AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING".

Thinking and Doing

PREDERICO HERNANDEZ MENDOZA, Lucerna 63, Depto 14, Mexico, D.F., says that even after learning the truth that there is "great distance between thought and action, between thinking and doing," it took him fully two years to realize it. Yes, it required two years of time for him to make that idea productive of result. When he did, it changed not only his way of thinking but his way

He learned the above through the autobiography of that great American, Benjamin Franklin, who told of conceiving the idea of recording his mistakes of the day in order to emphasize them to himself and thereby avoid them in the

So Frederico Mendoza adopted that practice. He even went further, asking himself if he got the most out of his yesterday, as well as how he was going to get the most out of today? Next, if he is worried about something, he writes down his worry, its foundation, and just what is the worst that can come to him.

He says this practice always clarifies his mind about his troubles, and nearly always presents a solution. Often his worries and fears are entirely banished, his outlook on life becomes more optimistic and his joy in living is increased to a point that astounds him.

And all so simple that anyone can do it, and, Mr. Mendoza believes that anyone who does will increase his happiness by at least one hundred per cent.

It's worth trying, isn't it? If a pencil and a paper put to such use could help Benjamin Franklin and Frederico Mendoza, most certainly it can help the rest of us.

EMPLOYEE INJURED

A-railroad telegraph employee was injured Thursday morning when the speeder he was driving was hit by a car at a Grand Trunk Railroad crossing two miles southwest of Cass City.

Injured was Rex Rogers of Pontiac who was taken to the Cass City Hospital with bruises and possible fractured ribs.

Driver of, the car was E. L. Schwaderer of Cass City. He was not injured.

The impact of the crash knocked the speeder into a ditch on the west side of the track. There are no signals at the crossing.

High Quality Hay Cuts Dairy Costs Feed, Labor 80 Percent Of Production Cost

Good pasture and high-quality, low-cost hay will cut feed and labor costs and greatly increase net returns for dairymen, declared Timothy Hodge, Michigan State College agricultural economist.

Hodge estimates that feed and labor expense represents 80 per cent of the cost of keeping a dairy cow. The lower the feed and labor costs can be made, the bigger will be the dairyman's net return.

Pasture and hay are the cheapest feed a cow can get. Agronomists report that 25 pounds of good alfalfa hay will supply all the protein needed to produce about 30 pounds of 4 per cent milk daily and furnish calcium, carotene and vitamin D as well, Good pasture cuts labor expense, because the cows do the harvesting.

The above illustration clearly shows the net returns for ample good pasture and hay and returns when pasture is scarce and of low volume.

Three essentials needed to maintain good pasture and get maximum returns from pasture crops are: (1) -a good legume-grass mixture best adapted to your growing conditions. (2)-a fertile soil that will steadily furnish a well balanced supply of plant foods. Soil tests will show the land's need for lime and for phosphate and potash fertilizer. (3) good management which rotates some areas while others become coarse and unpalatable. Good management also involves harvesting pasture growth at the peak of its protein value to insure high quality

Farmers Report New Disease Among Pigs

A strange disease of little pigs that makes them shiver, jerk and sometimes "dance" is worrying quite a few farmers.

What causes the condition is somewhat of a mystery, the American Veterinary Medical association of the affected animals merely shiver and tremble. In other cases, the ales may not be able to keep their reet still, resulting in an involuntary "dance."

The latest report, by Dr. H. C. H.

Kernkamp, a research veterinarian at the University of Minnesota, indicates that the disease, known as myocionia congenita, is still almost as baffling to scientists as it was when first described in 1922.

William Shakespeare

We know a lot about the work of The tavern has been charged at William Shakespeare, regarded by arious times with selling liquor to many as the greatest literary genius intoxicated is a good deal we don't know about the man. There is no record of his boyhood, no record of the "lost years" 1684 to 1592, and no portrait that can be regarded as an authentic likeness.

Soil Conservation

Have steep or wet fields in sod, moderately steep or imperfectly drained fields in hay at least half of the time, and use the flatter and better drained fields for intensive crop production.

How Protect Paper

Special coatings on papers protect them from dirt, moisture, perspiration, oils and greases. Wallpapers are made washable with specially formulated finishes. Food wrappings are coated to retard the entrance or loss of moisture and other vapors-also to prevent the entrance of disease germs and fungi that may cause spoilage or mold.

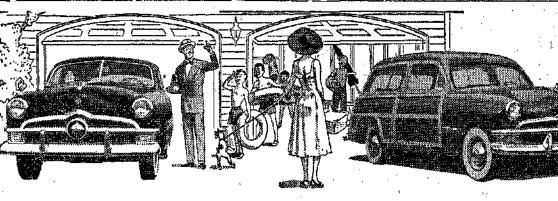

Provide More Space

Since young chicks occupy more space and eat more feed as they grow, many poultrymen supply at least three sizes of feeding equipment. They start with a 24-inch feeder for 40.to 60 day-old chicks.

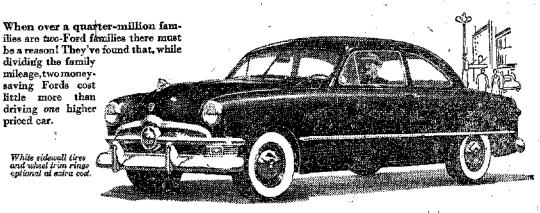

Started Pullets

Started chicks or started pullets are pullet chicks that have been brooded at the hatchery past the danger point and may be continued upon their arrival at the farm. Ages at which they are sold are two weeks, three weeks, four weeks, and as long as six-eight weeks. The latter are known as range size pul-
