

Phillip Reagh, 8, Fatally Injured by Truck Wednesday

Funeral of Son of Mr. and Mrs. John Reagh Here Saturday

Phillip Cooper Reagh, eight year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Reagh of Elkland township, was fatally injured late Wednesday afternoon when he was struck by a truck driven by Glenn Peasley of Fowerville, an employee of the Associated Oil Co. The accident occurred on M-81, a short distance from the Reagh farm, 2 1/4 miles west of Cass City.

The lad was rushed to Pleasant Home hospital by a passing motorist and the truck driver and was dead on admittance to the hospital. He received a fractured skull and other injuries.

Phillip had returned home from the afternoon session of the Dillman school and had ridden his bicycle to a neighboring farm and chatted with a boy friend, Richard Nieman. He was traveling in an easterly direction towards home and the truck was going west.

According to an investigation made by Sheriff Goslin, three girls of the Dillman school told the officer that the lad turned his bicycle directly into the path of the truck. The driver could not swing his vehicle to the opposite side of the road because the girls were walking on that side of the highway.

The three girls who saw the accident are Laura Stilson, 13; Margaret Peddie, 13; and Joyce Lounsbury, 9. Sheriff Goslin stated on Thursday morning that an inquest probably would not be held.

Phillip Cooper Reagh was born Sept. 11, 1936, and was a pupil in the third grade in the Dillman school. Besides his parents, he leaves a sister, Mrs. Jon Reed of New York City, and two brothers, Mark of Detroit and James at home.

The body was taken from the Munro funeral home to the Reagh residence Thursday afternoon. The funeral service will be conducted by the Rev. Melvin Vender at the Presbyterian church on Saturday at 2:00 p. m. The body will lie in state at the church from twelve o'clock until the funeral hour on Saturday. Burial will be in Elkland cemetery.

Apply Now for Non-Highway Gas

To avoid the spring rush, farmers should make immediate application to their War Price and Rationing boards for this year's ration of non-highway gasoline. John F. Kessel, Saginaw District OPA director, urged recently. "Application blanks are now available at all boards and those in need are requested to make application now so that all applications may be acted upon before the last-minute rush," Kessel said.

The farmer must state his needs for the farming season between Mar. 1, 1945, and Mar. 1, 1946. After a determination of those needs are made by the boards, the major portion of the ration needed between Mar. 1 and Sept. 1 will be issued. They must again apply, just prior to Sept. 1, restating their needs for the balance of the year.

Requests for gasoline for doing so-called "custom work" are to be filed with the board at the time of the need and must be supported by statements as to the names of the parties for whom they are doing work and the amount of work to be done.

Fly Kites Safely, Children Urged

Spring is the traditional season for kite flying, when the youngsters—chiefly boys—thrill to the tugging of kite strings in the blustery March winds. Some of the hazards of kite flying are obvious, particularly to adults, but they may not be to children—especially those of kite-flying age.

A "safe kite flying program" is now being undertaken in the schools. It centers around an attractive four-color poster which pictures the boy as a "kite pilot," and stresses the safe flying practices of a good pilot follows.

For example, a good kite pilot always picks an open space for take-offs. He flies clear of trees, wires, etc. He avoids "crash landings" on roofs. And because metals are good conductors of electricity, and a kite with a metal frame or metallic cord might come in contact with an electric line, the boy is urged to build his kite frame only of wood, and to use only cotton twine for kite string.

He is also cautioned against climbing poles to disengage a kite caught in the wires, or climbing a tree if it is caught in the branches. Falls as well as shock may result. The safety program is designed to appeal to youngsters, on the basis of "an ounce of prevention," and has proved very successful in past years.

Cass City Methodists Exceed Their Crusade Goal

Success of Cass City Methodists in exceeding their goal of $908.00 toward the denomination's Crusade for Christ $25,000,000 fund for post-war relief and reconstruction has been assured through the raising to date of $919.00, it was announced by the Rev. Kenneth R. Bisbee, pastor of the Methodist church.

"Our people have responded enthusiastically to the appeal for a practical demonstration of Christian love and mercy for the starving and destitute men, women and children of war-torn areas," Mr. Bisbee declared in announcing the campaign figure. "We found real eagerness among Christian people to share their means to provide physical and spiritual food for the needy and distressed."

