Shelter for Pigs In winter when pigs are not hogging off corn, they should be sleeping. If forced to sleep in a cold rain, a week's feeding may easily be lost. Whatever type of shelter is used, it should have a roof that will turn a heavy rain and at least two walls tight enough to be wind and rain proof. The shelter should be built so that seepage or run off water will not puddle in the beds.

Poodle Living With Lioness Is "Top Dog" in Frankfurt with cocky ears is top dog at the Frankfurt zoo. He lives in a cage with a lioness.

Bonzo, about the size of a prewar beef roast, is the roommate of Brigitta, a lioness who could polish him off with one bite. They grew up together. Bonzo's mother was foster mother to the lion cub. That was in 1947. As she grew, Brigitta tolerated the other pups, but took a special liking to Bonzo. When it came time to put Brigitta on a raw meat diet, Bonzo stayed

Today, the poodle struts around the cage. Just when Brigitta sends shivers down spectators' backs, Bonzo ruins the act by pawing her playfully. When children stare at the big lioness, Bonzo is likely to chew one of her ears.

Brigitta usually ignores these sallies, but it is hard to be a tawny menace when even a dog don't believe it. On the other hand, the lioness follows standard lion practice of pacing to and fro back of the bars. When Bonzo gets in the way, he is bounced off a restless knee or shouldered into a corner.

The pair form the highlight of a 200 which is coming back rapidly after near destruction in war bombing. The director, Dr. Bernhard Greimeck, says, "That Bonzo, keeps us busy. Just because he lives with a lion, he thinks he has to eat like one." Greimeck had a big problem rebuilding the animal population, almost wiped out in the war. But a little buying and bartering have gone a long way. The zoo now equals most in western Germany.

Almost One-Third

WASHINGTON, D. C. - Almost one-third of all women of working age are drawing a pay envelope according to the women's bureau of the labor department. A new handbook on Facts on Women Workers also disclosed that the place of one fifth of the country's married women appears to be outside the home.

"In sharp contrast to the popularly envisioned picture of the 'average' family, consisting of father, mother, and children. stands the fact that in 1946 over 6,500,000 families had a woman the 79-page compendium said.

Until 1900, women constituted less than 20 per cent of all workers in the labor force, according to the report, based on census figures. Less than 20 per cent of women worked for pay. But in 1947, latest year reported, women in the labor force numbered 16,-323,000, constituted 27.6 per cent of ali workers, and 29.8 per cent of all women of working age were drawing a pay envelope.

The bureau said it was seeking to promote a more realistic concept of the American family nat-

Analyzing the economic responsibilities of women workers, the bureau estimated that 84 of every 100 working women do so to support themselves and others.

A section of the handbook on vomen's earnings showed that the 1946 median of all women working full-time was $1,671, and that only about one woman in ten made as much as $2,500 annually.

State labor laws for women were analyzed, as was legislation affecting household employes. The political and civil status of women as of Jan. 1, 1948, with all principal legal sex distinctions is noted; The book concludes with a selected bibliography on American women and a list of national women's organizations.

Alaskan Railroad Manager Says Lady Section Crew Best

Johnson, general manager of the Alaska Railroad, has reported that "a lady section gang" on his line "has the best-kept section along the railroad."

He explained to the senate interior committee that eight Indian women comprised the section gang at Cantwell, about halfway between Anchorage and Fairbanks.

"That section is the best-kept section along the railroad," he said. "It is rugged country."

Bloodhounds Reported Facing Extinction as Breed Declines

LONDON.-Reports from Great Britain that only 30 adult bloodhounds are registered with the English Kennel tlub bring the shadow of extinction close to a famous tracker of criminals that traces its line from the time of the Norman

Today's bloodhound is believed to be descended from the Talbot hound brought across the English channel by the Normans in the 11th century, the National Geographic Society explains, and adds that the reputation as a ferocious manhunter is undeserved.

The sad-eyed, long-eared and wrinkle-faced dog actually is docile and affectionate. Unless specially trained, bloodhounds seldom attack their quarry, merely baying loudly at whomever they corner.

