13,200 Seedlings Planted on Two Farms in Elkland

CCC Camp Enrollees Place Pines on the Goodall and Lounsbury Farms.

A group of enrollees from the Civilian Conservation Corps camp at Kingston have just completed planting 13,200 pine seedlings on two farms in Elkland Township. On the Emory Lounsbury farm, two miles west of Cass City, 6,200 seedlings which stand two to three inches above the ground, have been placed. Of this number, 4,000 are white pine and 2,200 red pine. The seedlings were purchased at a cost of approximately one-third of a cent each by the land owner and were planted at government expense by the enrollees. The seedlings were planted on stony ground and some of them are in a plot containing about 40 full grown trees.

On the Mrs. A. E. Goodall farm, two miles northwest of Cass City, 7,000 pine seedlings have been planted by workmen from the CCC camp. Part of these were placed in open spaces in the woods on the Goodall farm.

Both of these farms and one belonging to Ben Ritter in Elmwood Township have been under the supervision of the CCC camp who have prescribed methods and helped in installing working practices to prevent soil erosion.

Although soil conservation is a prominent objective of the Kingston CCC camp, the enrollees are expected to play an important part in national defense, according to C. V. Holman, superintendent.

Building gully control structures, sodding terrace outlet channels, surveying terrace and strip crop contour lines, planting trees and grass on eroded land, drainage rehabilitation, and many other types of conservation work are being done by boys of the camp. But truck driving, tractor skinning, surveying, mapping, truck and tractor repairing, bookkeeping, drafting, and numerous other jobs are also everyday occupations of many enrollees.

Conservation plans for six farms composed of more than 835 acres have been drawn up and put into execution by the camp and co-operating farmers in Tuscola County. This work, coupled with that done by other CCC camps and the Soil Conservation Service have contributed greatly to saving Michigan soil and other resources, Holman said. The training that has been given the thousands of boys who have passed through these camps, however, probably is the most important contribution that the CCC has made to the state.

The boys are not given military training in the camps, Mr. Holman explained, but the training of young men to work and to be more

Vocational Education Is Explained to the Rotary at Cass City

Nick Carter, in charge of the vocational guidance department of the Lapeer High School, told of his work in this comparatively new phase of education, at the Tuesday luncheon of the Rotary Club at the Hotel Gordon here.

When a boy or girl has reached his sixteenth birthday and has progressed to the eleventh grade or beyond, he is assisted, if he so desires, in his effort to secure a position of his choice. If successful in finding work in a line he desires, Mr. Carter said, his program is arranged to include school studies in the forenoon and work in the line of business or industry he has chosen is pursued in the afternoons and Saturdays. His educational studies are so arranged to give him the necessary credits to graduate from high school and such additional ones as he may have time to pursue which help him in the life vocation he has chosen.

After graduating from high school, he is permitted further study in classes which convene two nights a week.

Austin Gwinn, hardware dealer in Lapeer, explained to Rotarians how his town was able to command such a large retail trade. Certain essentials for the business success of a town, organization or individual are: To serve an economic need in the community, efficient management and an informed membership or advertising, he said.

Sheriff, on Call to Restore Peace, Is Efficient Nurse

In the county sheriff's department, one sees life in many phases—the crass, the sordid, the ridiculous—and a member of that branch of county government is called upon to offer his services in many ways.

The telephone call late Sunday afternoon came from Vassar. The woman hysterically said the sheriff was needed at once and pleaded that he should come forthright. It was not the first time he had been called to that home because of family fights and he decided to go posthaste.

When Sheriff Lewis Massoll climbed the stairs to an apartment in the Vassar business district, the woman calmly locked the door as he was about to enter, and through a window, he saw her lift a glass containing a liquid resembling wine, and drink all of its contents. Then she unlocked the door and exclaimed, "I've just taken poison!"

The officer smelled the glass, concluded its contents had resembled wine only in color and was startled to see the woman sink into unconsciousness. He promptly sent for a doctor and then proceeded to render first aid himself. He found some difficulty in opening the set jaws and forcing milk and mustard into her mouth. By massaging her throat, he finally succeeded in inducing her to swallow the emetic, and vomiting the poison soon followed. This had all occurred before the arrival of the physician.

At the Caro Community Hospital where the woman was taken, the nurses complimented the sheriff on his thoughtfulness and prompt action. Had he failed to promptly administer the emetic which caused the expulsion of the poison, the woman undoubtedly would be dead today.

