Ripley Company To Locate Factory Here Next Month

Their Products Made Mostly from Wire Screen and Screen Cloth

The Ripley Manufacturing Co. McLellan Hatchery on East Main street from M. C. McLellan and has announced the intention of establishing a manufacturing industry there where articles made mostly from wire screen and screen cloth will be produced.

Extensive alterations and improvements to the building will be made by Mr. McLellan and the renters are anxious that they be completed by June 1 so they may commence the installation of their machinery and equipment. The company's files show that they have been engaged in making 1,400 different articles in recent years.

The company was formerly located in Wayne, Mich., and moved to Croswell several years ago because of labor conditions near Detroit. They find there is not sufficent labor available in the Croswell area and for that reason plan to establish a plant here as well as continuing the one in Croswell. Much of their employees' time is used in assembly work and a large percentage of the factory force will be women.

Find Method of Saving Beauty

Delicately Tinted Flowers May Be Preserved in Natural Colors.

WASHINGTON. - A process by which the most delicately tinted wildflower or rainbow hued crustacean may be preserved indefinitely in its natural color has been developed by an agricultural department scientist in Washington, D. C., and specimens are now on display at the national museum.

This preservation method, created by G. R. Fessenden, specialist in plant preservation, is the "first time the fugitive colors in nature have been preserved," according to Dr. Waldo Schmitt, head curator of biology at the museum.

Until now scientists using alcohol as a preservative have contended with faded, yellowed, and often distorted specimens, many of which would disintegrate at the slightest iar. There was no way to depict faithfully the color of a flower, the effects of plant diseases, or the ravages of pests, because the ordinary preserved specimen is brown or discolored. Color photographs or paintings were the only means of reproducing nature's colors.

Stay Fresh Looking,

Preserved by the Fessenden process, a cross-section of a strawberry remains red and fresh looking. Autumn leaves retain their incomparable colors, a tiny, brightly colored hermit crab looks just as it did when picked up at the seashore in 1939, and a plague ravaged alfalfa leaf shows its wounds in meticulous detail, in clear plastic cases safe from dust, mildew, insects, or mechanical injury.

The process begins with the use of a mild preservative in concentrated form, Mr. Fessenden explained. The fresh specimen may either be treated by putting it into the preserving fluid while still fresh or it may be pressed carefully and dried before the preservative is applied. It is cured, preferably under refrigeration, so plant enzymes may be rendered inactive.

The specimen is then dehydrated by the use of a desciceant, or drying agent, to remove any remaining water. Then it is put into its final mount by encasing it between plates of moisture resistant plastic.

Keep Indefinitely.

"Indications are," says Mr. Fessenden, who began work on the process in 1928, "that when sealed into the plastic in such a way that ail 'free moisture' is excluded, preserved specimens will retain their appearance indefinitely under indoor lighting conditions." The success of the Fessenden method opens many possibilities for the future. Science professors may demonstrate to their students by actual example the findings of the past. County agents may show farmers precisely how to recognize the beginnings of costly and dangerous crop plagues in time to avert them. A rare or unique orchid or even a goldfish may be preserved in its original beauty for posterity.

A poison ivy leaf, preserved in its disarmingly bright garb, will serve to educate nature lovers who unwittingly gather the treacherous foliage to enhance their wild bou-

Chemical in Tissue Acts Like Figurative Match

NEW YORK, N. Y. - A chemical which acts like a figurative match to start the fire of fever in a living body has been discovered at the Fearing research laboratory, Brookline, Mass.

The chemical is called pyrexin, from the Greek word meaning fire. Evudates of inflamed tissues from human beings, inoculated into a rabbit's ears, raised their temperatures about two and a half degrees, Fahrenheit. The pyrexin chemical is obtained from the protein portion of inflamed tissue discharges.

Whether fevers of all kinds may be due to this body fire lighter is not yet clear.

