TB X-ray Mobile Unit Visits Sanilac

An X-ray clinic primarily for examination of active tuberculosis cases and check up of arrested cases was held in Sanilac County at Sandusky, July 28 and 29. The Michigan Department of Health's mobile X-ray unit, pictured here, took 165 X-rays in approximately seven hours.

The unit was purchased for an initial cost of about $11,500 by the State Health Department. Since October, 1940, it has been very effective in picking up early cases of tuberculosis around the state. It is equipped with dressing rooms for women. The films are smaller than the usual X-ray film but equally effective in detecting active disease in the lungs. Because of their size the cost is only 15 cents per film. The Sanilac County Health Department greatly appreciates the courtesy extended by the Detroit Edison Co. in arranging for the hookup of the unit in Sandusky and providing the power. A great deal of credit, the department says, is due Mrs. Robt. McKenny, Robert Terrell and the Rotary Club of Crosswell, Lyman Tenniswood of Speaker Township and Mrs. Ralph Norton and Rev. Richard Nyberg of Deckerville, who so willingly assisted in providing transportation for those who otherwise would have been unable to benefit from this opportunity.

He purchased the Tribune the same year and was its publisher until 1936, when he sold his interests and retired.

Mr. English served as mayor of Bad Axe six years and for several terms as a member of the school board. He managed the Huron County Fair two years. He also was a former Republican county chairman.

The deceased leaves his widow, two daughters, Mrs. L. S. Bisbee of Jackson and Mrs. W. J. Root of East Tawas; one son, D. V. English, of Bad Axe; a brother, Dr. W. F. English, of Resede, Calif., and eight grandchildren.

Lansing—As a holiday from pressing problems, meritorious and deserving as they may be we present a medley of Michigan news oddities, gleaned from home town newspapers and guaranteed positively not to solve a single thing!

Hamburger Train

Bill Brooks of Birmingham warns his customers at the door. "This is not a professional restaurant." After your order is taken, Bill disappears into the kitchen. On the U-shape counter are two miniature railroad tracks. The first thing you know, a whirling sound commences and from a tunnel emerges a shaft of light followed by a locomotive and two flat cars. The train stops in front of you. You grab your hamburger from a flat car. The train backs up and disappears into the kitchen.

Gay Nineties Epidemic

Future historians may record Michigan's summer as an era of "gay nineties" masquerades, a psychological escape from headline jitters.

Dexter citizens July 3 celebrated a centennial. Men grew beards. Women wore bustles. The famous DeWitt Clinton train of 1831 was brought to Dexter. Result: A village of 1,100 persons was visited by 60,000 persons. Perry Township, Shiawassee County, held a centennial pageant July 25 and 26 with covered wagons, old-time costumes, broad-rimmed hats.

Lawton held a "Gay Nineties" party July 26. Fifty business men grew beards and mustaches. Girls became "belles."

Mackinac Island July 24-26 relived history of 1820 with a pageant. Governor VanWagoner, as a territorial governor, wore a top hat.

Reclaiming the Desert

In Newaygo County is a 1,000-acre phenomenon, known as Big Prairie desert. Here is its story: Back in 1852 a group of settlers—James Barton, Alexander Dalziel, Wm. Barton and Benjamin F. Olney—located on a tract of prairie land in four townships.

Because it was a prairie, the land was all under the plow the first year. The surface seemed to be a dark loam. It required little labor to put it under cultivation. Many fine farm buildings were erected.

Late in the 30's sand began to tear up the beautiful farms, cover fences, undermine buildings. Farmers gradually vacated their lands.

Today an estimated 1,000 acres is a lifeless desert. Not a blade of grass can be seen.

Only the farm of the late Judge Barton was spared.

Today the Manistee National Forest Service is planting pine seedlings, installing snow fences to check the sand.

Wild Life Notes

Art Moote and Ted Ingalls, both of Munising, parked their car near Cusino and started walking down a trail. A half-mile away they came suddenly upon two bear cubs, each one about 90 pounds in weight.

Art and Ted then heard a growl. Behind them was the mother bear.

Wholly unarmed, the men started running.

"That is a good deer and rabbit country," related Art afterwards. "We caught up to and passed a dozen of the critters getting away from that bear."

Mrs. Wm. E. Mori, North Caton, Ohio, went fishing for trout in Lake Superior off Munising. Her catch: A 35-pound, 2-ounce trout, 45½ inches long.

