CHRIST'S CHARGE TO PETER

LESSON TEXT—John 21:15-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.—John 15:13.

Breakfast for a hungry fisherman—that is what our loving and thoughtful Lord had provided on the shore of Galilee. He wanted to talk to Peter, but He knew this was needful first. There are some folk who think that following Christ is a doleful matter, devoid of every pleasure. Jesus never taught any such thing. He attended weddings and dinners even in the homes of those despised by men. But remember that He always did it for their spiritual good, not merely for His own enjoyment; and that He always brought the gathering up to His own spiritual level, rather than stooping to any worldly or wicked standards.

Here we find Him with a glowing fire upon which fish is broiling, and with bread ready for these hungry men. It was just like Him thus to meet in most delightful and satisfying fellowship those who serve Him. Draw up to the fire, Christian friends who are standing afar off. You may be so timid that, like the disciples, you will not dare to call Him by name (v. 12), but if you will come, you will find that the precious fellowship will soon warm your heart.

With the meal over, Christ turned to Peter and in their conversation we find the latter required to

I. Face Responsibility (vv. 15-17).

With kindly persistence our Lord brought Peter face to face with his responsibility of full-hearted devotion to Him. Before service can be rendered there must be a right relationship to the Lord.

Three times Peter was asked to declare his love for Christ. Such a public confession was quite in place, before the man who had thrice denied his Lord was restored to a place of leadership. The words "more than these" (v. 15) indicate that Jesus was asking of him a high measure of devotion. It is no more than He has a right to expect of us.

The conversation after breakfast that morning was a very profitable one. One is reminded, by contrast, that few of our mealtime discussions are very useful. Many (perhaps most) after-dinner speeches and conversations yield little profit. Here is an occasion when such was not the case. One wonders whether we would not be wise to take the suggestion and turn our thoughts and those of our dinner guests to spiritual things. Surely it should be so among Christian friends and in a Christian home.

II. Feed Christ's Flock (vv. 15-17).

We review the same verses to point out that an expression of love to Christ means nothing except as it manifests itself in service. Like Peter, we are to be diligent about feeding His flock, whether they be the young and inexperienced lambs, or the mature sheep of the fold.

We tend to specialize. Even in soul-winning some give themselves to child evangelism while others reach only adults, and would hardly think of dealing with a child. True it is that we have varying gifts, and one does one type of work better than another. But let us avoid over-specialization. Every needy soul is a challenge to us as we present the gospel.

The word "feed" should be stressed. Here again the church has frequently failed. Men and women are won to a decision for Christ, and then forgotten. Sheep must be fed if they are to grow. A teaching ministry must accompany the evangelistic effort. They belong together, and to neglect either is to fail, at least, in that measure.

III. Follow Him to the End (vv. 18-24).

Endlessly ingenious are the devices of Satan. He who had sifted Peter like wheat (Luke 22:31) and had rejoiced in the weakness of his denial of Christ, now saw him stepping out into victorious living. He heard the prophecy of the martyr death of Peter. So he put into his heart a question. Why should he suffer? What about John? What was the Lord going to do for him?

When our enemy cannot trip us up with temptation to personal sin, he resorts to the device of jealousy. Many promising Christian workers have become useless because they have taken their eyes off Jesus and put them on the persons and work of other Christians. Doing a work which was difficult and unnoticed but very important to God, they have felt the urge to quit because someone else seemed to have the easier task and receive more recognition. The answer of Jesus in verse 22 plainly states that it is not the place of one disciple to judge the course of life of another, nor to gauge his own devotion to Christ by another's place or service.

The word of Christ to us is the same as to Peter: "Follow me." We have all we can do to live our own lives in a manner well-pleasing to our Lord.

'Blanket' Makes Better Concrete

The resistance of poured concrete to weathering has been found vastly improved by using a liner on the forms before the concrete is poured. Laboratory tests showed that a sand blast gadget loaded with steel grit could wear a hole a quarter-inch deep in a minute in normally poured concrete, but with the new liner only a barely perceptible mark was made in the same time. The secret is that the lining absorbs surface water and air bubbles and gives a better, smoother finish.

