MICHIGAN MIRROR NEWS BRIEFS

There's a "get tough" era comsomeone is going to get hurt.

It may be you. You may be hurt by a traffic ticket and a stiff penalty. But Michigan editors, who are touching off the "get tough" policy this week, think it's better to get hurt in the pocketbook nerve than to wind up in a hospital or morgue. Michigan editors—the editor of

The Chronicle and 400 other weekly and daily newspapers have pledged the power of the press to the Michigan Highway Safety Seminar. That is made up of law enforcement officers, school transportation administrators, leaders, courts, engineers, businessmen-a cross section of all Michigan interests and activities.

Speaking through the Michigan Press Association, the editors have set up these objects-any one of which may hurt you:

1. To obtain from public officials and to publicize in their columns the names of all persons who have ost their driver's license.

2. To acquaint the public of need for a centralized driver's icensing bureau.

3. To enlist the prosecuting attorney, chief of police, sheriff, ation, embracing all daily and pincered attack. justices of the peace, judges, mayors and city managers in a "get tough" program of law traffic enforcement and punishment of of-

These three steps can hurt youhurt.

How?

If you're a reckless driver and your license is taken away, you're going to be hurt. Your name will be splashed in type in your hometown newspaper; your neighbors will know your disgrace; somebody is going to tip off the officers if you drive without your license.

But if you're an average Michigan motorist, decent and law committee picked its three targets. abiding, that publicity is going to keep some gasoline cowboy from endangering the life of your child.

If you're an epileptic, a habitual drunkard or in your dotage, you're going to be hurt by a centralized lriver's licensing bureau.

You won't be able to get a

But if you're the average Michigan motorist, you're going to be mighty happy to know that the driver of that truck hurtling down on you isn't apt to have a seizure and crash head-on into you. You'll be glad to know that a driver's license is positive assurance that some nearsighted driver isn't gong to Michigan highways and ing to run down your wife because he couldn't see her in the twilight.

> If you're a habitual traffic violator, if you drive while drunk, if you think it's smart to pilot your jaloppy like a super-sonic jet, then the "get tough" policy by police, prosecutors and judges is going to hurt vou

> You're going to find that the day of a slap on the wrist for traffic violations is all over. You're going to be rapped with as heavy a fine for endangering lives with your car as if you had threatened them with a gun or stilleto. You're going to spend many a night in jail instead of squaring yourself with the law with a small fine.

You're going to find that Michigan doesn't like killers or maimers whether they do their bloody work in a speeding car or with a blackjack and pistol.

But if you're just John Q. Michigan, you're going to be happy that the potential traffic slayer of your three-year-old daughter will be scared and punished into obeying safety laws.

weekly newspapers in the state, editors have pledged the cooperation and the tremendous power of their newspapers to the Highway Safety Seminar.

There are 3,065,447 licensed and they can protect you from drivers in Michigan. Only through newspapers can all these motorists be reached. Some will have to be scared; some will have to be threatened; most will have to be educated before Michigan highways are even as safe as a Korean battlefield.

> From the hundreds of suggestions made by the Seminar in its meeting at Michigan State College last spring, the press association

Thirty thousand drivers lost their licenses last year, the newsmen were told by state law officials. Yet few of the offenders' names were printed because there was no way except by accident that a newspaper could check on such action.

Proper publicity will direct the driver's license by telling a hard-luck story or because the sheriff is these dangerous violators, editors good friend of your brother or believe, and the names of those vibecause some bored clerk in the olators should be exposed to public bureau is too lazy to give you a scrutiny just like that of a man who breaks other laws.

From long experience, safety officials have learned-and newsmen covering their beats, too, have learned—that only through a centralized licensing bureau can the public be assured that only qualified persons are allowed to drive.

Nine hundred thirty-four persons, 60% of the 1,640 killed on Michigan highways last year, were struck after dark. In many cases they died because the oncoming driver had such poor eyesight he just didn't see his victim.

