Contract Is Let for Two Bridges in Akron Township

E. J. VanHorn of Kingston was awarded the contract for the construction of two bridges on the Thomas Road in Akron Township. His bid of $3,937 was the lowest of two submitted to the Tuscola County Road Commission.

One bridge crosses the Sellers Drain and the other the Walker-Hayes Drain and both are only a short distance apart on the road which leads into the Thomas County Park.

The bridges are to be of the "multiplated skewed arch" type, and the contractor is to demolish the present spans, and construct the new ones, furnishing his own concrete and reinforcing steel. The steel for the multiplated skewed arches is to be provided by the county road commission which accepted a bid of a steel company for $2,544.50 for both.

Mother Turkey Dismissed; Gobbler Adopts Brood

Leading a flock of 18 little turkeys across the field for a daytime stroll in the woods and bringing them back to their nest at night is a daily task assumed by a yearling gobbler on the William Zinnecker farm in Novesta Township.

The mother of the 18 was dismissed of her children by the gobbler not long after they emerged from the shells. He covers the brood at night and performs quite acceptably all the duties of a mother turkey.

The gobbler will fight harder for the group of 18 little ones than any mother with a similar responsibility, says Mr. Zinnecker.

It will include civic and industrial scenes as well as a revue of the business places.

178 Children in Municipal Pool Friday Afternoon

Truck Brought 18 Boys from Marlette for Swim Here Friday Afternoon.

Friday afternoon was the big afternoon attendance at the municipal swimming pool of Cass City if one counted free admissions. One hundred seventy-eight children of school age enjoyed the bathing at the pool without cost. School children of the community are granted free admission to the pool each week day from 9:00 a. m. to 12:00 m. and from 2:00 to 4:00 p. m., and most any morning one may set his clock at nine when he sees the youngsters pass down the street on their way to the pool, with swim suits and towels under their arms.

Youngsters from Caro, Marlette and other towns in this section are frequent visitors at the pool here. A truck from Marlette brought 18 boys to the pool Friday afternoon. Adults from other towns are also among those who enjoy the pleasures of swimming at Cass City.

Seven Injured in Three Auto Crashes in Tuscola County

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gracey and Kathaleen Auten, 6, were brought to Pleasant Home Hospital for treatment following an automobile accident a half mile west of Gagetown at 1:30 p. m. Sunday. Mr. Gracey received injuries to both elbows and both knees. Mrs. Gracey was treated for a broken collarbone and a severe cut on a leg which required 13 stitches to close the wound and Kathaleen Auten received neck injuries in the crash.

According to a report filed by the deputy sheriff who investigated the accident, Kenneth Auten of Cass City was driving west and as he was passing a truck of Yens Benitez of Gagetown, a left wheel of the car dropped off the tarvia roadway. As the driver swung the car back to the right, it hit the left front wheel of the truck. The driver lost control of the car and it rolled down the highway about 185 feet and when it stopped it lay on its left side facing south.

In the car were Mr. and Mrs. Auten and children, Gerald, 5, and Kathaleen, 6, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gracey and daughter, Karen, 3. Mr. Gracey and Kathaleen were thrown from the car and the other occupants were all crowded into the front seat by the impact. The three young men in the truck were not injured.

Mrs. Gracey was taken from the hospital to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCaslin, in Cass City, where she is still confined to her bed. Kathaleen remained at the hospital until Monday.

The Auten car is a complete wreck and the steering wheel and one fender of the truck was damaged.

A truck of the Beatrice Creamery Company of Detroit driven by Frank Herrick and a car of Don Wilson of Highland Park were involved in an accident July 26, one mile west and one and a half miles south of Kingston. Don Wilson was most seriously hurt and was taken to the Marlette Hospital. Turn to page 4, please.

PETER RABBIT TEARS HIS CLOTHES

“Rags and tatters. Rags and tatters. Save your life; that's all that matters.”

IF PETER RABBIT believes anything he believes that. Perhaps that is why he is so careless about how he looks—doesn't mind a little dirt on his trousers or appear to notice that the fit of his coat is rather too ample for trimness. You see the one great problem before Peter all the time is to save his life. That is something you don't have to do very often. But sometimes you have to as when you cross the street crowded with automobiles and electric cars and teams. Then you have to use your eyes and your ears for all they are worth to keep safe and out of harm's way. That is what Peter has to do just about all the time excepting when he is in the dear old Briar Patch. So his clothes seem a very important matter to him, and he seldom thinks of them.

Now, Peter was frightened. Of course he was.

Now as he crouched in the bramble-tangle on the edge of the Green Forest looking straight into the grinning face of Reddy Fox you may be sure that he had no room in his thoughts for anything so unimportant as clothes. He knew by the look in Reddy's eyes that Reddy was going to risk a few scratches and was coming in after him. He knew that Reddy knew that the path he had started to cut through the bram-

Oak Bluff Breezes.

That little northwest breeze has been a real life saver the past few days, making comfortable if one isn't too ambitious, and no one seems to be here except a few hostesses who continue to keep up interest for house guests and visitors.

Mrs. O. P. Immerman of Chicago was a house guest of the Wilsons for the past week, returning home on Monday.

Mrs. Andrew Carnegie and son, Bobbie, were guests of Mrs. A. A. Hitchcock Friday afternoon, bringing Master Bobbie to spend a week with his aunt, while his parents do some sailing.

Kenneth Wickware and guest spent Sunday at the Wickware cottage.

Miss Phoebe Kerr entertained at a bridge luncheon on Thursday for the Wilson's house guest. Prizes went to Mrs. G. H. Burke, Miss Lillian Gwinn and, as guest, Mrs. O. P. Immerman.

Harold Ballard is taking another week of his vacation this week and we think the good bass fishing of late has something to do with it. The Knapp cottage was noticeably deserted Saturday and Sunday, a Knapp reunion at Ypsilanti being the cause.

