Elkland Township To Have Its Own Fire Protection

Elkland Township land owners living outside the limits of the Village of Cass City will finance the purchase of a truck for fire protection to serve that rural area. This is the outcome of a meeting of such land owners held Wednesday afternoon.

Some time ago more than 25 per cent of the land owners in the rural area in Elkland Township signed petitions asking that a special assessment district of such land be created to provide fire protection to the owners in proposed district. The law provides that unless 36% or more of land owners object to the creation of such a district the township board will be vested with authority to proceed and create the same. The plan of the township board is to house the township fire fighting apparatus in the same building in which the village fire truck is kept and to employ the members of the village fire department to operate the township unit in the event of a fire. Township officials will consult the state fire marshal regarding the purchase of equipment.

Dear Santa Claus:

We're scared.

The farmer is scared. He's producing the greatest crops in history and getting the most money but

The laborer is scared; while his pay envelope will actually buy a little less now than after the war under O. P. A., he is the best organized in history, but he is scared.

The corporations are scared. They will make 20 billions this year-five times as much as pre-war-, they have had their taxes greatly reduced, but the price of their stocks have gone steadily down—they are scared.

Everybody's scared. Can conditions continue?

Ten years ago, Landon looked gray and senile; r several years he's been eligible for retirement but he still carries the mail because it keeps him in shape for bowling and he continues to lead at that distinguished art.

Years ago, Reid was advised by Tyo, McCaslin, Bailey and Graham to get a toupee; his poor old back has had a crick in it since we first knew him, but by sleeping afternoons he still continues and does a pretty fair job, we're told.

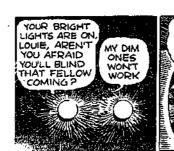

Bulen's house is filled with tennis cups dating back to the twenties. Most any hour of the day now, you can see him pedaling his bike up and down Main Street from one coco-cola stand to another, keeping in trim for the tennis of the future. He still con-

Herman Doerr told his wife years ago that the doctor advised him to refrain from all manual labor, but he still will keep hours with any group in town. By sleeping in mornings, he's able to continue.

And so it goes, Santa; maybe there's a panacea for all our fears; maybe, if we all prepare for a depression, it won't come; maybe, if people don't get too far into debt and keep some money around, they won't get hurt if things do slow down. Any way, Santa, this is a glorious year to wish every one a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Less and Less From Soil Agricultural land now amounts to little more than an acre per person, and this ratio is shrinking fast as populations rise and the land is destroyed. Every year the land is producing less food as it becomes more exhausted. The virgin soils of Ohio once yielded, with unimproved seeds and no insect control, 100 bushels of corn per acre and 60 bushels of wheat. Now, despite vastly improved farming methods, the average is 42 bushels of corn and 20 bushels of wheat.

"I'll help decorate it," Denny said. "I did last year."

Marge pressed Denny close. "I know, dear-" she said. Poignant memories of last Christmas crowded her so that she couldn't talk for a moment. She could see Joe teetering on the ladder to put the star in the top of the tree.

"I can help, Mommy. . . ." Denny

"You could, dear, but we don't want a tree with Daddy gone, Someday, dear-oh, I hope it never comes to you-vou'll understand why Mommy didn't want a Christmas tree!" She rose to her feet hurriedly feeling a rush of tears. "I'll get your wraps, Denny, and you can play outside in the snow for awhile."

Shadows lengthened in the little house before it came to Marge with frightening realization that it had been all of three hours since Denny'd left the house.

"Denny-DENNY!" She ran out on the porch and down the steps, her slim unprotected feet and legs sinking into the deep snow that had banked there, "DENNY-!" The echo of her voice came back to her in mocking horror across the white stillness of the little yard.

A cold wind swept against her as she stood at the gate looking up and down the street and calling Denny's name. It was a horrible moment, one in which she knew she must have aged twenty years, and one in which she saw in heart wrenching clarity her unfairness to Denny in harboring a self-centered grief over her loss of Joe to the extent of his safety, his protection, his veritable happiness.

A familiar wagon made the turn at the end of the street, and Marge recognized old Oliver and his load of Christmas trees. His chant rang out again, "Buy your Christmas tree now! On-l-y two dollars. . . . "

Marge shricked against the wind "Oh, don't—please don't!" Then she saw Denny—little brown garbed Denny sitting up in the seat by old Oliver!

The wagon stopped by the gate. and old Oliver grinned as Denny climbed down into Marge's reaching arms. "He likka th' ride.

He. . . ."

Marge didn't give him a chance to talk. "Do you have our tree, Oliver?" she asked.

Old Oliver chuckled and jumped down from the wagon. "All'a week I've had your tree," he said.

"Just put it in the yard," Marge told him. "Why, Denny and I couldn't do without our tree!"

Community Nests for Poultry House Urged Installation Decreases Number of Dirty Eggs

Taking cognizance of the premium prices paid for clean eggs on the market, poultrymen with large laying flocks are giving increased attention to installation of community nests.

Dirty eggs brought 15 cents less a dozen than clean eggs when sold through Ohio cooperative eggs auctions in June, D. D. Moyer, specialist in poultry husbandry at Ohio State university, points out, adding that the owner of a large laying flock either has to take a cut in price, spend almost as much time cleaning eggs as in all other care of the laying flock or change the poultry house equipment to reduce the number of dirty eggs gathered. Installation of community nests in place of the small box type will decrease the number of dirty eggs by 50 per cent, Moyer claims. They are easier to clean and can be kept free from parasites more easily than the ordinary little cubicles. Original construction cost also is considerably less than that of an equal amount of nesting space of the old type inasmuch as less labor and material are required.

