

4-H Club Tractor Project Offered At Cass City

Edward Golding, Jr., Will Lead Group Stressing Tractor Maintenance

The care of tractors on the farm to obtain the maximum performance and prevent unnecessary damage and expense will be the subject of a new 4-H club project being introduced in Cass City this winter. The tractor maintenance project will be led by Edward Golding, Jr., and will be open to all boys from 14 to 20 years of age interested in increasing the service and effectiveness of their tractors, advises county 4-H club agent, Byron E. Carpenter.

Golding was the Tuscola County delegate to a tractor maintenance leaders' school at Michigan State College last October, sponsored by the State 4-H club department and the Standard Oil Company. He has been provided with literature and instruction material to be used in conducting a series of 4-H club meetings emphasizing the tractor maintenance jobs that are normally performed on the farm.

Included among the subjects covered will be lubrication, cooling systems, carburetor adjustment, tire inflation and care, and ignition timing.

Cass City tractor and implement dealers cooperating as sponsors of the project are: Harry Crawford, Ford tractor agent; Roy J. Copeland, J. I. Case; Leonard Damm, Oliver; R. E. Johnson, Deford, Allis Chalmers; H. O. Paul, International Harvester; Ryan and Son, John Deere; and Wm. Ebert, Ferguson. These tractor dealers met with Golding Tuesday evening, January 16, to outline the meetings and discuss the facilities that are available to make the project the most worthwhile.

The first group meeting is set for Tuesday night, Jan. 31, at the Cass City Tractor Sales store when the subject of discussion will be "Engine Lubrication." Each Tuesday night thereafter the group will meet until the program is completed.

Boys interested in joining the tractor maintenance club may get more details by contacting Edward Golding at Cass City, or 4-H Club Agent Byron E. Carpenter, at Caro. In many communities 4-H club members' fathers have attended the majority of the meetings as visitors and obtained much worthwhile information which they could put to practical use at home.

Michigan Mirror

By Gene Alleman

Drums are being beaten again to ease the traffic bottleneck at the Straits of Mackinac by building a bridge. Who would pay for it? Everybody and nobody.

Linking the lower and upper peninsulas of Michigan in this fashion has been a dream of northern Michigan resort interests, engineers, and politicians for many years. During the highway department regime of Murray D. Van Wagoner, a bridge authority was created by the legislature. A causeway to the bridge was half-completed in 1941 on the St. Ignace side at a cost of around $1,000,000.

World War II intervened, and the project was sidetracked.

Now, under the inspired leadership of Stewart Woodfill, president of the Mackinac Island Grand Hotel, it has been revived. Governor Williams has been asked to include it in his call for the 1950 special session of the state legislature starting March 15.

"The Mackinac Bridge Citizens Committee," of which Mr. Woodfill is chairman, estimates the Straits bridge could be built for approximately $50,000,000.

One-half of this amount—$25,000,000—would come from the U. S. Treasury at Washington. Would this sum come out of the state's allocation of federal aid for state highway construction? Or would the amount be appropriated?

Flint Man Killed Instantly at Old Greenleaf Friday

Former Uby Man Hit by Automobile While Walking to His Car

Stanley Jerome Wasserman, 27, of Flint, was instantly killed, shortly before 6 p. m. Friday, when he was struck by a car driven by Edwin O. Lange, 36, of Port Hope. The accident happened on M-63 near Old Greenleaf, a short distance north of the Huron-Sanilac county line.

Wasserman had stopped Virginius B. Polk, 29, of Parisville, to tell him that the tail light on his milk truck was out. He was returning to his car, where his wife and their four children were waiting, when Polk noticed a car coming from the north. Polk shouted a warning, but apparently was not heard, and the car struck Wasserman causing immediate death. Lange said he did not see Wasserman on the road.

Polk informed Mrs. Wasserman that her husband was dead and drove away a few minutes after the accident without identifying himself. He was found at his home about midnight after a search by state police and Huron County sheriff's deputies. "I thought I had done what I could," he said when asked why he left the scene.

Funeral services were held at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday at St. Columbskill Catholic Church in Sheridan Township. Rev. Edward R. Wurm officiated.

Wasserman is survived by his widow, Mary; three sons, Edwin 5, Eugene 3, and Jerome 2; a daughter, Doreen, two months; his mother, Mrs. Antonia Wasserman, of Cass City; four brothers, Matthew, Joseph and Bernard, of Cass City and Edward, of Flint; and three sisters, Mrs. Ernest Partaka, of Cass City, Mrs. Fabian Wrubel, of Flint, and Mrs. Stanley Osenkowski, of Detroit.

Born May 15, 1922, in Mieli, Poland, Wasserman came to the United States that year with his parents. He lived in Uby and vicinity until 1948, and since then in Detroit and Flint.

He served three years in the Medical Corps, part of the time overseas during World War II.

Debate Team Wins Five of Eight

The Cass City debate team won five out of eight debates during their schedule this term. Cass City High School rejoined the Michigan High School Forensic Association this year. The school was a member several years ago with Willis Campbell as debate coach and several plaques were won by Cass City teams. Then the schedule had to be dropped because none of the teachers found time for coaching duties. This year Otto Ross has guided the team to their very fine showing. The state is divided into debate districts and all teams winning six of the required eight scheduled debates are sent invitations to participate in a state final elimination tournament.

Each debate requires two teams of two people each for each school, one team for the affirmative and the other for the negative. So each debate contest includes two debates, requiring each school to argue both the affirmative and negative.

The schedule this term was with Sandusky on Nov. 11, and was a split contest. On Nov. 25 Cass City took both debates against Caro and on Dec. 5 Cass City lost two contests to Bay City St. Joseph. Cass City ended the term's schedule by winning two over Mount Morris.

Delegation Asks County Supervisors For Health Unit

Soil Conservation District Reports on Year's Activities

Achievements in the soil conservation program of Tuscola County snowballed to a new high during 1949. Farmers in Michigan surpassed their accomplishments for the preceding year by a full 18 percent to set a new all-time record in the amount of conservation work actually applied on farm land. Tuscola County farmers easily kept pace with the state-wide speed-up. Dean Gordon, local technician of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service, reported.

"In this district," Gordon said, before those attending the annual meeting at the Wilber Memorial Building Wednesday night, "many farmers did an outstanding job during the past year. However our local board members are expecting even greater accomplishments for 1950." During 1949 district co-operators developed 54 complete farm conservation plans every one of which is geared to the natural capabilities of the land and designed to fit a particular farm, acre by acre. They reorganized field boundaries on 2288 acres, improved 619 acres of pasture, planted 152,000 trees, and added 1240 acres of cover crops. 313,500 feet of tile drainage was surveyed and complete drainage plans made for 1,560 acres.