Traffic Violators Are Taught Safety Methods in Prison

A. B. Gillies Inaugurates Only School of Its Kind in the World.

Traffic violators are being taught safety methods while serving prison sentences at the Detroit House of Correction. Inaugurated last November by A. Blake Gillies, superintendent of the prison, it is the only school of its kind in any penal institution of the world, and came just in time to include all Detroit motorists jailed during the holidays for drunk and reckless driving. The prisoners' reaction is that they appreciate the theories of safe driving while experiencing the seriousness of the problem from an enforcement angle.

Classes, some with over 300 inmates, are taught each Monday night by members of the Detroit Police Safety Bureau under supervision of Traffic Director Fred W. Juergens. General safety rules and accident costs and causes are discussed.

Dr. Maurice Floch, prison psychologist, endeavors by lectures to correct the drivers' mental attitudes and aid them where possible from a scientific approach.

Mr. Gillies, superintendent of the prison located at Plymouth, is well known here, having spent his boyhood days in Cass City.

Guild Re-elected Officers on Monday

Mrs. Zora Day was hostess to the Young Women's Guild in her home Monday evening and was assisted by Mrs. H. T. Donahue, Mrs. Frederick Pinney and Mrs. Ethel McCoy. All officers of the society were re-elected for the coming year. They are: President, Miss Edith Carlin; vice president, Mrs. R. L. Keppen; secretary, Mrs. Leola Smith; treasurer, Mrs. C. W. Price.

Rev. Wendling H. Hastings, pastor of the Cass City Presbyterian Church, gave an interesting talk on "Symbolism." He told of the early Christian symbols and explained the various crosses as symbols. He showed colored pictures of the window of the local Presbyterian Church and explained the meaning of the various symbols, as the anchor is a symbol of life; sheaf of wheat, holy communion; the hour glass, time; dove, holy spirit; lamb, Jesus as the lamb of God. The crown of thorns was not exactly a symbol but was used at Easter time as a reminder of the sufferings of Jesus on the cross.

Mr. Hastings said that he believed that the windows in the church here were one of the best examples of symbolism found in this district. Following the program, refreshments were served.

The next meeting will be held May 19 with Mrs. Clarence Burt.

AAA Is National Defense Agency

Official designation of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration as a National Defense Agency emphasizes the role that the Triple-A has been playing in providing food for the Nation's defense needs, according to John M. Reagh, Chairman of the Tuscola County AAA Committee.

All governmental agencies contributing directly or indirectly to national defense are rated as defense agencies. The new Food for Defense Program announced by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard recently is based on the need for providing an abundant supply of certain essential foods needed by the people of this country, and for England and other nations resisting aggression.

"Through its Ever-Normal Granary plan of storing up a reserve supply of essential feed and food grains, the Triple-A program has placed agriculture in the front ranks of preparedness," says Mr. Reagh. "Most of the intended expansion in pork, eggs, poultry and dairy products under the new food program will be produced from feeds now on hand in the Ever-Normal Granary."

"Agriculture's part in providing food not only for this country but for other parts of the world may play a decisive part in peace negotiations when the present war is over. The American farmer working with the AAA will be ready to adjust his farming operations to meet whatever demand is made for feeding hungry people of other lands."

Clean Eggs Add Greater Profit

Wasted: 2,160,000,000 eggs on farms in 1940.

One of the ways to get more eggs to market without increasing the number of yells directed at the farm flock biddies is to take better care of the eggs that are being laid.

That is one of the answers to the request from the United States Department of Agriculture that farmers increase egg production as a matter of home defense and supplies for Britain, according to C. G. Card, head of the Michigan State College poultry department.

From Washington has come the suggestion that farm flocks be "geared up" to offer an increase of 10 million cases of 30 dozen eggs each in the next 15 months. This is an increase of about 6 per cent in production.

Six million more cases of eggs could be marketed each 12 months if the eggs had better farm care. This is the estimate made by D. W. Termohlen, in charge of the poultry section of the AAA of the U. S. D. A.

Frequent gathering is one means of improving quality and getting a higher percentage of eggs that can be consumed, it is pointed out by Professor Card.

Another factor is to have clean nest material in the laying houses. The eggs should be stored in a cool place and they should be sorted and delivered without too much delay after they have been collected.

After all, 2,160,000,000 eggs add up to considerable food. Yet that is the number of additional eggs that could be eaten or sold on the market if the eggs laid in a year's time could get better care in handling. Michigan poultrymen, says Card, can get their share.

