A foresighted man who saves his money for a rainy day has something to fall back upon when the drouth comes.

"She is one of those persons," a local young man was heard to say recently in speaking of his girl friend, "who sets off a diamond ring."

--0-When a man resorts to extravagant and untrue statements to present his news it's a pretty good sign he isn't sincere and doesn't believe in his representations. A worthy cause, in which one sincerely believes, doesn't require any misrepresentation to present it.

If I had known twenty-five years ago as I know now, a local man was heard to say yesterday, how little chance there is to strike it rich in oil stocks and mining stocks, I would now be able to retire. There is some satisfaction, however, in having reached a point where such things are no temptation to me.

-0-An order has been issued by the OPM prohibiting the processing of any raw silk except for defense industries. The order, it is estimated, will effect 170,000 workers engaged in the manufacture of silk hosiery and silk fabrics. This is but the beginning. Similar orders are to be issued from time to time. as scarcity develops on many items now in common use. The whole resources of the nation are gradually being drawn into the defense program. From now on these cuts will be more frequent and more drastic. There aren't enough raw materials to supply peace time and defense needs, and defense needs are going to come first. Our normal way of business and life is going to be upset in many ways during the coming year.

mercial purposes is obviously a necessary and worth-while industry.

Furthermore, the federal and state governments have recognized the public value of preserving large tracts of timber. The map of Michigan is generously "green" in the North.

If the economic future of the Upper Peninsula lies in the development of its tourist resources, and you will find many persons today who preach this gospel, then it must be apparent also that scenic resources should be conserved if not restored for the future welfare of this region.

Let us cite an interesting example.

Automobile Tourist

With the Cheboygan editor as a guide, we explored by automobile through the forestland region of both cut-over and virgin timber, all lying just south of Lake Superior between Munising and the Soo.

The modern tourist travels by automobile, for the most part. If he goes by train, he usually supplements the trip with side trips by motor.

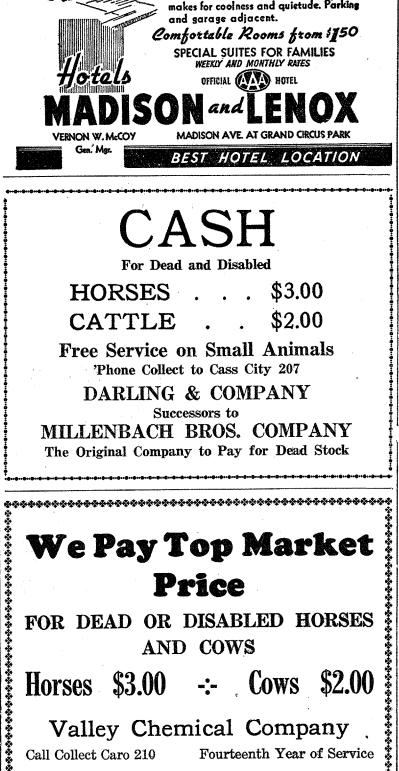

Consequently what he sees from his automobile-except for lakes and streams-constitutes 90 per cent of his outing enjoyment.

North of Newberry and south of Lake Superior lies a wild timber country. You go through miles of land where stumps of pine trees, three feet from the ground, stand like an army of cemetery tombstones. You traverse through blueberry plains which the Indians burned frequently to provide pruning of plants by fire.

You go through virgin timber, some of which is being logged right to the road's edge and which leaves a desolate wasteland, ugly to behold. Traveling is a slow job, and you are lucky to make 15 miles an hour. Incidentally, we passed automobiles from Detroit and North Dakota, loaded with tourists seeing the sights.

Strips of Timber

To safeguard against this desolation of scenery along touristtraveled highway, Iron County pi-oneered in Michigan by acquiring during the early twenties a 446-foot strip of timber along U. S.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Roosevelt-Churchill Meeting at Sea Brings Joint Declaration of War Aims Seeking 'A Better Future' for World; Strengthen Vichy-Nazi Collaboration

(EDITOR'S NOTE-When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

From their historic meeting at sea came an eight-point joint declaration of war aims and a plan for "a better future for the world." (See below: HISTORIC MEETING—A Declaration.)

