

Does On-The-Farm Grain Storage Pay?

A few months can make a whale of a difference in the amount of money a farmer gets for his grain crop, U. S. Department of Agriculture grain price figures show.

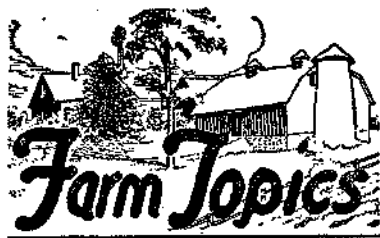

Data released by the U.S.D.A. in its recent bulletin entitled "Marketing Activities" demonstrates this: Farmers who have sold their grain at harvest time have received considerably less for it than did farmers who have stored theirs on their own farms in modern non-combustible buildings like Quonsets, and sold it at a later time.

The chart at right shows the average difference during the past four years between harvest-time and later high prices for corn, wheat, and soybeans. The average harvest-time prices are represented by the shaded portion of the price bars. The average gain by storage is shown on the white areas at the top of each bar.

The U.S.D.A. bulletin reports that similar opportunity for additional income by on-farm storage exists in the cases of oats and barley. Although not included in the chart, the gains made by farmers who stored either of these crops averaged 17 1/2 cents a bushel over the last four years.

When storage buildings are equipped with grain drying and conditioning facilities, which are available for all Quonsets, the farmer is in a still better position to make even more money, with less risk. He can harvest earlier with less weather worry, cut field losses due to shattering of small grain or dropped corn, and minimize chances of spoilage. After being emptied of grain, such buildings can be used for many other purposes and thus earn their keep the year around.

High Profits Come From High Yields

Plant of Fertilizer Will Increase Crop

The answer to high profits in agriculture is greater yields per acre. And the answer for greater yields is, in a great measure, fertilizer. One Illinois farmer grew 140 bushels of corn to the acre last year for a net profit of $161.00 per acre. His fertilizer bill was $29.10 per acre. On one field he put 400 pounds of 0-48-0 and 400 pounds of 0-0-50, and 30 pounds of ammonium nitrate.

Over-cultivation will cut corn production, many experts report. By plowing too often the farmer prunes the plant roots which must reach out for food. More and more farmers are coming to the new idea of cultivating a corn crop just once—when it is eight to ten inches high. To keep weeds under control these farmers are turning to spraying.

One of the most important things in raising corn is to know the limitations of the soil and treat it accordingly. It should be tested each year before fertilizer is applied. And although fertilizer costs are high, greater yields will off-set this production cost.

Berry Detergent
Researchers have developed a detergent said to cut strawberry mold 50 per cent at a cost of about seven cents per 100 pounds. Washing the berries in water alone reduces the mold by 20 per cent.

SHORT STORY

Spring Miracle

By Elizabeth Hall

THE silence grew and swelled, filling the room. May could feel it pressing against her.

They sat there. Allen, Pa. Aunt Ellie and May sat there in the parlor while the silence spread all around them, even into the corners of the room.

Allen's face was taut, the lines around his mouth rigid. He didn't look at all like he did when she met him on Elworth's Path. The whole idea of his coming to the house like anybody else to see her was a stupid one.

It had seemed clever when Allen had suggested it out of longing to spend more time with her.

"Going to the church supper Friday evening?" Pa asked. He was the one to feel the oppressiveness of the silence the least but he was the one to break it.

Allen swallowed before he could find his voice to answer.

"I guess so. Ain't nothing else to do." He had said the wrong thing.

"It's going to be a good supper," Pa's voice was reproving.

Pa acted as deacon of the church and he firmly believed that retribution would be visited on the heads of the foolish people who did not attend.

"Sure," Allen made his voice too hearty wanting to change the impression he had made.

May wanted to cry. She couldn't tell what her father was thinking.

"Oh, yes," May said. "Everything is going to be simply wonderful."

In all her seventeen years she had never been close to her father, had never been able to see behind the austere face that seldom wore any expression but one of grave thought.

Aunt Ellie was even more severe than her brother. May couldn't remember a single gesture of affection from her aunt. Aunt Ellie had done for her father and her ever since May's mother died. May was five then.