Use Want Ad in Search For Grandparents for Kid

PITTSBURGH. - A four-year-old boy came in from play one day and said to his mother:

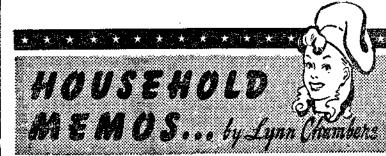

"Mommy, why can't you buy us a grandpa? Other boys have them." The question, put to a mother whose parents and whose husband's parents are dead, led recently to this ad in a Pittsburgh newspaper:

"Wanted: Lonely older couple to act as grandmother and grandfather to a little boy past four and his little brother past two, who have no grandparents. We believe this arrangement will bring added happiness to all concerned."

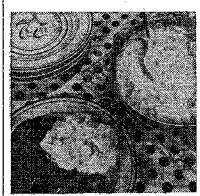

Say New 'Safety' Flak Is Used by Germans

LONDON. - The Germans are using a new type of self-destroying anti-aircraft ammunition, RAF Typhoon pilots reported.

The ammunition explodes in the air if it fails to find a target within a certain range, they said. It was encountered during an aerial scrap over Germany and was apparently designed to destroy itself in the air in order not to cause damage by falling to the ground.

Thrifty Lunches Use Vegetables, Noodles, Macaroni

Potatees are easily creamed it they are cooked first, seasoned with onion and then blended together with smooth, tasty sour cream.

When points are low and luncheon presents itself, most of us are in a quandary. Are there foods to serve that are point-free and appetizing? Yes. there are, and I'm giving you several suggestions today which will make luncheons an easy matter to prepare. I'd suggest that you make use of as many soups as possible for this mid-day meal. Use canned or dehydrated soups, if you're rushed for time. If you have bits of leftover vegetables, puree or dice them fine and add to a thin white sauce.

Hearty sandwiches go well with soups. You'll like cottage cheese, liver sausage, eggs and peanut butter combinations. A bit of crunchy celery will provide vitamins and minerals or crispy salads will add texture contrast to the bowl of soup and sandwich luncheon.

If the men folk come home for lunch and expect heartier fare, there is the macaroni family which you can put to good use. Use fresh or home-canned vegetables for flavor and color contrast with spaghetti, noodles and macaroni, add a wellseasoned sauce, and luncheon is all ready to be served.

"Give us this day sur daily bread'

That ageless prayer of fighting men and now that anguished prayer of starving millions must not go unanswered.

Bread? Yes. Beans? Yes. Michigan beans! Yes.

In untold volume, Michigan beans are answering that prayer now. They must continue to answer it all through next Winter and Spring. Michigan farmers must produce beans this Summer if that prayer is not to go unanswered for millions of human beings liberated by our victorious armies, liberated by the supreme sacrifice of maybe your neighbor's boy.

You ask about the price? Does it matter if you receive 25 cents more for your beans than you did last year if your son is fighting in the jungles of a Japanese held island and his very life may depend on the concentrated ration that your extra bushel of beans provided. You don't measure human lives or the power to save those lives in terms of dollars and cents. Neither you nor anyone else eats money.

You ask about the future of Michigan beans. The future depends upon what we do now.

Plan for the Future. Plant for the Future. Plant Beans.

Ship Lungs

That ships at sea must be ventilated like buildings on land everybody knows, but that they must also "breathe" while under construction everybody does not know. Every hull on the ways has "lungs" in the form of blowers, sheetmetal piping and flexible metal hose. A 20,000-ton hull for a troopship needs nearly two-thirds of a million cubic feet of air every hour. Hence jumbo blowers are placed at strategic points. Feeder lines from the blowers are tapped at intervals to ventilate the hold by means of air hose. All this apparatus and much piping must be removed before the ship is launched. The engine room needs and gets the most attention.

If you want to see how modern engineering illuminates the streets of a business section, visit progressive Imlay City. In 1938 the 21 old-style lamps on Almont and Third were replaced by 16 pendent luminaires delivering more than three times the total lumens of the former system.