Everett C. Sackrider, state conservationist at East Lansing, reports 1949 was a banner year for soil conservation in Michigan. In addition to showing an increase of 18 percent in application over 1948, farmers made an increase of 19 percent in the number of farm plans which they developed during the year.

A & P Subsidiary Exonerated by Judge

The second in a series of cases in which unsubstantiated charges were made by anti-trust division lawyers against The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company is cited in an advertisement being published in 2,500 newspapers this week.

Following a pattern set in previous ads, the company quotes a federal judge who exonerated an A & P subsidiary of charges it had conspired to fix potato prices in three southern states.

Under the caption, "Here Is Another Time the Anti-Trust Lawyers Were Wrong!" A & P tells about a suit filed in December, 1941, against its produce-buying affiliate in Wilson, N. C. After the charges were heard, the jury was instructed to return a verdict of "not guilty."

Federal Judge J. C. Wyche told the government attorneys that "you can't make a case without facts."

"In this case," the ad states, "the anti-trust lawyers gave a story to the newspapers, telling millions of farmers that we were the kind of people who would force their prices down, deprive them of a decent income, and lower their families' living standard."

The company points out that not only were the charges false, but were made "despite the fact that it has always been A & P's policy to pay our farm suppliers fair market prices for all produce; to aid agriculture through better distribution of its products; to narrow the spread between farm and retail prices; and to help farmers build better markets for their products."

This talk was concluded by Mr. Mr. Schramm stating that a driver must not only have a knowledge of traffic laws, and skill in the art of driving, but also an attitude of good citizenship, sense of brotherhood and good sportsmanship on the highways.

"Aunt Silly" Was a Dilly

The V. F. W. Cass City Memorial Post presented the three-act comedy "Aunt Silly" before an audience of approximately 400 Monday and Tuesday nights.

The play was a semi-musical type of production with singing and dancing by local youngsters. The plot centered around an attempt to influence a senator about proposing a dam site, and to get Cecelia Dill (Aunt Silly) to finance it. When Aunt Silly couldn't attend a local talent show it was decided that someone must take her place in order that the senator would not be disappointed. Further complications were introduced when the real Aunt Silly actually arrived, but all turned out well in the end with the senator being won over and Aunt Silly donating the money.

Fred Neitzel played the lead part of Sam Sellem and the fake "Aunt Silly." The supporting cast included: Betty Townsend, Josephine Bogart, George Godard, Virginia Strickland, Morris Taylor, Tom Cottick, Janet Bishop, Vern Galloway and Ella Vance.

The afternoon kindergarten class sang nursery rhymes in a Toyland Revue and the Mill Stream and Beautiful Lady girls' choruses also sang. A southern newspaper recently produced an edition that contained a cinnamon-flavored advertisement by a baker. The dogs pounced on the papers when they were delivered and chewed them up.

Famous Dummy Has More Thrills Than Stunt Men

ALEXANDRIA, VA.—His face is dark, misshapen. His hair, black and matted, clings in sparse clumps to his head. His one hand has no fingers and his eyes stare with a blankness that's disconcerting.

His place of abode is high in the windswept cupola of an Alexandria apartment building, where he hangs from a piece of rusty wire, gazing blankly across the city.

"But don't waste any pity on him. He's a dummy, but probably the most famous dummy in the history of this city and near-by Washington."

His years have been filled with more thrills than those of a score of movie stunt men. He's been thrown from a racing car, hanged by his neck twice from Washington bridges, belabored by firemen who thought he was a drunken anarchist, and has scared more people than one could count.

Plagued By Jokers

His permanent address is atop the Belle Haven apartments, where he has lived—except for minor interruptions caused by local jokers and newspapermen—since 1907.

He was put together as a fisherman in an exhibit in the Jamestown (Va.) fair that year and after the exposition the government stored him in the building.

The dummy was discovered by employees of a spark plug factory, then occupying the building, in 1914. Wiseacres set him up in a third floor window to act as night watchman.

His latest, and last, piece of haberdashery, according to John Loughran, owner of the building, was presented to him by the local police. It's a cop's blouse, complete with buttons and traffic insignia.

Seems the police had an objectionable citizen in one of their cells one night and scared the daylight out of him by placing the dummy, dressed as a policeman, in the cell. The citizen, it is said, has been an exemplary one since.

Foiled Husband

People fainted along Washington's main street when a pair of fortified newspaper reporters tossed the dummy into the gutter and a sped away screaming at the top of their lungs.

Police were called to cut down (guess who) from under Taft bridge. Again the dummy was pronounced a suicide when he was found dangling by the neck from a girder beneath Memorial bridge.

Once a wag placed the dummy at the table of a lovely Washington lady who was waiting for her ever loving and jealous husband on the terrace of a fashionable hotel.

Hubby saw the pair and promptly shot the dummy through the heart. No one was arrested.

By now the police are used to the dummy's habit of turning up in unusual places. But they've grown quite fond of him and promptly return him to his hook when they find he has strayed.

Electron Microscope Eyes Glues to Causes of Cancer

SAN FRANCISCO — An instrument that magnifies hundreds of times more than ordinary microscopes is providing a new clue to the cause of cancer.

This revelation was made recently by Dr. Stafford Warren, head of the medical school of the University of California. He said electron microscope pictures were revealing how cancers are born and grow.

Dr. Warren, former chief of radiological safety for atomic-bomb projects, said the pictures showed for the first time that certain cancer cells had embryonic arms which apparently enabled them to dig through the walls of blood vessels. Normal tissue cells could not do that since they were too big to pass through the capillaries and were dissolved by the blood stream, he added.

This digging ability might be the main cause of malignancy, Dr. Warren told a divisional meeting of the American Cancer Society.

The pictures have been taken in several laboratories, but since the findings have not been published in scientific journals, names of the researchers were withheld. He said they were not members of the California school.

Man Works 41 Years at Job With Only One Day Taken Off

Graulein, foreman at a brick factory, is 68. He has been on the job 41 years. And, until recently, he had never taken a day off, putting in seven days each week, year after year.

He liked his job so much, he says, that he took a half-day off in 1915 when he married and another half-day in 1945 when his wife died. "My fun is work," he explained. It kept me busy and out of trouble."

His occasion for taking off was a two-week vacation in Germany, where he went by plane.