German and Italian Prisoners Not Too Unhappy

The brighter side for enemy soldiers is to be taken as war prisoners, as is apparent in this picture. Shown on the left are smiling Italian prisoners who realize that the war and all its horrors are over for them. They are on their way to a prison camp for the duration. On the right, German prisoners from a U-boat don't seem to be too unhappy over their plight. Perhaps they are thinking of food, shelter and comparative safety.

DEATHS.

Mrs. Amos Hoffman.

Mrs. Amos F. Hoffman, 77, passed away Friday, April 23, in Pleasant Home Hospital, following an illness of two weeks. Mrs. Hoffman has been poorly for some time.

Anna M. Reader was born in Ontario, Dec. 20, 1865, and came with her parents to Grant Township when she was 15 years of age. She was united in marriage with Amos Hoffman and for a short time they lived at Manistee, then returning to Grant Township, they purchased the farm now owned by Mrs. Philip Moore. Some years ago they moved to Marine City where Mr. Hoffman died two years ago. After her husband's death, Mrs. Hoffman bought the home on West Houghton St., Cass City, where she and her sister, Mrs. Jennie Crawford, have since lived.

The remains were at the Munro Funeral Home until Monday noon and then taken to the Baptist Church where services were held at 2:00 p. m. The Rev. Frank E. Smith, the pastor, officiated and burial was in Elkland Cemetery.

She is survived by a son, G. Monroe Hoffman, of Ashtabula, Ohio; a stepson, Glenn Hoffman, of Long Beach, California; two brothers, Frank Reader, of Cass City and Albert Reader of Crosswell; and two sisters, Mrs. Jennie Crawford of Cass City and Mrs. Alfred Maharg of Gaytown.

Mrs. Hoffman was a member of the Marine City Methodist Church.

Mrs. James Spencer.

Many old neighbors and friends gathered at Novesta Cemetery Tuesday noon, April 27, when burial services for Mrs. James Spencer were conducted by Rev. Frank B. Smith, pastor of the Cass City Baptist Church.

Mrs. Spencer, 61, passed away in Charlevoix Feb. 20, but because of weather and road conditions, the body was placed in a vault there until this week.

Mrs. Spencer, the former Delia Tibbitts, was born Oct. 3, 1882, in Michigan and was married to Jas. Spencer. For many years, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer lived south of Cass City, going to Wolverine about seven years ago and later moving to Charlevoix where Mrs. Spencer passed away following an illness of two years.

She is survived by her husband; one son, Wayne Spencer, of Flint; two grandchildren; a sister, Mrs. Josephine Congdon, of Caro; a brother, Wm. Tibbitts, of Hillman; and a niece, Mrs. Harland Robinson, also of Hillman.

Mrs. Harvey Hyde.

Mrs. Harvey Hyde, 91, passed away at 4 a. m. April 27, at her home in Union City. Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p. m. at New Haven Center. Mrs. Hyde is survived by her husband.

Mr. and Mrs. Hyde were formerly residents of Cass City, leaving here about 20 years ago. Mr. Hyde was associated with the Elkland Roller Mills while residing in this community.

Riding a Skeleton

Winter sports enthusiasts in Sweden enjoy the thrills of a ride on a "skeleton," a small sleigh for one which attains the speed of a large bobsleigh. Sweden also has a sleighing version of the bicycle built for two, the kick sleigh. Young men take their sweethearts on these, standing behind on the long runners and kicking out into the snow to provide locomotion.

RIGHT OF WAY

The man who was applying for a summons against the people next door was very angry.

"What's the trouble?" asked the magistrate's clerk.

"Every night this week they have been banging on the wall and yelling at me till two o'clock in the morning."

"Dear, dear! And does the noise keep you awake?"

"No," explained the applicant.

"but I can't enjoy my piano-playing with all that noise going on."

It Does Sound Dumb

Bill—My granduncle is different. He's changing his coal burner for an oil burner.

Jack—But I thought there was supposed to be an oil shortage.

Bill—Yeh. But you know the old saying "There's no fuel like an old fuel."

Ride Her Cowboy

Tillie—Pick me out a nice horse. Stable Boy—Ever ridden a horse before?

Tillie—No, I haven't.

Stable Boy—Here's just the horse for you—never been ridden before. You can both start together.

GO ONE BETTER

Smith—Can you see that fly over there on the roof?