Again I say, the importance of individual responsibility in accident prevention work cannot be over emphasized. Safety education, driver's license laws, vehicle inspection, and many other worth-while safety promotional campaigns are important, but they are not the final solution to the accident problem in our traffic work.

You are the answer because you are the problem. If you do not follow all the safety educational instructions you have received, if you do not obey the laws of your state, and if you do not exercise caution in your driving, then you will be responsible for accidents to yourself and others.

Reason it out for yourself—laws will not prevent your cutting in unnecessarily and dangerously, nor will they prevent you from passing another car on a hill. It's you only who can prevent your doing that.

Practice courtesy. Establish yourself as the best and safest driver in your community.

Let me repeat again—you are the answer to the prevention of automobile accidents.

Here's the Eight for Farm Garden

Put in the frills, but be sure first that the family garden has those vegetables that will offer sensible, protective foods, suggests Roberta Hershey, extension specialist in home economics at Michigan State College.

Here are her recommendations: Plant a yellow vegetable for vitamin A. Make it carrots or rutabagas and store some for winter use.

Take some from the greens. Broccoli is a good one, but others for supplies of iron and of vitamins A and C can include turnip greens, kale, Swiss chard, or—that's it—spinach.

Potatoes ought to have a place for their supplies of vitamin C.

Potatoes hardly need be mentioned, says Miss Hershey, because they seem to obtain row space automatically.

Another vitamin C provider is in the cabbage.

A gardener ought to remember onions for flavor. For variety there are such crops as beets, parsnips and turnips.

Two in a class for fresh and canned consumption are string beans and asparagus.

That is the list of eight types offered by Miss Hershey. The extras that can supply starch and other elements in the diet include corn, peas and lima beans. These, again, offer produce direct from the garden and also produce that can be canned for winter consumption.

Children Enjoy Train Ride to Deford

Pontiac, Oxford & Northern Railroad took a large delegation of passengers to Deford Thursday, April 24, and again on Tuesday, April 29, when children from the Cass City School enjoyed "trips" on the train, most of them having their first railroad ride.

On Thursday morning, 51 children of the kindergarten and a number of the first grade students, boarded one of the school busses, driven by Superintendent J. Ivan Niergarth, and accompanied by Miss Ruth Schenck, kindergarten teacher, Mrs. Arthur Holmberg, Mrs. Edward Baker and Miss Thelma Siedler, visited the farm of Mrs. Leonard Buehrly, seeing the various animals there. The party then were taken to the depot where they boarded the train for Deford. The same bus met them at Deford and brought them back to Cass City.

On Tuesday, 57 children of the second and third grades, accompanied by Miss Florence Rosenow and Miss May Belle Clara, second and third grade teachers, and Miss Winnifred Orr, were taken from the school to the depot by a bus driven by Harold Murphy and were met at Deford by the same driver and all returned to their homes here.

KASPRUS-DECKER.

A pretty wedding was solemnized in St. John's Catholic Church in Peck Saturday morning, April 19, when Miss Frances Decker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Decker, became the bride of Walter Kasprus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Kasprus, both of Peck. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played as the bridal party approached the high altar, banked with Easter lilies and palms, where Rev. Marion Powlowski said the mass and conducted the ceremony.

The bride wore a gown of white net and lace with long train and her veil, which fell from a crown of seed pearls, followed the length of the train on her gown. She carried a bouquet of lilies and gardenias tied with long ribbons and also carried a white prayer book.

Miss Ann Geiser, as maid of honor, wore poudre-blue and carried blue forget-me-nots and pink roses. Miss Anna Kasprus, sister of the groom, who wore pale blue and carried Talisman roses and white sweet peas, Miss Mary Decker, niece of the bride, of Iowa, in a gown of peach and carrying Johanna Hill roses and carnations, and Miss Laura Decker of Iowa, also a niece of the bride, in a dress of yellow and carrying yellow roses with lavender sweet peas, were bridesmaids.

John Kasprus attended his brother as best man. Anthony Draul, Peter Rausch and Robert Stone were ushers.

Girl friends of the bride and groom sang "Ave Maria," "Oh, Lord, I Am Not Worthy" and "I Love You Truly."

A wedding breakfast was served to 50 relatives and friends at noon in the home of bride's parents and a reception was held in the evening when 150 were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Kasprus will make their home in Detroit, where both are employed.

PLEASANT HOME HOSPITAL.