27 Attend Sheridan Farm Bureau

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Crumback discussed auto insurance and Blue Cross with 27 members of the Sheridan Farm Bureau at the O. H. Blair home Monday evening, Jan. 16.

Mrs. Angus Sweeney conducted the discussion period. Topics for the next six months were considered and several suggestions made.

The members were divided into groups of five and a question pertaining to "The Setting of Farm Prices" was discussed by each division and the final decisions read to the entire assembly and tabulations made for the secretary's report.

Mrs. Bruce Crumback gave an interesting report of the medical benefits recently added to the Blue Cross plan.

Mr. Crumback, county president, spoke on the need of a farm organization to the group and talked with individuals in regard to questions they had pertaining to auto insurance.

Recreation was conducted by Mrs. Dan Healy.

A potluck lunch was served.

Grant W. S. C. S. Voted Payment on Minister's Salary

Mrs. Eva Moore entertained 31 members and guests of the Grant Woman's Society of Christian Service Thursday at the home of Dudley Andrews for dinner and the January program.

Following the dinner, Mrs. Arthur Moore presided at the business session and Mrs. Lawrence Moore conducted the devotionals with Mrs. Walter Mollan leading in prayer. Twelve members and three guests responded to roll call. The society voted to pay some on the minister's salary. They also voted not to act on the Albion Chapel fund at present.

The program for January, "The Whole of Love Is My Answer" followed. Mrs. Dugald MacLachlan presented the worship service and Mrs. Frank McCallum presented the program.

Guests were Mrs. Clark Sowden, Rev. and Mrs. Walter Mollan, Mrs. Jesse Putnam, Mrs. Wm. Putnam and daughter, Jessica.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Hasket Blair January 26 for dinner and the afternoon.

Recovery from Cold

Several days' rest is a vital factor in proper recovery after a bout with the common cold. The body is weak and the nervous system upset. In view of the time it takes to have a cold, the time spent avoiding colds is a good investment.

County Agricultural Council Has Two Successful Meetings

The Tuscola County Agricultural Council, reorganized last fall, has had two successful monthly meetings during December and January. The council is made up of representatives of all the agricultural agencies in the county.

Recent election put John McDermott, Farmers Home Administration representative, back in as its chairman. Claude Elmore, superintendent of Fairgrove High School and former 4-H club agent in this county, as secretary-treasurer, and vocational agricultural instructor, Roy Benson of Cass City, as vice chairman. A total of 26 representatives make up the council. Included in this group are members of the soil conservation service, extension service, farmers' home administration, teachers of the county vocational agricultural departments, national farm loan office, state conservation department, rural electrification administration, Detroit Edison, production marketing administration, and instructors of the veterans G. I. farm training program.

Each month's meeting, which will be held the second Monday of the month, will be in charge of a different agency represented on the council. This will permit the various organizations to keep the group informed of the changes in policies occurred within the departments. Wilson Kirk, National Farm Loan Association representative, clearly explained the duties and limitations of his department at the December meeting. In January Harold Tubbs, game area representative of the state conservation department, outlined the scope, duties, and policies of the state game division.

The February meeting will be held on Monday, Feb. 13, in the farmers' home administration office, when John McDermott will talk about services rendered through his agency.

Funeral Services for Mrs. J. Bearss Sunday

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Bearss, 87, widow of the late John L. Bearss, were held Sunday afternoon in the Douglas Funeral Home. Rev. Howard Watkins officiated and burial was made in Elkland cemetery. Mrs. Bearss died Thursday night in Pleasant Home Hospital where she had been a patient since Dec. 26.

She was the daughter of the late John and Ruth Armstrong Wilsie and was born Aug. 9, 1862, in Mayville. She was married to Mr. Bearss on Nov. 15, 1882, at Caro. Mr. Bearss passed away Feb. 23, 1932.

To them were born three daughters, two of whom preceded the parents in death. Surviving is a daughter, Mrs. E. C. Doughty, of Plant City, Fla.; four grandchildren; a brother, John Elmer Wilsie, who lived with his sister; and two sisters, Mrs. Emma DePew, of Saginaw and Mrs. Ida Fort, of Long Beach, California.

Mrs. Bearss was a faithful member of the Methodist Church.

1949 with the necessary technical assistance made available by the Soil Conservation Service to districts.

Much of the improvements in land use provided for in these plans will show in district accomplishments for 1950. To date farmers of this state have organized 57 soil conservation districts covering 19,560,000 acres of land. Nine thousand four hundred farmers of the state have developed complete farm conservation plans of which 1,863 were developed during the past year. During 1949 farmers co-operating with districts in Michigan put 9,900 additional acres under contour cultivation, added 10,800 acres of strip cropping, improved 7,800 acres of pasture, planted 5,200 acres of trees, and drained 14,500 acres. Most of the land drained was already being farmed, but production was being badly reduced by lack of drainage. To develop better water disposal systems on their land, farmers of the state constructed 735,000 lineal feet of grass waterways and terrace outlets during the year.

Move Over

A VACATIONIST out on a hike, passed an insane asylum and struck up a conversation with an inmate who was "painting" the fence with a brush and a bucket of straw. The inmate explained that he really wasn't crazy. Just passing the time there.

In an effort to augment the conversation the inmate pointed up the hill and said, "See that tree up there? There's a lot of gold buried under it and when I get time I'm going to dig it up."

The following day the vacationist came up to the inmate who was still "painting" the fence with his bucket of straw, and asked casually, "Say, oldtimer, which tree did you say had all that gold buried under it?"

The inmate looked down at the vacationist's calloused hands and remarked, "Better get another pail of straw and join me."

THE PLACE WAS FAMILIAR

A rather pompous county official, inspecting the local insane asylum, suddenly remembered that he had to make an important telephone call. He experienced all sorts of delay and difficulty in getting his call through, and snapped at the obviously unconcerned telephone operator, "Look here, girl, do you know who I am?"

"No, sir," she answered calmly, "but I know where you are."

Carried Responsibility

The personnel manager was interviewing a young lady for a bookkeeping position. "You understand, of course, young lady," the manager affirmed, "that we are looking for a responsible person to fill this position."

"Oh, I'm responsible," the young woman replied eagerly. "On my last job, every time there was something they called a discrepancy, they always said I was responsible."

Here Is Another Time The Anti-Trust Lawyers Were Wrong!

Ever since the anti-trust lawyers filed their suit to put A&P out of business, they have been making, in the newspapers and over the radio, various "allegations" about how they think this company does business.

Please remember that "allegations" are charges that have not been proved.