HISTORIC MEETING: A Declaration

After a secret meeting at sea, President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain, issued and signed a joint declaration of general war aims.

This declaration in its introduction explained that two men, "being met together, deem it right to make known certain common principles in the national policies of their respective countries on which they base their hopes for a better future for the world.' The declaration then went on to outline the sort of world that would be sought following the end of the war. In its eight point text, the message expressed in a general way the foreign policy of the present U.S. administration and from the British point of view it was most concrete statement of war aims yet disclosed by that government. In the opening point of the declaration it was declared that neither the U. S. nor Britain sought "aggrandizement, territorial, or other.' In the next and following points the ideals expressed included: the right of all peoples to choose their own form of government; a system of world trade working to the benefit of all nations: a desire for "fullest collaboration between all nations in the economic field"; "after the final destruction of Nazi tyranny" hope was expressed for a peace in which all nations could exist in safety and "traverse the high seas . . . with-impossible situation of France, was making a complete surrender to Germany's demands, hoping for and out hindrance"; and finally, a plea for the abandonment of the use of betting on an eventual German victory, and at the same time exforce between nations of the world.

COLLABORATION: Vichy-Nazi Pact

Coming at a moment when the Russo-German war was in its most critical stage, and at a time when the Japanese situation was at a sort of peak crisis, the Vichy-Nazi rapprochement, ending in an upset of the government's policy of limited collaboration, and putting the highly anti-British Darlan practically at the helm of French affairs was a sensation indeed. It was one of those sensations of the type that "we knew all along was going to happen, but it was still a major shock when it happened." One was forced to look at the matter both from the British-American viewpoint, however, and from the viewpoint, largely a matter of one's imagination, of Marshal Petain himself. Preparatory articles had been

This historic document and meeting, when they were announced, ended two weeks of rumors about the possibility of the men meeting. No sooner had the President left Washington on what was announced to be a short vacation cruise before the speculation and guessing began to sweep through this country and England. Churchill was said to be absent from London on pertinent 'war matters.'

For five days no direct word as to the President's whereabouts was available to the U.S. public. Then came word that an announcement was to be made.

It was reported that at the meetings (there were several conferences) high ranking army and naval officials of both countries were present. From the White House came a statement that they had examined "the whole problem of the supply of munitions of war.

DRAMA: In Washington

It was high drama, that passage of the bill which makes the service of selectees, guardsmen and regulars 18 months more than they signed up for.

The closeness of the vote, 203 to 202, was part of it, but the suddenness with which it came, the bitterness of the press and forensic fight on the measure, gave the battle its punch and severity. The climax came when the calm voice of Speaker Sam Rayburn announced the totals, a victory for the administration by one vote. This was met by a tumult in galleries and on floor of almost indescribable excitement.

It had been one of those things that no one could have predicted, and in which both sides felt sure of victory until the totals had been announced.

As the count grew late, low and apprehensive whistles were heard from the members of congress as the vote balanced and then unbalanced each other.

The vote found the widest split of delegations in many a year. There were 182 Democrats for the measure and 21 Republicans; 65 Democrats and 133 Republicans against, 14 paired and 14 not voting.

This vote did something that legislation seldom does, in giving each Russian fliers still continued to representative a keen realization of raid Berlin. the value of his single vote.

pecting that when the debacle and reorganization of Europe might come, France would get some crumbs from the conqueror's table.

History Will Tell That was the realistic view of the situation, and the one most generally accepted in Britain. More charitable was the thought that Petain, working for France in a country already vanquished, and with Laval and Darlan, both friendly to the Nazis, at his side, had no other course than to surrender and those. so viewing his act expressed the hope that Petain was secretly wishing for a complete resistance to German occupation of French colonies and bases by the Weygand forces Whichever might turn out to be the factual reason, the eventuality was the same, for few doubted but that the French fleet, barring British preventive measures, perhaps aided by the United States, would be placed at Hitler's disposal for some move in the western Mediterranean. Perhaps, it was said, full collaboration was a prerequisite to an allout invasion attempt on the part of Germany, and, if successful, a complete German victory. That, in sum, was Petain's dream, say the British, when he addressed his people over the radio and said: "Frenchmen, I have grave things to tell you!"