Some breeders say the name bloodhound came from the term "blooded," or aristocratic. Others report that it grew out of the old training method of teaching the animal to follow the trail of a wounded deer; then that of a man with deer's blood smeared on his shoes, and finally the "dry foot" of man himself.

"In many cases, lead poisoning has been found responsible for fatal cases of fits in pet dogs. And the source of the lead has been traced to paint and other leadcontaining items in the dog's otherwise healthful home.

The research report tells of six typical cases of lead poisoning of dogs. Five were fatal.

"In one case," the A. V. M. A. reports, "the dog's favorite toy was a well-chewed, red-painted broom. In another, the dog had been eating flecks of old paint from the outside walls of its home which was being repainted. Another victim came from a kennel where the woodwork had just been painted."

Source of the lead was not determined in the other cases, but postmortem examinations showed the presence of poisonous amounts of the metal.

Mockingbird, Famed Mimic, Is Moving North and West

Mockingbird, loveliest of America's feathered singers, traditionally associated only with the magnolias and cypresses of the South, is moving northward. In recent years it has been reported in southern Canada and has become well known in New England, according to Alexander Sprunt Jr., ornithologist of Charleston, S. "It has," he says, "undoubtedly been increasing its range northward and westward in recent years. It now is well known in New England and as far west as Knox county, Illinois, and parts of Iowa (Monroe county).

The bulletin records that a pair of mockingbirds nested as far north as central Alberta during the summer of 1928. This is the most northerly point from which the bird has been recorded on the continent.

Passing Other Cars Never try to pass a car unless you're sure that you have plenty of room ahead. Look at it in this way-when you pass a car that is going 40 miles an hour it's just like trying to pass a standing string of cars 300 feet long, or longer-depending on your own speed in passing. After passing, always wait until you can see the car you have just passed in the rear-view mirror before moving over to the right in front of it.

Early New York New York state reached second place in the nation in manufacturing in 1810, and in the decade 1830-40 became the foremost state in the value of manufactured products. It has steadily maintained its national leadership ever since. The state has been favored greatly in commerce and industry in its geographic position as well as in its agricultural, forest and mineral resources, and the water power of its streams.

Livestock Production Livestock production offers market for otherwise unmarketable roughages from the farm, it requires less labor and smaller investment in building and equipment, it increases soil fertility, and helps control erosion. Tire Wear If you want to wear out a pair of tires rapidly simply have your front wheels toed-out or toed-in beyond the proper specifications . . , and you will be able to accomplish this

WOMAN'S WORLD

Give House That Crisp Look; Put up New Window Curtains

By Ertta Haley

TUST BEFORE the warmer weather makes its appearance, many a woman is apt to take a good look at her windows. The curtains look very dirty and sleazy after a winter's heating. If you're certain they won't stand another laundering session, then get out the tape measure and sewing machine. It's time to make new window dressings!

Glass curtains are among the easiest items that can be made at home. Most of them require only long stretches of straight seams. There's no fancy stitching or cutting, no elaborate patterns, and hardly ever any ripping if you follow the simplest rules.

Soft, full gathers will make the simplest materials exquisite when they're made into curtains. First measure the windows as to height and width. The curtain material should be purchased twice as wide as the window. You'll need at least two inches at both top and bottom for seam allowances, and from two to four inches for a shrinkage tuck, so add at least eight inches to window measurements on the length.

Net, marquisette, scrim, sheer rayon or nylon are all used for glass curtains. A good quality, firmly woven material will give you the most satisfaction and most wear and is well worth the few cents more a yard which it costs. It's very important to buy good material if you live in a community that's dirty or smokey, because then curtains will have to withstand frequent washing.

Have Edges Straight For Good Appearance

Because curtains are so large, it is best to cut them on the floor where you'll have enough space to spread them out. If you place the curtain material on a rug, the fabric adheres to the rug and you need no pins to secure it.

Use the vacuum cleaner on the rug, and run over it with a damp cloth to catch any dirt, or you will

For nice, full curtains. soil the curtain.

Whenever possible, tear the curtain fabric, rather than cutting it, as this will give you straighter seams to sew. If the fabric does not tear, draw a thread and cut on thread line. If you cannot pull a thread use a yardstick

Be Smart!