In addition to providing for aid to stricken peoples in battle-scarred and occupied countries, the Crusade for Christ fund will also permit expansion of missionary work in other foreign countries, increased education services in Methodist colleges of this country, a wider program of Christian teaching, greater spiritual ministry in many needy communities, and continued service to Methodist chaplains in the armed forces now and after the war.

Plans for the other phases of the Crusade for Christ in the Methodist church are progressing under leadership of the local Crusade Council, Mr. Bisbee stated. Continuation of Methodism's Crusade for a New World Order calling for expressions of opinion in favor of "international collaboration" for all nations, special evangelistic efforts, education in Christian stewardship, and increasing Sunday school enrollment and attendance are included in the four-year Crusade program in which Methodists here will have a part.

The average salary of rural teachers is $869; $1,955 for urban teachers.

Oil Producer

California is the second largest producing state.

Clean Furs

Furs are cleaned professionally with sawdust that has been mixed with a cleaning fluid. This is worked into the fur by various methods—sometimes in a revolving drum, sometimes by beating with little sticks. When the treated sawdust is brushed and combed out it takes with it the dust and grime and oil that has collected on the hair of the fur.

Brush Turkey

The young of the brush turkey are fully feathered when hatched and can fly almost immediately. They never know their parents, as the mother bird lays her eggs in hillocks of sandy soil containing decomposing vegetable matter and allows heat from this source to incubate the eggs. The chicks must shift for themselves immediately when they come into the world.

Wool Sampling

An ingenious method of using colored chalk to mark off sections of fleece on one side of a sheep has aided scientists of the USDA in developing a simple yet adequate means of wool sampling, which found that a sample from the side of a sheep was closely representative of the entire fleece and would indicate the animals desirable to save as breeders.

Sugar will be scarce GROW SUGAR BEETS!

SUGAR was the very first food to go on the ration list and there is every indication that it may well be the last item taken off the list.

Sugar producing areas which normally supplied a substantial amount of our requirements have been vitally affected by the war. Philippine shipments have been completely cut off and production in Puerto Rico, Hawaii and Continental United States has been reduced. Shipping facilities from Cuba have been inadequate.

Quite properly, the armed forces have not been rationed and their requirements for sugar, candy, soft drinks etc. are tremendous.

Again, we are supplying our Allies, particularly Russia, with great quantities of this essential food. These are the reasons why strict rationing has been necessary.

And there is no immediate relief for the situation in sight. The sugar bowl will need to be used carefully for some time to come.

You can help to meet the great need for sugar.

It is important for farmers to grow as large an acreage of Sugar Beets as possible in 1945 for these reasons:

- 1. To maintain the historical position of your factory area and the individual farm insofar as acreage is concerned. 2. To insure a high net return from your land. Sugar Beet prices are the highest in history. 3. To provide a more abundant farm-labor supply. A large Sugar Beet acreage will aid in procuring labor from outside sources, which will prove helpful for other farm operations and crops.

The government has pledged full cooperation on the securing of the necessary beet labor. However it is essential that farmers evidence their need for this labor by contracting for Sugar Beets.

Contract NOW for as many acres of Sugar Beets as you possibly can grow in 1945. You will farm patriotically and profitably so doing.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS
Floods Peril War Industries; Axis Losses Heavy as Allies Batter Enemies' Inner Defenses

Released by Western Newspaper Union.
EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.

FLOOD: Rampaging Rivers

Spilling over their banks to inundate thousands of low-lying acres and settlements, rampaging rivers created one of the greatest flood dangers in recent years all the way from Pennsylvania to Mississippi, seriously threatening war industries in their path.

With the flood stage already surpassed at the juncture of the Alleghany and Monongahela rivers in Pittsburgh, swirling waters rolled down the Ohio, further fed by swollen tributaries from surrounding states. As waters lapped at its 62-foot floodwall, broken before in 1913 and 1937, the important manufacturing center of Portsmouth, Ohio, lay imperiled, as did Frankfort, Kentucky's capital.

As the danger mounted, people were removed from the low-lying flatlands, and emergency Red Cross and other disaster relief stations attended to the distressed. No less than six persons were drowned in the early stages of the flood, and many thousands were homeless.