In this case they will be disproved.

There have been times in the past when the anti-trust lawyers made very damaging "allegations" about this company that the courts eventually decided were utterly without foundation.

In our last advertisement we told you about the time the anti-trust lawyers charged that A&P, two other food chains and two labor unions conspired to fix the price of bread in Washington, D. C.

And yet, when this case came to trial, it was revealed that the defendants were actually selling bread cheaper than most other stores in Washington, and there was absolutely no evidence that they had ever engaged in any such "alleged" conspiracy.

That was the time Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of "not guilty."

It was the time he said to the anti-trust lawyers:

"If you were to show this record to any experienced trial lawyer in the world, he would tell you that there was not any evidence at all."

"Honestly, I have never in my over forty years' experience seen tried a case that was as absolutely devoid of evidence as this. That is the honest truth. I have never seen one like it."

But this was not the only time that the anti-trust lawyers made such serious "allegations" against A&P which were false.

Again, and still again, they brought cases against A&P and suffered defeat.

As we have said, we think you are entitled to know about these other cases. And now, we are going to tell you about the second time the anti-trust lawyers were wrong.

The North Carolina Potato Case

In December, 1941, the anti-trust lawyers brought a criminal suit in Wilson, North Carolina.

They charged that A&P's fresh fruit and vegetable buying subsidiary, and other good American citizens, had conspired to fix and depress prices paid farmers for potatoes in North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland.

Can anyone imagine any charge calculated to be more damaging to a retail grocery business that must rely on farmers, day after day, for the food we distribute to our customers?

In this case the anti-trust lawyers gave a story to the newspapers, telling millions of farmers that we were the kind of people who would force their prices down, deprive them of a decent income, and lower their families' living standard.

These charges were false.

They made these charges despite the fact that it has always been A&P's policy to pay our farm suppliers fair market prices for all produce; to aid agriculture through better distribution of its products; to narrow the spread between farm and retail prices; and to help farmers build better markets for their products.

That is why many thousands of farmers all over the country are now coming to our support.

When the case finally came to trial, the anti-trust lawyers put on as their first witness a potato expert of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

This expert, who was the anti-trust lawyers' own witness, testified that contrary to the anti-trust lawyers' "allegations," the defendants made every effort to help the Department of Agriculture in its efforts to aid the potato farmer in better marketing of his products and in getting a better price for his products.

When the anti-trust lawyers had put in their evidence and had argued their case Federal Judge C. C. Wyche directed the jury to bring in a verdict of "not guilty."

Judge Wyche said to the anti-trust lawyers:

"I have studied this case from the very outset. In my opinion there is no testimony produced from which it can reasonably be inferred that the defendants entered into a combination to depress or lower the price of potatoes."

"I might say that I never tried a case in my life where a greater effort, more work, more investigation had been done, combing almost with a fine-tooth comb to gather evidence, as was done in this case."

"But, as was said a long time ago, you can't make brick without straw, and you can't make a case without facts."

So, here was a case in which the anti-trust lawyers made seriously damaging charges against A&P in which the Judge decided that there were no facts to support those charges.

That is why we say the anti-trust lawyers can be wrong and have been wrong.

That is why we say that they are wrong again, just as they were wrong in the Washington bread case and the North Carolina potato case.

We are going to show the American people that the suit to destroy A&P is really a suit against efficiency and against real competition.

The real question involved in this suit is whether businessmen are going to be encouraged to do a better and more efficient job; or whether we are going to let the anti-trust lawyers in Washington blow the whistle on anybody who gets big by giving the people more for their money.

No one can make us believe that it is a crime to try to sell the best quality food at the lowest possible price.

History of Education in Michigan

IRA DEAN MCCOY, M. D.

Ira Dean McCoy, M.D.

Michigan has one of the most advanced educational systems in the country, so much so, that it has been used as a model by most of the western states. The constitution of 1909, upon which the present system is based, contains the well-known clause from the Ordinance of 1787:

"Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

This Ordinance provided means for the establishment of schools, by granting land to be used for school purposes. Michigan is the only state of those created by the Northwest Ordinance, that made a permanent fund of their educational land grants. Michigan created a fund that loaned money to itself. When Cadillac founded Detroit in 1701, he believed that friendship between the red man and white man would be strengthened when the Indian saw his child educated on an equal basis with the white child. Concerning the matter of establishing a school at Detroit, Cadillac wrote the following:

"Permit me to continue to persist in representing to you how necessary it is to set up a seminary here for instructing the children of the savage with those of the French in piety, and for teaching them our language by the same means. The savages being naturally vain, seeing that their children were put amongst ours and that they were dressed in the same way, would esteem it a point of honor."

The early education in the Territory was shaped largely by its political and social conditions. During the period of British supremacy, about the middle of the eighteenth century, a few private schools were established and maintained by the British officials for the education of their children. A tuition which averaged around forty dollars a year, was frequently paid in barter. From the time when the Americans took possession of Michigan in 1796, to the adoption of the State constitution in 1835, a more active interest was displayed in the development of educational facilities.

This interest was due to three causes: 1. The traditional American attitude toward schools; 2. the increase in population with the consequent greater demand for schools; and 3. the presence of three leaders devoted to the cause of education—Father Gabriel Richard, Judge Augustus B. Woodward and Governor Lewis Cass.

At the turn of the eighteenth century, two clergymen of different faiths came to Detroit. They were Father Gabriel Richard and the Reverend John Monteith, a Presbyterian minister. They soon became friends with a common interest in education for all.

Father Richard organized the Seminary for boys and the Academy for girls, and at the same time began to train young women as teachers. His methods and ideas were half a century in advance of his time, and because of his achievements, Father Richard was called the Michigan pioneer in work of education. He also established a printing press. It was the first one set up in the Territory, and here was published the first book printed in the northwest.

Reverend John Monteith later established the University of Michigan in Detroit, by the assistance of Judge Augustus B. Woodward and Governor Lewis Cass. The money for its construction came from private contributions. A tuition was still necessary to carry on the work, because there were no tax laws in existence at that time. For about ten years the University consisted of a primary school and an academy. In 1827 the University closed its doors, transferring its building, rent free, to "the common schools."

The University was reorganized and moved to Ann Arbor in 1827. In 1871, James B. Angel became its president and held the office for nearly forty years. The University of Michigan is today one of the leading universities of the country.

The University of Michigan offers special professional training and graduate work comparable with the best offered anywhere in the world, and it draws to its graduate school, students from all parts of the world.