This season silk prints are really back, for the first time, in substantial quality and quanity. You'll see them now as one of the favorites for resort wear: very classic as to lines, extremely brief as to sleeves and pleasing as to pattern. Polka dots will continue their popularity, and prints are innumerable. New and refreshing are the small scale patterns, often so conventionalized or stylized that they are entirely new looking. The lovely hand of silk makes it possible to give these new classics many original collar interpretations, and most of them are low-cut .

No Purse Problem

You need never again worry about what to do with your purse when dining out, if you have one of these smart purse holderettes. These inexpensive gadgets are small and compact: they fit into your bag when not in use, and will help you avoid uncomfortable juggling of the purse on the lap or trying to find a place on the table or floor for the bag. They may also be used for holding unbrellas or packages.

or ruler, and draw a chalk line on which to cut.

Pay special attention to the grain of the fabric in cutting, folding and stitching so the curtain will hang straight.

Selvage edges are woven tighter the the curtain fabric and should be removed before cutting and sewing the seams. Why? After the curtain is washed, you may find yourself with baggy curtains which never can be ironed smooth.

This selvage does not show up in the new curtain, but it will almost always show up after laundering.

Use Iron to Save Basting Stitches

Professional seamstresses always work with an iron and ironing board set up, ready to use, in their sewing room. Many edges can be pressed immediately after cutting so that the fold is sharp. This may be stitched without basting.

As soon as the curtain is cut or torn, turn the side seams, using an iron to fold them neatly. The hem edge on these is one or two inches when finished. Press first a quarter of an inch turn, then a second one inch turn. Pin the hem on the outside edge and then stitch, thus saving basting.

The top edge is turned in a casing, but this usually is basted first so that you can hang the curtain for a trial to see that it fits your curtain rod. This fitting will also help you in seeing that the curtain hangs properly.

Use Stiffening At Heading

If you like transparent curtains to hang properly, it's best to use some stiffening at the heading of the curtain. Usually three inches or slightly more is best. Firm crinoline or buskram are fabrics which are best.

In measuring the turning necessary for the heading, decide first on the depth of the pleat, then turn the top edge in two inches more than this measure, allow a double turn so the buckram will not show.

When measuring the buckram, measure two inches from the edge, because the top stiffening should not extend to the outside hem of French-pleated curtains.

Turn the heading at the top of the curtains. Baste the edge of the fabric to the stiffening material, then turn it twice and stitch the hem or baste it.

It's also possible to use washable buckram banding made with eyelets to form the French pleats. No rings are needed. The curtain pole is slipped right through the eyelets, thus giving the necessary

If you are putting in the shrinkage tuck of two to four inches, put this in at the top in a narrow heading above the casing. Or, to avoid the shrinkage tuck, wash the curtain material before sewing, and it will shrink as much as it is going to, and no allowance need be made. Before Finishing Hem.

Hang the Curtains

Its always a good idea to hang your curtains before putting in the hem, so that you will have some idea where they will hang. This will also give you an idea of where to turn the bottom hem.

These simple, glass curtains are usually sill length and have a narrow hem.

Another aid in having curtains hang properly, is the placement of a weight sewed in the corners of the hem. This is almost always used in drapes, and should be used in glass curtains because the material is so light.

and also has a daughter, Pamela, who is 8. Pamela's mother has already married again and gone away, not even sending the child a card at Christmas.

"My first husband and his people are devoted to Ann, who goes to them for a week end twice a month, returning loaded with presents and stories of good times. Under the circumstances I can hardly ask them to include Pamela in these affairs, and as David often takes me on short business trips, we leave his daughter with my old Mammy here at home. But this is hard on Mammy, who has family and church interests of her

Sensitive Little Thing

"Naturally, David loves his own child deeply, and so do I. But she is a shy, sensitive little thing, and has made only one friend, a crippled boy of 10 in the adjoining apartment, whose parents are about to move back to their Philadelphia home.

"This is the problem. They adore Pamela, and she is quite as devoted to them. Bob, the son, never will walk and they tell me he has never found so congenial a companion as Pam. They want to adopt her. On investigation I have learned that they are fine people, have a big house, a boat, and so on. "They don't want half measures.