PACIFIC: Crush Japs

Fighting no open action, but rather putting up stiff albeit futile resistance from both natural and fortified strongpoints, the Japs have lost heavily in the Philippine and Iwo Jima campaigns.

Latest count of enemy dead on Luzon showed over 90,000, which when coupled with an estimated 125,000 killed on Leyte, brought total Jap losses to over 215,000. The rapid advance of the Yanks despite the stubborn opposition indicated the difficulties of defenders to hold strongpoints against superior and well equipped forces capable of powerful outflanking action.

By General MacArthur's count, the Japs still have some 60,000 troops on Luzon, cooped in the northeastern corner of the island and east of Manila. It was against these remnants that MacArthur moved, with the U. S. air force hampering enemy maneuvers behind their lines and the powerful American fleet also standing by to smash any evacuation attempts.

Shocked by enemy shell that fell near his position on Iwo Jima, stricken marine is escorted to rear by two comrades.

To the 215,000 lost in the Philippines, the Japs could add over another 12,000 killed on Iwo Jima by a battle-hardened marine force that had a terrific fight on its hands from the moment it landed on the tiny stepping-stone to Tokyo to seize vital air fields.

ARMY YOUTH: Policy Explained

With public interest centered in the use of 18-year-olds at the front, Secretary of War Henry Stimson declared that the urgent need of replacements dictated their dispatch to the war zones, but only after they had received intensive training both here and at overseas posts.

Originally, Stimson said, the army avoided using the youngest men by drawing upon older troops in divisions and replacing them with new inductees or returning vets. When overseas demands quickened, however, the army abandoned this policy for the use of more youthful troops conditioned by a program of rigorous training worked out as a result of experience over the last four years.

"Before any man is sent overseas," Stimson said, "he is submitted to a thorough test to assure that he has assimilated his training and is in fact prepared for combat duty."

ACCIDENTS HAPPEN

You have 1 chance in 14 of being injured in an accident during 1945! That's the mathematical probability advanced by the National Safety Council for the occurrence of disabling injuries.

If you live on a farm, you're lucky! The farm is the safest place to live, the chance of injury being 1 in 18, while for non-farm people the chance is 1 in 13. Farm workers, however, have a 1 in 38 chance on the job, the council reported in its study.

As enemy troops surrender to Yanks, G.I. escorts German women over rubble of town reduced in great Allied drive.

EUROPE: 'Sad Sacks'

Captured by the U. S. 3rd army northeast of Bitburg, 59-year-old Lt. Gen. Edwin von Rothkirch and Trach, commander of the 53rd German army corps, was brought to the rear in a jeep.

Dejected and soured, his gray-green overcoat and black knee-length rubber boots caked with mud, the general wailed: "How can you expect to win a war when you have no gasoline and no horses? It will be all over within four months—five months at the most."

Even as the general spoke, four Allied armies were smashing the remnants of German forces west of the Rhine, to pull up to the 1,000 to 1,300 foot river on a broad front and poised for the first military crossing of the 50-foot deep waterway since Napoleon turned the trick in 1813.

As British and Canadian troops and the U. S. 9th and 1st armies smashed to the west bank of the Rhine to draw up opposite the vital Ruhr industrial valley, and as the U. S. 3rd army drove to the river farther to the south, they captured a motley collection of Nazis. Having again succeeded in withdrawing the bulk of his finest troops across the Rhine, cagey Field Marshal Von Rundstedt left beardless youth, panicky middle-aged men and foreign recruits to cover up the retreat. Receiving little, if any, artillery or tank support, and sometimes even lacking small munitions, many of these troops surrendered after only brief skirmishing. Where the main bodies of the once-vaunted Wehrmacht tried to get back to the river, however, the Allies faced lively opposition as the enemy tried to maintain an escape route.

Biggest city yet to fall into Allied hands, Cologne lay in rubble as Yanks drove into the shattered metropolis, reported 85 per cent in ruins as a result of concerted aerial bombardment since the spring of 1942. Once the fourth largest settlement of the Reich, it took on the aspect of a ghost city, with occasional civilians moving out with their belongings heaped on carts, or picking their way carefully down littered streets.

To Nazi propagandists, the Allied advance to the Rhine set the stage for the decisive action of the war within the coming months.