Pop Bottle Starts Fire

From Three Rivers comes this tale: Fire destroyed the straw stack of Elmer Pulver near Corey Lake. The blaze is believed to have been started when the intense heat rays of the sun focused through a pop bottle.

Roller Skating Fad

"The roller skating fad, which flourished about 40 or more years ago, has struck the country again and is becoming a rage," notes Frank M. Weber, country editor at Atlanta, up in Montmorency County.

"Lewiston and Hillman have both had skating rinks for some time, and now Atlanta will furnish a place for you to break your neck if you want to."

Open air motion pictures is another small town vogue. Lester M. Rogers, country publisher at Camden (Hillsdale County) reports:

"It is estimated that 700 people attended the street pictures on Wednesday evening. There were seats for 500. Many bring their own chairs and others sit in their cars while many use the standing room."

Girls Run Own Farm

The red-headed Williams sisters—Arlene, Hazel and Belle—have run their own farm of 120 acres near Quincy since their father, Frank Williams, died in 1930.

Last year they raised 1,000 Leghorn chickens. They paint and repair their farm buildings.

Hazel teaches school in the winter.

Asked how she likes farming, Arlene said: "I'd rather do it than anything else in the world!"

Catch a Dog

Fishing on Six Mile Lake near East Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Berkert caught a three-pound bass on the first cast; a two-pound bass on the eleventh cast.

Suddenly the wind started and a bad storm threatened. The Berkerts started for shore, a half mile away, letting the plug troll behind the boat.

"Look at the beaver following us," exclaimed Mr. Berkert. Just then there was a "strike" on the line.

Scottie dog, "Wags," who had swum the half mile, had been hooked in the leg with the bass plug. "Wags" was promptly rescued.

Waits 43 Years

A. V. Brown, Spanish-American war veteran of Fennville, encamped in Arkansas for a week before he received his honorable discharge.

Two weeks ago he found an envelope in his mailbox containing a check for $8.40. "In full payment for services in the Spanish-American War." The check was signed by the Adjutant-general of Arkansas and was his wages for that week of service 43 years ago.

Wicked Big City

"We've STEPPED-UP PRODUCTION"

"More Water. That's the secret of our new success. Since they installed automatic drinking cups at our stalls we drink a lot more water.

"And it's doing wonders for us: We produce about 15% more milk. That makes the boss happy. It means bigger milk checks for him, and less work. He has plenty to do nowadays around the farm without pumping water for us."

Talk with farmers who are letting electricity pump water for their stock. They will tell you what a great help an electric water system, with automatic drinking cups, can be.

New Type Airship
Resembling a flying torpedo, a unique "Ray Ship" which has attracted governmental interest was recently unveiled by its inventor, Ralph A. Yell, a civil engineer of Los Angeles. It is a lighter-than-air craft and is propelled on a principle that combines the features of a rocket ship and the vacuum power of Mother Nature's tornado. When completed it will weigh three-quarters less than existing dirigibles, carry four times the load and travel 200 miles per hour with the maneuverability of a plane.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

New York's latest free show is the razing of the old Ninth avenue elevated railway from the Battery to the Polo grounds. Five crews are at work ripping up rails and removing ties. Next will come the cutting down of the steel pillars with acetylene torches. Then the spectators will get more thrills as it takes experts to handle the heavy sections without causing damage. That holds especially true as to the stretch along Greenwich street where the tracks extend over the sidewalks. Not only that but in the vicinity of Washington market there is an immense amount of trucking traffic, which has to keep on moving because foodstuffs are involved. The most spectacular bit of all will be the part of the tracks that makes a long bend at One Hundred and Tenth street. There the tracks are 100 feet above the street.

The high point of the elevated at One Hundred and Tenth street, used in the past by both the Ninth and Sixth avenue trains, was long known as "Suicide curve." Men and women, weary of life, paid their nickels, passed through the turnstiles, climbed to the rail and leaped. There was a time when those who destroyed themselves were so numerous that merchants in the vicinity called on the city to force the erection of screens or other protection. Their complaint was due to loss of trade because patrons stayed away through fear of being struck or witnessing some terrible sight. Lately, however, those who destroyed themselves at that point became so few that for more than a year before the line closed, there was not one case.