The influence of Governor Cass led to the passage of the law providing for the establishing of public schools throughout the Territory.

In no other way, he argued, could the children of all the people get an education; and government could not be carried on safely and well by the people unless they were educated. Public opinion to be safe must be enlightened.

The schools in those early days were very different from the schools of today. The school-houses were built of logs, and the seats and desks were merely benches hewn from logs. The rooms were provided with only one or two windows for light and ventilation and fireplaces furnished the only heat. No blackboards, globes or other means of illustration were available. A long shallow box of dampened sand was used usually for the teaching of writing. Until Father Richard began printing books, the only ones available were brought by the immigrants.

The discipline in those days was very different from that of today. It was believed that knowledge could only be made accessible to the child by means of the lash; that sparing the rod would spoil the child. For slight offenses the boy was ordered to go and sit with a girl or the girl with the boy. Some children were made to wear a dunce cap because they wasted time and did not study.

When Michigan became a State in 1837, there lived in Marshall, Michigan two young men, both graduates of eastern colleges, who had much to do with establishing the excellent school system of Michigan. They were John D. Pierce and Isaac E. Crary. Crary was elected as a delegate for the Michigan State convention, which framed the first constitution for the state. As chairman of the committee on education, he had great influence in shaping its educational provisions. The constitution provided for a superintendent of public instruction, and Mr. Crary influenced Governor Mason to appoint John D. Pierce to that office.

In preparation for his duties, Pierce took a two-months trip east at his own expense. During this time he conferred with eminent educators, among them the presidents of Amherst and Yale. Then, after intensive thought and study, he presented his own plan to the legislature. Accepted almost without change, it forms the basis for Michigan's present school system—the Prussian School System.

Raising money was a constant problem, just as it is today. A law was passed creating school districts, authorizing a tax for the maintenance of schools, but the funds did not become available until 1839, and then at the rate of only sixty-four cents for each child of school age. Again in 1841 another tax was levied for one dollar a child, but the same year, enrollment dropped and the schools closed.

In the same year an army surgeon by the name of Dr. Zina Pitcher came to Michigan and founded the medical department in the University of Michigan. He was elected Mayor of Detroit, and began at once to clean up the city. He introduced a bill, which passed the legislature in 1842, providing for free public schools open to children between the ages of five and seventeen. Because of this bill, Dr. Pitcher has been termed the "Father of Detroit Public School System."

The following year, Dr. Houghton became Mayor of Detroit, and also the first president of the Detroit Board of Education, with Dr. Pitcher serving as a member of the board. Dr. Pitcher recommended a high school to further the education of the children who were completing the elementary schools. In 1843 a high school opened with about 500 pupils attending. The results of the fifteen years of public education were gratifying. The streets were cleared of ragged, filthy children engaged in every species of mischief, and growing up in crime. They were at last being educated.

The Michigan State Normal School at Ypsilanti, authorized in 1848, was started in 1852. It is one of the best known Normal schools in the country, and the oldest west of the Allegheny Mountains. The State College of Agriculture founded in 1856, is the oldest Land Grant College in America.

The Detroit College of Medicine and Surgery had its beginning in 1868. Many medical and surgical cases were brought to Detroit from the United States Army Hospital for treatment in the temporary hospital, and it later developed into the Harper Hospital.

In 1905, a Public Act made compulsory education a law. The act said that the child must be employed at some lawful labor that will make him a better citizen, if he is excused from school.

The rapid growth in school enrollment, as a result of compulsory education is illustrated as follows: In the year 1877, there were 357,000 pupils enrolled in school, and about 13,000 teachers. The average monthly wage of the men teachers at that time was $43.54; while the average monthly wage of the women teachers was $27.45. In 1930 there were 850,000 pupils enrolled in school, with about 30,000 teachers employed. The average monthly wage for both men and women teachers was around $175.00.

This year there are a million children enrolled in the public schools of Michigan. There are nearly 33,000 teachers, and their average salary is $230.00 per month.

In the middle of the nineteenth century there were still 2,000 children unable to attend school for want of space. The school tax was raised to $3 per child, but the funds thus raised could not take care of the increased number. In another 20 years the enrollment was ten times greater. In 1942 the tax was raised to $60 per child, but the rapid growth in the school enrollment found that this fund was also too small.

The support of the schools has been considered more and more of a burden; the taxpayers demanding more and more service of the schools and giving less toward their support. The schools spend about one-half as much as is spent each year by the nation for tobacco and alcoholic beverages.

Most of our rural schools are just as they were 75 years ago. Neglect in the educational field has held our schools to a bare subsistence level—while industrial earnings increased 85 percent. Teachers' salaries during this period rose only 15 percent. Teachers can't live on their salaries with the high cost of living, and for this reason, many have left the teaching profession. Inducements to enter the teaching field or to return have nearly vanished.

A superintendent of a school district on the out-skirts of Battle Creek offered a man $2,500 to teach and he was outbid by a local hamburger stand. A greater demand for education came during the depression, when young men in the CCC camp earned college credits through supervised correspondence study, and classes for parents who wanted to learn about child care. Then the greatest single achievement of the WPA educational program came when several thousand adults availed themselves of the opportunity to improve their minds. The next big blow to our already overcrowded schools was the tidal wave of war babies into the kindergarten and first grade, which also caused a need for more teachers. Next came the veterans returning from the war. The government gave them the opportunity to get a college education, and thousands of them have taken advantage of it.

Since the war period, Congress has provided financial aid to schools overburdened with war-incurred enrollments. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, Congress extended this law to include school districts in need of assistance. Under the leadership of Senator Taft of Ohio, the Senate voted $300,000,000 to be used for this purpose. The bill assures a minimum school program based upon the expenditure of $55 per child in average attendance. This bill has not at the time of writing this article, July 25, 1949, passed the House. It is delayed there because the Senate approved an amendment allowing money to go to ALL elementary and secondary schools. In order for the State to receive this federal aid, the State must match it.

Providing adequate housing for our school children is our most perplexing problem. School districts are at least $300,000,000 behind in providing needed classrooms today. Modification of the fifteen mill tax limitation has helped, but has not solved this problem. A bill has been introduced in the House to provide a $10,000,000 school-building loan fund. This bill has not passed either House or Senate because no manner of equitable distribution has been arrived at.