Eliminate Threat

Taking no chance of an attack on their flanks and a threat to the rear of their troops fighting before Berlin, the wily Red command moved to clean up the 200,000 Germans poised above Marshal Zhukov's 1st White Russian army in Pomerania.

As the Reds thrust to the Baltic in this area and chewed up the German forces, they also moved on Stettin, Berlin's Oder river outlet to the Baltic. Straightening of the Russian lines in that region gave the Reds an almost solid front in eastern Germany clear down to the Lower Silesian industrial district, where the Nazis fought not only to protect their factories but also to bar the pathway to Czechoslovakia.

Meanwhile, Allied aerial raids deep in the heart of Germany continued to aid the Russian advance. As a result of heavy bombardment, the important Saxon industrial center of Dresden, famed for its china-ware, reportedly lay in ruins. Symbolic stronghold of German resistance, Berlin also felt the sting of repeated air blows.

Nation's Hero Scroll

To Pfc. Wallace G. Drill of New Ulm, Minn., went the army's silver star. When the leader and assistant leader of his squad became casualties in Italy, he, a rifleman, reorganized the squad despite enemy shells that burst as close as 5 yards to him. Under aimed point-blank fire, he led his squad in a 250-yard flanking maneuver to a position close to 2 enemy machineguns, which were then wiped out.

DIPLOMACY: Peace Plan

Because the employment of economic sanctions or force would require the full cooperation of the U. S., Britain, Russia, China and France to be effective, the unanimous vote of all five would be necessary to suppress an aggressor under machinery for a postwar peace organization worked out by the Big Three at Yalta. Meeting at San Francisco, April 25, 44 United Nations will consider final approval of the organization conceived at Dumbarton Oaks.

Approved at the insistence of Russia, the provision would give to any of the Big Five, as permanent members of the executive council of eleven, the right to pass upon the use of either economic or military measures against themselves in the event they were accused of trespassing upon their neighbors.

Before the question of economic or military sanctions arose, however, the executive council could consider charges of aggression against any major power without the latter's interference, and recommend procedure for peacefully settling the dispute.

New Doctrine

In what Sen. Tom Connally (Texas) called a new Monroe Doctrine backed by all of the Americas instead of just the U. S., 20 republics in the western hemisphere agreed to the mutual protection of frontiers and political independence in the postwar period.

Though enforcement of the principles was left to be geared to the machinery worked out at the United Nations San Francisco parley, the agreement took effect immediately through President Roosevelt's war power to order U. S. troops anywhere needed to promote the Allies' cause.

Known as the Act of Chapultepec, the agreement climaxed the Pan-American conference at Mexico City, another highlight of which was the consideration of an economic charter calling for the development of freer trade and increased industrialization of South America in the postwar period.

RFC CHIEFTAIN: Vinson Named

To 55-year-old Economic Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson was scheduled to go to the management of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and its numerous agencies following its divorce from the department of commerce when President Roosevelt named Henry A. Wallace to head the latter.

Important figure in the fight to keep the RFC's vast lending and management powers out of Wallace's hands, former RFC chieftain Jesse Jones supported Vinson's nomination, declaring that he has had both the legislative and practical experience to handle the big agency. Jones' praise of the economic stabilizer and former congressman and judge was echoed in the senate by Democrats and Republicans alike.

Opposition to Wallace handling RFC funds centered in the belief that he would use the RFC's vast lending and plant management powers in a government program to provide postwar employment.

In remembrance of the occasion, Mrs. McKenzie was presented with gifts. Miss Gertrude Striffler and Mrs. A. Coquelle were hostesses of the party.

Mrs. Bushong's husband, who is in the Service, is stationed there. Mrs. Anna Patterson went with them as far as Marlette where she spent the day with her sister, Mrs. B. O. Watkins.

MINERS: New Demands

With the government committed to the retention of the Little Steel formula limiting basic wage increases to 15 per cent of the January, 1941, level, and with his United Mine Workers already having received the allowable boost, John L. Lewis took a different tack in his negotiations with coal operators for a new contract.

Instead of coming out for flat wage increases, wily John L. called for so-called "fringe" allowances, representing pay adjustments for new working conditions. In this respect, the UMW chieftain asked for reinstatement of the seven hour day, with time and a half beyond that or 35 hours a week; 10 cents an hour more for the second shift and 15 cents for the third, and an increase in vacation pay from $50 to $100 in lieu of time off.