Patients admitted and still in the hospital are: Alfred Alcorn, Cass City; Mrs. Ed Peters, Caro; Mrs. Charles Dowling, Caro; Mrs. Carl Thane, Unionville; Mrs. Robert Dillon, Unionville.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Simon Costro of Caro, a daughter, April 25.

Music Merits

Isabel Jones, music critic of California, writing on musical nationalism, says: "We cannot fully assert a true cultural independence until we know well the great art of other lands, adapt it to our life and build for ourselves. If we are to attain musical determination in America we want no barriers against foreign products of civilization. The works of the past and the present should be ours for comparison, learning and enjoyment, no matter from where they come. This we can judge a work of art on its merits, even if created at home."

Pneumonia Death-Trap

Dr. Julien Bescanon, French physician has stated that of all illness of old age pneumonia is the death-trap.

Cass City Chalks Up Two More Wins

The Cass City High School nine's aggressive offensive and defensive work proved too much for Caro and Sandusky whom the Maroon and Grey defeated 5-4 and 7-4 respectively. This leaves Cass City with a clean record of three victories and no defeats.

Cass City played their county seat rivals Friday at home and came from behind in the fifth to make the score 4-3 in our favor. Caro evened it up in the seventh carrying the game into extra innings. Caro got a hit in the eighth but the man was left on base. Finally in the last of the ninth, Ryland pinch-hitting for Strickland, knocked a short ground-er past the shortstop to wind up the ball game.

Kolb hit a triple in the fifth and in the same inning, Clement connected for a long, high fly in right field for the first four bagger of the season.

YES, LADY, we know you were well brought up. You say "Please" and "Thank you" and use the right fork and write the nicest bread-and-butter letters. But when it comes to your conduct while driving, you most definitely could learn manners from a truck driver.

Truck drivers are good drivers. They keep on their side of the road, they don't go at fantastic speeds, they practice that fundamental rule of democracy and good breeding: Give the other fellow a break.

Which is more than can be said for many of our nicest ladies and gentlemen. A strange transformation takes place when they sit behind a steering wheel. They ignore the comfort of friends riding with them. They disdain the rights of people on foot. They yell boorishly at drivers who displease them.

Many who wouldn't touch a nickel that belonged to someone else flaunt all law and order when behind a steering wheel, with the callousness of experienced criminals.

The serious part of this curious behavior is that bad manners make bad driving, and bad driving makes accidents and death.

So mend your manners and become a good citizen even when driving. It may save your life.

CARE TODAY ★ HERE TOMORROW

State Capitol, Lansing—May 1 finds the Michigan legislature swamped with a traditional eleventh hour rush.

Steering committees of the House and Senate hope work may be completed within two or three weeks. The date of adjournment may depend on progress of the senate finance committee with house appropriation bills.

While accomplishments to date do not appear on the surface to be outstanding, the legislative session may be said to have the following benefits:

1. Time acts as a sieve to cull out much of the good, reject much of the bad. A 60-day session, such as is constitutionally required in Indiana, invites rash action. And haste can be costly, if legislation is not accorded thoughtful deliberation.
- You may fret over it, but an extended session covering five months, as the Michigan session usually does, permits legislators to get their bearings and to "sleep" on new ideas.
2. The two-chamber legislature, in contrast to the unicameral chamber of Nebraska, is an effective system of checks and balances which tends to resist pressure groups rather than to encourage them.
- (For example, the house may vote a dog racing bill with the tacit agreement that the senate will bury it in committee. Pressure can be relieved, faces "saved," and certain constituents appeased—all by diplomatic cooperation.)

Democratic

This democratic method of government may not be streamlined. It does not meet the modern conception of business efficiency. Time and money are apparently wasted.

Furthermore, the lack of cooperation between house and senate is hard to explain at times, let alone justify.

And yet, as one veteran lobbyist in a philosophical mood recently observed, the Michigan legislature does an exceedingly good job, on the whole, in keeping expenditures within reasonable bounds and in limiting the state debt.

"Compared with many other states which have a high bonded indebtedness, Michigan is well off. We have money in the bank, so to speak.

"Except in Wayne, Genesee, Oakland and a few other populous counties, Michigan has no vexatious tax problem. The property tax is not a state burden; it is a local problem. The state sales tax is a prolific source of revenue for state needs and local aid. We can be thankful that the legislature is largely rural and small town in its membership. Believe me, when you get an appropriation through the House with John Espie's approval, you've done something. And deliberative Don Vanderwerp of the senate finance committee isn't throwing money away, either."