Since the new lights contain precision-designed reflectors, they direct light down exactly where it is needed—some on the sidewalk, and lots of it into the road—not into the sky and onto buildings.

The old lights were 10 feet high; the new ones stand 18 feet. This helps protect children and other pedestrians who step out beyond parked autos at night. The old lights, being low, cast large shadows beyond each car; the new ones, being higher and suspended outward on brackets, leave little shadow. All this makes for safe streets and better business.

How is the street lighting in YOUR community? Our engineers will gladly discuss a postwar plan now.

-- Your 1945 Garden-

Soil Preparation And Fertilization Pay Dividends

As IMPORTANT as in the construction of a home or building is the foundation of a Victory garden. And the foundation of a successful garden lies in the proper preparation of the soil.

During late winter or early spring. before the garden plot is spaded or plowed, all coarse plant remains should be removed. Remains of any badly diseased

GARDEN plants from a previous crop should be burned. Residues or crop remains that can be worked into the soil should be spaded under. There is a great VICTORY temptation when the days get warmer to plow or spade the garden while it is still too wet, in order to get an early start. This will do more harm than good. To determine if the soil is dry enough to work, squeeze a handful tightly into a ball and then break apart with the fingers. If the mass crumbles, it is safe to work. but if the soil clings together and cannot readily be broken up it is too wet. If the soil is worked when too wet it will become hard and cloddy for weeks or months afterwards. If manure is not too expensive, it is the best organic matter to work into your soil, particularly if the soil is very sandy or heavy with clay. Compost, peat, leaves or some other such material is especially valuable for improving the workability and productiveness of the soil. This organic matter should be spread evenly and spaded under. Decayed sawdust is beneficial, but if not well decayed will retard plant growth by using up the available soil nitrogen. During periods of fertilizer shortage, sawdust should not be used.

In heavy clay soil, if organic matter is not available, some advantage will be found in using ashes from non-lignite coal. After removal of cinders and clinkers, the ashes should be spaded in thoroughly and quantities up to two tons can be worked into an area 30 by 50 feet. Coal ashes have no fertilizing value. but improve workability of heavy soils. Ashes from lignite coal should never be used. Wood ashes have some fertilizing value, 5 to 7 per cent potash, but should be used sparingly. Not over 50 pounds of wood ashes should be used on a plot 30

by 50 feet.

Garden soils require a large amount of proper organic matter. "Trench" method has proven satisfactory.

Generally, soil should be spaded or plowed to a depth of 8 to 10 inches. The best method of spading, as generally accepted, is to spade across the garden, throwing out the first row of soil. This provides a trench into which succeeding spadefuls should be thrown, covering well all organic matter in the trench. If dry leaves are used, it is well to sprinkle them thoroughly with commercial fertilizer in the bottom of the trench. This will aid in their decay.

giving them the necessary nitrogen. The beginner is inclined to take too big a "bite" of soil at one stroke with the result that it is not broken up properly. Smaller spadefuls will aid in shattering the soil, leaving it in a loose, crumbled mass.

Trench Method Proves Beneficial

Too much stress cannot be placed upon the use of barnyard or stable manures. Cost of obtaining the manure in towns and cities, however, is expensive and therefore the use of commercial fertilizers is especially advisable. On small, intensively planted gardens, fertilizers may be sown broadcast and thoroughly raked into the upper 3 or 4 inches of soil. It should be well mixed before the seeds are planted. Some gardeners apply fertilizer two inches to each side of the seed rows and a little deeper than the seed. Apply about one pound per 25 to 30 feet of row, if they are two feet apart. The usual method of composting manure is to place the required quantity in a low, flat pile and turn it once every week or ten days until it has been turned three or four times. After the third or fourth turning the manure can be allowed to remain in a flat pile until wanted for spreading on the garden. If the manure is dry, water should be added to prevent burning. Where large quantities of manure are used it is possible to save the finer material for special sections of the garden. Some may be used for cold frames or hot beds.