RUSSIA: Second Phase

'The Nazis' big second push on the eastern front was producing results in territory gained, but it still was debatable as to whether Russian resistance was being shattered, or whether the pattern of Chinese resistance to Japan was being repeated in another sector of the war. Russia admitted gains of considerable importance on the northern and southern fronts, with Germany making the border claims, one asserting that a territory of approximately 35,000 square miles had been nipped off in the Black sea region. They asserted their panzer divisions had driven down to the Black sea coast past Odessa, trapping within this territory some large numbers of Russian armed forces which, they asserted would be annihilated in due course of time.

the senate appropriations commit tee made emergency history by slashing more than a billion and a quarter dollars from the army appropriation bill, the first defense appropriation amount that has not passed with a "rubber stamp" regularity.

The committee, headed by Senator Glass of Virginia, made the cut by unanimous vote. The cut amounted to 17.3 per cent of the amount asked, a substantial slice indeed.

The house already had passed the bill on July 28, and had sent it to the senate with the inclusion of an item of $1,347,000,000 for tanks, and for anti-tank and anti-aircraft guns. Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson had personally urged the inclusion of this item. It was, he said, "essential to the army if the United States was to move into armed conflict."

The senate committee, having slashed $1.347,000,000 by disapproving this item, then turned around and added $112,000,000 to the bill. thus making the net cut $1,235,000,-000.

The main facts about the requested appropriation were kept from the public as military secrets, but it was known that the amount asked was for equipment for "over and above" an army of 3,000,000 men. In other words, this number of men could be equipped with tanks. anti-tank and anti-aircraft guns through appropriations already O.K.'d, but the committee turned thumbs down on the additional equipment to go beyond the 3,000,000man figure.

The figures called for 4,600 medium tanks; 1,500 light tanks, and that the "biggest item" was for anti-aircraft guns, and that 1,000 of these were to have been of 4.7 inch caliber.

CHANNEL:

Plane Attacks

Once more the English channel was the central scene of air warfare with the British attacking German points in ever-increasing regularity and ferocity, while the Nazis, stung into action by the long series of raids on Berlin, came back across the channel with a renewal of severe air attacks.

Previously, for many days even before the start of the Russo-German war, the Nazi attacks had been by single planes or small groups.

HOT WATER whenever we need it

There is always plenty of hot water for the William Muth family, on their farm in Monroe County. They have a 50-gallon automatic electric water heater.

Hot water is a necessity in any home. And automatic electric water heating is the ideal method: It gives you an assured supply of piping hot water with no attention whatever.

Mrs. Muth says: "Electric hot water is a big help with the washing, cleaning, washing dishes and the many cleaning jobs around our farm home. Every day it saves me countless steps and drudgery."

Investigate electric water heating for your farm home or milk house. Your dealer will be glad to supply complete information. Or stop in at any Detroit Edison office.

CASS CITY CHRONICLE-FRIDAY, AUGUST 22, 1941.

The domestic hint comes from J. M. Moore, poultry extension specialist at Michigan State College.

Out of more than 11 million birds that will be in farm and commercial laying flocks this fall and winter, Moore estimates seven million of these will be pullets, young birds less than a year old. Other pointers offered by Moore indicate a farm flock operator ought to select well developed pullets that carry plenty of healthy yellow color in shanks and beak Uniformity of size is a good flock indicator.

FSA Advisory Council Appointed

Ten Tuscola County citizens will partment of Agriculture, John Mc-Durmon, county supervisor for the Farm Security Administration, has announced.

The advisory council consists of a three-member RR (rural rehabilitation) committee. a three-member farm debt adjustment committee, and three council members-atlarge who do not serve on any of the committees. The appointments were made by Roswell G. Carr, state director of the Farm Security Administration at East Lansing. Committee members are:

RR Committee-George Foster, farmer, Fostoria; Henry Lane, farmer, Fairgrove; Mrs. Wilma Rondo, housewife, Caro.

Farm Debt Adjustment Committee-George Foster, farmer, Fos-