(In the opinion of this observer, who is a city man, the above tax situation largely accounts for a lagging zeal in the "ax the tax" crusade. As commendable as was Lansing's 1941 anti-spending rally, a state-wide attendance of around 400 taxpayers was not altogether flattering to the cause.)

$34,000 "Deficit"

Puzzling at first, and now apparently solved, was a recent attempt by the unemployment compensation commission to sponsor an amendment to the state act whereby any deficit would be payable out of the state general fund.

When an item of $34,000 was inserted in a house deficiency bill, Chairman Espie was told of a ruling by the social security board at Washington.

From reliable sources we hear that the commission last year fired a batch of employees and hired proteges of a Wayne County politician. Then the civil service commission ordered the ousted workers to be restored with back pay! Hence the deficiency.

Lumber "Shortage"

According to carpenters who recently joined the C. I. O. union at Fort Custer, a recurring "shortage" of lumber caused many newly hired workers to be dismissed after three or four weeks of high wages.

One young attorney from a near-by small town, whose practice was disappointingly small, earned close to $80 a week including overtime pay as a carpenter at the new army camp until a "shortage" of lumber suddenly developed.

But only after he had paid the $50 membership fee!

Congressman Engels of Michigan, who has been pressing an investigation into army cantonment construction and purchase of land, may strike paydirt when he digs into this Fort Custer situation.

30-Day Curb

While insisting on the right of labor to collective bargaining which favors unionization, Governor Van Wagener is said to be convinced that governmental curbs are needed to slow down strikes in national defense industries and a resultant loss of vital arms production.

Furthermore, as a result of the Ford plant trouble, he favors a two-year increase of 200 troopers in the state police force. He supports an appropriation of $200,000 annually for support of 3,500 home guard troops. (The home guard would not be used for strike duty, however; its organization is required by existing federal law, the governor points out.)

The Handy-Decker "anti-strike" bill in the House, which was a direct result of the Ford strike, is being revised with considerable bipartisan support.

Changes would include:

- (1) A strike vote of union members in a plant would be held under auspices of the state labor mediation board. A bare majority of 51 per cent would be needed to make a strike legal. (Sponsors say this safeguard would halt wild-cat walk-outs.)
 - (2) Give legislative sanction to the present 30-day negotiating period required for strikes in national defense plants. A month's notice for strikes of this type is at present only an administrative ruling of the state board, supported by the attorney general.
- Will these restrictions be enacted into law?
- Time is short. Legislators must run for re-election in 1942. Figure it out for yourself!

Wise Early Bird Kills Cutworms

It must be spring. Cutworms have started working.

An early spring and earlier than usual cutworm activity leads to a warning from the entomology department at Michigan State College to take early precautions in protecting gardens and crops against the pests.

Warm weather has brought the cutworms to the surface, yet snow blanketing the ground earlier in the year gave protection to the cutworms.

All crops are liked by the cutworm. The home gardener, the farmer with field crops and the orchard operator with young trees all will find types of the chewing pest ready to create damage.

In the garden the remedy is to broadcast poison bran bait, prepared and applied as recommended. But what does one do when the tree climbing cutworm goes into action? According to Ray Hutson, head of the entomology department, the best practice for protection of young trees which can't live if they lose their few young buds, is to place tanglefoot barriers around the bark.

This tanglefoot must be applied correctly in order to protect the tender bark. If the bark is damaged the tree may die. Directions are contained in the Michigan State College Spraying Calendar, Circular 154. Grapevines can be protected, also with anglefoot.

WOULD YOU MILK 25 COWS
TO EARN one quart OF MILK?

Do you know how much you really earn when you milk 25 cows the hard way—by hand? If you knew how low the wages are for all that labor, you probably would throw away your milking stool. Because you can let electricity do that job for you—for the price of a single quart of milk!

You can run your electric milker for about five cents per cow per month, on the average.

Farmers who have used electric milking machines for years tell us that they wouldn't waste time milking cows by hand. They say that the time and labor saved by electric milking more than pay for the cost of the machine and the cost of operation. In addition, there are other advantages: More milk, cleaner milk, and better condition of cows.

Your dealer will be glad to show you the latest models in electric milkers. Or for complete information, talk with the Edison Farm Service man.

Early Removal Of Tonsils May Affect Sinuses

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHEN it was found some 30 years ago that infected tonsils caused rheumatism and rheumatism caused heart disease, there were thousands of children who had their tonsils removed if they had one attack of simple sore throat. Also, tonsils that were larger than normal, without any symptoms whatever, were removed.