In addition, Lewis demanded a royalty of 10 cents on every ton of coal to build up a $50,000,000 medical and rehabilitation fund for UMW members and joint effort by the union and companies to eliminate substandard housing and sanitary conditions in some mining communities.

HOME CANNING

With sugar supplies showing the pinch of a long war, a tightened home canning sugar program for 1945 is in order to insure a fair distribution of sugar to those who actually need it for canning, and to avoid the over-issuance of home canning sugar, which occurred last year, OPA announced.

This year sugar for home canning will be obtained by filling out provided application forms, with the allotment based on actual needs, it was reported.

What's the "lowdown" on the Michigan war production situation? A small group of Michigan newspaper editors met at Lansing the other day. They conferred three hours with Detroit officials of government ordinance and war production. They wanted an answer to the above question.

In a minority of cases both management and labor have been at fault. Manufacturers have been guilty of hoarding manpower. They have kept workers standing around when there wasn't enough work to keep them busy.

Some manufacturers have been guilty of condoning slowdowns in production for the simple reason that their government contracts were on a cost-plus basis.

At the same time, a minority of labor workers—both organized and unorganized—have been guilty of imposing restrictions on production. This point is well established, it seems. In fact, one labor leader testified at Washington for the open record that his organization had been "successful" in reducing industrial productivity 5 to 10 per cent.

INTERPRETING THE NEWS

Concluded from page 4. Where the machine would produce more. Time studies had showed that increased production could be easily obtained. Workers balked, were fired, Result: A walkout.

In protest over the Detroit strike, a state legislator proposed last week that the state impose a death penalty upon war strikers. Thus one extreme produces another extreme.

Public indignation mounts at each strike during war-time. The walkout of members of the United Mine Workers of America in the spring of 1943 led to adoption by Congress of the Smith-Connally bill, over the veto of the President. The act authorized the government to seize and operate a war industry in the event of a strike. It gave the national war labor board additional power to intervene directly "if (in its opinion) a labor dispute has become so serious that it may lead to substantial interference with the war effort." The board was empowered "to decide the disputes, to provide by order the wages and hours and all other terms and conditions (customarily included in collective bargaining agreements) governing the relations between the parties."

Here was an instance where public opinion, angry over war-time loss of needed production, forced Congress to extend governmental controls over labor.

Joe Seidman, a former field examiner for the National War Labor Board, sounds this warning in his book, "Union Rights and Union Duties": "Unions cannot expect to abuse their power and still escape government regulation. . . . Government regulation of unions, as of every other factor in economic life, will inevitably come. The labor movement is gaining too much power to hope that it can avoid permanently some degree of supervision for the common good." The danger signal should be apparent to all: Government regulation of unions!

The husband who stays home with his wife and otherwise lives a respectful life 998 days out of the year doesn't get into the newspaper columns. But let him slip, run away with a chorus girl, or something far worse, and bang—organized society intervenes in the form of a law. The result is news. The majority of both management and labor are like the dutiful husband. It has been a minority which has gone wrong and got into the news. Actually, the British strike rate was 16% higher than the American strike rate in 1944. Under the British compulsory manpower draft there was a loss of 3,600,000 man-hours last year. American industry—labor and management—has produced in an amazing fashion, and it is continuing to do so.

In January, 1944, employment was only 1 per cent above the average for 1943. And yet production was 14 per cent higher than the average for 1943—more work by fewer workers! The automotive industry, with its famed "know-how," has led all industry in this achievement. For this, Michigan citizens may be justly proud.

While strikes will always make dramatic news for newspapers, and while the stay-on-the-job worker will not get the public's attention, the labor strike isn't the basic problem in Michigan today.

Selective service is taking more war workers into the armed forces. The war production board is asking more and more production of tanks, cannons, shells and thousands of other war items.

The result: Fewer workers must produce more! That's the challenge.

Can this production be effected if labor continues to resist the elimination of wasteful restrictions on production? The army, navy and war production board leaders express doubt. Lack of labor responsibility is partly due to the newness of the labor movement in Michigan automotive centers. It also is due to failure on the part of the worker to see the inevitability of control by the government—regulations for accounting of funds, democratic elections, observance of contracts, end of high dues and closed memberships, raiding of another union's membership, jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts—if the worker does not put labor's house in order.