An inventory made in 1943, showed the building needs amounting to $100,000,000. Our needs have continued to grow and the construction costs have doubled. Some of our classroom needs of today arise from the fact that secondary education is now recognized by people as a universal and indispensable need. Our School Plant Division conducted a statewide survey of school building needs in September, 1946, disclosing the following:

"Elementary pupils numbering 9,500 were on half-day sessions because of lack of room; 36,500 high school pupils had less than a full-day session for the same reason; 7,000 were schooled in leased or rented quarters; 19,500 pupils were housed in unsuitable temporary quarters; 18,000 were in unsatisfactory basement rooms; 51,000 were in unsafe or unhealthful school accommodations; 12,700 pupils lived where there were no school buildings and were transported to schools for that reason."

Community Colleges or Junior Colleges, unheard of before the depression, enabled hundreds of high school graduates to get a start toward a college career. Michigan is among a few of the states attempting to establish community colleges today.

There is probably no city in the world where the school buildings are more thoroughly utilized than Detroit, for many of them are in operation day and night. This continual desire for education is bound to have its effects upon the present and future generations.

Jefferson's idea of an enlightened commonwealth of free men was illustrated by his educational bills. He felt that it was the duty of the state to supply free education to the poor. His four basic principles are:

"That democracy cannot long exist without enlightenment; that it cannot function without wise and honest officials; that talent and virtue, needed in a free society, should be educated regardless of 'wealth,' 'birth,' or other accidental conditions; and finally, that children of the poor must be thus educated at the 'common expense.' This document is hardly less important than the Declaration of Independence as a milestone in the evolution of the democratic doctrine." Jefferson's broad Americanism, and the resulting benefits showed itself throughout all the land negotiations.

It has been said that: "He Stands Straight Who Stoops to Help a Child." And so it was with Jefferson, Cadillac, Richard, Monteith, Pierce, Crary, Mason, Houghton, Cass, Pitcher, and Woodward; all democratic leaders in the field of education.

Today we can see how well that Ordinance of 1787 has been carried out, but it took many years of gradual development to produce the splendid school system of our state. To be continued.

outright by Congress as a grant for a local improvement?

The committee's literature states that "the highway from Detroit to Sault Ste. Marie, via the Straits of Mackinac, is one of the few highways in the United States that has been designated by the Congress as part of the Interstate highway system of the United States." Furthermore, the federal government may grant 50 per cent of the cost of improvement of these interstate highways, it is explained.

A superintendent of a school district on the out-skirts of Battle Creek offered a man $2,500 to teach and he was outbid by a local hamburger stand. A greater demand for education came during the depression, when young men in the CCC camp earned college credits through supervised correspondence study, and classes for parents who wanted to learn about child care. Then the greatest single achievement of the WPA educational program came when several thousand adults availed themselves of the opportunity to improve their minds. The next big blow to our already overcrowded schools was the tidal wave of war babies into the kindergarten and first grade, which also caused a need for more teachers. Next came the veterans returning from the war. The government gave them the opportunity to get a college education, and thousands of them have taken advantage of it.

Since the war period, Congress has provided financial aid to schools overburdened with war-incurred enrollments. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, Congress extended this law to include school districts in need of assistance. Under the leadership of Senator Taft of Ohio, the Senate voted $300,000,000 to be used for this purpose. The bill assures a minimum school program based upon the expenditure of $55 per child in average attendance. This bill has not at the time of writing this article, July 25, 1949, passed the House. It is delayed there because the Senate approved an amendment allowing money to go to ALL elementary and secondary schools. In order for the State to receive this federal aid, the State must match it.

Providing adequate housing for our school children is our most perplexing problem. School districts are at least $300,000,000 behind in providing needed classrooms today. Modification of the fifteen mill tax limitation has helped, but has not solved this problem. A bill has been introduced in the House to provide a $10,000,000 school-building loan fund. This bill has not passed either House or Senate because no manner of equitable distribution has been arrived at.

An inventory made in 1943, showed the building needs amounting to $100,000,000. Our needs have continued to grow and the construction costs have doubled. Some of our classroom needs of today arise from the fact that secondary education is now recognized by people as a universal and indispensable need. Our School Plant Division conducted a statewide survey of school building needs in September, 1946, disclosing the following:

"Elementary pupils numbering 9,500 were on half-day sessions because of lack of room; 36,500 high school pupils had less than a full-day session for the same reason; 7,000 were schooled in leased or rented quarters; 19,500 pupils were housed in unsuitable temporary quarters; 18,000 were in unsatisfactory basement rooms; 51,000 were in unsafe or unhealthful school accommodations; 12,700 pupils lived where there were no school buildings and were transported to schools for that reason."

Community Colleges or Junior Colleges, unheard of before the depression, enabled hundreds of high school graduates to get a start toward a college career. Michigan is among a few of the states attempting to establish community colleges today.

There is probably no city in the world where the school buildings are more thoroughly utilized than Detroit, for many of them are in operation day and night. This continual desire for education is bound to have its effects upon the present and future generations.

Jefferson's idea of an enlightened commonwealth of free men was illustrated by his educational bills. He felt that it was the duty of the state to supply free education to the poor. His four basic principles are:

"That democracy cannot long exist without enlightenment; that it cannot function without wise and honest officials; that talent and virtue, needed in a free society, should be educated regardless of 'wealth,' 'birth,' or other accidental conditions; and finally, that children of the poor must be thus educated at the 'common expense.' This document is hardly less important than the Declaration of Independence as a milestone in the evolution of the democratic doctrine." Jefferson's broad Americanism, and the resulting benefits showed itself throughout all the land negotiations.

It has been said that: "He Stands Straight Who Stoops to Help a Child." And so it was with Jefferson, Cadillac, Richard, Monteith, Pierce, Crary, Mason, Houghton, Cass, Pitcher, and Woodward; all democratic leaders in the field of education.

Today we can see how well that Ordinance of 1787 has been carried out, but it took many years of gradual development to produce the splendid school system of our state. To be continued.

To review the plan, the financing would be accomplished by $25,000,000 from the U. S. Treasury—either in federal aid for highways and hence as a substitute of new roads elsewhere or as an outright gift—plus $25,000,000 in bonds to be paid off by bridge tolls.

At a time when billion dollar treasury deficits have reoccurred with clocklike regularity at Washington for 16 out of 18 consecutive years, $25,000,000 does not seem to be much money.

This thing called "federal aid" has the magic of being everybody's money. Like state aid, it lacks local responsibility; it possesses the lure of being a gift. Both federal aid and state aid infer that everybody pays the freight. If you don't get your share, someone else will. If we don't take money for a local post office, then this money will be spent elsewhere.

You are familiar with the ring-around-the-rose story of tax money from Washington and Lansing. As to the engineering feasibility of the bridge, the revived bridge authority would provide the technical answer.