However, that the tonsils are useful organs up to the age of puberty

(14 to 16) is admitted, so that physicians today do not advise removal of tonsils unless there are repeated attacks of tonsillitis. If one or more attacks of tonsillitis are followed by rheumatic attacks a few weeks later, the removal of the tonsils is usually advised.

There has arisen in recent years a new problem of sinus infection, sinusitis as it is called.

And physicians are telling us that there is more sinus infection now because of the early removal of tonsils which were doing some of the work done by the sinuses.

The increase in the amount of work to be done by the sinuses—filtering blood and air—preventing nose, throat and chest ailments, is increasing the number of cases of sinusitis.

An examination of school children with and without tonsils by Dr. Kayser, Rochester, N. Y., who has done so much research work on tonsils, found that sinus infection occurred more often in those whose tonsils had been removed during their early years.

Allergy Sometimes the Cause.

That sinus trouble is not always due to infection is pointed out by Dr. E. C. Mitchell, Memphis, Tenn., in West Virginia Medical Journal, who states that allergy (sensitivity to various substances) can set up an irritation in a sinus which the patient, and sometimes the physician, may believe due to infection.

He points out that if allergy or sensitiveness is causing the disturbance in the sinus, the material dropping into the throat is liquid or fluid and the lining of sinus and nose is pale, whereas in infection of the sinus, the material is a thick mucous and the lining of sinus and back of nose is red and boggy.

Relief for the 'Hard of Hearing'

MOST physicians dislike recommending new remedies or forms of treatment to those who are hard of hearing because they do not wish to raise false hopes in these patients.

The hard of hearing patient, because he misses so much of what is going on around him, gradually grows moody, keeps looking inward instead of outward, and to have his hopes raised only to be dashed down, increase his mental depression.

The use of prostigmin—an ovary extract—has given some help in cases of hard of hearing due to catarrh.

From the Ear, Eye, Nose and Throat Monthly, comes the report of another series of cases of "partial" deafness in which prostigmin was used.

Twenty-eight patients with head noises and acute or recent blockage of the eustachian tube (tube carrying air from back of throat to inner side of ear drum), most of whom had marked deafness, were given injections of 1 cubic centimeter of prostigmin methyl-sulphate, 1 to 2,000 solution, at intervals of from three to five days, together with the opening up of the eustachian tube by the use of an instrument and massage.

There was rapid relief from the annoying symptoms and few patients required more than five injections even where there had been loss of hearing for as long as one month.

Thirty-three chronic cases of deafness were treated by similar injections two to three times weekly, with resulting gradual improvement or very slow improvement.

Remember, prostigmin is a gland product and should be given by, or only under the direction of a physician.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What does the word "negative" denote when applied to a blood test? Would a blood test show infection present due to bad tonsils, teeth, etc.? What causes dizziness due to weather changes?

A.—Usual blood test where word "negative" is used means test for syphilis and that individual does not have syphilis. This test will not show that blood is free of poison from teeth, tonsils, etc.

useful citizens is a fundamental part of the Civilian Conservation Corps program.

Teaching the boys to work at useful jobs is the principle upon which the training of CCC enrollees is founded.

About 90 per cent of the young men who report for duty to the camps have had little, if any, worthwhile work experience.

Most of them were never able to get a worthwhile job before they came to the CCC.

When they leave the camp after their six months to two years stay, practically all of them are qualified to hold down jobs in some useful industry or occupation.

The Army officers, the medical officer, the educational adviser, and the project superintendent, foremen, and technicians from the Soil Conservation Service all cooperate in training enrollees for some useful occupation.

It is a practical school for boys, most of whom never finished their high school education.

The CCC educational program teaches theories that have a specific application to the job at hand.

"Learning to do by doing" is the motto.

When a group of new enrollees first arrive in camp they are given a few days of intensive training in the camp organization.

At the end of this short period they are assigned to a foreman's crew in the field.

The labor foremen are responsible for training them in the fundamentals of productive work.

First, the boys learn to use a pick and shovel, to know what a hard day's work means, and to observe the "Safety First" regulations of the camp.

From then on, they are assigned jobs of increasing responsibility, according to their capabilities.

Nearly all of the better jobs in camp have various grades of responsibility.

For example: Some ten to fifteen truck drivers are needed in each camp.

They are generally classified as five under-study drivers or swimmers, and eight to ten drivers hauling men and materials.

Drivers who can be trusted to haul men have been highly trained in the truck driving class.