Miss Grant had as her guest for a few days Miss Jackson and that section of the beach was rather busy as Miss Spinks also entertained Detroit guests last week.

On Friday, Mrs. G. H. Burke gave a dessert bridge, honoring Mrs. O. P. Immerman. Prizes were given to Mrs. J. E. Wurm, Mrs. Ethel McCoy and Mrs. Immerman.

Sunday evening, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Wilson entertained at a dinner. Week-end guests were Mrs. Grace Ketchum and Mrs. Jessie Hall. At the Edwards cottage, Mrs. Edwards and Wilma.

The Roy Briggs family are enjoying a vacation at the Sandham cottage.

Miss Margaret McKenzie, who is spending the summer with her aunt, Mrs. A. A. Hitchcock, left Monday for a week with friends in Jackson.

Swimming has been the most popular activity this week and promises to continue so until the weather breaks.

Guess Who.

Dr. M. M. Wickware, for many years a physician in the Cass City community and now medical director of the Gleaner Life Insurance Association, has the following article in his series of “Reminiscences of Twenty Years in Country Practice,” which was printed in the ble-tangle ended right where he was then sitting, and that there were no other paths.

Now, Peter was frightened. Of course he was. But he wasn't as frightened as he might have been if he hadn't known that he could crawl through that bramble-tangle even if there was no path, and, because he was so much smaller, he could do it faster than Reddy possibly could. Reddy thrust his sharp face in at the opening and began to crawl in. Peter turned and began to wriggle and squeeze through where the brambles and vines grew thickest. The thorns clutched at him and tore his coat. Little tufts of fur were left on them. Peter knew that he was tearing his clothes. Those sharp thorns hurt. But he shut his mouth tightly and kept right on. If they hurt him they would hurt Reddy Fox a great deal more, and he didn't believe that Reddy would stand it. Already Reddy was giving little angry yelps at the scratches he was getting, and he had not yet reached the really bad places. Every little yelp of pain from Reddy made Peter smile in spite of his own troubles.

“Thinks he'll have a rabbit dinner, does he? Well, it won't be this rabbit, I can tell him that,” muttered Peter as he worked his way to the very middle of the old bramble-tangle.

Then he ventured to stop and look behind him. Reddy Fox was already backing out the way he had come in and he was making a great fuss about it, too. Peter knew then that he was safe for just as long as he stayed in the bramble-tangle, and he meant that that should be for just as long as Reddy Fox and Red-tail the Hawk kept watch outside. And now that his fright was less, he had more time to think of other things, and the very first thing was a path out. He didn't propose to tear his clothes and scratch himself any more. He would cut a path straight from where he was to the other side of the bramble-tangle. Probably by the time he had it done Reddy Fox would have become tired of watching and gone away. It would take a good while, working every minute to do it. He would begin at once. No time for dreaming now. Peter settled right down to work, real work. (Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

Friend Undertaker. In the movies, or on the stage, undertakers are usually portrayed as tall, solemn-visaged, cadaverous-looking persons, clad in black, long-tailed, ill-fitting clothes. But a certain successful undertaker friend of the days covered by our Reminiscences did not correspond to this description at all. He was of the robust, athletic type—in fact an ex-state league ball player—jovial and smiling to the fullest degree. However, when attending a funeral his demeanor was dignified and sincerely sympathetic—conducting the obsequies with marked efficiency.

Did he love a joke? He did. But here is one of his especially commendable traits—he seemingly enjoyed one on himself fully as well as when it was on “the other fellow.”

It was in early April. The roads were muddy. We started on calls southeast of town. Our mode of transportation should have been real, live, honest-to-goodness two horse power, but instead the temptation to take our second early model automobile was too great.

Shortly after turning the two mile corner we encountered our undertaker friend, with his driver, team and hearse. We also encountered about four or more inches of sticky mud.

Upon being given half the road, we managed, on low gear, to pass the melancholy vehicle. But could we pull away from the fast-walking team powering it? No, not for a full mile—the depth of the mud rendering it necessary to continue on low, and decidedly slow gear, with the throttle wide open and steam from the radiator shooting way up to the heavens.

Imagine our thoughts—with numerous homes on this mile stretch! We could visualize the occupants thereof, with their noses pressed against the window panes, viewing the spectacle of an undertaker with his hearse following a certain physician on his country calls; we could fairly see and hear old Sol Smythe peering over his glasses and remarking to Samantha, “There goes Doc Wickware with the undertaker right behind him—mighty appropriate, I say!”

To add to our embarrassment and frustration at this juncture, what did friend undertaker do? I'll tell you: In his strong, rich baritone voice (he was an accomplished singer—but there had been times when he enjoyed his singing much more) he began singing the chorus, slightly modified, to a well known spiritual—“Where you lead, I will follow, I will follow, follow on.”

But even the most disconcerting of situations must come to an end; thus, after what seemed to be a long, long time we reached higher and dryer ground and eventually managed to leave our embarrassing and tormenting friend at a safe and desirable distance behind. The only consoling factor in connection with this episode was this: As it happened, friend undertaker was not, on this particular occasion, enroute to a home where we had been in attendance.

Three Signs Which Point To Flat Feet

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

YOU read so much about weak flat feet that when you have the slightest pain in the feet you may wonder if you need arch supports and perhaps you straightaway purchase a pair. Now, arch supports are of great help when they are needed as they make it possible for these individuals to earn a living and get about for business and pleasure.

However, the wearing of arch supports should be left until it is definitely known that they are really needed and when measures to correct the arches have failed.

We should realize that the foot is an organ of the body just as is the stomach or heart and the cause of any ache or discomfort should be investigated. Infected tonsils or teeth can cause pain in the joints and tendons of the foot just as in other joints—wrist, knee or shoulder. Infection can cause pain in a flat foot; treatment of the foot itself may give little or no relief.

