A SALUTE TO MICHIGAN'S YOUNG FARMERS

THE STORY OF HARLAN DIETZEL is the story of thousands of young people who are planning and working to increase the enjoyment and profit of farm living. In telling you about Harlan, we pay tribute to them all.

While still in his teens, Harlan Dietzel put electricity to work doing many jobs on the family farm at Bay Port up in the Thumb. Next he started a 4-H Club for the study of rural electrification. Boys and girls from the neighboring countryside—and many of their elders, too—met every month to talk about electric farming.

Harlan's hard work and enthusiasm won him high honors at the National 4-H Club Congress last winter. He was chosen one of the national leaders in rural electrification.

Detroit Edison is proud of Michigan's Harlan Dietzels, proud of their American ingenuity and progressive spirit, proud of their striving for better things. And with that pride goes a keen sense of responsibility—to keep on providing our farm customers with the finest type of electric service, at low, economical rates.

An important part of our service in rural areas is the work of our Farm Service Advisors—men who combine down-to-earth farm experience with up-to-the-minute knowledge of farm electric appliances. Next time you're in town, visit the Detroit Edison office and see your local Farm Service Advisor. He'll gladly answer your questions. No obligation.

Defective Uses
Laundry Marks to Identify Crooks

In Eight Years He Has Built
Up a Bureau Containing File of 300 Cases.

NEW YORK. — Adam Yuleh, whose system of identifying criminals by laundry marks, had a perfect batting average in 1944, doesn't look like a man you'd expect to find mixed up in crime, says an Associated Press writer.

He can identify most murder or amnesia victims within 24 hours. Since he established the first laundry mark filing bureau eight years ago, no defense attorney ever has challenged his evidence in cross-examination. A lieutenant on the Nassau county police force, he likes to call himself "consultant for the entire nation's law enforcement agencies and that includes the FBI."

Adam, who is 60, joined the police force of Nassau county 30 years ago. It was in 1936, while he was on the detective division, that he became aware of the potentialities of laundry marks. Three handits in a stolen car had made a haul of $10,000, abandoned the car and escaped. In the car was a suit of clothes with a cleaner's mark.

"Then," says Adam, "yours truly was called in and given the suit of clothes with: 'Find the man who cleaned this suit. I don't care how long it takes or how expensive it is, but don't come back until you've found him.'"

Searched for Three Months. For three months Adam canvassed cleaning establishments in metropolitan area. New York City alone has 11,000. Says Adam, "I don't know how many pairs of shoes I wore out." Then one day up in Westchester, "to my surprise and I almost done a backflip, a cleaner says 'yes, that's my mark.'"

All three handits were caught and convicted.

Criminals had been detected by laundry marks since 1883, but detection was haphazard and tedious because not even the FBI had a laundry mark file. Adam proposed to start one.

He told his commanding officer, Inspector Henry R. King, what he had learned. Every cleaner's mark has an indicator, a route designation and a customer's designation. By collecting sample marks and filing them, Adam thought he could find the proper cleaner. From the route and customer's marks, the cleaner could tell the name of the person in question.

Many cleaners use the same indicator but, with the selection narrowed by locality, Adam maintained he could pick the right cleaner "because no two marks are alike." Some cleaners use indelible pencil, some ink, some print, some write, some use a stamping machine.

"Inspector King gave me the green light," says Adam, and he started out. Within a few months his first murder case turned up. The body of a man who had been chained to a tree, his clothing saturated with gasoline and set afire, was found on New Jersey's Palisades along the Hudson river.

Call in Yuleh.

No one could identify the victim. Yuleh was called in. He carefully sifted charred cloth. With a magnifying glass he found the smudge of a cleaner's mark. Since most cleaner's ink is indelible, Adam took a chance on moistening it. The number came through.

Within two hours he was in a tailor shop in the Bronx. The tailor got out his books, turned to the proper page, then became hysterical. The mark was that of his father-in-law. A dentist's examination clinched the identification.

West coast states and the FBI began to consult Adam. He identified amnesia victims, he caught OPA violators, he identified a drowned man whose body had been in the water four years.

He caught a counterfeiter who had deemed himself safe for two years. The man had left his kit of tools and a pair of trousers in an automatic locker at a train station. If not taken out in 24 hours, the parcels are stored by the station for two years, then opened. Thirty minutes after he received the trousers, Adam identified their owner. Three hours later the man was under arrest.

Adam added institutional laundry marks to his files. His samples approached the 300,000 mark.

Risks His Life to Save
Kids From Falling Plane

SIGNAL HILL, CALIF. — Lt. Herman A. Albertini, 23, of Stanton, Ill., combat flier returned from Europe, recently was credited with risking his life to avoid hitting children in the path of his disabled Thunderbolt fighter plane.