Despite the fact that most New Yorkers are in such a hurry to get places that they will change from a comfortable local to an overcrowded express to save a few minutes in the subway, there are still those who prefer the few remaining trolleys to faster forms of urban transportation. I speak from experience since, having moved nearer mid-town, I have been able to free myself from the subway unless time pressure is too great, and thus have been able to do some field work. To my surprise, the cars on the Broadway line, during the morning and afternoon rush hours, are almost as crowded as the subways. True, passengers are not packed in like sardines but they don't have any too much space. That's all the more remarkable in this city of haste because, during rush hours, the progress of a Broadway trolley, until Columbus circle is passed, is leisurely indeed.

As you undoubtedly know from experience, reading or information, New York's subways in rush hours are really mob scenes. It's a case of first come, first served and just about everybody seems to want to be first. So the aged, the very young and the weak are pushed aside or trampled. The fortunate few who get seats hold onto them. As a matter of fact, I've observed young men, comfortably seated, actually endeavoring to flirt with girls hanging over them on straps. That doesn't hold true on the trolley cars. Repeatedly I've seen men get up and surrender seats to women or girls or even some tottering old man. It is graciously done and the acceptance is just as gracious.

Another thing I've observed, while journeying between Eighty-sixth and Forty-third streets morning and evening, is that young folks are decidedly in the minority on trolley cars. Youth doesn't care for a stop at every block, and sometimes, when taxis or trucks get in the way, several stops to the block. So a preference for noise, confusion, discomfort, bad air and worse manners on the part of boys and girls. Sleeping a little later mornings and getting away from work a little sooner evenings apparently overbalances crowding and elbows-in-ribs. And I have yet to see a young motorist. All seem to be veterans of the control handle and airbrake.

Out-of-towners drop many nickels into trolley car fare boxes. To the visitor, especially one in town for the first time, the subways are terrifying or at least confusing. Rather than get trampled or lost, strangers sacrifice speed and if they can't afford taxis, board trolleys. Another reason for trolley preference, as explained to me by a gentleman from Troy, is that it is possible to see something while traveling about the city. I don't own a nickel's worth of Third Avenue Railway stock, but I'm free to say that riding up or down Broadway in mid-town brings more than a nickel's worth of sights, while all the subway has to offer in the way of scenery is dirty walls and pillars.

Chorus Cracks Down On Male Intruder

RENO NEV.—For its annual costume "She-Jinx" coed party of Tri Delta sorority of the University of Nevada, the girls this year wore costumes representing songs. When a male intruder was found in their midst, the "songs" joined in an "Anvil Chorus" and the youth was punished.

Wit and Humor

COMPANY COMES FIRST

An inspector of the highway bureau visited a farmer one day and informed him that his house would have to come down, as the state planned to widen the highway.

The farmer, however, proved very stubborn. "Nobody ain't agoin' to tear this house down," he cried grimly. "Why, it took me nearly six years to build it."

The inspector attempted to reason with him.

"Be sensible, man," he advised. "Use your head. How would you like to have cars, busses, and trucks running through your living room 24 hours a day?"

The farmer shrugged. "Let 'em," he drawled. "But I'll tell you one thing: When I get company, they've got to detour through the kitchen!"

Minute Make-Ups

By V. V.

A CRISP white veil does wonders to brighten a dark hat—and to flatter your summer complexion. If you've gone in for the pretty-pretty cameo effect in make-up, that wisp of white veiling adds a fresh note. Or if your skin is ivory tan, the sheer white strikes a smart contrast.

The first "o" in official does not have the long sound as in the popular radio mispronunciation "oh-FISH-ul." Neither should occasion be pronounced "oh-KAY-zhun." The initial "o" in both words should have the obscure "uh" sound as in the second syllable of sofa.

Correct pronunciations:
uh-FISH-ul
uh-KAY-zhun
(Capitals indicate syllables to be accented.)

Question: Is the "e" in economics long or short, and is the "o" of propaganda long or short? A. G.

Answer: Economics has two authorized pronunciations. The first and better choice gives to the "e" the long sound as in seek. In the second syllable the "o" is long as in toe. First choice: EK-ee-NOM-iks; second choice: EK-oh-NOM-iks.

The "o" of propaganda is not the long "o" of prologue; it has the "ah" sound as in proper. The long "o" is a Briticism. Correct pronunciation: PRAH-puh-GAN-duh.