Jones—No, but I can hear the roof creak as he walks.

Please Call Again

Boss—Did anybody call while I was out?

Steno—Yes, a man came in and said he wanted to kick you.

Boss—And what did you say?

Steno—I said I was sorry you were out!

Not So Surprising

Mr. Jones—And I saw him treating his wife in a way I wouldn't treat a dog.

Mrs. Jones—Oh, my dear! What was he doing to her?

Mr. Jones—He was kissing her.

These Are the Days

Mr. Smith—Do you think they'll ever find a substitute for gasoline?

Mr. Jones—Well, I'm trying one out right now.

Mr. Smith—You are! What is it?

Mr. Jones—Shoe leather.

Quite a Difference

Hub—Quite a difference in the weather, eh?

Eub—Yeah, makes me feel like a two-year-old.

Hub—Do you mean a horse or an egg?

Who Me? Not Me!

Mrs. Brown—Where are you rushing to?

Mrs. Blue—I've got to hurry and buy a lot of things before the unpatriotic people start hoarding them.

But It's Pleasant

Mother—I'm wondering about that young man who comes to see you every night. What are his intentions?

Daughter—I don't know, mother. He keeps me in the dark.

GOING TO COME

Policeman—Hey, you just left here a minute ago.

Driver—Yeah, but I went the wrong way and came back to turn around.

Sleep Walking

Teacher—What do you mean by walking out of my lecture yesterday morning?

Stude—I think I was moved by what you were saying.

Before It's Too Late

Bill—Love's certainly grand. My feet are on the ground, but my head's in the clouds.

Tom—You'd better pull yourself together.

Working It Off

Nit—You know Smith has it easy. He lives off the fat of the land.

Wit—What is he, a farmer?

Nit—No, he sells reducing machines.

Ain't It the Truth

Accountant—Just be a good citizen and pay your taxes with a smile.

John P. U. Blic—Yeah? Unfortunately they always insist on cash.

Home Loan Department

Mr. Smith—Why I wouldn't cash a check for my own brother.

Mr. Jones—Well, you know your family better than I do.

Dates Need Stuffing

Private—Did you fill your date last night?

Sarge—I'll say I did. She ate everything in sight.

No More Funs

Slow—How do you get such a healthy tan?

Fast—I guess it's just my sunny disposition!

$77,575 Bonds Sold up to Tuesday in April Campaign in Elkland and Novesta.

How High Will It Go?

Why buy war bonds this month? Governor Harry F. Kelly indirectly gave a powerful answer to the question when he depicted Michigan's post-war problems in an address at a midwest regional conference of the Council of State Governments at Chicago. The future picture, not a happy one, is about as follows:

Approximately 400,000 breadwinners unemployed as Michigan industries swing back to peacetime production.

An additional 100,000 service men back home, awaiting an opportunity to work now that victory has been achieved.

At a time when wages and prices are at inflationary levels and when there are more jobs than there are workers to fill them, a war bond represents insurance against hardships during the post-war readjustment period. It also is one of the best business investments in the world, netting substantial interest to the holder.

"All right," you may say, "but why should I buy bonds as post-war insurance against unemployment? Isn't it the responsibility of the government to keep me from starving?"

And right then and there you run smack into one of the controversies existing today. It is a revival of the old "state's right" issue which once was the exclusive property of the Jeffersonian Democrats but which is now, strangely enough, being proclaimed by such Republican governors as John W. Bricker of Ohio, Thomas Dewey of New York, Dwight H. Green of Illinois and Harry F. Kelly of Michigan—just to mention a few.

Beneath the fears being voiced that the federal government will try to subsidize all human needs in some glorified post-war scheme of Utopia is a significant trend on the part of Republican governors to present the old issue of state's rights in modern language: "Bureaucracy vs. Rights of the Individual." It offers an inkling of what may be the key political issue of the 1944 presidential campaign.

Governor Kelly believes that.

Motorists May Charge Fares
Massachusetts car owners have gained an added incentive to "share the ride" with issuance of an executive order by Governor Saltonstall which permits private drivers to collect fees for transporting workers to their destinations. Any automobile, of either standard or station wagon type, carrying no more than seven persons in addition to the driver, may be classified as a "Workman's Livery Automobile," though no special registration is required.