The plane, its engine smoking, cut a telephone pole in two, sheared through telephone and power lines and ripped off the roof of a warehouse before crashing.

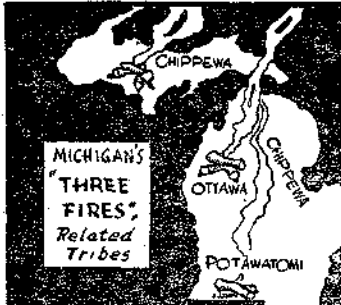

Police said the plane was barely 100 feet high when onlookers saw the pilot leaning out, waving frantically at children to get out of his way.

The plane burst into flames and was destroyed, but Albertini walked away with only bruises and scratches. He is serving with the 6th ferrying group of the air transport command in Long Beach, Calif.

Farmers' Organizations!

Before joining any organization, farmers should consider the following ten prerequisites: Need, Membership, Leadership, Finances, Control, Scope, Objectives, Program, Performance, Organization.

Today we discuss the PROGRAM.

An organization without a well-defined program is like a ship without a rudder; it will never reach the objective. Success comes only from proper planning of the work to be done, and then the working of the plan. No organization will long exist on a hit or miss program. There must be definite things outlined to be accomplished.

FARMER CO-OPERATIVES follow a well-defined program dictated by the requirements of their members.

Hogs Gain
Hogs eat most and make the most rapid gains when feed is before them at all times. Plans for self-feeders are available at farm adviser's office.

Near and Far-Sighted
A near-sighted person sees distinctly for a short distance only or only those things which are close at hand, but a far-sighted person can see things at a distance although he has difficulty seeing things close at hand. The medical term for near-sightedness is myopic while hypermetropic means far-sighted.

THE HUMAN TENDENCY to spend extravagantly for funerals may work a hardship on the bereaved family unless it is checked by one qualified to make helpful suggestions.

We counsel against overspending — showing the family how to use the amount in keeping with its means for an appropriate service, one that meets every requirement of good taste.

Ten High Average Bowlers.
Landon 133, Kolb 178, Reid 174, McCullough 171, Wooley 168, Czerwicz 167, Retherford 165, Novak 164, Dillman 164, E. Fritz 163.

Dillman's team reached the top of the ladder this week, when it continued its sustained drive to win their last six games and displace the Landonites, who have slipped out of the leadership for the first time since the season opened. A number of teams have their eyes on the No. 1 spot and can make the race interesting by winning a majority of their games.

Besides the Dillman Five, the Knoblet squad were the only other team to win all three games during the week and this landed them in third place with Landon's sandwiched in between. The three game team prize went to the Knoblet Five while Dillman's boys rolled the largest overaverage single game to win.

Eddie Fritz replaces Ludlow as one of the high ten bowlers. Herb enjoyed the company of the 10 best for four weeks until he encountered some pin trouble on his last series. That he will soon be back up again is our prediction and it shouldn't be long.

Six of our bowlers collected sufficient pin totals to hit the honorable mention and Cecil Larkin's 587 count was high. Mac McCullough rolled his second best series of the season for 538 pins and Pinney followed with 564 to gain the prize for the best three games overaverage. Kolb and Landon, who by the way are dominating the two high average individual positions, each rolled a 568 count, while Frank Reid coasted under the wire with a nice 554 pin total after getting no less than seven splits. Larkin rolled the highest single game during the week and his 234 gave him the prize for best overaverage. Reid's 232 was next and other 200 games were as follows: Retherford 227, McCullough 224, Pinney 221, Maier 210, Knoblet 207, Hubel 205, Gremel 200.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm, and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics. No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough, permitting rest and sleep, or you are to have your money back. In the year of 1910 while Rev. J. A. Schweitzer was pastor here, the church building was remodeled and enlarged. The main auditorium was made 34 by 50 feet and the annex to the west 18 by 32 feet. On the east side the choir loft and pulpit rostrum were made 10 by 20 feet. A basement was finished under the entire structure. A remarkable fact about the remodeling was the low cost of bringing it about. Exclusive of the lumber contributed by Albert Vogel, a member of the society, the outlay for the remodeling program and new church furniture represented a sum slightly over $2,300. The remodeled church was dedicated by Rev. Geo. Johnson of Cleveland, Ohio, on Sunday, Aug. 28, 1910.

On April 13 and 15, 1934, while Rev. Geo. Spitzer was pastor, the congregation celebrated the 50th anniversary of the building of its church in Cass City.

During the pastorate of Rev. S. P. Kirm, in recent years, various improvements have been made on the church building. These included new oak floors in auditorium and annex, ceilings and walls done in ivory color with insulation board and wainscoting in flex board, and the installation of an oil heating system.

will pay most any price for one. He is going to bring it to me tomorrow. So if he does, I will figure the trip well worth while even if it was not the most pleasant."