A boy who wishes to become a truck driver and who shows ability along this line is started out as an under-study and advances until he reaches the top grade, if he proves himself worthy and capable of such promotion.

There are usually one or two tractor drivers, two mechanics, ten members of surveying crews and draftsmen, five clerks and property keepers, one filling station operator, cooks, bakers, medical assistants, and other specialized types of workers in each erosion control camp.

In addition, there is a group who serve as sub-foremen, known as leaders and assistant-leaders.

"The question has come up many times recently as to what the CCC is doing toward National Defense," Holman said.

"No military training is given. All of the boys more than 21 years of age, however, are registered for the Selective Service, just the same as if they were not in a camp.

They will report for duty in the Army as soon as their numbers are called.

"When CCC boys go into the Army, according to opinions of Army officers, they will make far better soldiers than if they had never been enrolled in a camp.

They have been vaccinated and have been put through the 'toughening-up' process so necessary for a soldier before he can be trained to fight.

They have learned to live together and work together. In other words, these boys have had

May 4, 1906.

George Kelley and son, O. A. Withey, Charles Geno and Thomas Clement and son, Ernest, left Monday morning on a prospecting tour through Northwest Canada.

Lightning struck a large barn belonging to Charles Ashby, one mile north of Novesta Corners, during the storm Saturday night, and it burned to the ground, together with its contents.

A special train brought more than 100 visitors from Caro to attend the celebration of the 87th anniversary of Odd Fellowship observed in Cass City Thursday.

The regular noon train brought a number from other towns down the line as far south as North Branch, while others drove from surrounding towns.

Six-year-old Luella Striffler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Striffler, was instantly killed when she was run over by a rear wheel of a wagon loaded with baled hay in front of her farm home in Elkland Township on Thursday afternoon.

With her little cousin, Luella was coming home from school and the two were following at the rear of the wagon.

Luella evidently fell in front of one of the rear wheels when she stooped to recover a fallen school book.

their elementary training if they are drafted into the Army.

"The CCC is preparing young men for National Defense, however, in many ways besides making them physically and temperamentally fit.

The training they receive in skills of vital non-combatant value may be an important part of the defense program.

There is only a step between being a driver of a large crawler type tractor and the driver of an Army tank.

The boy who can be trusted to drive a truck in convoy or haul his fellow-enrollees in the field can be held responsible for driving a truck to haul men and material in the Army.

He would also make a good driver for an armored car.

"An enrollee who can tear a tractor apart and put it back together again might make a very handy man to have around when a tank breaks down on the battlefield.

A boy that has been trained in the fundamentals of surveying and drafting can make military sketches with little additional training.

Visitors who have eaten the 'grub' in a CCC camp agree that many of the enrollee cooks would be a blessing to the company mess of some Army unit.

These are but a few of the skills taught CCC boys that are preparing them to do their part toward the nation's defense."

In all cases the work training received on the job is supplemented with classroom instruction that gives the essential "book-learning" necessary to make the boys effective in their particular line.

Some of the jobs require more theoretical training than others.

The surveying crews, draftsmen, clerks and bookkeepers must spend some time in studying mathematics.

Other boys are taught elementary chemistry, dietetics, first aid, and many other subjects.

All illiterates are taught to read and write.

The training program goes even further, however, than just teaching the boys how to hold a job.

It also teaches them how to get a job when they are graduated from camp.

Each boy is taught how to fill out an application blank and make application for a job.

The correct approach in applying for a job is often as important to these unemployed youngsters as their skill as workmen.

"Most of the boys who graduate from the camps get a job at the time they leave the camp, or soon thereafter," Holman reported.

"There are some, however, who go back to the home farm. These boys also find that their training in camp has been highly beneficial because soil conservation is one of the things that all of the boys are taught thoroughly."

Kathleen Norris Says:

Upon Taking Things as They Are

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

If he is thoroughly alienated by years of being just a bill-paying boarder in his own house, she finds that the neat selfish little scheme she has built up is a house of cards and that she is being forced to join the ranks of the divorced.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

WHEN a woman writes me that after so many years of marriage—three or ten or fifteen, she and her husband have made the dismal discovery that they have absolutely nothing in common, that they are beginning to jar terribly on each others nerves, that without wishing each other any ill, they can no longer live together in anything but continual repression, discomfort and utter futility, then I know that she—or he, or both of them—are exhibiting a lack of character and common sense.