Capital of Tunisia
Tunis, capital of Tunisia, is also the chief commercial port of the French protectorate which is becoming a leading North African battle-field. The city, less than ten miles south of the ancient harbor of Carthage, and about 40 miles from northern Tunisia's important naval base of Bizerte, is located at the end of a shallow lake through which has been cut a deep, narrow, six-mile-long ship channel connecting the city with the sea.

War Coincidence
Three brothers—triplets—left Toledo to go to war, enlisted in the navy, were all assigned to the Pacific fleet, all suffered wounds and were all honorably discharged. The three, Leonard, Danny and Frank Szymanski, are working together now on a jeep assembly line in a Toledo auto plant.

Cold Hands From Anxiety Cold hands, traditionally regarded as an indication of a warm heart, are more often the danger sign of tension and anxiety. About nine out of every ten persons show this signal, fingers growing cold with emotion when the air temperature is 70 or above. These are the observations made on 47 persons at a New York hospital. In all except two of these cases finger temperature dropped notably when they talked about things troubling them. The drops were 10 to 24 degrees Fahrenheit. Normally the fingers, in an ordinary warm room, are in the low nineties.

When in Rome The ancient Romans put a restriction on use of perfumes because such things had come to be used so excessively.

Patron Saint Needed for Arbor Day? 'Johnny Appleseed' Good Candidate

If ever America adopts a patron saint for Arbor day, which will be observed on different dates in several states this spring, that saint undoubtedly will be the picturesque figure who went up and down the land in the early part of the Nineteenth century as a personification of the spirit of Arbor day—"Plant trees!" Jonathan Chapman was his name, but the early settlers knew him as "Johnny Appleseed" or "Appleseed Johnny."

For Chapman made it his life work to plant fruit trees, especially apples, and the settlers who came into new territory and were welcomed there by the sight of trees laden with fragrant blossoms invariably exclaimed, "Well, Johnny Appleseed has been here before us!" Born in Springfield, Mass., in 1775, Johnny settled on a farm near Pittsburgh Landing, Pa., after the Revolution and there planted an apple orchard. To emigrants who stopped at Pittsburgh he invariably presented a package of apple seeds and urged them to plant the seeds as soon as they had found their new homes in the West. Since there were not enough seeds on his place to supply all the pioneers who passed, he went from farm to farm to buy more.

Johnny's former friends regarded him as somewhat "queer" but the emigrants were glad enough to receive his offerings. And as he extended his wanderings into Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, as far west as Missouri—planting seeds wherever he went, the settlers who benefited by his activity didn't care whether he was "queer" or not. "Bless Johnny Appleseed!" they said when they found little apple, peach and pear seedlings, grape vines and berry bushes in the "nurseries" which he had established in the forest, protected by brush fences to keep away deer and other grazing animals. For they knew that Johnny had planted the seeds there for them and that they were welcome to dig up the seedlings and replant them, when they had established their homes, to start an orchard.

Moreover, Johnny was a welcome visitor in their log cabins for he always carried a Bible and some books from which he preached and read to them as they sat before their blazing fireplaces in the evening. He practiced his teachings of humility and kindness, too, for he never killed any living creature for food. He carried a kit of cooking utensils, including a mush pan, which he sometimes wore for a hat. Usually, however, he wore a broad-brimmed black hat, but this was about his only conventional article of clothing. He was clad in a ragged shirt which, loosened about his waist, served also as a traveling bag in which he carried various articles. He usually wore two or three pairs of trousers, one over the other so that the holes wouldn't show, and his cloak was a common gunny sack with holes cut for the head and sleeves. Most of the time he went barefoot, in winter as well as summer.

No wonder the settlers called him "queer"! But the Indians said "He has been touched by the Great Spirit." So he went among them unharmed—even by the most hostile tribes. And many a time he learned of their intended raids upon the white settlements and carried a warning to the whites in time for them to flee to their forts or get ready for the invaders.

Johnny's Odyssey ended in 1847 when he died at the home of a friend near Fort

Farmers' Problems Now Exceed Others'

He Must Supervise His Three Main Jobs

The farmer's problems in this war are much more difficult than those of most other people, says Roy E. Moser, extension economist of the Massachusetts State college extension service. This is due mainly to the fact that the farmer must finance both his job and his home at the same time. The majority of people work for someone else and their jobs are financed for them. On the other hand, the farmer's opportunities to be of service equal those of any other group.