What are the signs of a flat foot? There are three outstanding signs that the patient can see for himself:

1. He stands on a large sheet of white paper and outlines his feet with a pencil. If left foot is flat, the inner side is down on the floor and bulges to right. If the right foot is flat, inner side bulges to left. In the normal foot the arch of the foot is entirely off the floor, the left curving to left and the right curving to right.
2. If right foot is flat, outer edge curves inward to the left, instead of outward to right; if left foot is flat, outer edge curves inward to right instead of outward to left.

How Much Water Should We Drink?

MANY professional heavyweight wrestlers who wrestle three or four times a week, may take off as much as 10 pounds each time they wrestle and have the 10 pounds back when they wrestle again the following night. It can be readily seen that the 10 pounds lost was not fat, it was water.

The reason the weight goes back on so readily is that fat tissue absorbs or holds water just as does a sponge, whereas more active tissue such as muscle or nerve, will only take in or absorb the amount of water needed to maintain the structure of this tissue.

We are advised by health specialists to drink more water; they state that most of us do not drink enough water, which is a cause of constipation and acidosis.

How much water should the average office worker, housewife, or clerk drink in the 24 hours?

Physiologists tell us that for every calorie of food eaten we need 1 c.c. (15 drops) of water, so that if we ate 2,000 calories we should need 2,000 times 15 drops, that is nearly three pints or six glasses. However, as meats contain over 50 per cent of water and green vegetables over 90 per cent, it is estimated that we get at least half of our six glasses in the food, so that we need to drink only three glasses of water daily.

If we drink tea, coffee, milk or other fluid at each meal, it explains why many individuals remain in good health who do not drink any liquids between meals.

As a matter of fact, most of us eat nearer 3,000 calories per day than 2,000, so that about two quarts, eight glasses of water, is supplied by the food eaten.

Generally speaking, keeping in mind that we sometimes do considerable walking or take other exercise daily and often perspire freely, most of us would do well if we drank one or two glasses of water daily between meals. Water cannot harm us. It will, of course, increase weight in fat individuals.

The reception, in the nature of a musical, was held in the dormitory at the somewhat unique hour of 10 to 10:30 p. m. Wednesday. Heating Other Rooms
Arranging a fireplace so that it will heat rooms other than the one in which it is located can be done by placing it in an inner wall of the house and using in it a heat-circulating unit. Outlets in the front, sides and back will circulate heat in four directions and will comfortably heat a five-room house.

Prevents Steel Becoming Brittle
Manganese prevents steel from becoming brittle but it also increases the milk mother rats have available to nourish their babies. Lack of manganese in the bones of chickens results in a bone disease commonly known as "slipped tendon." These are only a few of the findings made by University of California investigators with the aid of radioactive "tagged" manganese atoms.

Oleomargarine
Oleomargarine was first made in 1870 by a French scientist, Mege-Mouries, who was experimenting to obtain a cheap butter substitute for the poor.

His Busy Day
"Miss Smith," said the dentist to his secretary as he left for the golf course, "if anyone calls, please tell him I have 18 cavities to fill this afternoon."

Keeping the Vitamins
Chemists report that if you wrap green vegetables in a damp cloth or paper before placing them in ice boxes, they will be kept rich in vitamins A and C. Otherwise, vitamins are lost with evaporation of moisture in the vegetable.

Feeding Goldfish
Feeding goldfish is quite simple. They will eat everything with reason. The dry fish foods sold commercially are quite sufficient. They appreciate a few garden worms, however, or a few flies or other insects. In very large pools, a stiff mash of oatmeal boiled with shredded liver and put into the pool in lumps once in a while is sufficient to keep the fish in good shape.

Alternate Classes To Care for Baby

Married Students Work Out Daily Living Schedule.

WACO, TEXAS.—It took some arranging but the Rev. and Mrs. Clifford Potts have worked out a daily living schedule to take into consideration their 17-month old girl and their classes at Baylor university.

The minister and his wife are caring for the house, are meeting full class schedules at the university and are "caring for and carrying baby Joanne."

They arranged their class schedules so one could be with the baby at all times. But it happened that each took alternate hours so the baby-to-class and class-to-baby rush now comes every hour from 8 a. m. to 2:40 p. m.

And, as bad luck would have it, they found there was no house available near the campus to permit them time for the baby-to-class and class-to-baby sprints.

So they worked it out like this: The Rev. Mr. Potts goes to his eight o'clock class, leaving Mrs. Potts with the baby. At 8:55 a. m. each school day he hurries toward home. On the way he meets his wife, carrying the child in her arms. She hands him the baby and hurries on to school. He takes the little girl home again.

The campus exchange occurs from father to mother at 10 a. m., from mother to father at 11:40 a. m. and so on throughout the day.

Of course, the baby gets plenty of airing and when one or the other of her parents is a little late she changes hands with the mother and father almost on the run.

The father is pastor of the Baptist church at Turnersville, Texas, and is taking a Bible course at Baylor. Mrs. Potts is majoring in education.

North Carolina College Adds Defense Courses

RALEIGH, N. C.—Already serving the national defense program through a half-dozen vital activities, North Carolina State college now is preparing to render an additional service designed to help eliminate "bottle-necks" in production of materials and machines needed during the emergency.

The college will co-operate in the new engineering defense training program to help industry and government meet their needs for technical and supervisory personnel in fields essential to national defense.

Congress has appropriated $9,000,000 to finance, through qualified schools of engineering, intensive courses of college grades to train men to fill available openings in defense industries and government defense agencies. The U. S. office of education is administering the program.

The post-mortem, performed by Dr. Harry L. Shapiro, associate curator of anthropology of the American Museum of Natural History, disclosed Wah was 5 feet 2 inches tall and about 30 years old when he died.

"The brain, heart, stomach and other organs were intact, indicating that greater pains and more time were taken in preparing mummies in the days of Wah than in later times," said Dr. Shapiro.

Perform Autopsy on Man Wrapped Up in 2010 B. C.