INTELLIGENCE TESTS

We exhibit here a sketch of a sea serpent which was drawn from a description given by the sailor who claims to have seen the animal. After the picture was drawn, however, the artist realized that the description was probably wholly imaginary, for it includes a serious contradiction, and that the man who claimed to have seen the beast was unreliable.

Here is the description. Allow four minutes to examine it and tell why it is contradictory. "We were sailing south from Vancouver, and late in the afternoon of the second day out, during my watch, I sighted a strange animal well off the port bow. It was like a snake, having a somewhat enlarged head with two horns, and as it swam its head, neck and two curves of its body showed. The body was the same thickness all the way along, and as nearly as I could gauge I saw about half of its length. As the animal swam along it made hardly a ripple. "The whole length of the monster was a hundred feet."

Good Wall Finish
A good wall finish to use in an attic that is being made over into a bedroom is the use of a fiberboard insulating material for this purpose. It will make the room more comfortable as it will be insulated against heat and cold, and it will also make an attractive finish as it can be used in its natural color and is available in pastel shades that will form harmonious backgrounds for any type of interior decoration. It can be used on walls and ceilings.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Soviet Claims Strong Counter-Attacks
Stall German Drive in Three Sectors;
Japan Feels Weight of 'Crack Down';
British Get Invasion Threat Warning

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

SOMEWHERE-IN-ENGLAND—A four-motored Consolidated "Liberator," just received from the United States, is shown in flight over England. It was flown across the Atlantic by a crew composed of Americans, Canadians and English, and made the crossing in just over eight hours, according to the British. These ships have a wonderful record of service with the R. A. F.

NAZIS:
Real Trouble

Claims by the Russians that they had not only stopped the Nazis along the entire 1,000-mile front, but that they had taken the offensive at points, asserting penetrations as deep as 100 miles had been made, featured the Russo-German war news.

There were many observers who believed the Russian claims to be fairly accurate, pointing at many admissions from Berlin tending to show that the high command was dissatisfied with the progress being made.

This dissatisfaction was expressed in complaints against the difficulty of the terrain, the bad character of the Russian roads, and the strong resistance of the Russian troops.

Using these statements as at least an explanation and a background for belief in the general failure of the German offensive, observers sought to find the answer in Russian tactics and Russian preparedness.

They pointed out that in the last war, Russia had an army of about 800,000, poorly mobilized, well-led but not enthusiastic for fighting. This force was hurled into the eastern battlefield without good preparation, ran into highly trained opposition and was defeated bit by bit.

This time, apparently, the general Russian plan was to place a good-sized portion of the huge army on the long front, fight a series of rear-guard and testing actions to discover where the main Nazi punch would be directed, and to keep the most excellent forces in reserve.

The German drive apparently was hitting in three general directions, Leningrad, Kiev and Moscow, with the heaviest attack in the center, with Smolensk the focal point.

It was around Smolensk that the severest fighting occurred, and it was there that the German effort bogged down most seriously. For better than two weeks there was no real report of advance, and finally came the Moscow claims that the Germans had been hurled out of their trenches and were gradually giving way.

BRITISH:
View of Scene

Churchill, expressing the British viewpoint of the Russian scene of action, saw in it a German failure to execute a complete blitzkrieg, but warned that Britain was dealing "with a dangerous maniac" and claimed that the Nazis, failing against Russia, were thinking of turning to a British invasion attempt.

Demanding that the defenders of the islands get themselves "into concert pitch" by September 1, the British leader seemed to attach especial import to that date, a war anniversary for Hitler.

Churchill did not boldly announce that the British had definite information of a planned invasion attempt, but the British viewpoint evidently was that the Russian defeat or victory would not necessarily settle the war.

The final scene of the war, it was plain the British thought, would be fought in the west, either on British soil in repelling the invader, or in a British reinvasion of the continent.

There were many rumors of action in other fields. In North Africa the British heard that the Germans were removing troops, and leaving the campaign to the Italians, who might be expected, once the removal was complete, to fall back as disastrously as they did before.

The situation was extremely tense in Turkey, following the British occupation of Syria, because it was reported that the Germans were massing huge forces in Bulgaria, presumably to move across Turkey into the Caucasus region, and attempt to encircle the Ukraine.

GASOLINE:
Curtailment

Gasoline consumption under mandatory control, with a view to reducing the volume of eastern states' demand to meet the oil transportation shortage moved a step nearer when Secretary of the Interior Ickes recommended that more than 100,000 service stations in eastern states close from 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. every night in the week.

