MICHIGAN MIRROR NEWS BRIEFS

"Michigan has a 'one disaster' police force."

These are the words of State Police Commissioner Joseph A. Childs, an amiable man whose appearance resembles President Eisenhower.

It is Childs' task to direct operations of the Michigan State Police Department. He reached his conclusion about the department's limitation a few days after the Flint tornado—a disaster which required all troopers available. Fact: 142 officers, more than twice the usual number, were in the Upper Peninsula pursuing the last of seven escaped convicts.

Difficulties experienced during these two emergencies in two peninsulas are responsible for some concern by several state officials and many citizens.

Michigan's present authorized police strength is 678. Only 670 are now in uniform. In addition, the police department employs about 217 civilians at district posts and at state headquarters in East Lansing. The latter group includes radio operators, mechanics, clerks, custodians and secretarial workers.

Commissioner Childs admits that 678 sounds like a big number until the figure is analyzed. "Remember," he said, "there are 24 hours each day when state police are on duty." Central headquarters requires 87 men, mostly specialists. They include fire, racket, training, fingerprint laboratory experts and administration officers.

"Not one car was on patrol in the Lower Peninsula the days following the Flint tornado," said the police official. "And only two or three men were left at each post."

"Our present force," says Commissioner Childs, "is not sufficient to give the service we would like to give."

Michigan's police department has not kept pace with the growth of the state's population in the past 10 years. There are 57,022 square miles of land in the state, with 107,000 miles of road to be covered. An average of 64 million miles are driven daily by three million drivers in two and a half million vehicles. The total is much larger on week ends and holidays. And the total is much, much higher than it was in previous years.

"We need about 1,250 men on the state police force," estimated Commissioner Childs.

This is an aim to be hoped for over a period of years. The only way for this increase to come about, he added, is by a realization on the part of the public that the increase is badly needed. Funds for the state police department are appropriated each year by the Legislature. "The Legislature understands our problems," said the Commissioner, "but they have been unable to increase our funds materially because of the financial problems which still exist."

"Esprit de corps is high among police officers," said the Commissioner. "We have a very low turnover of men."

This surprises many people who consider salary schedules and working conditions for state police officers. Beginning patrolmen are paid $229 per month. Pay is increased to $250 when training is complete; stepped up over the next five years to $350. It usually takes 10 years before the next promotion. Uniforms are furnished; $3 per day is allowed for expenses.

Average workday is 9.5 hours; eight of patrol, the rest for routine reports. Officers are subject to emergency call 24 hours each of six days a week and must register their whereabouts during off duty periods. They are sometimes called back for the seventh, their "off" day; if they can be located.

Vacations and passes were cancelled when the Flint disaster hit. Men there and in the U. P. worked a seven-day week 14 hours a day. For this they received no extra pay. State police officers get 12 days a year vacation plus eight more to make up for usual holidays—when they work extra long and hard.

When an emergency strikes, a pre-arranged plan can take effect. Squads of seven men and one non-commissioned officer move into an area. Working alone or in teams of two to four, and with three-way radio communication; they tackle their problem.

In Flint the department's communication system permitted officers to play an important part co-ordinating efforts of the many agencies that responded to the disaster.

Compared with other states, Michigan's police department seems average in size. Some, like Pennsylvania with 1,800 officers, have larger forces; other states' departments concern themselves only with highway problems.

Michigan's patrolmen however, deal with everything from trespassing to murder. It's policemen must be experts in many fields.

Officers are trained to decide whether a ticket or a warning will bring the best result. Records show a growing number of traffic arrests; 137 per cent more than in 1940; about 72,000 in 1952.

"An increasing need for a bigger state police force will be felt as the rapid development of non-metropolitan areas continues," said the Commissioner. "About 71 per cent of state traffic deaths occurred in rural areas last year—the highest percentage on record."

When the Legislature is able to increase the size of the state police department, people of Michigan will get the quality of service they need.

Cheap Money Money has the reputation of being cheap these days, but still good enough to keep up the morale of holdup men.

New Irrigation Method Popular

Portable Sprinklers Solve Drought Problem

Farmers in all sections of the nation are depending more and more on light sprinkler-type irrigation to ease the threat of drought which has often brought financial disaster to large farm communities.

In the past two years the sprinkler-type of irrigation was used in the Kentucky burley tobacco belt for the first time.