So there you have the story in a nutshell. As for every project that calls for more government spending, the taxpayer—rich and poor—must ultimately foot the bill. That goes for a Straits bridge.

Reduce Farm Costs
Cutting costs of production is one way to make up for lower farm prices. Another way is better marketing of farm products. Greater efficiency in the use of land, labor, and machinery is suggested.

It is just as much a matter of course that a man should safeguard himself and his family through adequate life insurance protection.

You can't regulate your life span any more than you can stop the snow, but you can make sure that your family is economically protected in case of your sudden death. And you can make sure that you have a comfortable income as you grow older.

Ask Truman End Potash Strike

Washington, Jan. 5—Congress today appealed to the Administration to bring a quick end to strikes tying up almost 90 percent of the Nation's production of potash—key ingredient of mixed fertilizers used by farmers throughout the nation.

In a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan, the House Agriculture Fertilizer Subcommittee called attention to the "deplorable situation" for American farmers and appealed for some action to end it. The letter was signed by Rep. Thomas Abernethy (Dem., Miss.).

A spokesman said the subcommittee wants Brannan to convey to "the proper parties in the Administration"—the President and the Justice and Labor departments—his "deep concern" over this "threat" to the nation's food supplies and to other nations dependent on American food exports.

The National Labor Relations Board, he said, has investigated the strike at Carlsbad, N. Mex., potash mines but "has hesitated to act."

The spokesman said "it's up to the Administration" to decide whether the strike warrants the use of Taft-Hartley injunction powers. The President is empowered under this law to order the Justice Department to enjoin strikes imperiling the nation's health and welfare. However, so far, no such use has been made of the law in the long coal impasse.

Farmers in the South are now moving into the planting season and fertilizer, particularly potash, which is used heavily there, is needed now.

Served Him Right

The mother thought her little girl ought to be examined for any possible abnormal tendencies, so she took the tot to a psychologist. Among other questions, the man of science asked:

"Are you a boy or a girl?"
"A boy," the little girl answered. Somewhat taken aback, the psychologist tried again. "When you grow up, are you going to be a woman or a man?"

"A man," the little girl answered. Afterward, as they were returning home, the mother asked. "Why did you make such strange replies to what the man asked you?"

The little girl drew herself up with dignity. "The old silly," she said. "If he was going to ask me crazy questions, I was going to give him crazy answers. He couldn't kid me."

Conestoga Wagon
Wheelwrights in Pennsylvania's Lancaster county first used the Conestoga wagon around 1750. Farmers in the region used it to haul supplies, bring in grain harvests, and transport produce to markets. Originally intended to solve only local transportation problems, the wagon's sturdiness and capacity soon made it the nation's leading vehicle for overland travel.

NOTES from the TUSCOLA COUNTY EXTENSION OFFICE

An extra supply of discussion pamphlets on "Who Sets Farm Prices" are on hand in County Agricultural Agent Loren S. Armbruster's office. The four page leaflet lists the "pros and cons" of four questions relative to the above mentioned topic. The material was prepared by the Agricultural Economics department of Michigan State College. Call or write to Agent Armbruster for a copy.

Tuscola County beef feeders Alfred Murray and Don Koepfgen, both of Cass City, entered the annual Michigan Beef Feeding Contest this year which is held in conjunction with Farmers' Week. After their final weight report is submitted this week, they will be notified if the steers can be entered in the final contest. The decision is based on the average daily gain of the animals over a 6-month period.

The annual Tuscola County livestock marketing meeting has been tentatively scheduled for February 5. This is held in cooperation with Michigan State College and Michigan Livestock Exchange of Detroit.

Farm account book cooperators of this county will have their farm account books checked by specialists of the College's agricultural economics department on February 15. Ten farmers are co-operating from the county. Data and information from these books are used to make up the farm business success factors, a bulletin which is available in the extension agent's office.

Farmers interested in becoming cooperators of the farm account book program under the supervision of the extension service are requested to meet that afternoon at 1:30 p. m. in the courthouse.

The 1950 spring show and sale of Tuscola County 4-H and FFA market hog projects promises to be one of the largest of the 15 which have been held prior to this time. A total of 90 pigs will be entered in the event which will be held at the Caro Livestock Auction Yards on Tuesday, March 28.

4-H Club Agent Byron Carpenter has materials in stock for first and second year electrical project members and some penetrating seal to be used by handicraft club members in finishing their woodworking articles.

ENLISTMENTS OPEN IN U. S. AIR FORCE

There are no restrictions on the number of men who may enlist in the Air Force during the month of January, according to M. Sgt. Anthony C. Walny, in charge of local Army and Air Force Recruiting Station.

"There have never been more profitable opportunities open to qualified young men than are offered in the United States Air Force today," M. Sgt. Walny states.

At the same time, M. Sgt. Walny announces that the Army has temporarily closed its doors to new recruits. During January, the Army is only accepting reenlistments of men discharged from the Army within the last 90 days in order to insure that its strength will be kept within budgetary limitations.

High School graduates and men 17 to 34 years of age, with or without prior service, who can meet the requirements for enlistment in the Air Force, can now capitalize upon a chance to continue their education, obtain job and financial security and definite and progressive advancements in numerous Air Force Career Fields.

HONEST EFFORT

An old lady who could not see eye to eye with the taxi-driver on the question of fare, finally remarked: "Don't you try to tell me anything, my good man. I haven't been riding in taxis for five years for nothing."

"No," replied the driver, "but I bet you had a good try!"

EVERY LITTLE BIT HELPS

The courtroom was crowded as the judge finished his lecture to the defendant in a divorce action.

"So I've decided to give your wife $40 per month," were his last words.

"That's fine, judge," the husband said as his face lit up with a big smile. "I'll try to slip her a couple of bucks now and then, myself."

Let's Talk It Over

Station WBCM Bay City
Ed Vallender, Farm Editor

Progressive Dairy Farming.

Many farmers in this area are converting old dairy barns into up-to-date milking plants. The recent barn tours in Arenac and Huron Counties pointed up the fact that much of the back-breaking drudgery can be eliminated. Of course, there's no way been figured out to end the early chores on cold winter mornings. Some farmers however, are making some mighty fine improvements where possible providing the expense of conversion is not prohibitive.

Outstanding Producers.