It is quite different when serious matters are influencing either one. Intemperance, cruelty, infidelity may be valid grounds for the breaking up of homes and the separation of children although in the last-mentioned case I have always thought divorce too high a price to pay for temporary weakness and vanity.

But when it is just a general lessening of affection, glamour, companionship, mutual satisfaction in being together, it means that one or the other has let go. Has stopped the pleasantness that is friendship in marriage, the eagerness to discuss plans, the readiness to forgive trifling mistakes, the old honeymoon anxiety to be generous and considerate and loving.

Once these are lost, they are hard to recapture. It can be done. But the wiser way is never to lose them. Husband's Position Parallels Child's.

That a husband is in much the child's position is a simple truth that many wives fail to grasp. Coldness, sharpness of voice, scolding, indifference, putting the feelings or the comfort of other persons first—her family, her old friends, herself—begins the trouble. Then when his affections wander, and when she suddenly senses that she no longer comes first with him, it avails her very little to reproach him, to ask pathetically how she has failed him. She has kept his house and borne his child and never been unfaithful and given him the best years of her life, she protests. What more did he expect?

But if he is thoroughly alienated by years of being just a bill-paying boarder in his own house, with a wife whose interests run entirely to her own beauty, bridge lunches, matinees with the girls, friends he does not know or does not like, she finds—as thousands of women find every year, that the neat selfish little scheme she has built up is a house of cards and that she is being forced to join the ranks of the divorced.

Dislike Divorce.

Most women hate the idea of divorce. They suffer bitterly with loneliness, once marriage is dissolved, and they suffer more when they realize that a second marriage means life with another man just as faulty as the first, and the fearful problem of the children's loyalties and their happiness thrown in.

The moral of which is that it would pay many a woman to check up on her marriage now. It would pay her to determine that life was going to be lived at least half the time on George's terms. That the weary man of the house was going to be in for a little spoiling. That what he says at dinner tonight is going to have an attentive and interested answer; that his views upon lowered household expenditures and a slightly stricter rule for the son and heir are going to be respected.

HAPPINESS IN MARRIAGE

"Take marriage seriously," Kathleen Norris urges married couples. She advises them not to presume upon the affection of their mates for their own selfish ends, because this will gradually destroy the mutual bonds that hold them together. Miss Norris adds that it would pay many a woman to check up on her marriage now before she unconsciously alienates her husband and destroys both their lives.

In some families a man and a woman have reached the point when whatever is suggested by the one is violently antagonistic to the other. It never occurs to either to give way. The effect of this upon children is incalculably bad.

Wants First Husband Back.

"I have been terribly unfortunate in my marriages," writes an Iowa woman. "My first was at 17, my oldest girl being born before I was 18. Her father was very young and irresponsible, as everyone else but myself seemed to know, and we were immediately divorced. Two years later I married a very fine fellow, but five years afterward he had the misfortune to be injured in the head, and was placed in an institution. Having then two little girls to provide for, I married for a home—a silly mistake, but I was desperate. A son was born of this marriage, but owing to actual injuries inflicted on me by a jealous, unreasonable husband he was unable to develop like other children and is a semi-invalid to this day. Divorced two years later, I made a comfortable home for myself and my children but was obliged to sue for my late husband's estate for their support when my son was five years old.

"It was then I met my first husband, who had gone away from our town, put himself through medical school by his own efforts, and obtained a really fine position. My youthful folly in insisting on a divorce cost me very dear, for the old attraction is still strong in us both, and Cal has a wife and two little sons. What I am writing to ask you is whether I still have any claim on him, as in some states our divorce would not be considered legal. If he were free I believe I could win him back."

And she sends me a sheaf of documents to prove that her marriage while she was not of age and his letters protesting against the divorce and other complicated details constitute illegality. The pity of it! At 32, burdened with an invalid child and two daughters, she would step back into Cal's life to destroy it, ruin the happiness of his wife and sons, and once more complicate her own existence, this time beyond all hope of recovery.

Patience-Mutual Confidence Needed.

Seventeen is too young for marriage. But many a marriage begun in the teens has proved a success, nevertheless, and obviously this one might have been. Patience and mutual confidence and a little help from the grownups would have carried Cal and Sally safely through. Infinite mischief and suffering would have been averted, and possibly a houseful of fine children would have held both man and wife in safety. As it is, I'm not advising Sally.

For one thing, she wouldn't pay the slightest attention to advice. She must follow her willful and mischievous path to the end. But I do ask other wives to look before they leap to the divorce courts; see what you can do with the material in hand before you involve yourself in even more complicated troubles.