This was the first direct move on the part of the government to limit sales of gasoline. Rationing may follow, it was indicated by some sources.

Ickes said he was continuing his appeal for a voluntary one-third cut in consumption, hoping that the station-closing recommendation, "plus the voluntary curtailment will be enough to put us across."

JAPAN:
A Winner?

The Japanese situation was highly confusing to the lay mind, for the invasion of French Indo-China, even with the consent of Vichy, seemed plainly an overt act, and one which should merit the strongest possible punishment from Britain and the United States.

Indeed, this was the way it all started out, with concerted action by the U. S., Britain, Australia, Canada and the Dutch East Indies. However, as the days went on and as the Japanese continued to land military forces in Indo-China, there began to be dispatches indicating that the adverse action would be much milder than had been anticipated.

In fact, British sources said that oil shipments to Japan might continue; the Dutch said they had not "yet" abrogated their agreement with Japan for 1,800,000 tons of oil a year; Washington hinted that the "appeasement oil" might continue to go to Japan as long as she did nothing more than invade Indo-China.

Yet there were some things on the other side of the picture, because other British high authorities said "wait and see what happens" on Japanese reprisals; the Dutch announced that if the break came, Japan need never expect to get East Indian oil, for the Dutch had made preparations to destroy all wells and refineries instantly.

The question was whether Japan was the winner or the loser by her move into Indo China, and there was evidence on both sides.

NIPPON:
Behavior

If future action against Japan was to depend on the behavior of the Nipponese, there was little immediate evidence that this behavior would be mild.

Almost immediately there was a serious "incident" when Japanese bombers attacking Chungking paused directly over the U. S. gunboat Tutuila, part of the Yangtze river patrol, and dropped some bombs, which damaged the vessel, though there were no casualties.

The ship was anchored in the so-called safety zone across the river from the Chinese capital. One bomb, according to a report from Shanghai, fell only eight yards from the gunboat, caving in a part of the ship's stern and blowing some equipment off the dock.

Also in the Shanghai dispatches came word that the Japanese army had authorized the seizure of American property in North China. Actual seizure of some properties had been made, the consulate reported to Washington.

Some of them were the oil properties at Swatow, Chefoo and Tsingtao and a tobacco plant at the latter town. There were reports of other seizures at Tsinan and Mukden. Some occurred in Manchukuo, Japanese puppet state, but some were in occupied territories of North China proper.

'So Sorry'

Lieut. Com. W. A. Bowers, U. S. N., is in command of the Gunboat U. S. S. Tutuila, which was damaged by Japanese bombs during an air raid on Chungking, China. The Tutuila was lying near the U. S. embassy at Chungking when the bombing occurred. No injuries to U. S. seamen were reported. Before an official protest could be made, Japanese official apologized for the incident.

U. S.:
Turning Tide

The frank statement by Secretary of the Navy Knox that an American destroyer in the Atlantic had dropped three depth bombs when it believed it was about to be attacked by a submarine focused attention on the "battle of the Atlantic."

It brought by Senator George the statement that he believed the U. S. naval patrol of the sea lanes as far east as Iceland appeared to have been of such assistance to Britain that she was slowly gaining the upper hand in the effort to keep the ocean free for the passage of supplies.

At about the same time however, Germany announced the sinking of 19 vessels in one convoy, totaling 116,000 tons. Yet the Nazis admitted that the sinking was accomplished only with the greatest difficulty.

The German dispatches, in describing the armed escort of the patrol, admitted that there were many armed ships, in fact, claimed the sinking of one and the damaging of another.

Partly due to American intervention, Churchill told the commons, the "battle in the Atlantic is moving progressively in our favor," and this sentiment was quoted and echoed by Senator George.

From the turn of events, however, the senator drew the conclusion that there would be no attempt at invasion of Britain this year. He cited also the difficulty of the German invasion of Russia as one of his reasons.

In this premise of the Georgia senator, however, Churchill hardly seemed to agree.

HOPKINS:
To Moscow

The flight of Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's lend-lease administrator and personal representative to warring capitals, caused intense interest here, because it was supposedly portending the sending of lend-lease aid to Russia.

Hopkins was scheduled to confer with Stalin in person, also to talk with leaders such as Molotov, Litvinov and others.

His departure was a closely guarded secret until he had arrived safely, and indeed it was a dangerous flight, as the Nazi warplanes were occasionally flying over Moscow.