The community nest recommended by the Ohio station is 8 feet long, 2 feet wide, 14 inches high in front and 30 inches high in back. The space is divided in the center so there are 2 4-foot compartments in the nest, providing facilities for 80 to 100 laying bens. The front half of the nest cover is hinged so it can be lifted for gathering eggs. The bottom of the nest can be hinged so it will swing down to dump the nest litter. Hens enter the front of the nest through openings 8 inches square in the center of each compartment.

Materials required for construction include; 9 pieces of 1-inch by 8-inch by 9-inch for lid, front bottorn ends and partition; 5 pieces of 1-inch by 10-inch by 8-inch for lid and back; 1 piece of I-inch by 6inch by 8-inch for lower front board; 4 pieces of 1-inch by 4-inch by 8inch for cleats, nest perch and entrance lids; 1 piece of 1-inch by 2supports, with the piece beveled at the ends if hinged; 3 pairs of 8-inch strap hinges, and 3 8-inch hooks and screw eyes if the bottom

Beginning of Cricket Cricket, the game of so much popularity in England, Australia and other British dominions, is of disputed origin. It started as a boys' game, eventually was taken up by adults, and the Test Matches between England and Australia, originated in 1880, aroused enthusiasm in both countries equal to that created by world series play in the United States. Cricket, in both England and Australia, is a sport for the masses, and a great cricket player becomes an idol.

As long as we can, let's hold home together, keep up the customs of Christmas and birthdays, the family group about the supper table, the good winter fires, the first picnics among the crocuses and green grasses of spring.

We don't know what's ahead, what changes, what shocks. But we can steel ourselves to meet them by building close and tight the dear familiar pattern of our American ways, by clinging to the law. The law of each individual heart-to forcreed. It is upon that creed that our childhood lives were formed. Blessed are the merciful. Forgive your enemies. Inasmuch as ye have done it for the least of these, ye have done it for me.

Under today's doubts and distresses we must try to return to these laws. Internationally no nation is doing this. It is too late to hope for that. But each one of us may create his own tiny corner of heaven by a simple return to the Browsing in a second-hand bookstore, George Bernard Shaw came upon a much marked-down volume of his plays. Inside he found his autograph addressed to a friend with the words: "With the compliments of George Bernard Shaw." With a sly smile, Shaw purchased the volume and wrote under his dedication: "With the renewed compliments of G.B.S.," and dispatched it back to the original recipient.

Food-Freezing Tip

Freezing does not destroy spoilage organisms. It does slow down the action of these organisms; therefore, it is important for frozen foods to be used at the right stage of thawing before spoilage can set up.

Christmas trees, like flowers, will respond to being kept with the base in the water. Here are two simple things to do if you want your tree to stay green and fresh.

Buy a tree which has been cut as recently as possible.

Cut off the end of the trunk diagonally, at least one inch above the original cut. This will expose a moist surface which will absorb water. Stand the trunk of the tree in water at once, and, if it is not to be taken into the house for several days, keep it in a cool place.

She sensed the usual recalling the trend of her thoughts and Don Karr hit 11 points. for the past several minutes brought | Sebewaing's scoring threats a flush of warmth to her cheeks. She'd been thinking, somewhat resentfully, as she went along the busy streets of the little town, how unfair it was that Christmas had come before she could get acquaint ed with someone in Davenshire-Larry Bryant, for instance, de partmental head at the electric plant where she worked. Christma: wasn't Christmas unless it could be shared with someone

And now Larry was standing at the dish counter deciding about a pair of little green rabbit salt and pepper shakers. It didn't matter particularly that he'd buy the shakers—aside from the signifi cance of such an act-but she'd had her own heart set on them more or less for a week. Larry had been in the shop every afternoon that she'd been there, but this was his first time at the dish counter. The little shakers were as good as

The other day when she'd looked at them, the sales girl had said, "Better buy them. These are the last ones, and they are a bargain at eight dollars. They came all the way from Sweden."

"I know-" Nancy had said, but she had thought they'd be an extravagance and look out of place on the little table in her corner kitchenette at Lil Ransom's old rooming house. Then there'd be no one to admire them—only herself.

"They might be gone the next time you come," the girl had said when Nancy left the counter.

But they'd been there the next time Nancy went back to the little gift shop. Every afternoon for a week they'd been there, as if awaiting for her to make up her mind to buy them.

But even as Nancy watched, she saw him hand the shakers to a clerk.

She tried to push her disappointment aside and select an inexpensive little gift for one of her coworkers at the plant. Tomorrow was Christmas Eve, and the employees and officials of the plant had drawn names as part of a gift-giving program they'd planned to have about the huge, gayly decorated tree in the arched entrance.

Nancy dreaded the occasion, more so now than before. She regretted the day she'd left her home town to take a better job in Davenshire. Why hadn't she waited until after Christmas to make the change!

When the time came the next day for the program, Nancy took the gift that was handed to her and slipped from the crowd. She wouldn't be missed, she thought bitterly, as she hurried from the building. Snow fell softly about her in a gentle burst from the dark sky, and the ring of voices from the plant followed ther in a kind of haunting, sad beauty.

Inside her apartment she looked down at the gayly wrapped package in her hands through a blur of tears. It was the only Christmas gift she'd received, and it had been given only Caro because someone had drawn her twenty-five |cents! Lil Ransom called up the stairs. "You're wanted on the phone, and 'tis a man."

Nancy placed the little shakers carefully on the table and turned to the door. The hum of "Silent Night" came from Lil Ransom's radio up the sweep of stairs, and Nancy found herself singing the words softly as she dashed down them, for she knew even before she heard his voice who was waiting for her on the telephone.