We couldn't begin to name all the dairy farmers that are doing an exceptional job. There are many hundreds in northeastern Michigan and the Thumb. Some of the ones we remember have impressive production records—Harold Blaylock of Vassar with his Ayrshire herd and George Foster of Mayville with a large herd of some 40 Holsteins. In the Cass City area, Doctor Donahue is one of the many progressive dairy farmers. Loren Brady from Unionville is mighty proud of his Guernsey herd. One of the most up-to-date farms in all Michigan is the Nantom Farm of 1300 acres, near Caro. A. B. Quick, Nantom manager, has about 50 head of choice Black and Whites. In the north country, Lawrence Roll of Rose City and Ed Stanley of Sterling, together with Forest Shepard of Standish are owners of very good Red Dane Herds. C. M. Clemens, on M-55 near West Branch, has a top-flight herd of some 50 Brown Swiss. Ralph Nugent of Bad Axe does an excellent job.

Improvements Noted.

The reason we single out these particular operators is because of their fine production records together with the improvements instituted in recent years. Every time a dairy farmer makes a few changes, it has to be a custom built job. No two barns are alike. These farmers previously mentioned have one or more of these improvements. Concrete farm yards, laminated rafter barn construction, pen barn arrangement, bull pens, stable cleaner, milking parlor, once a day feeding of hay and silage, better calf raising methods and planned breeding program.

If we stayed on this job of farm reporting till age 96 we couldn't get around to name all the dairy farmers who are constantly improving and shortening their daily chores. As we said before there are literally hundreds of dairymen who conscientiously try to produce better quality milk. We only know a few. Maybe some day we'll have an opportunity to meet them all.

Nation's Agriculture in Brief.

Potato shippers in Maine are using a new grading system. Bag will read, "U. S. Grade A; Medium to Large," etc. That means the potatoes will range in size from 2 1/2 to 4 inches in diameter. They are also putting a mesh window in the bag so the buyer can see the spuds before purchase. Michigan potato growers take note.

The Government has purchased 11 1/2 million pounds of turkey since August 1. That's only 1 1/2 per cent of the total production.

Judson A. Thompson, USDA marketing specialist, says that most European nations want to purchase Navy beans from this country. Thompson says they are not satisfied with the low-quality beans being received from other sources and would like to replace them with United States beans—if they had the dollars to buy them. At present, the ECA has set aside no funds for procurement of dry beans. Write your congressman.

Life of Mower Can Be Prolonged

It Is Wise to Repair And Oil Machine Early

Mower breakdowns during hay harvesting are expensive in labor, time and farm crop losses, and new mowers are increasingly hard to get. But old mowers will give many years of good service if given proper care.

A frequent cause of poor work is misalignment of the cutter bar. With the mower tongue end raised 30 inches, stretch a cord tightly across the top center of the Pitman bar past the end of the cutter bar. The outer end of the cutter bar, as measured at the knife rivets, should be ahead of the string a fourth of an inch for every foot length of cutter bar. This setting is called the "lead" and is necessary to give alignment of the cutting parts in heavy grass. Some mowers provide an eccentric bushing adjustment at the cutter bar hinge pin; in others the worm hinge pins will have to be replaced.

Make sure that the knife sections register in the center of the guards at the extremes of the Pitman bar stroke. Failure in this causes pulled grass and heavy cutting. Incorrect Pitman length, hinge pin wear or improper lead are the cause for poor register.

The back of the knife is held by wearing plates while the knife clips reach over the bar and hold the front edge of the knife down against the guard or shear plates. When the wear plates clip become worn, the knife does not make close contact, thus causing heavy draft and uneven cutting. Wear plates can be moved ahead to take up the wear by loosening the guard bolts and driving the plate forward. Knife clips can be driven down with a hammer. Do this with the knife pulled back from under the clip and use the knife end as a measure of clip tightness. With all clips properly adjusted, the knife should slide back and forth by hand but there should be no play. Severe wear of the knife head ball joint will cause broken knives and shearing of the knife head rivets. A new knife head is usually necessary for correction.

Worn out guard or shear plates can be replaced without removing the guards. A guard anvil will be found extremely useful here. Discarding guards because of worn shear plates is a waste of precious metal.

For adjustments peculiar to a particular mower, see the mower instruction book.

Vaccinating Calves

For Bang's Disease

"Many farmers have heard of the good results obtained from calfhood vaccination for Bang's disease, and immediately want to apply it to the older animals in their herds as well," states the report from the American Foundation for Animal Health. "This presents an entirely different problem. Sometimes older vaccinated animals do not 'clear up,' and later on when herds are tested it becomes difficult to distinguish them from natural reactors. The question of which animals should be vaccinated and when, are matters to be determined by a veterinarian. "Calfhood vaccination has been a great aid in clearing up Bang's disease in individual herds, but our job today is to eradicate it completely. That is why we must pursue the cow-testing program on an area basis until all major farming sections have been cleared. More than 400 counties have already been certified, and this number will be greatly increased before the war is over. When Bang's disease has been finally wiped out it will mean many millions in additional profits to American farmers."

1949 State Police Reports Show Fewer Traffic Deaths

A favorable change in Michigan's traffic death rate is reported by Commissioner Donald S. Leonard in a year-end resume of State Police activities.

The steady upward rise in highway fatalities which began in August was reversed in November, when the death toll of 138 represented a reduction of 16 per cent, or 27 under the same month of 1948. Although final figures are not yet available, it is believed December will reflect the same trend.

There were 3,650 persons injured in November, an increase of 100, or three per cent, over November of 1948. Reported accidents totalled 12,818, a gain of 922, or eight per cent.

As it stands, a net decrease of four per cent in traffic deaths is expected for the year, Leonard said. In 1948 there were 1,512 killed against an estimated 1,450 in 1949. On the other hand, there was a one and one-half per cent increase in both accidents reported and injuries. Accidents in 1948 totalled 140,172, while the estimate for 1949 is 142,250. Injuries increased from 40,892 to 41,500. Travel, however, was much heavier.

The death rate per 100 million miles of travel dropped from 7.9 persons to 7.2, or nine per cent. In 1948 drivers in Michigan traveled 19,119,400,000 miles, while in 1949 the total is estimated at more than 20 billion, a gain of five per cent. Traffic arrests made by State Police increased 19 per cent, or from 42,561 to 50,482. Roadside assistance was given to 93,298 motorists.

In an effort to further cope with the accident problem, plain patrol cars driven by uniformed officers were placed in service toward the close of the year in the heavier traffic areas of the southern half of the lower peninsula. A survey had shown that officers in plain cars observed about eight times as many traffic violations as those in the familiar marked cars. The latter, however, will continue to be used.