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle E. Zapfe have received a letter from their son, Lawrence A. Zapfe, W. T. 2/c, written under date of Oct. 8 from Wakayama, Japan. Part of his letter follows:

"I suppose you are wondering what Japan is like. The people are of the poorest class here and live worse than negro families. Some live in caves and some in shacks made of bamboo. Very few have shoes to wear but have something like sandals woven together of grass and weeds. I guess they would trade nearly anything for a pair of shoes. The women carry their babies on their backs like Indians used to do. They trade fags and all kinds of worthless junk for cigarettes and soap.

"When you walk down the crooked streets and meet some Japs, they bow to you and salute you as if you were someone great. Their clothes are all patches and some are wearing military clothing.

"They have a few Fords and Chevrolets here. There was a big factory here until the B-29s came along. Now there are just parts."

Another son of the Zapfe's, Clarence L. Zapfe, in the Navy, has written that he was in Wilmington, Del., for Navy Day.

"We are not doing much just now, a little guard, the usual duties of the army," writes S/Sgt. Paul Anthes, from Eisingen, Germany, to the Chronicle. "We are also preparing for home, hoping we can leave within a month, so perhaps I will soon be seeing you all."

"I just returned from a trip by plane to Riviera, France, which was really nice. The ride was beautiful as one who has flown knows. Flying above the clouds was new to me and was surely beautiful. It was, however, quite rough.

"Riviera was warm. People were swimming and lying on the beach every day.

"The Red Cross building is swell with all conveniences and plenty of ice cream and cokes.

"I took a boat cruise and bus trip to Monte Carlo which was very interesting.

"We spent seven days there. It took three days going and coming so had a nice furlough. The one I'm looking forward to is to the good old U. S. which will not be long."

"I had a nice trip back from Paris. We flew from Paris to Munich, Germany, and from there we came back to the unit by truck. I say 'we' because there were 21 of us in the group.

"On the return trip by plane the weather was good, the sun was shining, and there were no clouds. I sat by the window looking out at the scenery most of the time.

"I like to fly. Everything looks different looking down from 10,000 feet. An airplane rides more smoothly than a car on a paved highway. You glide through the air.

"There is a rumor that the 94th will be home for Christmas, but I doubt it. They're starting to send replacements over here now for all men with 45 or more points. I'm glad to have over 45. I now have 48. I'm supposed to have 49; the papers are being straightened out now. I might get home in March.

"I 'splurged' yesterday afternoon. Rather than wash my own hair I went to the barber shop and had it washed for eight cents."

The following interesting incident is taken from a letter, dated Sept. 29, from Cameron Connell, F 1/c, (M. M. G.), to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bower Connell, of Cass City. Cameron is stationed on Okinawa and Harikuna Saychu is a native boy whom Cameron has befriended and who persistently requested Cameron to take him to his (Harikuna's) home. This Cameron was reluctant to do as he knew in what condition it would be found.

Cameron says: "I spent a very interesting and sad afternoon yesterday. I took Harikuna Saychu to the site of his former home. In order to get there I took him through Naha and Shuri and I could see it had been a much larger bit of destruction than he had anticipated. He pointed out all points of interest to me and did a nice job of explaining what each had been. The sites are all has-beens.

"The sad part of the trip was when we arrived at his home which in peace time had been a swell place and in a beautiful location. All that now remains is a pile of debris and wreckage. I will never forget the sad expression on his face. Because all along I tried to tell him 'his home would be blown up but he still held it was as he says 'ok.' His home is located in the battlefields of Shuri where the worst and hardest fighting on this island took place.

After standing in sad amazement for awhile and looking at his demolished home, he took me to the mouth of a cave where he had hidden his wrist watch, money, books, clothing and valuables. There I furnished him with a flashlight (I don't venture into caves). He went in and was gone for some time. Now this is what hurt. He came out crying with only a few dishes that had belonged to his mother. He looked at me and at them and indicated that was their only possessions left in remembrance of a once nice home. He hugged the dishes and kept saying 'Mamma, Mamma.' Then he wanted to go to his sister's house so I took him there only to view the same pile of rubble.

"With all his grief, he was thankful that I took him on the trip. He wanted to give me something for my trouble which was not anything at all. So he offered me some dishes. They were beautiful but I didn't have the heart to accept them from his small bit to remember his home by. Still he wasn't satisfied, he kept racking his mind for a way to pay me and all at once he brightened up and started making all sorts of gestures which I couldn't understand, so he took a pencil and drew a Japanese flag, then indicated that he could get me one. That is the most valued souvenir an American sailor can get over here. Fellows