The greatest production of all time which is planned to fill needs that have been determined in advance: That is the American farmer's answer to the challenge of war.

The production of essential foods is equally as important as the production of planes, guns, and ships. And it will continue to be important long after the roar of battle has stopped.

Mr. Moser outlines three main jobs of farmers in the present emergency.

The farmer's first and most important job is to make the farm produce its maximum of essential foods in spite of labor shortages, lack of machinery, and other problems.

The farmer's second job is to get his debts in shape by reducing present debts to a safe basis. Moser points out that there is no conflict between the reduction of debts and the war bond program. Income paid on debts does not compete with the war bond effort.

His third job is to invest in war bonds when debts have been reduced completely or to moderate amounts. It is imperative that farmers as well as other citizens eliminate unnecessary spending and loan these savings to the government by investing in war bonds.

Agriculture in Industry

By FLORENCE C. WEED

Cereal Straws

"The time is coming when the farmer will become the supplier of the materials used in industry." This forecast was made by the late Francis P. Garvan, first president of the Chemical Foundation Inc.

Cereal straws are a fine example of the industrial possibilities of farm products. For years, they have been used in making paper and more recently in making fiber board. Most of the 84 million tons of straw is produced in Kansas, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Wheat straw is the most important industrially and about 575,000 tons are used for paper and paper board each year. Wheat straw yields the best quality product although some rye and barley straw may be combined with wheat without altering the quality. One problem is that of collecting it economically from individual farms.

Straw has a long history as a paper making material being first used in Germany in 1765. In the United States the first straw paper was made in 1828 by William Magaw of Meadville, Pa. The industry still continues in this country and science has developed several improved pulping methods to lower costs and improve the product.

Rural Briefs

Moderate but definite improvements were apparent in the food situation of the United Kingdom from the spring of 1941 to the outbreak of war in the Pacific, according to British nutritionist reports.

The use to which land is put and the treatment it receives are among the primary factors governing farm income, agricultural experts point out.

Concluded from page one. Michigan will be confronted with the worst unemployment in its history; that the industrial centers, such as Detroit, will become critical zones of unrest and despair; that the financial load of helping workers to tide over during the 12-month readjustment period will be too much for the state government alone to shoulder.

In the Michigan industrial centers today are literally hundreds of thousands of families from other states.

"Few people realize the magnitude of job losses—sheer unemployment—in our state in the period from 1929 to 1939," said Governor Kelly.

"In 75 of the 100 months between May, 1929, and December, 1937, the number of unemployed gainful workers in the state was never less than a quarter of a million. Unemployment reached or exceeded the half-million mark during 25 of the 100 months."

It is the conviction of Governor Kelly that the post-war period will probably find a close parallel in the recession of 1937-38. In June, 1937, the employment index was at the highest point since the lush days of 1929; by October a major decline had developed, bringing the index down 20 points in seven months.

And yet, as the governor points out, although the year 1936 was the best year from the standpoint of employment in a 10-year period, the number of unemployed workers in Michigan was ten-fold the amount for the best month of 1929. It also emphasizes the fluidity of Michigan's mass production industry and its relation to relief. Michigan's relief increase, for example, was "nearly 10 times that of Pennsylvania" and "five times that for the country as a whole".

What is the state doing to meet this post-war challenge?

Among the leading accomplishments of the 1943 legislature was the creation of a post-war reserve fund of fifty-million dollars, to which the state appropriated twenty million dollars from its surplus, and the allocation of eight million dollars for a post-war construction fund for Michigan schools, colleges, hospitals and other institutions.

The legislature also reorganized the state planning commission to increase its effectiveness in dealing with the unemployment problem.

An aid during the post-war unemployment period will be compensation payments available to idle workers from Michigan's one hundred sixty million dollar reserve. Governor Kelly believes that this fund may reach the two hundred fifty million dollar mark if war production continues at the present rate for another two years.