NEW YORK.—An autopsy on a man almost 4,000 years old has been completed. He was Wah, an Egyptian nobleman of the eleventh dynasty, who was wrapped up in 2010 B. C.

The post-mortem, performed by Dr. Harry L. Shapiro, associate curator of anthropology of the American Museum of Natural History, disclosed Wah was 5 feet 2 inches tall and about 30 years old when he died.

"The brain, heart, stomach and other organs were intact, indicating that greater pains and more time were taken in preparing mummies in the days of Wah than in later times," said Dr. Shapiro.

Bees to Carry Messages Through Japanese Lines

SHANGHAI.—Bees are in the army of the Chungking government. The Chinese are using the knowledge that as long as the same queen bee rules the hive it can be moved a distance of miles, and the bees will return to it.

By microphotography plans and messages are transcribed on tiny pieces of paper and sent through enemy areas attached to the bee. At the destination the message is deciphered with a microscope.

The "bee mail" travels 30 to 40 miles an hour, the insects being almost invisible and safer than pigeons.

Elevator Up to the Roof Is Used by Lazy Pigeon

SCRANTON, PA.—There's a lazy pigeon in Scranton. Edward Kobeski, elevator operator in a local bank building, had a pigeon walk, not fly, into his elevator, so he took the bird up to the roof and released it.

Evidently enjoying the ride, the bird repeated the performance the next day.

Russian Soldiers Will Make Own Accessories

MOSCOW.—Russian soldiers henceforth will manufacture their own underwear, knapsacks, horse-shoes, sanitary kits and kitchen utensils in order to relieve industry of the burden of providing petty accessories for the Red army, it was announced.

Defense Commissar Semyen Timoshenko decreed establishment of a network of army workshops to make the specified goods.

Nickels Count In This Place

Shrimp 'Peelers' in North Carolina Town Get Pay As They Work.

SOUTHPORT, N. C.—The fishing village of Southport is on the "nickel standard"—the coin, not the metal—but a thriving business goes on here just the same.

The nickel, in fact, is a most important coin here and it is not at all unusual for a merchant to sell a basketful of groceries, or a dress or a pair of shoes, and be paid with a handful of nickels.

Some of the leading business men of Southport take water buckets full of nickels to work with them in the morning for their daily transactions.

Important Shrimp Port. Southport, at the mouth of the Cape Fear river, is an important shrimp port, and although the income average is not high, there is little unemployment and virtually no dire poverty.

Yet many of these workers are paid a nickel at a time and wage-hour experts from Washington who shudder at the necessity of discussing wages on a five-cent basis have been unable to devise a better method of compensating the shrimp picker.

The shrimp boats leave Southport at dawn to drag their nets around the mouth of the river. Early in the afternoon they return to their shrimp-picking houses and as they come in sight the Negro pickers hurry to the docks.

Men, women and a few children line up on each side of the big troughs into which the shrimp are dumped. Each one grabs a bucket and the "peeling" begins. When a bucket is filled the picker is paid off in nickels, immediately, on the basis of the amount picked.

Some Earn $2 in Day. Until the shrimp supply is exhausted, the picker makes trip after trip to the trough, or until the worker has all the nickels he needs. A good picker can earn as much as 40 nickels during the afternoon.

Bill Wells, who operates one of the largest shrimp packing houses, said that no other method of paying had proved so satisfactory. In the first place, he says, it's part-time work and until the boats arrive no one knows how much there will be to do. And, in the second place, the pickers like to come and go as they please.

Some of the pickers work because they are bored with sitting around the house. A few nickels usually suffice. Sometimes a child will work hard until the first nickel is earned and then will head for the nearest store for candy.

Bees Go South in Trailer To Keep Up Their Work

EAST PEMBROKE, N. Y.—The busy bees of John M. and Jourdain J. DeMuth, East Pembroke shrimpers, have migrated to Florida again to spend the winter manufacturing honey.

Imprisoned in specially constructed hives, the bees were taken to Umatilla, Fla., their winter base, on a specially built trailer in two nonstop trips. Two hundred hives, or more than 50,000,000 bees, made the trip southward.

Halts were made only for refueling or some emergency to avoid swarming of the buzzers on the screens when the transport was not in motion. Hives were so packed that air continually circulated about the containers.

December Tops in Fatalities

The month of December has the highest traffic-death rate of any month, according to statistics. Twenty persons are killed by traffic accidents every night in December during the hours of six and eight. During this month, five out of every seven traffic deaths occur during dusk or darkness and 44 per cent of the victims are pedestrians.

It was further learned that the diabetic brain is an acid brain and, if not balanced by proper treatment, results in retarded mentation and stupor.

The "full dinner pail" slogan was a Republican slogan in 1900. It emphasized the prosperity of McKinley's first term and appealed particularly to the labor vote.

Longest Bird Flight

The longest bird flight on record was made by an Arctic tern which in three months flew from the coast of Labrador to the coast of south-eastern Africa.

Lansing—Five little girls—Annette, Yvonne, Marie, Cecile and Emilie—are Canada's greatest tourist attraction.

They are also an indirect benefit to Michigan.

This latter fact dawned upon us rather belatedly after we had returned from a week's escorted tour of Ontario scenic points with American editors from seven other states. For this reason Michigan has a peculiar interest in the world famous quint of Callendar.

The vogue for "circle tours" is chiefly responsible. The modern automobile gypsy, possessed with a passion for mileage, has revolutionized traveling customs. What our ancestors would regard as an "expedition," fraught with numerous uncertainties and tribulations, is today regarded as little else than a week-end jaunt.

Good highways and dependable automobiles makes it possible for Michigan people to swing around to North Bay, neighboring city of Callendar, Ontario, by way of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan. Likewise, American tourists who go to Callendar from Niagara Falls or Detroit find it worthwhile in varied sightseeing thrills to return home by way of Sault Ste. Marie and the lower peninsula.