Management has a challenge also.

Conceding the worker's fear of the machine, Eric Johnson, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, recently said: "One of the main causes for work slow-up is the fear that when the job is finished there may be nothing but unemployment ahead. The prospect of continuous employment, the extension of legitimate social security, every sane and sensible scheme for unemployment insurance—these will do more to eliminate 'feather-bedding' than any amount of harsh language." It is Johnson's observation that "the faults of organized labor in America in the main run parallel to the faults of business. The tendency to reach out for power, to take all that the traffic will bear in a given situation, to forget public interest, to overlook the long view in favor of immediate profit—which of these has not been charged against labor and capital alike, and with about equal justice."

Just as the little man has revolted against capital's concentration of economic power a by-product of our machine age, so the little man may revolt against labor's abuse and misuse of its new economic power. Unjust and punitive anti-labor laws may be the outcome. If government is to be retained as a referee, not glorified to be both judge and jury, it.

labor and management have a responsibility to conduct their own affairs on a basis of mutual respect and consideration. Self-interest then becomes public interest. That's the "low-down" as we see it.

*Sixty-nine years ago this month, the first spoken words were successfully transmitted over the telephone. The telephone gave a new meaning to freedom of speech. It made men free to talk to the whole world . . . breaking down boundaries of distance . . . overcoming natural obstacles. Still serving the cause of freedom, the telephone industry is tirelessly working to help speed the day when it can resume its true functions of serving peace and progress.

FROZEN METALS . . . Heat has been used since ancient times in the hardening of metals; the cold treatment is new. Cold-treating at 120° below zero F. has a marked effect on the structure of metals which results in added durability and strength. It lengthens the life of grinding and cutting tools sometimes as much as 300 per cent. There are many other industrial applications of this new cold treatment for metals.

Wasting electricity is wasting badly needed coal

FOR ST. PATRICK'S DAY . . . A timely recipe from our Home Service Department:

- Hamburger Shamrocks
1 lb. hamburger ¼ tsp. salt
1 egg ¼ tsp. poultry seasoning
¼ cup soft bread crumbs ¼ tsp. pepper
3 green peppers

Beat the egg, add crumbs, poultry seasoning, salt and pepper. Add beef. Cut eight rings, ½-inch thick, from the green peppers. Pat hamburger mixture into rings. Broil seven minutes on one side and six minutes on the other.

QUIET, PLEASE . . . The Farmer Street Office of The Detroit Edison Company is located in an Edison substation, crammed with three stories of massive machinery directly over the office. But despite the constant, deafening roar from the machinery overhead, not a sound or quiver can be detected in the office. For the office is actually a "building within a building," completely isolated from the noise and vibration by a novel insulation of cork and sand, setting it off from the rest of the building.

Don't waste electricity during the coal shortage

KITCHEN CRAFT . . . When washing greasy dishes or roasting pans, add a few drops of ammonia to the water for faster, easier cleaning. If ammonia is not available, washing soda or borax is a satisfactory substitute.

BOWLING

City League.

The Ludlow team managed to hold on to first place by the slim margin of one game, but left at least six other teams within striking distance.

The Parsch team is doing exceptionally well under the circumstances as they lost their captain a couple of weeks ago when he entered the service of Uncle Sam and his place on the team is now being filled by Miles Coleman, who has taken this assignment seriously and has done some real good bowling since becoming a member of the Parsch team.

Reid's squad showed some fancy bowling during the week and romped away with all the prizes offered. Captain Frank had his best night against the maples and shook them up for a grand total of 629 pins. His 255 count in his third game gave him the double individual prizes, and his performance on the alleys elevated him into the runnerup position as high individ-

Merchants' League.

In the Merchants' League, the Schwaderer team went into first place for the first time this season when they set the Farm Produce team down for three straight games. Their sponsor's better half, substituting for Pvt. "Ike" Parsch, apparently was an inspiration to the Schwaderer team for they bowled like champions to win their series.

The Schwaderer Construction team placed third in the Central States tournament at Saginaw which closed last week end. The showing was considered good as 167 teams rolled in this tournament and they had to compete with teams from all over Michigan and several from Ohio.

The Sam's Tavern five, who have been leading the league until this week, are but one game out of first place and are by no way counted out of the running.