As Governor Bricker of Ohio sees the situation, state governments must meet the post-war responsibilities in rebuilding post-war America "or others will move in and do the job," no doubt referring to Washington. It is Bricker's belief that federal subsidies will not cure economic ills and that Washington should confine its activities in the spending field to supervision over the states' use of federal funds.

Governor Green of Illinois emphasizes that state governments must plan today for the post-war era and that Illinois was establishing a long-range program to provide for the return of more than 600,000 men the state has sent to war.

Governor Dewey of New York says that the farm problem exists today chiefly because the federal government "never saw the problem—never acted on it until a few weeks ago—never reversed its crop restriction program in time."

As the Owosso-born New York governor put it, "the misfortune obviously arose as a direct consequence of the siphoning of all responsibility and power into the hands of the National government."

Dewey sums up the state's rights issue as a choice between a reactionary totalitarianism, which is a super-bureaucracy of the national government, and the rights of the individual for "the free government of a free people."

Governor Kelly pleads for "the return to first principles," an old-fashioned philosophy that private capital and private initiative must be freed of hampering restrictions "if full employment is to be our goal."

This is the opposite of the creed of ambitious social planners who seek to remake our world through government control and direction.

When the Michigan state executive, a World War hero, reminded us in utter frankness that Michigan's unemployment and relief loads were acute during pre-war years and inevitably will return when the peace is declared, he provided a most effective incentive for the purchase of war bonds today.

Besides being the patriotic thing to do, buying a war bond is also a most sensible investment against the rainy days that are bound to come.

Food Spoilage

"Flat sour" in canned goods is a condition of canned vegetables in which the appearance is sound and firm, but the product proves to be mushy and has a sour taste and odor. It is not accompanied by gas, and is often not detected until heated. Much of the spoilage of asparagus, peas, beans and corn is flat sour.

Liberates Iowa Zoo Inmates
The problem of feeding and caring for the more than 50 animals in the Ledges Park zoo under war conditions, has led the Iowa state game commission to abandon this popular display and liberate the inmates. The zoo is largely populated with animals found injured in the wilds and turned over to conservation officers.

Fire and Weight
Fire does not decrease the weight of all things which it burns. The ashes of magnesium, for example, are heavier than the metal itself.

Eye Color Fades
The eye-color of an elderly person may fade, just as hair turns gray.

From Oil to Automatic Coal
In areas where fuel oil is being strictly rationed many former users of oil are changing over to automatic coal. The conversion is simple for those who had the gun-type oil burner. With these five steps the changeover can be made: (1) disconnect and remove oilburner, (2) take out brick inside, (3) position stoker with retort in center of furnace, (4) install firebrick hearth, and (5) connect electrical controls.

When Ragusa, now Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, was annexed to Austria in 1814, all the aristocratic families of this city, which had enjoyed the status of a sovereign state, were so humiliated that they decided "not to breed slaves" and entered into a compact to become extinct. So their daughters entered convents, their sons never married and, eventually, with the exception of two families they achieved the death of their class.

Where Will Money Come From?

People ask: "Where will the money come from?" to reach the thirteen-billion dollar objective of the Second War Loan. The answer is simple. The people HAVE the income. When we produce munitions or peacetime goods, or anything else, we likewise produce income. For every dollar of production, there is a dollar of income.

The problem of war finance boils down to this—if individuals and businesses receive more income after taxes than there are things produced for them to buy, then excess funds arise. The government deficit is matched by the combined surplus of everybody else. This surplus should be put into Government securities to wipe out that deficit.

Kathleen Norris Says:

When You Call the Tune

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

Helen begged him to help her get a divorce from Harry and legitimize her present position. Dick, newly made a lieutenant commander, would not hear of it. It might break into a scandal that would injure his career.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

THE story of Helen van Dyne is a most unusual one. Like all the rest of us she has carefully made her own troubles; built herself the cross she has to carry. But in her case it wasn't the ignorance, stupidity or mere laziness that some of us can claim as an excuse; Helen deliberately broke the law, and now she has to pay for it.

Eighteen years ago she was a beautiful woman of 22, married to the wrong man. There wasn't any question of his being the wrong man; he did not provide for her, he drank, he annoyed and humiliated her with what seemed actual pleasure, and he openly said he didn't like her. She had been married three years when she met the man who, under happier circumstances, would have been the ideal husband for her.