Persons with such poor eyesight or with other physical defects that make driving hazardous will be denied the privilege of driving only when one agency is made responsible for the issuing of licenses.

Swift, sure and impartial en-forcement of law is the only deterent to any crime.

When Pennsylvania set a 50miles-per-hour speed limit and enforced it to the hilt, traffic fatalities were halved in the first year. Michigan can cut down its traffic deaths only by a "get tough" policy so violators are certain their misdeeds will go neither undetected nor unpunished. That's why Michigan editors today are launching this three-

Smoking and gasoline, lightning and electricity and overheated stoves and hay mows cause many thousands of dollars of Michigan farm fire losses, cautions Alfred P. Ballweg, county agricultural

The real villain in farm fires, however, according to the agent, is negligence on the part of farmers. Careful checking against things that will burn coming in contact with things that set fires will pay off all year long, advises the agent on the eve of Fire Prevention Week, October 5 through 11.

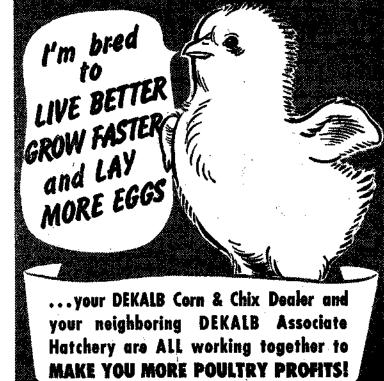

Hotels have rules against smoking in bed and it's good advice on the farm too. Every day 10 people die in fires and many of them are on farms, he explains.

Gasoline, used in tractors and many other ways around farms, can be a wonderful friend of the farmer but also a great enemy if not stored properly, explains the county agricultural agent. Lightning rods are not put on homes for decorations, he continues, but if they are not put up right, are not built right, are not grounded against a bolt from the blue, they aren't even good decorations.

The farmer who plugs one appliance and piece of electric equipment after another on to the same circuit is looking for trouble greater than a blown fuse, accordng to Ballweg. Electricity must be handled properly or it enslaves its master and burns his home and barn, he warns. Defective fire pots or defective chimneys are good invitations also to a disastrous fire and the agent urges farmers to

Don't Turn Our County Over to THE BOOTLEGGERS

The voters of Tuscola County will be asked on November 4th to decide whether the sale of beer and wine shall be prohibited on Sunday. That is Sunday prohibition. Sunday prohibition is always the first step toward total prohibition. That is how the Dries work it. Prohibition in this county means the return of the bootlegger, the blind pig and crime and corruption.

The bootlegger and the blind pig. How many of you remember them? They, of course, pay no taxes and do not attempt to obey the law. Would you prefer to see them again? Would you prefer them instead of the legally licensed and inspected establishments who pay their full share

The Michigan liquor and beer industry returns to the State over $50,000,000.00 per year. This is in return distributed to the counties, villages and townships in various forms. Any decrease in the amount of these taxes would have to be replaced by some other form of taxation. It has been proven that you cannot legislate public desires. If a man wants a glass of beer or if he wishes to drink on Sunday, he will do so regardless of the law. Prohibition of either of these does not stop the acts, it only takes them out of licensed, inspected establishments which return the proper share of taxes to the state or nation and places such drinking in the blind pigs.

Remember these facts and don't turn our county over to the bootleggers.

Family Night-

A number from Grant, Cass City and Owendale enjoyed movies on Europe, shown by Dr. I. D. McCoy, on Friday night, Sept. 26, at the monthly Family Night program. Mrs. Howard Martin and Mrs. Howard Britt were leaders of the program and Mrs. Clark Sowden and Mrs. Dudley Andrus were hostesses. The slides were taken by Dr. McCoy on his trip to Europe and were very interesting.

After the program, the Grant ladies served a delightful luncheon in the basement of the church. Everyone is welcome to these programs the last Friday of every month. Potluck lunch is served and the next Family Night will be Oct.

