

Some folks figure it's the variety: first just the plain old 50-cent ticket, then the $1 games and instant games.

In line with that notion, there's yet another game on the docket. Sometime in the following several months, the Lottery bureau plans to set up computer-based ' daily numbers game, complete with mini-computer at sales

3 tough games ahead key to Hawks loop title hopes

The first two weeks in a chance to measure the January will answer a lot of questions for fans and players of the Cass City Red Hawks.

After a two-week Christmas vacation the Hawks swing back into action and the games that are carded in the first 14 days of the new year will tell if Cass City is a genuine Thumb B Conference title contender.

Right now Cass City shares the league lead with Caro with 4-0 marks. However, the sion. schedule has been in Cass City's favor.

team's progress.

In the initial game between the two schools, the Pirates defeated Cass City 59-57.

There's no doubt that Cass City is a much better team today than it was then. The question is how much have the Pirates improved? The answer comes Tuesday.

After that game, the three most important games of the season follow in rapid succes-