Dick had everything. Charm, gentleness, manner, intelligence, success. He had been a young naval officer in the last war, but had afterward resumed law studies and was a judge in a remarkably short time. Helen suffered all the agonies of frustrated love for a while, and then she and Dick left town, established themselves in a western state and prospered. They now have a boy of 16 and a girl two years younger. When an occasional old friend encountered her, Helen always said that she had divorced Harry and married Dick, but as a matter of fact there was no marriage. When she asked for it, Harry flatly refused to consent to a divorce, and as Helen had already left him and gone to place herself under Dick's protection, she couldn't with any dignity insist upon it.

Happy Home and Children. Dick and Helen have a lovely home, friends, a prominent position in the small town where they live. The children go to high school and are preparing for college. Richard Junior happens to be a proud and dignified boy; he has literary ambitions and likes to refer to his ancestry, his good blood, his Americanism. Pamela is frail, fine, sensitive and both are devoted passionately to their parents.

Last February Dick quite suddenly rejoined the navy, and was sent overseas. Helen had little time to argue the situation with him before he left, but she did beg him to help her get a divorce from Harry, and legitimize her present position. Dick, newly made a lieutenant commander, would not hear of it. It might break into a scandal that would injure his career. Rumors would reach their own town and, above all, it would hurt the children. The only thing to do was to go on as they were, until some day Harry died, when they could quietly be married.

Helen has not heard from Dick since early in September. He is missing, perhaps dead, and if he doesn't come back her affairs will be hopelessly complicated. For there is a rich old grandmother, as proud as Richard Junior, who is presently going to leave a good deal of money to Dick's children. But Helen is still Harry's wife under the law. Should Harry turn up he could wreck their lives. Helen knows it and agonizes over it.

"I have not had one moment's peace of mind for months," she writes. "We had drifted along comfortably for so long without ever suspecting that anything would bring up this old trouble; no man and woman ever felt themselves so truly man and wife as we did. We never thought of the irregularity of our relationship; we had decided once and for all that ours was a truer marriage than hundreds that are approved every day. I suppose we always intended to straighten it out, but the years went so fast and were so happy that nothing seemed to be missing.

PAYING THE PIPER

The "Helen van Dyne" of this letter called the tune 18 years ago, and now she is protesting against the terrible price she must pay the piper. For he will collect, whether she likes it or not. It's easy to say you are willing to take the consequences of an unconventional act. It's not quite so simple as all that, because you can't decide what the consequences are to be and when you are to be confronted with them. Sometimes they threaten the very happiness for which you once risked all.

Divorce Too Late. "Now, to go back to the old town, hunt up Harry, and make arrangements for a divorce without the children suspecting that something extraordinary was going on, is utterly out of the question. And even if I did, what would it accomplish since Dick is not within reach? The slightest suspicion of it would break Pam's heart, and shame my proud, handsome confident boy. They would lose faith in their mother forever."

"When Dick and I first decided to take this step 18 years ago," the letter goes on, "we faced the consequences—or thought we did, squarely. We even spoke of a possible child, and I remember saying that if we had one he or she would be a little gipsy who wouldn't worry about conventional oversights. We felt that we were strong enough to rise above the law, and to us both it seemed preposterous that an irresponsible, idle, impecunious and improvident man like Harry should have any power over our lives."

"But Dick Junior is NOT an unconventional gipsy type of boy, and my little Pamela is the clinging gentle type, and I don't dare think of what the truth would mean to them. What is the right way out, one that will save us all?"

I'm not answering this letter, because as far as I can see, there is no answer. When and if Dick Senior comes home after months, it might be possible for Helen to persuade him to make things as right as they can be made now. If he doesn't come back, perhaps Helen could confide in her mother-in-law, ask the old lady to make the children of her son her heirs.

Husband Always a Threat.

To find Harry now wouldn't do much good because Helen, even if divorced, couldn't be married to Dick until Dick returns, and unless Harry has somewhat improved he might seriously threaten her peace of mind, and betray her to her children.

So that the only thing to do is go on this way for the present, and hope that time—time that brings about so many unexpected solutions to our human mistakes and problems—will offer an opportunity sooner or later to straighten out all this.