Extension Group—

The Grant Center Extension Group met Wednesday, Sept. 24, with Mrs. Wilma Ashmore. The new officers elected for the coming year are as follows: Project leader, Mrs. Gretchen Severn; chairman, Mrs. Ella Glann; vice-chairman, Mrs. Leah O'Connell; Sec.-Treas., Mrs. Marguerite Summers; community chairman, Mrs. Irene O'Connell, and recreation leader, Mrs. Joyce

The next meeting will be Oct. 15th at the home of Mrs. Leah O'Connell.

New Jet Fuel?

One of the least-known uses of boron compounds and minerals is in connection with jet aircraft engines. Boron powders have been studied by the national advisory committee for aeronautics as possible non-liquid jet fuel for several years. And boron is, of course, eyewash, being the basic element in boric acid.

Corn Leaves and Ears Give Starvation Signs

Soil Tests Show Need For Potash, Phosphate

Corn leaves and ears flash telltale signs of starvation when vital | 900, Hunt 834 and Musall with 817. Fuelgas plant food elements are lacking in

The chaffy, pointed ear of corn and the scorched, "chewed-up" leaf show plainly that the corn crop was starved for potash. The poorly-filled kernels on the ear are merely shells with little food value. The cob is weak and limp. Corn needs lots of potash to do its job of manufacturing the sugars, starch and proteins it packs into the kernels. Without potash, the corn plant cannot built the cellulose that makes up a large part of the cob. Potash starved corn has weak roots and stalks. It lodges easily.

When corn is starved for potash, the leaves give clear evidence of trouble. The tips and edges turn the definite tell-tale signs of starvation caused when vital plant food elements are lacking in the soil.

yellow and become dry and lifeless. Eventually the edges break off.

The surest way to keep potash hunger signs out of your fields, is to feed the soil so it can feed the growing corn crop. A soil test will show the soil's needs not only for potash, but for phosphate as well. A balanced supply of all three elements is vital in producing high yields of corn. The needed nutrients can be supplied in the form of a complete fertilizer carrying these elements.

Higher corn yields can be obtained to suiting the stalk population to the soil's fertility level and by growing well-fertilized deep-rooted legumes in the rotation. These legumes will condition the land for maximum production, add needed organic matter, improve drainage and ventilation and loosen the soil so that roots can forage more easily for nutrients and moisture.

Trench Silo May Solve Feed Storage Problem

Size of Unit Depends On Number of Animals

A trench silo may solve silage storage problems for a number of farmers, especially on farms where there is good drainage and where soil moisture from the outside is not a problem. The walls may or may not be lined, but for making of good silage they should be smooth.

Where topography permits, the trench silo can be located on the side of a hill. This will lessen the difficulties of filling the silo and provide natural drainage. Good drainage is essential not only to preserve the feed but also to aid in the emptying.

The size of the trench silo depends, like that of other types, on the number of animals to be fed, the probably length of the feeding sively built. Wall strength, however, depends upon the ground being free of water seepage. A hillside location could provide natural drainage and aid in fiil-period, and the amount of feed available.

In estimating the size of a trench silo, this general rule of capacity can be followed: A silo 6 feet deep. 6 feet wide at the bottom, and 9 feet wide at the top will contain 1,575 pounds of silage per linear foot.

Therefore, for a 60-day feeding period for 13 cows the silo should be 20 feet long, and for a 120-day feeding period, 40-feet long. With a silo 10 feet deep, 10 feet wide at the bottom, and 18 feet 4 inches at the top, each linear foot of silo would contain 4,970 pounds of silage.

Increasing the capacity by extending the length of the trench is probably more practical than increasing the size of the cross sec-some young man: Fiction the photograph had been taken, of course, some dozen years ago, just before he had married my mother. More than once she had told me about how my father had courted her in that suit and when she had first seen him in it she had sworn him to be the best looking man in the world. It had become the symbol them cherished it. Only on two occasions since their marriage had my father worn that suit: my chris-wedding. But things between my father and mother were not altogether peace ful. They spent their time together arguing about little matters. As for instance, my father would clump into the kitchen on a wet day and leave mud tracks on the floor.