Many farmers have worked out portable systems that can be moved from field to field by using lightweight pipe and equipment that is supplied by farm ponds and creeks. Such systems have been used to irrigate potatoes, hay crops and truck gardens, as well as tobacco.

A new idea in irrigating by the sprinkler method is the mixing of liquid fertilizer with irrigation water through a connection at the suction side of the pump. Combining the two operations saves time and money and has proven successful in a number of cases.

As an example of irrigating with a portable sprinkler system, William Foerch, Butler County, Pa., harvested the biggest yield in the county's history—600 bushels per acre. Water was pumped from a creek to a 14-acre field 140 feet above, and distributed through lightweight six-inch irrigation pipe. A large sprinkler was used that covered three acres from one spot at the rate of 400 gal. per minute.

Earnings of vegetable growers may decline from 1952. Demand is good but supplies and frozen food stocks are high.

The only time a waiter gets in bad taking a tip is when it comes from the race track.

The average U. S. family with $300 a month income spends approximately $1,000 a year for food, of which the farmer will probably get about $470 this year. The remaining $530 will go for processing and distribution.

From 60 to 70 per cent of the cost of food processing and distribution are wages. These include slaughtering, dressing, packing, etc.

Wheat production for 1953 will be above the demand at current prices. Wheat acreage allotments appear likely for fall, in order to get a 25 to 30 per cent cut in wheat production for 1954.

Fred Van Gilder, Livingston County, knows extra value when he sees it. That's why he has an electric water heater in his home and another in his milk house. This combination entitles him to a special rate that's a real money-saver. 30 gallons of 160 degree water daily in the milk house costs him only about 4c a day. And there's no work, no worry, no flame to fuss with.

Ask your Edison Farm Service Advisor about our combination rate. You too will agree it's the best deal for hot water.

IN THE HOME, this electric water heater for dishes, baths, laundry and other household asks. Real convenience!

IN THE MILK HOUSE, a 30 gal. electric water heater keeps utensils sparkling clean, bacteria count low, milk checks high.

Starter Fertilizer Is Not Enough

Nutrient Reserve Important Factor

Adding a starter fertilizer at planting time is like serving an appetizer before dinner. You have to provide a "main course" if you expect your crops to be well fed.

Some farmers figure they have done the whole job when they put in the starter fertilizer. The starter gives the plants quick early growth. But by itself the starter fertilizer cannot provide enough nourishment to carry the crop through to maturity.

To do an all-season job of feeding crops, the soil must have a reserve of nutrients. Otherwise the plants will starve in midsummer.

First step in assuring a well-stocked "pantry" of nutrients, is to have your soil tested. The test will tell you what nutrients are lacking and how much are needed to provide crops with a balanced supply of nitrogen, phosphate, and potash.

Starter fertilizer will only start your crop, not carry it through the summer.

Best way to fit the soil for maximum returns from fertilizer is to build up its organic matter content. This can be done by growing legumes such as alfalfa or sweet clover regularly in the rotation and feeding them plenty of fertilizer. The organic matter added by the legumes repairs damaged soil structure and improves drainage. When till, drainage and ventilation are good, crop roots can do their job of feeding the growing plant.

American farmers used about 462 million dollars worth of agricultural chemicals last year. Current estimates indicate that nearly a half-billion dollars will be spent this year.

The chemicals will be used to destroy insects that cause millions of dollars worth of damage to farm crops every year.

About 10,000,000 acres in the United States are sprayed with dusts and liquid chemicals. Some areas get both types and often as many as six to eight applications are made in the same field. Cotton crops receive 10 different sprayings.

In addition, a vast amount of forest area is sprayed to protect tree by ground application and from the air.

New and potent insecticides to combat crop pests are appearing on the market daily. Some of them are Systox, Aldrin, Dieldrin, and Benzene-hexachloride especially recommended for cotton, Emdrin and Chlordane which, though highly restricted in use now, promises good results with some food crops, and Parathion which has a variety of uses including some food crops.

Before using or buying any insecticide, however, it is recommended that the farmer consult his county agent or agricultural authorities on their application and effectiveness.

Farm Wives Tell Home Preferences Families Much Alike In Home They Want

A recent survey of approximately 4,000 farm operator families in 42 states revealed that more than half of those interviewed, in all sections of the country, have similar likes and dislikes of what should constitute a farm home.

More than half of those interviewed preferred a one-story house with a basement and two porches. Of those who wanted a house more than one story, most desired a bathroom and at least one bedroom on the first floor.