It is one thing to call the tune at 22, and feel quite willing to face the consequences, and it is another to pay the piper when he comes around with his bill. Real consequences have a maddening way of being much more complicated.

DEFORD NEWS

Obsequies of F. W. Towsley—

Felix W. Towsley departed this life on April 20 at his home. He had been quite poorly for the past two years, but his last illness was of only a week's duration.

He was born near Port Huron, at Kedarhin Beach, Oct. 31, 1863. After graduating from school at Fort Gratiot, he chose the life of a sailor and for a number of years sailed the Great Lakes. All ports on the lakes were familiar to him. In 1916 the family moved to a farm near Deford which has been the home since that time. Mr. Towsley was a member of the Deford Methodist Church, a fine neighbor and the splendid floral offering showed the esteem and respect of his many friends.

Funeral services were held on the afternoon of April 24 in Deford Church by the pastor, Rev. W. H. Tirrell.

The remains were borne to their last resting place in the Ellington Cemetery by Walter Kelley, Chas. Kilgore, Herman Rock, Cecil Lester and Elmer and Emory Vandemark. Two vocal selections were given by Harley Kelley and Warren Kelley with Mrs. Walter Kelley at the piano.

Let us all ask ourselves, 'Shall we be more tender with our dollars than with the lives of our sons?' — Secretary Morgenthau."

Steel That Makes the Ships!

Great Lakes ore carriers, almost as long as the greatest battleship, carry 10,000 tons of iron ore each trip—in 1942 these ships carried a record-breaking total of 90,000,000 tons of ore to the nation's steel plants. Today, the American ship-building industry is the biggest purchaser and user of steel.

to die from injuries received fighting the blaze.

He is survived by a nephew and niece, Clifton and Carol Heller, of Howell.

The following letter was received by Wm. Ball from Hugh S. Webb, major of the Michigan State Troops:

Pfc. Vern Howard Heller enlisted in Co. L, 33rd Inf. Regt., Michigan State Troops, Nov. 8, 1942. Being past the age where he could enlist in the regular forces of the United States and desiring to serve with troops in the present emergency, he took the only remaining course.

He was intensely patriotic and thrifty, putting every cent possible to the purchase of U. S. Bonds and Stamps, even collecting bottles, selling them and putting money received in stamps.

His service was honest and faith-ful. He went about his duties with a quiet efficiency that was an inspiration and example to the younger and newer members of the organization. He had earned the affection and respect of every of-ficer and man in the organization.

He was a veteran of the last war serving in the 25th Field Ar-tillery Regt. of the 5th Division from May 23, 1917, to Aug. 9, 1919. He served both in combat duty in France and with the Army of Oc-cupation in Germany.

Fire Alarm Bomb

A timely invention is a fire-alarm "bomb" which, when in contact with a flame or heated to 160 degrees F., fires and amplifies the report of a large blank cartridge that is fol-lowed by another warning explosion within a few seconds. Requiring no wiring or electrical connection, it provides an effective method of de-tecting fires in key positions in large homes, warehouses and industrial plants.

Rubber From Bones

A process to make synthetic rub-ber from the blood, bones and other waste materials of livestock has been developed by a Minneapolis chemist. Ralph A. Stark said a lab-oratory experiment which went wrong years ago led him to the dis-covery of a substance he calls "neo-flex," which already is being pro-duced in commercial quantities. The rubber substitute, being manufac-tured in a paint-making plant into sandblast stencils for use in cutting granite, will "stand two times as much abuse as rubber," Stark said.

Marines Decorated

During World War I members of the marine corps received over 1800 decorations for bravery.

Extra Room for War Worker

The federal government is foster-ing a plan to house war workers in existing structures. If you have sold your car because of the tire and gasoline restrictions, why not con-vert your garage into living quarters for defense plant workers? Panels will insulate the walls and give an attractive interior finish which can be any of five popular pastel colors. These panels can be applied right to the studs of the garage walls.

Lightning Rods

Lightning rods are so constructed as to attract a bolt of lightning to the rod from the house or the metal attachments on the house. The rod lets the discharge pass away by checking the vibrations. Because heated air offers a good path for lightning, chimneys, as well as metal fixtures on the roof, are the most vulnerable parts of the house to lightning, and should be connected to various conductors surrounding the house.