"There you go," she'd say, "treading mud tracks all over my clean kitchen. I suppose you like to see me on my knees scrubbing away like a slave." And my father would say, "I can't walk into my own house without being blasphemed."

On a bright summer morning my mother was serving breakfast and I could see her eyes sparkle as if she had an idea. "I'm going to visit mother in Scottsville," she said. "I'll take Henry with me."

"Always thinkin' up something. Where's the money coming from for tickets?" said my father.

"I saved it up, penny by penny."
"Waste of money," said my father. "With so much work on the farm, in the middle of sum-mer, she wants to take a trip to her mother. Huh!"

"I can see my own mother some-times in a blue moon. I'd be glad o get away from you for a spell, believe me. The way you snap and bite at me."

"All right, then. care," said my father.

Stolidly my mother packed a satchel. She dressed me in my Sunday white blouse and black corduroy trousers. I wore my shoes. My father took us to Oak Leaf Junction a mile away. We rode in the top-wagon, drawn by our white horse, Prince. At the station my mother bought the tickets and we waited in silence. The train clanged in, and we got on, and I heard my father say "Goodbye" to my mother and she said that to him. As the train moved away I looked out of the window and saw my father standing near the wagon.

MY MOTHER and I went to the movies in Scottsville and we ate ice cream and store cake. Life was full for me, just to walk along Main Street and watch everything. My mother seemed different somehow here in Scottsville; she never argued with anyone. She even smiled. Toward the end of the first week, however, I noticed a shadow, flit across

One night, as we were returning rom a movie, my mother said: 'Your father is a hard-working man, Henry.'

As the end of the second week approached the favorite subject of conversation for my mother was my father. Soon she talked of hardly anything else.

We were going home. The train flitted by forest and meadow and stream. I could close my eyes and picture my father in his overalls, waiting for us with Prince and the top-wagon, just the way we had left him. The train slowed down, Soon we were being helped off the coach by the conductor. My mother looked nice in her new dress, so carefully selected by her and my grandmother, bought with the remainder of my mother's savings. As she stood on the platform of Oak Leaf Junction at last, she seemed to be of the city, indeed. I saw my father coming toward us He didn't wear his sun hat and his iron gray hair was combed back. As I looked at him my eyes opened in wonder. So did my mother's. My father was wearing his blue serge

He nodded at me. He took the satchel from my mother and we started toward the horse and wagon. He stumbled over the single platform step to the ground and brushed

Slate Feeder Outlook Meeting in Caro

Tuscola County livestock producers and feeders will have a chance to discuss problems of production, feeding and marketing at a "feeder outlook" meeting Monday, October 6, at 8:00 p. m., at the courthouse in Caro, says Alfred P. Ballweg, county agricultural agent. A few of the questions to be discussed include: What's the comparative position of the beef cattle industry today? Will this be a good year for the livestock farmers? How will 1952 feed production affect feed prices? Shall

I buy feeder cattle early or late?

These and many other problems will be discussed by Bill Finley and Don Stark, specialists from Michigan State College. The meeting will be open to any interested farmer or businessman.

One method of removing iron rust from white materials is to spread the stain over a pan of boiling water and then squeeze lemon juice on it. After a few minutes, rinse and repeat process. This method is slow-but safe, say Michigan State College home economists.

Cut Shipping Fever

A few precautions can save will help, but Dr. Reed warns that Michigan farmers from serious it is not a substitute for good losses from shipping fever in cattle, according to Dr. Glen Reed, extension veterinarian at Michigan State College.

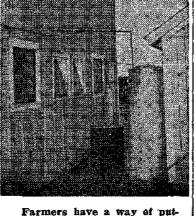

Shipping fever not only affects the cattle Michigan farmers purchase but frequently infects cattle already on the farm. Terrific losses by death and loss of weight result every fall, Dr. Reed says.

The main factor to remember, he says, is that the shipping fever symptoms occur when cattle are subjected to conditions that lower their resistance to any infection. He suggests buying cattle direct,