Town the Quints Built

Until a country doctor, Dr. Alan Roy Dafeo, brought the five little girls into the world just seven years ago last May, North Bay was a mere trading center in north Ontario; Callendar was just another spot on the map.

As every newspaper editor well knows, we are interested in ourselves more so than anything else.

Every mother and every father who visit Callendar and who see Ontario's five little sweethearts have a personal interest in these children. Instead of having French names, the quintuplets might have been given other names—if, for example, they had been born in YOUR town.

Like finding a gold mine or striking a rich oil field, Mother Nature chose a cross-road corner by the name of Corbeil, just outside the village of Callendar, for Canada's No. 1 tourist magnet. Douglas Oliver, who heads the Ontario Travel and Publicity Bureau, estimates that approximately 250,000 persons traveled to Callendar last year to see the quint.

Million-Dollar Babies

By courtesy of Keith Munro, business manager of the quint, our party was accorded a rare privilege of a private showing of the Dionnes, the fifth since their birth, and a meeting with Dr. Dafeo.

The girls live in a cottage-like house, surrounded with a tall steel fence and guarded constantly by watchmen. Other members of the family reside outside, but they have access to the cottage at all times.

From 10 to 10:30 a. m. and from 3 to 3:30 p. m. each day the children go outside to romp, while visitors watch them from small glass windows in a four-sided wall that encloses the playground. Cameras are forbidden, as the King Features syndicate and the Newspaper Enterprise Association have exclusive rights for all photographs. From revenues of tourist admissions and their contracts, the quintuplets now have approximately $1,000,000 in investments.

They not only look like a million, but they're actually worth it!

They Sing in French. The five little girls, each dressed identically in blue even to their hair ribbons, emerged from the cottage, accompanied by two nurses.

Dr. Dafeo was asked to identify them. He smiled and declined. "I frequently get them mixed up myself," he said.

However, the Quints themselves came to the rescue each bowing demurely and announcing her name. Natural and unspoiled, the children sang a number of French songs, executed an old-fashioned dance and rendered "Oh Canada."

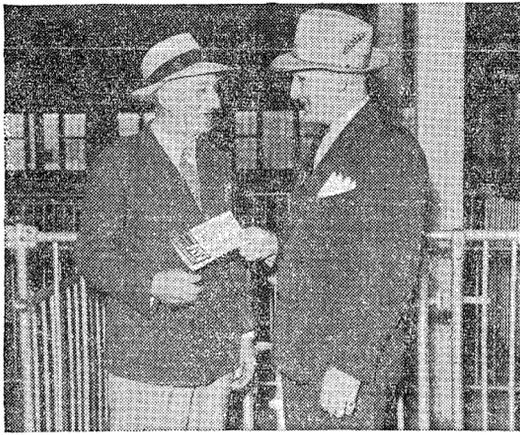

They concluded with "There'll Always Be an England" but after singing two lines they became a bit confused with the words and finally gave it up. It was then that H. A. MacLennan of Hamilton, president of the Hotel Association of Canada, put us "on the spot" by suggesting that we play the accompaniment on a miniature foot-organ.

We had heard the song only twice before, but arose to the occasion gallantly as best we could. And thus it was that a Michigan newspaperman became the first person to accompany the French-speaking Quints of Canada in singing a British song.

STATE FAIR COMING UP!

Thirty-five thousand copies of the 1941 Michigan State Fair premium book are off the presses and on their way to prospective exhibitors. Here, Henry R. Jossman, Pontiac, representative of the State Department of Agriculture, receives the first copy from Bernard J. Youngblood, Fair manager. Premiums totaling $70,000 are offered this year and a record number of exhibitors is expected. Premium books may be obtained by writing Michigan State Fair, Detroit. The Fair opens August 27 and continues through September 7.

licensed hotels, and this governmental action has been a blessing to the tourist industry.

In all towns, large and small, you will find splendid, modern hotels. Room rates are reasonable. Food prices are about the same as they are in Michigan. The Royal York, the dominion's largest hotel, is owned and operated by the Canadian Pacific Railroad, while Ottawa's famous Chateau Laurier is operated by the Canadian National Railroad, a government-owned agency. Canada accepts public ownership of its largest hotels as a matter of fact.

Because of long distances, highway development has been slow. Yet the roads are kept up in good condition. However, Canada today does not have a transcontinental route.

Gasoline and oil restrictions limit purchases from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. and none at all on Sundays. No passports are required at the border, only personal identification and an automobile license card being necessary.

Travel Boom Is On

From a recent visit into northern Michigan and the Upper Peninsula, we are convinced that the travel season this year has almost reached the proportion of a "boom."

While the demand for cottages in some sections is not up to expectation, the hotels and overnight cabins are doing a thriving business.

Traverse City, for example, is having a record year. Its 1941 Cherry Festival, nearly rained and frozen out by November weather, attracted a tremendous throng. Petoskey and Harbor Springs merchants are happy. Mackinac Island and Sault Ste. Marie are receiving throngs.

Tourist towns along Route 27 from Lansing to Mackinaw City are enjoying a marked increase in business over last year. Upper Peninsula's cool climate is pulling thousands to resorts from Ironwood to Menominee and St. Ignace.

Warm weather and general prosperity are partly responsible. Another reason is a conviction of many persons that this summer may be the last one in a good many years when they can do exactly as they wish.

Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes continues to fret about the probability of gasoline rations. Two weeks ago the Association of American Railroads requested roads in the Southeast to eliminate all excursions in order to facilitate troop movements. Compulsory deductions for defense savings bonds, plus a stiff federal tax on middle-class incomes, would put a serious crimp into 1942 vacations. And so it goes. Result: Increased travel this summer.

We're Travel-Minded

For many years the Canadians were good customers of Michigan. They enjoyed coming to our state. They spent their money here freely.

Today, because of the imperative need for American dollars to help pay for a $1,000,000,000 purchase of American munitions in 1941, Canadians are restricted from travel abroad. They can't subscribe to American newspapers or magazines. No order of the foreign exchange board at Ottawa ever aroused more resentment and disapproval.