Spaciousness, a view, and plenty of light in the living room area was the expressed desire of many of the farm women interviewed.

Farm women were unanimous in their desire for a separate dining room, plus eating space in the kitchen.

Ninety per cent of those interviewed do all or most of the family washing at home and emphasized the need for laundry space.

Similarity in regional housing preferences began with the type of house itself. Over half of the families in the west, north central, and southern areas preferred a one-story house with a basement and two porches. Almost two-thirds of southern families added a fireplace.

Families in the northeast preferred a house with more than one story, still including the basement, two porches, fireplace, and an attic.

DRIVE IT YOURSELF!

You want a car you'll both be happy with—one that performs for a man, handles easily for a woman. We believe Oldsmobile's the answer. That's why we're launching this special "Double-Date" campaign—inviting you to come in and drive the Super "88" or Classic Ninety-Eight together. See for yourself how the "Rocket" Engine rules the straightaway, how Hydra-Matic's Super Range levels the hills, how the Power-Ride Chassis seems to iron out the roughest roads. Then...

LET HER DRIVE IT TOO!

You'll learn that Oldsmobile has a double appeal—to men and women alike. She's probably told you already how she loves Oldsmobile's long, sweeping lines and luxurious Custom-Lounge interiors. But at the wheel she'll discover that this big, powerful car is as obedient to her light touch as to yours—with Power Steering* and Power Brakes* taking the work out of driving. Come in soon. Discover the double appeal of Oldsmobile... together!

*These Power Features and new Atomic-Eye are optional at extra cost.

Profit from High Quality Roughage

How well dairy farmers handle their hay in the next few days will determine their feeding costs next winter, says Alfred P. Ballweg, Tuscola County agricultural agent.

Experiments at Michigan State College, he points out, show there is little difference in quality between silage and mow cured hay if the feed is handled properly. Field cured hay, if handled right and the weather cooperates, is of equal quality, too, he says.

Roughage—good hay or silage—Extension Dairyman Donald L. Murray of Michigan State College points out, is spoken of today as "a means to profit" instead of as "a means to more profits." He refers to the farmer's need of cutting costs wherever possible in order to show a margin of profit in these days of the so-called squeeze.

With good pasture and forage, he says, feed costs can be reduced to half the cost of feeding grain. It's the cheapest way of providing protein and other feed nutrients for dairy cows.

Maintaining good pasture, according to Murray, means extending the season after June. Alfalfa-brome, the main pasture in Michigan, sometimes is in short supply and other grasses go dormant after June. He suggests using Balbore for early and late pasture and sudan grass, where adapted, for pasture after June if it's needed. And, he adds, Reed canary grass can be sown in low places for pasture. It's palatable if fertilized and grazed heavily.

Also, if pasture runs low and the first cutting alfalfa-brome has been put in the silo, part of it can be fed as a supplement.

Home Demonstration Officers Chosen

Three county officers were elected at the June meeting of the home demonstration council, held at the Wilber Memorial 4-H Building June 11. They were: county chairman, Mrs. Charles Witkovsky, Caro, secretary, Mrs. George Thurston, Vassar, and community chairman, Mrs. Kenneth Laasiter, Caro. These ladies will serve for two years, beginning with the September council meeting, according to Miss Jean E. Gillies, county home demonstration agent.

The council decided to continue helping the Red Cross by sending cookies and helpers to the Saginaw Veterans' Hospital every six weeks.

Home demonstration achievement day was changed from a fall to a spring event. The next achievement day will be held in Fairgrove in the spring of 1954.

SHORT STORY

Letter
From Jessie
By James Harsh

JOAN PERKINS could tell from the happy look in her husband's eyes that he had heard from Jessie Cartwright. Three years without her looking after the children, but he had written to ask Jessie to come back to mother the triplets.

George fairly ran into the house, clutching the envelope. "She's coming back to us, darling. I knew she would..."

He stopped and saw the tears in Joan's eyes. She looked tired and noticed the way he had been looking at her.

Well, she thought, triplets take everything out of a young girl. Only twenty-three, she looked much older, she was sure.

A mother can't find time to take pride in herself. She hastily dried her tears before they became a rushing torrent.

"Haven't I been a good mother? They're never hungry, they're clean, and they've never been sick a day in their lives."

"With Jessie back, dear, you can start being a good wife."