It must be full adoption or nothing. Pamela's mother, to whom I wrote, agrees to the plan and David is influenced by the fact that with the atmosphere here so much eased I would be glad to have another child or two, a responsibility I am certainly not willing to face as things are now.

"Knowing that you advise many other younger couples as to marital problems, we come to you with the confidence that whatever you say will be actuated by a desire to do the best for all parties. And that is all David and I want."

Give Up Pamela

Since you ask me, Janet, my advice would be to surrender Pamela completely to the care of this family that has apparently discovered the real child under the confusion and dismay that must so often have flooded her little heart. Betrayed by her mother, precipitated into a totally strange environment, where she was by the very nature of things unimportant and superfluous, subjected to constant contrast with a more attractive and beloved child, one can only congratulate her upon this opportunity to escape from as selfish and callous a household as it has ever been my experience to meet.

Infinite harm has probably already been done this child's spirit. But since she is gentle and shy, she is perhaps not hardened as yet and may bloom like a little flower when she gets into the sun-

As for you and her father,-well, you didn't ask me for a lecture on parental morality and responsibility, not to mention common decency and humanity. But I marvel that so many intelligent men- and women more often than men,-can assure themselves fatuously that by uprooting one domestic set-up they are qualified blandly to begin to build up another. You take your Ann away from her father, lightly assume the care of another small girl, this one motherless, and are confident that you are a fit person to bring other children into the world.

When selfishness and blindness hit at our homes, and children are told blithely that Daddy isn't coming home any more-there's going to be a wonderful new Daddy who loves them very muchand when the inevitable bitterness and bewilderment of divorces and remarriages strike at their small lives, then the very roots of character and mental adjustment are loosened, and presently the young tree shows signs of early decay.

Divorce is more deadly than war, although there are, nevertheless, many happy second marriages.

By Gene Alleman The issue of new taxes or economy is now headed for a showdown in the Michigan state legislature due to adjourn May 20.

Indications are that the latter choice will be taken by Republican legislators who are in majority control. They will soon learn whether their economy cuts will be popular No state agency wishes to have its funds reduced. This is natural.

The situation is further complicated by the stern reality of increased state aid to local governments under constitutional earmarking of revenue funds. The state budget office estimates that sixty-seven percent of total state revenue will be returned to local units -- schools, cities, counties, townships, etc. during the coming fiscal year, starting July 1.

Governor G. Mennen Williams, the youthful and smiling chief executive, has already hinted that his platform for 1950 re-election will be the so-called "do-nothing" state legislature of 1949. Williams will try to put the Republicans on the for social needs — public housing, fair employment practice act, better pensions and payments for workers and so on. The 'vested in-terests" who "control" the Republican party will come in for verbal assaults. Williams believes he has a ready-made campaign issue.

Democratic governor than the 1947 and 1948 legislature was on Republican Governor Kim Sigler. Sigler also fared poorly, considering the 49. over-all picture. The same might be said about other governors regardless of party control. The state legislature in Michigan is not apt to be a "rubber stamp" for a governor's recommendations. Legislators do their own thinking; they call 'em as they see 'em.

The Williams strategy to put the G.O.P. legislature on the defensive came out into the open the other day. Democratic solons said they were rebellious over Republican failure to report out important bills from committees. They brought legislative action nearly to a standstill by parliamentary moves to require reading of all bills and other time-killing tactics.

Of course, if the Democrats had been in control of the legislature, the same thing would have happened to Republican sponsored measures which didn't meet aproval of party in power. This is the political way of getting things done -denying to opponents any opportunity of achieving their goals.

He started with three strikes then with a solid hit in the 1-2 pocket, left one pin which he picked up for a spare then banged out seven strikes in a row and gathered five pins on the last ball. The air turns blue, too, when a reckless Boy Blue turns up in crowded traffic! Other motorists curse him-pedestrians fear him-and no wonder!

Speeding is the prime cause of accidents—it kills 10,000 persons a year. And remember-50 miles an hour may be safe on good roads, on open highways-while 20 can be dangerous in bad weather or heavy traffic. Speeding is driving too fast for conditions.

Drive as though your life depended upon it—it does!