And so while Canadians do not visit American resorts, more Americans are visiting Canada this summer than ever before—unless the gasoline restrictions frighten those who are timid. It is a safe bet that Michigan is going to receive a benefit from the world renown of the five little girls at Callendar. While we are selfish about our own resort industry, we generously acclaim Canada's attractions in a neighborly and friendly spirit—especially Yvonne, Marie, Annette, Cecile and Emilie.

In Cahoots

Cahoots is a corruption of cohorts, members of a company or band; hence those who have the same interest or who seek a common objective, as "we are in cahoots together," for "we are cohorts."

Misses Dorothy and Mildred McGregory left early Monday morning for a vacation in Saugatuck, Michigan. They expect to return Saturday.

Diabetics Get Special Ice Cream. A new ice cream for diabetics has been produced at the University of Illinois, containing about 40 per cent as much sugar as the standard product. Scientists at the institute substituted a mixture principally of milk proteins for the glycerine used previously in efforts to freeze a low-sugar ice cream. One out of each 260 persons in the United States is diabetic, the scientists say.

Elevators 'Lifts' in England. Our British cousins don't eat candy; they call it sweets. Elevators are lifts, and counterfeiters are coiners. They don't play checkers, but draughts. Americans may wear undershirts but Englishmen wear vests.

Same Condition. There is no very great difference between severe head catarrh, sinusitis, closed eustachian tubes, or catarrhal deafness. In essence, all of these are merely labels for one and the same condition—a catarrhal inflammatory process which occurs in one area or the other of the facial and head structures, according to Phil M. Lovell, M. D.

Soldiers Contracting Influenza. During the World war it was found that the rate of contraction of influenza by soldiers was reduced five times by antiseptic dishwashing. "Saliva-borne infections," asserts the American Journal of Public Health, "are responsible either directly or indirectly for from 25 per cent to 45 per cent of our mortality."

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

U. S. Attitude Toward Japan Changes With 'Drive to South' Viewed as Threat To Vital Supplies From East Indies; Soviet Discounts Air Raids on Moscow

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Following a half-hour conference with Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles, Japanese Ambassador Kichisaburo is pictured in Washington as he expressed to newsmen the hope that the feeling between the U. S. and Japan "will become better and better." Later, Welles had a little different version of the conference. He said he had warned the ambassador that Japan's actions threatened sources of U. S. defense materials and had a direct relation "upon . . . our national security."

JAPAN: A Change

Japan, following the establishment of a new government under the same premier, still rather puzzled observers as to what the new regime might have in store for Japan and the world. Summed up by "the man in the street" in Tokyo, who commentators felt was as good a barometer of the mysterious future as any, the new government promised something like this: 1. A sterner prosecution of the war with China. 2. Outwardly, at least, no change in the tripartite pact with Germany and Italy; 3. A generally more placatory attitude toward the United States provided this were possible if Japan's aims were carried out. 4. A strengthening of Japan's position in Manchukuo and on the Siberian border, but no provocation or forward move against Russia unless the Germans were shown to be positively winning a decisive victory. 5. A definite "grab" in the southern portion of the Pacific front, probably in Indo-China. This last possibility, believed definitely promised since Japan was accused the British of a similar attempted "grab" and hence following the old Axis technique of accusing the other fellow of doing what you intend yourself to do, would, it was feared, definitely involve the United States. The inclusion of a noted Japanese banker in the cabinet was said to mean a promise that Japan's internal house would be put in order, as far as possible, and hence a move toward Indo-China would be along that line.

U. S. Attitude

Japan's drive met some real opposition in the attitude of the U. S. government. Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles came out with a statement declaring the occupation of French Indo China was primarily in preparation for "more obvious movements of conquest in adjacent areas." He was of the opinion that such moves have a direct bearing on the national security of the United States because they threatened supplies of strategic defense materials. He was referring here to supplies of rubber and tin now being obtained from the Netherlands East Indies. President Roosevelt added weight to the changing U. S. attitude toward Japan. He told a civilian defense group that the United States "had" (he used the past tense) been allowing oil shipments to Japan to make it unnecessary for that nation to go to the East Indies for this supply. He indicated that the policy had worked for two years, thus keeping war out of the Pacific region.

VICHY: Still Sinking

The Vichy government, helpless against Germany and Italy, and equally helpless against Britain, as seen in the Syrian debacle, was seen as sinking more into a position of powerlessness by the announcement that if Japan moves on Indo-China that Vichy will have no course but to submit. This far-eastern menace of the war, threatening as it would the Burma road, found Anthony Eden warning Japan that severe steps would be taken rather than yield Indo-China to the Japanese, and this was the ever-present closest threat of the entry of the U. S. actively into the war. The Japanese newspapers, as noted above, have been accusing the British, Free French and Chinese of being about to invade Indo-China. This was taken in London as a veiled threat that Japan plans to do just that.

RUSSIA: And Nazi Claims

Since the move of the British commission into Moscow, also since the establishment there of a short-wave radio station, which would permit observers like Erskine Caldwell to make broadcasts direct to American homes, it was possible for the Russian sources to make more definite denials of German claims than had been possible heretofore. For instance, the first large blitz raid by planes on Moscow was described by the Germans as having ruined the city, particularly the Kremlin. Announcers came on the air the following morning and declared that the raid was much less effective than similar raids the speakers had gone through in England, and that their trips about the city had showed no signs of panic or disaster. The British commission, which earlier had said that the Russian air force had far from been knocked out of the air, told of German planes shot down, and said that air battles they had witnessed showed that the Nazi pilots, in fact the British pilots, did not have as good technique as the Russians in clipping off rudders and tail surfaces with machine gun bursts of fire. It also was apparent that Nazi claims on land, that their forces had completely disintegrated that Russian defense, that Smolensk had been taken and that the invaders were past Kiev and had Leningrad practically surrounded were entirely premature. These maneuvers and triumphs might possibly be carried out, but they were some time in the future, those on the ground in Moscow reported, and the reports were not entirely the Russian communiques, but the reports, censored, it is true, but nevertheless made by Americans and British on the scene.