"A good wife is a good mother. At least, that's what I've been told."

George interrupted, "I thought we had all this decided before you

She sank into the nearest chair, clutching the arms tightly, and holding back the tears as best as she could.

wrote to Jessie. We both decided that you needed some help with the boys. And we wouldn't have anyone in the house but good old Jessie.

Good Old Jessie, thought Joan, was only twenty-six, cute and had a way of making men forget they had wives. It wasn't that she was jealous. It was more a feeling of not being important where the triplets were concerned.

George put his hands on his wife's shoulders. "Think how we were free to go when Jessie was here before. Think of the old times, Joan, and I'm sure you will see that I'm not wrong in wanting her to return."

"I'll try to see, George. Maybe you're right." The tears started again. She sank into the nearest chair, clutching the arms tightly, holding herself back as best she could.

"I'll tell the boys Jessie is coming. They should know, George."

"Joan, for heaven's sake don't get melodramatic. I'm doing this whole thing only for your sake."

Are you, she wondered! He stood near the window looking at the boys playing in the yard.

She suddenly stood up and almost ran to the front door. "Boys, will you please come in."

"Joan... do you need to tell them now?"

The three boys stood in the doorway, faces flushed from the cold winter day, snow suits slightly wet.

"We are going to have someone come and live with us. She's a very nice lady and likes to play all kinds of games." But there were traces of sadness under the words that the boys did not detect.

"Why can't you play with us like you always do?" Billy asked.

"I'll bet she'll be a crabby old lady," Bobby said.

"Does she know how to tell stories like you?" Barry asked.

"You can go out and play some more, boys," George came over to the door and gave the triplets a fatherly shove out the door.

"All right, you win, he turned smiling to his wife. He kissed her. You're a wonderful mother, I can see that. And they tell me that a good mother is a good wife. And you're the best."

"George, I don't want to be a spoiled brat about this," Joan said.

"I guess I'm the spoiled one," he said, "always thinking of our freedom and the moments we might find alone. Jessie will find another job... in a home where there is only a second rate mother."

Joan felt she could tell her husband about the telegram from Jessie, now. She would have to, to ease her conscience. She would go into the bedroom and bring it to him; the telegram that came early that afternoon. The one that said that Jessie was getting married and would have children of her own to look after. She remembered the last line. I HOPE MR. PERKINS WILL UNDERSTAND.

Birthday Gifts Can Be Made from Almost Nothing

You don't have to be extremely clever with needle and thread or scissors, or an artist with colors or a paste pot to turn something almost worthless in its present state to an object of charm and usefulness. Here are many ideas with which to start, they'll probably suggest others.
The ingredients other than ideas required include mainly neatness rather than skill, a bit of time and some patience to see the project through. Decide how much time you'll be able to spare and plan to do only those presents by yourself that you can comfortably finish.

Cosy Slippers Will Please Anyone
Many remnant piles, perhaps your own, may be hiding several pieces of brightly colored felt. Maybe you've picked them up at some time long ago at a remnant sale, or perhaps you've stacked some old felt hats in the attic where they're gathering dust.
Patterns are available for slippers and they're very easy to cut from the felt. The sewing is easy, and the trimmings can be buttons, bows or even some old sequins if you're making slippers for a would-be glamorous school girl.
Then, of course, there are cozy slippers for the very young. These may be made from terry cloth or toweling. If white doesn't seem practical, use colored old towels or dye the white ones in pretty pastels.
It's traditional, of course, to knit or crochet slippers for warm winter comfort, and these, too, make wonderfully welcome presents. If you have the time and are inclined, then these might be on the gift list. One of the current favorites are long knitted hose with a leather sole which can be attached with a blanket type stitching.

Make Aprons From Odds, Ends
Almost every woman has a weakness for aprons whether she's still hunting for her Prince Charming and planning a domestic career or the mother of a busy household or grandmother who is busy helping her own youngsters or neighbors. See how many on your list would like aprons, and then check your sources for material.
Aprons can be made, and have been made, for a long time from almost anything—guest towels, remnants, handkerchiefs, sheer curtains, cotton draperies, old dresses and suits.
Take guest towels, for example, especially if they have a row of colored borders. Join the towels together lengthwise, and make small pleats or gathers at the top. Select some chintz in a color which blends with the towel color and