JOINT:
Tax Returns?

One of the most dubious pieces of tax legislation found its central fight to circle about whether or not husbands and wives should be forced to file joint returns.

Few prognosticators in Washington could be found willing to bet that the battle would end one way or the other.

The tax bill came out of committee with the joint returns mandatory, but only after the stiffest sort of a fight, and with only the slightest sort of margin in the committee voting.

One of the first floor battles was to get the administration leaders to agree to open the matter for floor discussion during debate, and in this skirmish the foes of mandatory joint returns won out.

It was finally agreed that an amendment will be offered to remove the mandatory joint return clause, and that this may be debated on the floor.

SABOTAGE:
Canadian Strike

A three-day "sort of sit-down" strike in Canada's biggest war industry, the aluminum works, brought from the government the statement that sabotage was suspected, and that thorough investigations would be instituted.

The government formally called the strike a "suspected case of enemy sabotage" and promised that arrests would be made.

There's nothing mysterious about the way advertising works.

It's like the salesmen who go from house to house looking for customers.

Advertising does the same job on a larger scale.

It's quicker--reaches more people--at a lower cost per call.

In other words, it's a time saver, which means it's a money saver as well.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Pamela Wants to Be Popular

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

There's one girl and one man who are breaking my heart.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

PAMELA wants to be popular. She works downtown in a lawyer's office; she maintains a bachelor-girl establishment with another girl; she is 26, pretty enough, smart above the average, but not popular.

"My manner isn't shy, because I take good care it shan't be," writes Pamela. "But way deep down in I'm shy. I know men like my looks, but a lot of them are shy, too, I guess—except the married ones. The only attention I've ever had is from married men, and that doesn't mean much. The younger men in our office, and I could fall in love with at least three of them, will stop at my desk to dictate a letter, ask me if I've seen this picture or that, recommend a good murder story if they see a book on my desk, and then pause by some other girl's desk for three or four words that drive me perfectly mad with bewilderment—and I suppose jealousy. I mean they will say to some really less-attractive woman, 'Fun at that crazy restaurant last night, wasn't it?' or 'Crazy about the new hairdo,' or 'How about Tuesday, honey?'"

Too Tense Among Men. "Why don't they do that to me? But of course I know why. I know I'm stiff, awkward, stupid with men. I clear my throat and get red and say things I don't mean to them. My clothes are right, but they're just a little TOO right. Clean, neat, dowdy, correct. When I ought to shut up I giggle and chatter and when I ought to break a silence I can do nothing but swallow and stammer. But girls like me, and I know I amuse them, and as I say married men always seem to understand me and I can talk to them."

"Now, what I can't understand," the letter goes on, "is the sort of girl who attracts men and always has lots of attention. They seem to make no effort. Brainless little fools who can't spell are trotting off for lunch with the nicest men in the office; murmuring and blushing and having a glorious time."

Resents Being Overlooked. "There's one—I didn't mean to get this far, but I may as well admit it—there's one girl and one man who are breaking my heart. The man is my immediate boss, but in a corporation as enormous as this that doesn't mean he's so very high. But he's sweet and big and clean and smart and I like him terribly. The girl is named Lola, she's an uneducated, noisy little thing with badly dyed hair in a wild mop, but whatever she is or isn't he likes her, and she can actually play fast and loose with the dates he tries to make with her; maybe she can go tomorrow night, maybe she can't. If he marries her she will wreck his life, leave him in a few years and take his child with her, and it seems as if I couldn't bear it. Why WILL men fall for girls like that, and never see other girls who really have background and education and code and the love of home and family behind them?"

Well, that's an old, old problem, Pamela, and until men solve it Reno will continue to be flooded by pretty, empty-headed little wives who think nothing of breaking vows and ruining children's lives.

Girls' Uneasiness Affects Men. Your predicament is not a new one, either. You say your manner is not shy, but shy or not it is awkward and uneasy, and that infects men instantly with something of the same discomfort. Perhaps you think too much of the impression you are making on them, and too little of the innate qualities that your manner represents. Charm is an elusive thing to describe, because it means very real qualities, it means heart, soul, mind, character, training, self-discipline. With enough of these things any woman is equipped to face life and its changes confidently; she KNOWS she will find friends, win the man she wants, make a success of herself.