SERVICE: And House

Chief of Staff General Marshall went before the senate and evidently made a deep impression. President Roosevelt followed this with a request for the passage of legislation declaring a national emergency, and the sum of these two appearances before the upper house was evident in two ways: First, an effort by administration leaders to hustle the legislation to a vote. Second, a general upturn of sentiment in favor of the bill. This was one of the oddest controversies since the World war started. The first feeling evidenced when it was hinted that the guardsmen and draftees might be kept in service longer than the statutory year was that the selective service people themselves felt it a breach of faith with the drafted men. The next phase came from the selectees themselves, also from the guardsmen. The officers and non-coms of the latter seemed willing to stay in, but many of the private soldiers among the guardsmen expressed voluble desires to be let out. In the midst of this came the announcement that all selectees of 28 and over would be deferred automatically, and the bill to this effect passed the senate by a terrific margin.

RELEASE: For Workers

It was said in Washington that if any defense manufacturers want some of their skilled workers, already in the guard or the selective service, released to come back to work, the man to take it up with is Robert T. Patterson, undersecretary of war. The recently announced policy will be that trained workers now in the army may be released when their services are urgently needed in defense industry.

Open Season

It's open season on Beauty Queens again and here is Miss California as chosen at Venice, Calif., where beauty pageant which she won was staged. She is Barbara Wilson, a brunette, and she poses here with the winner's cup and flowers awarded to her. She will act as official hostess at a national beauty contest to be held in Venice in mid-August.

R. A. F.: Pounding Away

There was some sentiment in Moscow, British reports stated, that the Russians, used to enormous land army maneuvers, were wondering why it was that the British didn't land troops on the continent now that the Russians had the Nazis busy up to their necks in the east. The British were very frank in saying "No" to this whole proposition. In the first place, said the war office, there was still considerable doubt whether the Russians were able to put up a really successful fight against the Germans. In the second place, war office authorities went on, the best that England could do short of landing troops on the continent would be so to slash away at the Reich by air that numbers of German fighter planes would be kept busy on the west front, thus taking them away from the eastern theater of war. These air raids by the R.A.F. were increasing in scope daily, with the bombers taking advantage of each minute of darkness that was added as the nights grew longer, to stretch their raids further and further into Germany. Already, it was pointed out, they were hitting at the suburbs of Berlin, and the capital itself would come in for strong blitzing before long, the British promised.

NAZIS: Blast FDR

The main upshot of the attempted Nazi coup in Bolivia, and the statement by President Roosevelt that, if necessary, the Bolivian government would have the full aid of the United States in quelling the attempted coup d'etat, was that the Nazis turned their guns on the President. The war news went flying off the front pages as the leading Berlin dailies paid their respects to the President in the most sarcastic and belittling terms. One said: "The President of the U. S. A. is trying to bring Bolivia into the status of colonial dependence on the United States." Another wrote: "Mr. Roosevelt's message to congress and the press constitute nothing but lies." Still another: "President Roosevelt is a main tool of Jewish world freemasonry." This paper published a picture of the President and his three sons holding a Masonic lodge session. This picture, according to the Nazi press, was found at Masonic headquarters in Oslo, Norway. The paper said it was taken November 7, 1935, and pictured the President as taking part in the initiation of his sons, James and Franklin Jr. According to Nazi tenets being a Freemason is almost a cardinal sin.

FOURTEEN: New Points

Reminiscent of the "Fourteen Points" of the last war settlement, Undersecretary of State Welles had issued the most definite statement so far promulgated intending to give America's post-war objectives. The statement by Welles came at the laying of a cornerstone for a new wing of the Norwegian legation in Washington. He prefaced his remarks with the assertion that there could be no peace until Hitler had finally and surely been destroyed. He referred to the League of Nations, and said he did not believe that the peoples of good will will not once more strive to realize the great ideal of an association of nations through which the freedom, the happiness and the security of all nations may be achieved. Welles particularly brought in the German people by saying that millions (naming the Germans) now are asking what the future will hold for them when the war ends. He mentioned England, China, Norway, and said "yes, millions in Italy and Germany."

A splendid new road was opened last year, between Guadalajara and Mexico City, and some sections of the road between Nogales, Ariz., and Guaymas are in excellent condition.

Skunk in Hero Role The lowly unpopular skunk has been hailed as the new woodland hero of the land by the American Wildlife institute. Grub worms were harboring on the New York conservation department's Saratoga Nursery, world's largest forest tree production plant. Along came the skunk and found himself overwhelmed with a delicious plenty of the things he holds best in life. And grub worms make a tasty morsel for skunks.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Should She Marry Him?

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

Even if Hugh turns out to be a scamp he will hardly be able to do anything crueller to Sally than did the weak mother who let a 19-year-old girl go out to night clubs, dancing with men she hardly knew, and to be brought home, when her own escort failed her, by a drunken stranger.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

SOMETIMES second thoughts are so curiously different from first ones that one finds oneself, somewhat shamefacedly, completely reversing the original position. That's what happened to me after I read this letter, which presents a strange and unusual problem.

WHAT TO DO . . . Sally is a cripple . . . she's in love with Hugh . . . and Sally's mother wonders whether to meet Hugh's terms or sacrifice her daughter's wishes. It's a hard question, especially since Sally's inactivity is due to a tragic event that would never have occurred had her mother been wiser four years before. Don't fail to read Kathleen Norris' broad-minded, revealing answer to this "Troubled Mother."

may have your answer within a few days.