Pa looked at the old clock on the mantle. Then slowly, gravely he took his watch out of his pocket and looked at it. Allen looked uncomfortable and massaged the knuckles of his left hand with his right. He rose awkwardly to his feet.

"It's been a nice evening," he said, looking at Pa and Aunt Ellie and last at May. "I've enjoyed it."

May knew he hadn't enjoyed it. She knew that he had felt the stiffness and dullness of that room just as she had. But she also knew that he was thinking of the meetings all during April and May on Elworth's Path. The shy holding of hands, the few, so very few, kisses that had been nothing more than brief touchings.

The four of them walked into the small square hall. Aunt Ellie went up the stairs.

Pa shook hands with Allen with the same closed, serious face.

"Good night," he said and looked at May. His mouth seemed softer, almost as if it would smile. "Be upstairs in five minutes."

May could hardly believe she had heard the words. She knew her eyes were big as saucers, and she hoped her father could see how she thanked him for those few minutes.

With his foot on the bottom step Pa turned back. As if he wanted to read their thoughts, he looked searchingly first at Allen and then at May.

"No more meetings on Elworth's Path. Don't look right." Pa's voice sounded more gentle than May had ever heard it.

"Oh, Allen," Pa said. "Come by six o'clock and you can ride to the church supper with us."

May caught her breath. Pa was really wonderful. With no warning he was giving them just exactly what they wanted. Breathlessly May raised herself to tiptoe and placed a shy kiss on her father's cheek. She thought that she could see an embarrassed twinkle in his cold blue eyes as he patted her shoulder and turned back up the steps.

Without even waiting for Pa to reach the top of the stairway Allen's hard young hands found May's in a tight clasp.

"May," he whispered softly. "Everything's going to be alright."

"Yes. Oh, yes!" May said. "Everything is going to be simply wonderful."

The want ads are newsy too.

ERYSIPELAS TAKES ON VARIED FORMS

Many fine droves of swine are ruined because owners delay in finding out just what is wrong with their hogs.

For example, two or three lame pigs in a drove or a few with big leg joints, curling ears or bob tails may not seem at all serious. But more often than not, these stock disease, may appear in a masked or so-called "atypical" form. It can kill a pig without the animal having appeared sick. Or, it may cause an affected hog to linger on for months without normal gain or growth. And the disease is further confusing because some outbreaks of erysipelas may look much like true hog cholera.

Of course, the answers to cholera and erysipelas are entirely different. In some localities cholera may not have appeared for years, whereas erysipelas may be a more or less recurring problem. Yet hog cholera can jump over wide distances very unexpectedly.

And, when that happens, the farmer who makes a quick conclusion that the disease is erysipelas is in for some very serious losses. Similarly, if cholera is suspected, and erysipelas is the real offender, the losses can be heavy.

There is only one safe rule when symptoms appear, like those mentioned above. A prompt veterinary diagnosis can determine the true condition, and help save needless deaths.

A case of erysipelas.

simple symptoms may be the outward signs of a herd infection caused by germ-borne swine erysipelas — and a sudden flare with serious losses may follow.

Swine erysipelas, perhaps more often than almost any other live-

Slate Farm Building Meeting in Caro

Tuscola County farmers who are interested in building new barns and machine sheds or in repairing or remodeling existing structures will want to attend the special farm building meeting being held in the Courthouse at Caro on Wednesday, Aug. 19, at 8 p. m.

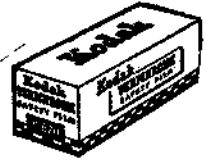

Ostrander states that Art Bell, extension specialist in agricultural engineering at Michigan State College, will be present to discuss building problems with the farmers. Mr. Bell has been with the extension service since 1927 and has a wide background of experience in farm construction.

According to Ostrander, Mr. Bell will bring models and plans for dairy barns and machine sheds. The first part of the program will be devoted to a discussion of the various models and plans. The remainder of the evening will be devoted to answering questions from individual farmers.

The meeting will start promptly at 8 p. m., Ostrander stated, with a short movie on dairy sanitation and dairy barn arrangements.