PROBLEMS OF A STENO

Both single and married men pay her attentions during working hours. Pamela is puzzled by reactions of men in the office where she works. She writes Miss Norris to ask if she says the right things to become popular with certain men. And she wonders why girls less attractive than herself, receive more attention from the most desirable men. Kathleen Norris answers Pamela with her usual helpful advice and clarity of thought for any social problem.

Cultivate Charm. But in your case I wouldn't worry about these casual and temporary conquests. Ignore them for the time being, and devote yourself to the cultivation of charm. Get interested, genuinely, in life, and life will get interested in you.

Charm means personal freshness, pleasantness of manner, alert understanding and sympathy for everyone about you. It means that when you are sitting at your desk, idle for a moment between tasks, you are half-smiling; it means that you keep up with your reading on current topics and keep away from tactless controversy and loud-voiced expression of opinion. If you happen to be made of crusader stuff that is of course something else again; crusaders rarely have charm.

To attract the man you like to you make no visible effort. But whenever you get a chance to speak to him have something to say that will immediately draw his attention from the fact that he and that rather standoffish Miss Brown are actually talking together. Years ago a certain shy little member of my family used to start off to dances after asking me seriously: "Tell me three things to say to my boy."

Think of three things to say to yours. If it is only, "Weren't you caught in that downpour yesterday?" or, "Is this new time schedule going to mean you have to take an earlier train from Pelham?" or "Did you hear the nice news of the Smith baby?" it will answer the purpose. And if, after a monosyllabic reply you have to begin again, plunge in courageously. "My sister and I were in Brooklyn when that storm started, my mother lives over there. You know, in the Library neighborhood. We live in town, but Mother expects us every Saturday—" and so on, easily and carelessly, just as if you were talking to a woman, until he picks up the conversation again.

Act Friendly—Unembarrassed. If the shy woman, who feels stiff and tongue-tied with men, could only remember that talking to a newly met man is just like talking to a new woman acquaintance, her whole manner and attitude would change. Girls like Pamela never dread meeting other women; they know that their approach will be friendly and unembarrassed. Try that same friendly lack of embarrassment upon the man you want to attract, Pamela; try it on all men. And at the same time deepen your own character into kindness, interest, understanding of those about you, and by the infallible magic of charm you will not only get your man, but everything else you want in the world.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

Cat Tale: A gentleman who detests cats paid an overnight visit to friends who have a large cat as a pet. All during the evening, the man eyed the cat and the cat eyed the man. With true feline wisdom, the cat evidently sensed dislike and kept as far away from the visitor as possible which, of course, was quite satisfactory. The guest was also quite well pleased that when he went to bed the cat was nowhere in sight. Having made himself ready for the pillow, following custom, he annointed his head with a sweet-smelling preparation that keeps the hair in place, and lay down to pleasant dreams. Hardly had he passed out than he was awakened and there was the cat up on the bed licking his hair. Needless to say there was immediate ejection. But as soon as he was again asleep, the cat came back. And so it went the entire night. Therefore, should he make another visit he either will omit hair oil or see to it that the cat is put out before he retires. Or still better, he can learn to love cats, stop using hair oil and lock the door at night.

New Start at 73: There was an auction of antique vases, mosaic tables, a French marble and bronze clock, a wonderful old Italian sideboard and other objects of beauty and value. There are many such auctions in New York. But this one happened to be personal possessions of Alice Foote MacDougall. You have heard of her. A dozen years ago her success story was a saga of America. Starting with a little coffee shop in a railroad terminal, she built her business into a restaurant chain with receipts of almost a million and a half dollars a year. She wrote books and delivered lectures. She imported china and coffee and those side lines brought in another half million. One of the leases she signed called for a million dollars. Slight and not five feet tall, at 73, with the proceeds of her treasures she's looking about to make a new start.

New Yorkers: At a little gathering in the Artists and Writers club the other evening after "The Corn Is Green," the conversation veered around to birthplaces. Miss Mary Brooks, who had reached New York via San Francisco, was born in Kansas City; Mrs. Richard Crandall, in Montana; Alvin Goldstein, New York correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, in Tennessee; and Mrs. Goldstein in St. Louis; May's birthplace was Michigan and mine Ohio. Then Joseph Evans, Sunday editor of the Herald Tribune, announced that he was born in China. That would have been a climax except for one thing. In the party was a real New Yorker, Dick Crandall, picture editor of the Herald Tribune, who was born on Ninety-sixth street.