Not a Fortune-Hunter. That's the gist of the letter, and as I say my first impulse was quite different from my second as to answering it. I felt that Hugh was a fortune hunter who would sacrifice honor for money, get possession of the entire worldly wealth of a widow with two young daughters, and then perhaps ill-treat his wife to the point where she would pass out of the picture entirely.

But on second thought I realized that this letter from Sally's mother reveals more than she probably suspected. For one thing, Sally's father didn't want her to go on that fatal night party that ended her young gay dancing days so tragically, and for another Sally's mother hasn't been any too successful in her management of the estate since her widowhood.

Arrangement Could Be Happy One. It is highly possible that Hugh sees that if she is allowed to go on making foolish investments there will soon be nothing left for anyone, whereas if he handles it wisely and sensibly they will all be better off. At 34 a doctor has reached an age to think of marriage and fatherhood, and although Sally can never go with him to movies or dances or banquets, it is highly possible that with her intelligence, devotion, sweetness she can make a home for him that will rival all these amusements.

If he is a charlatan he certainly hasn't betrayed it in his past history. He has a fine position and has already made himself a distinguished figure in his own field. He will give Sally a very ecstasy of happiness, and it seems to me her chances of successful widowhood are as good, or possibly better, than those of girls who have had everything their own way, who think of nothing but themselves, and who never have had the stern discipline that Sally has had.

Wants Entire Estate. "When he brought me his answer it was this. That he really loved Sally without being in love with her and was very fond of Betsy, too. Betsy is 19. He said he would marry Sally if I would make over to him my home and my properties and all the girls' properties and give him the complete management of the estate. That on no other terms would he consider the arrangement, as Sally must always have an attendant near her and she felt the responsibility too much otherwise. Sally and Betsy will inherit their share when Betsy is 25. I told him I felt deeply ashamed that I had betrayed my child by making him the original suggestion.

Even if Hugh turns out to be a scamp he will hardly be able to do anything crueller to Sally than did the weak mother who let a 19-year-old girl go out to night clubs, dancing with men she hardly knew, and to be brought home, when her own escort failed her, by a drunken stranger. Two-thirds of our traffic accidents happen at night; thousands of them happen when dazed, sleepy youngsters stumble out of road houses, stupid with poor food, bad drink, bad air, smoke and noise. The problem of Sally's life never would have to be solved today if a wiser mother had solved it four years ago.

LOST HER FRIEND

One day a lady entered a large establishment and asked to see some blankets.

After she had viewed a quantity of blankets and not made any purchases, the clerk said, "I am sorry, madam, but I am afraid we have no more blankets in stock."

"It's quite all right," replied the lady. "I am only looking for a friend."

"Madam," said the perspiring clerk, "if you think your friend is among the blankets, I would be very pleased to go through them again for you."

Who Is She?

"Briggs," said the owner of the car, "I found this long blonde hair on the back seat of my car. My wife's hair is dark."

"Yes, sir," stammered the chauffeur. "I can give you an explanation, sir."

"Explanation nothing!" was the retort. "What I want is an introduction!"

Virginia Yields Ice Age Relics

Blue Ridge Valley Seen as Scene of Early North American Culture.

WASHINGTON.—In a romantic Virginia mountain valley, at the foot of the lofty peaks of Otter, Smithsonian institution archeologists have uncovered what may be one of the oldest inhabited sites in eastern North America.

Long before the red men who met the first white explorers came into Virginia, three or four groups of tribes, each with a distinct culture, had dwelt in this hemlock-shaded shelter in the bosom of the Blue Ridge mountains, the evidence indicates.

Among them were men who made a type of chipped flint spear point, almost indistinguishable from artifacts found in the West in association with bones of long-extinct animals and in geologic strata laid down at least 10,000 years ago. The Westerners are believed to have lived in the continent in the closing days of the last ice age.

Workmen Uncover Village. Similar artifacts have been picked up all over the country, but always as solitary objects such as might have been dropped by wandering hunters. Probably Virginia has furnished more of these than any other Eastern state. In no case, however, has one ever been found in association with other remains that would indicate even a temporary bivouac of these ghostlike nomads who appear to have been the first Americans.

David I. Bushnell Jr., Smithsonian archeologist, the first to find Folsom points in Virginia, has kept up an intensive search all over the state, following every clue that came to his attention. His efforts were rewarded when workmen engaged on the picturesque Skyline drive, the new federal highway through the Shenandoah National park, uncovered an Indian village site with a complex diversity of artifacts.

When Mr. Bushnell investigated the site he found objects obviously from different cultures badly mixed up. But it was also apparent that they represented a very long cross section of North American history. The valley is an ideal camping site and presumably was much the same 10,000 years ago as it is today. Historically it has been a crossroads of mountain trails.

Mysterious People. At about the time of the settlement of North America by Europeans, the Cherokee and some Sioux tribes were there. Before them, the artifacts showed, the site had been occupied by the mysterious "Round Grave people," known chiefly from sites in Kentucky, where they were presumably among the earliest human occupants.

Mixed with the other objects were two Folsom points. Beautiful examples of Eastern Folsom points, Mr. Bushnell says, have been found previously in this section of southwestern Virginia.

Says Mr. Bushnell: "The variety of objects found at the site should be accepted as evidence that it had been frequented by man from the earliest times and beneath its surface may be hidden conclusive proof that makers of the Folsom points once occupied the valley."

An intensive study of the site is planned by Mr. Bushnell and by Dr. Frank H. H. Roberts Jr., Smithsonian archeologist who has excavated the site in northeastern Colorado where the greatest quantity and variety of Folsom objects have been recovered.

'Surplus' American Guns Are Given to Nova Scotia

WASHINGTON.—Several score of "surplus" navy guns will be made available to Canada for the fortification of Nova Scotia.

The four and seven-inch weapons, described as "extremely old," were taken from old warships and are considered not essential to the defense program. They are mounted on steel pedestals, but officials said they would be adaptable for sea-coast defense if set in concrete fortifications.

Their transfer was arranged by the United States-Canadian joint defense board.