Nation's Farmers Are Research Minded

E. E. Ferrin, head of the University of Minnesota animal husbandry department, estimated recently that mid-west and western hog raisers have cut their feed bill 25 per cent since 1953 by applying advances in swine nutrition. It is, he reports, an indication that the nation's farmers have become increasingly research-minded in recent years and that this interest is apparently paying off in profits. This saving amounts to $54 million annually in Minnesota alone, he said. But he indicated there's still room for improvement. Iowa experiment station scientists claim that if hog raisers used all the feed information and guidance now available, they could get 100 pounds of grain with only four hundred pounds of feed. That would be a saving of 67 pounds of feed per hundred pounds of hog over the Iowa average for 1950.

FROM THE FILES OF THE CHRONICLE

Thirty-five years ago
With Hall in the box, supported by Stout as catcher, Brooker, shortstop; J. Muntz, first base; Coulter, second; Benkelman, third; S. Muntz, right field; Hutchinson, left, and Johnson in center, the Cass City Home Guard team presented a strong formation against the Reese Tigers last Thursday afternoon and defeated the "crack" team by a 6-3 score. Sergeant William C. Putnam of Co. C, 125th Infantry, has been mentioned for gallantry by Major General William Haan and Major Augustus Gansser.

Twenty-five years ago
John Middel, 20, and Charles Bodie, 18, both of Detroit, were sentenced in the Tuscola County Circuit Court on Friday morning to serve from 15 to 30 years in the Michigan Reformatory at Ionia. The youths were arrested for attempted robbery of the Elkland Gas and Oil Co.'s station at Cass City on the night of August 6. The Farm Produce Company declared net profits of $11,096.96 for the past year at their annual meeting. Seven directors were re-elected. They were: W. J. Schwieger, N. A. Perry, J. A. Benkelman, C. J. Striffler, Smith Hutchinson, L. W. Hall and Joshua Fisher. The fifth annual Kitchen reunion was held Aug. 4 at the home of the president and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Kitchen of Evergreen Township.

Ten years ago
The teacher engaged for the McConnell School in Greenleaf Township recently resigned and, owing to the scarcity of instructors, school patrons at a meeting last week voted to close the school and send the pupils to the Cass City School for instruction. Dr. E. C. Fritz, chairman of the War Chest Drive committee, announced today his vice-chairmen for directing the solicitation of all the families in Elkland Township. Keith McConkey and Hugh Munro will choose and direct the solicitors in Cass City and Willis Campbell and Pete Reinstra will handle the campaign outside the village limits in Elkland Township. Miss Betty Fort became the bride of Mr. Philip Retherford of Deford on August 10, the 25th wedding anniversary of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fort. At the present time, only 12 students have signed up for the Tuscola County Normal School. This is about one-half of the usual number.

Five years ago
Final papers were signed on Thursday, Aug. 5, completing the transaction of the former sugar factory's "boarding house" by the Michigan Sugar Co. to the Tuscola County 4-H Council. The building will be used as a dormitory and a group meeting hall for banquets and parties. A drive to raise money to pay for the building will begin immediately with a goal of $10,000. Tommy Cybulski, seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Cybulski, suffered a two-inch cut in his right leg near the abdomen. He was hurt when he and another boy were pushing a two-wheel trailer and he was pinned between the hitch and a tree. POWER, POWER EVERYWHERE!

to Double
Your Driving
Thrills!

Swift, hushed going power... easy, sure-footed stopping power... effortless, sure-control turning power... you'll find all these high-powered thrills at the wheel of a dashing new Oldsmobile! Come in—drive a glamorous Super "88" or Classic Ninety-Eight. See how the 165 hp. "Rocket" Engine teams with Hydra-Matic Super Drive* to level the hills, command the straightaway. How Power Brakes* ease you to a faster, safer stop with just a toe-touch. How easily you'll park, turn and maneuver with brawny Power Steering* to take over 80% of the work! No wonder the new Oldsmobile appeals to men and women alike! It's the car you should try together. So see us soon—for a double-date with a "Rocket 8"!

*Optional at extra cost.