Use your Wrappings For Decorative Gifts
You can't bear to throw away lovely wrapping papers in which your presents for the past year, and maybe longer, came? There are some clever decorative uses for those wrappings and you may be able to fashion some lovely presents from them.
If someone on your gift list needs lampshades for a new apartment, consider some plain parchment shades that could be decorated by cutting out figures or designs from the wrapping paper. It may even be possible to use the paper itself, and then lacquer it as a finishing touch, though this involves more work than just the cut-outs.
Many of these wrapping papers are excellent for making storage boxes which would be welcome in any home. Consider durable cardboard boxes which you may also have in storage, and see if a set of two or three would go together, then cover with the paper.
Plain papers may also be used to cover these boxes, and then the inside might be lined with plaid or print in harmonizing tones.
Don't despair if you have only the smaller boxes to decorate. These will be welcome as drawer organizers by men or women as they will hold small items together in apple-pie order. Cuff links, gloves, handkerchiefs, and small accessories are all things that might go into them.

Better Results
The result would be better if reformers were chosen in a competitive examination instead of self-appointment.
Perfect Alibis

Dress a Doll

With just a few bits of fabric from your scrap bag you can make a dainty jumper like the one pictured here. Straps button on and are reversible. Even the blouse and lace-trimmed petticoat require but a few minutes of time at your sewing machine. You can select professional patterns if desired and learn all the latest shortcuts for actual doing from your local sewing center.

ets, thus softening the lines of the apron.
Extra heavy cotton aprons can make a nice apron for a man to use in his work shop. This would be heavy and practical, of sturdy material and long enough to cover trousers to the knee, especially if the draperies used are full length. Grippers might be used to snap it at the waist.
Plaid Remnants Prove Useful for Gifts
Too short skirts? Outgrown blouses hanging in closets? If they're made of colorful plaid materials, they might still prove very useful for gift accessories, especially for girls from grammar to college age.
Weskits, for instance, can be made from pleated plaid skirts which may be several years old and are now too short to be used as such, as well as possibly having some moth damage. You may even have enough of the plaid left for a tiny collar and cuff set to use on a jersey blouse or sweater.
Take care when sewing with plaid to match the plaids as you join them together. Always be certain the material is perfectly clean and well pressed before you cut from it. It's especially important that you lay pattern pieces on it, too, before cutting, so that you will know just how it will go together.
Matching belts and dummies to wear with basic dresses or skirts and blouses will usually come out of an outgrown blouse. Plaid is again a good choice, but other materials are equally good.
Velveteen or even velvet from old clothing such as a formal or a wrap might be used in much the same way as plaid remnants. Velveteen is an excellent fashion material right now for any number of items which might be given as presents.
Collar and cuff sets, stoles as well as low neckline dress-up toppers in velveteen are all accessories and fashions which are being featured. From small scraps of material it's possible to fashion delightful and decorative buttons, small evening bags which might be touched up with rhinestone or pearl trimming, belts and even berets.

Barry - Wilson Wedding Rites Told

On Saturday evening, June 13, in a 7 o'clock candlelight service at the Methodist Church in Caro, Miss Vada Marie Barry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barry of Caro, became the bride of A-3C James Purdy Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Wilson of Gagetown.
One hundred fifty guests were present to witness the double-ring ceremony performed by Rev. Joseph Dibley before an altar decorated with palms, candelabra and large baskets of white peonies.
Mrs. Fred McClorey of Rochester, Michigan, aunt of the bride, sang "Because" and "O, Promise Me." Mrs. Bernard Fitzstephens of Caro was the organist.
The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white floor-length gown of nylon tulle with Chantilly lace inserts over white slipper satin, styled with a fitted bodice and wrist-point sleeves. Her nylon illusion finger-tip veil was held in place by a coronation crown trimmed with pearls. She carried a white Bible topped with white carnations and wore a pearl necklace, a gift of the groom.
Miss Elizabeth Liddicoat of Caro was bridesmaid and wore a gown of pastel blue net over taffeta with matching headpiece and her colonial bouquet was of pink and white carnations.
George Wilson was best man for his brother and guests were ushered in by Fred McClorey and Keith Hillis of Caro.
For the occasion, the bride's mother wore a sheer black dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Donald Wilson, the groom's mother, chose a black and white print silk dress with black and white accessories and her corsage was also of pink carnations.
Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was given in the church parlors.
The bride and groom left Tuesday morning for Biloxi, Mississippi, where James is stationed with the United States Air Force.