Revival: Certain stories, told as truth, but which never can be traced to source—the dead man in the subway, the little old woman who disappeared are well-known examples—periodically bob up in New York. The latest to make its reappearance is the woman who bought the 39-cent string of pearls in a department store basement. When she got home, she found the catch broken and took it to her own jeweler for repairs. He informed her the pearls were worth at least $30,000. When she had recovered sufficiently, she took them back to the store. The clerks thought she was crazy but eventually she reached the store head. From him, she learned that the pearls were worth much more than $30,000. Evidently his wife had dropped them in the basement and a clerk had put them on the counter. The woman received a heavy reward. That's the gist of the yarn but a good story-teller can go on for half an hour.

Vanished: A young woman, whose research work causes her to make frequent calls to the information department of the New York Times, asked a question that couldn't be answered at once. The man who took the inquiry said he'd call back the next day. Days passed and the young woman didn't get her information. So she made an investigation and learned that for convenience, her telephone number had been written on the wall of the phone booth. And painters had come in one forenoon and painted the booth.

End Piece: Recently a new "candy" appeared in the local markets. Made of maltose, egg yolk, powdered carrots and vitamins A, B and D, if eaten before meals it is said to destroy any longing for mashed potatoes and heavy desserts. It may do that but I wouldn't call it "candy."

Injections For Hernia Need Truss

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

DURING the last World War, there was a large number of recruits found to have hernia. They had the choice of undergoing an operation or dropping out of the army. Those that underwent an operation were in a hospital three to four weeks, remained home another three weeks, after which they were usually allowed to go on full duty.

What about the injection method of treating hernia? The injection method was in bad standing with the medical profession at that time owing to the fact that it was being done by other than physicians or by physicians without sufficient surgical training. In addition to this, the fluid used to sclerose or harden the tissues to prevent hernia coming through was not always satisfactory.

Ninety Percent Cured.

Today, some surgeons report 90 per cent cures in carefully selected cases, while the lowest percentage of cases selected for the injection method is now about 30 per cent, 90 per cent of which obtain a cure.

What type of hernia is suitable for the injection method? While surgeons are not in complete agreement on what are suitable cases, it is agreed that—

- hernias that have occurred recently,
- hernias in thin individuals,
- those in which the hernia can be readily pushed back into the abdomen, and
- those who are older and would not undergo operation too well can be called suitable cases for the injection method.

Truss Necessary.

Dr. Lazarus Manoil of New York city, in Archives of Surgery, states that, in addition to a safe and effective "hardening" substance, the use of a well-fitting truss is absolutely necessary. The truss must be worn day and night during the entire time the injections are given. Two or three times weekly for six to eight weeks. After injections have been completed, the patient must remove the truss at night but wear it during the day for four to six months.

New Treatment for Varicose Ulcers

ONE of the mean ailments often found in hospital clinics is varicose ulcers.

Varicose ulcer is due to weak veins. Just as one can inherit strong blood vessels—arteries and veins—so can one inherit weak vessels. Certain work, such as standing, causes varicose veins and ulcers, but Dr. Josephus C. Luke, Royal Victoria hospital, Montreal, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal, points out that the tendency toward varicose veins is always present in these cases.

In order to save time of patients, nurses and physicians, Dr. Luke reports upon a method of treatment which combines most of the good points of other methods of treatment. This treatment consists of tying off of the great surface vein of the leg high up near the groin and then injecting a hardening solution down the vein in the lowest part of the leg.

Dr. Luke had performed 146 such operations upon 128 patients during the previous 16 months, 88 being for uncomplicated varicose veins and 58 in which a varicose ulcer was also present. These operations were performed under a local anesthetic—patient not put to sleep—in the outpatient operating room, the patient returning home immediately after the operation.

What were the results following this method? "The healing of the long-standing ulcers following this method is phenomenal. The pain is relieved immediately. Recent ulcers heal in a week and long-standing ulcers in about six weeks." The patient is allowed to walk about at home for about a week and a strapping, applied following operation, is worn for about one month after the ulcer is healed.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Two or three hours after I have eaten I get a burning pain in my stomach. The only relief is more food or liquid. I'm always getting shooting pains from my side to my stomach. My doctor told me that I had a touch of ulcer.

A.—As you get the pain two or three hours after eating it is likely that your doctor states that you have or are getting an ulcer. Diet and alkalies are the usual treatment.
