SHORT STORY

The Wise Guy
By John Gonnolly

JUST after the feature race at Jamaica race track one Saturday, Jake Hunter and I are standing back of the finish line. Jake is not the reserved type horseplayer. Once he gets ahead he grows long on advice, yakety-yak. All afternoon he needles me. "I told you, Homer," he says when he gets his winners. "Throw away your form and stick with your Uncle Jackie's peerless picks. I'll make you rich and fat."

"Thirty bucks!" the redhead let out a feeble echo. He was severely wounded.

short, redheaded character comes up. He looks a sure bridge jumper, like he is personally responsible for all the loot that is bet and lost at the track. "Either of you guys want to buy a good watch, cheap?" he whispers to us. We shake our heads, but he's not stopped. "Listen, men," the redhead says. "I tapped myself out on the last race and if I go home empty again tonight my old lady'll massacre me. I got to have a stake to get me off the hook."

"I don't know," Jake says. "I don't know anything about watches. I'm no jeweler." "You don't have to be no jeweler," The little guy is indignant and he raises his voice from a whisper to a sort of hoarse whine. "All you got to be is able to read."

Tractors are so much a part of the American farm scene that no one gives them much thought. But they're an innovation in many other parts of the world. In Venezuela, where efforts are being made to increase food production, the National Agricultural Institute has founded a tractor farming school to teach students how to use the equipment. Above a class goes into the field to practice and study tractor farming. Last year Venezuela bought more than $19,000,000 worth of tractors and parts from the United States.

Make Them Eat More
Illinois livestock specialists report feeding antibiotics in hog rations will help get hogs ready for the best market price in August. Antibiotics have the effect of speeding gains in that they stimulate the hogs to eat more feed. And more feed intake means more pork on the hog.

These specialists point out that antibiotics will make your feed cost more, but pay for themselves in that the hog is ready for market in a shorter time and with more weight.

Meat Supply Down
Despite the increased marketing of beef, the total supply of red meat this year, including pork, beef, veal, lamb and mutton, may be a bit smaller than 1952, according to the Department of Agriculture. The total meat supply per person figures out at about 142 pounds against 145 last year. Increased population and reduced pork supplies accounts for the drop.

GARDEN IRRIGATION

For home gardeners who irrigate their plots in dry weather, here is a tip. Place the end of the hose on a board, as pictured above, and it will prevent washing of the soil. This method of irrigating is very effective and will insure top yield even in the driest weather.

Direct Processing Is New Farm Idea

A number of farmers throughout the country have come up with the idea of processing their products for direct sale to the consumer or store as a method of getting a bigger share of each dollar spent for food.

Country Gentleman reports how some farmers are doing it:

George Moore has found a market for beef in the freezers of friends living within a 50-mile radius of his Geneva, N. Y., farm. He sends his customers a mimeographed letter three months in advance of slaughter date. The letter sets the deadline for advance orders, explains the pricing formula and cost of processing. With it is an order blank on which the customer indicates preferences of cuts and weights. Moore sells at the current wholesale price for choice grade, charging six cents more a pound for hindquarters and four cents less for fronts.

Fifteen poultrymen in the Syracuse, N. Y., area are getting nine cents a dozen over the New York price by grading, candling and packing their eggs in Golden Acres Grade A cartons and delivering them each week direct to the coolers in stores of the Producers and Customers Family Foods Chain.

Farmers in other sections may find this method of marketing their products as profitable as the examples given.

Advertise it in the Chronicle.

New Canned Milk

A new plant in Moorhead, Minnesota, is turning out canned milk without refrigeration. Manufacturers say the process permits sterilizing the milk at lower temperatures than was possible before and there is no "cooked" taste to the product. The new canning process is expected to conserve milk during periods of over-production, and can be used to fill the needs of the Armed Forces and deficiency areas. Several other plants are under construction.

Shipping Fever

Calves can be effectively treated for shipping fever by the use of terramycin and serum in a blunt, spinal-type needle, it has been reported.

Crop Goals Call For More Fertilizer

Farmers will spend more than $1 billion this year for 21 million tons of fertilizer. This will be the largest amount in agricultural history, and it will go into the cultivation of nearly 360 million acres of farm land as farmers strive to equal or exceed 1952's agricultural production record.

In 1952 farmers used 20 million tons of fertilizer, which is credited by the U. S. Department of Agriculture with making possible one-fourth of all agricultural production. The U.S.D.A. also estimates that farmers receive an average of $3.75 in additional income for every dollar spent for soil-enriching nutrients.

One reason for the expected increase in fertilizer consumption is the improved supply of sulphur, a principal ingredient. A shortage that began with the Korean war restricted the mineral's use for two years, but now supply is meeting current demands.

The fertilizer industry is the nation's biggest user of sulphur.

Newcastle Vaccine

Canadian scientists report the development of a vaccine that gives the majority of pullets inoculated protection against Newcastle disease for thirteen months or longer. The vaccine has been used on several thousand birds in field trials. In birds not in production, no trouble of any kind was reported. Among a few of the laying flocks there was a drop in egg production following the inoculation, the report stated.

Sales Tax Take

State sales taxes, used as an index of retail business activity, set a new record of $261,871,000 for 1952.

Helwig Shines as Army Softball Hurler

In keeping with the post armistice athletic policy, the 15th Can Do Infantry regiment in Korea recently inaugurated a softball circuit throughout the Unit and the Medics of Blue Battalion Aid Station emerged the victors. The following excerpt is taken from a newspaper clipping from over there which reads in part "One of the outstanding stars of the entire series was Cpl. Elwyn Helwig. In six games played to determine the champions of his battalion, Helwig pitched every one, allowing not one run to cross the plate. He pitched the next two games with the First and Second Battalions, winning both contests. In the intra-divisional series, Helwig pitched his team to victory over the 65th and 7th Regiments before stopping Divarty's bid for a win. The two games at Corps again found Cpl. Helwig on the mound for the Blue Aidmen. All in all, he pitched his team to 12 straight victories before losing the unlucky 13th game to the Engineers.

Rally Scheduled

This rally is one of nine such rallies held this same time. Other churches in this area participating in this rally are: Caro, Ellington, Quanicasee, Colling, Gageton, Bad Axe, Filion and Sandusky.

SHORT STORY

The Horse Thief

By James D. Harsh

I NEVER should have trusted Clint Stone the day he rode into my ranch wanting a job as horse wrangler. Maybe it was the narrow eyes and the way he had of running his hands along his gun belt, made him look suspicious. After two months of working for the Lazy X ranch, he up and vanishes with two of my best studs.

Ben Elders, my foreman roared into the house the morning Clint left. He was a comical sight, Stetson and boots and pajamas in between, bending over me, shaking me until I plumb near rolled out of bed. "Clint stole your best studs, Boss!" Ben said, his eyes rolling with anger.

Somehow I sorta expected something like that to happen, so I took it calmly. "When did he leave?"

"Near two hours ago. He told the cook he was going to take a ride to sorta think things over. When I went to feed the horses two of your top studs was missing."

The sun was warm as it came through the window. Ben called

"Just goes to show you, boss, a man should read everything before he signs. You can't trust nobody these days."

some of the boys together. I told them what had happened. It was only a matter of minutes until we were all saddled and heading out across a wide expanse of ground, following what looked like two horse tracks. It was kind of a hunch I had about the slicker taking his loot into Pinto Plains where he could get a good price for the horses. Jedd Masters was a dealer in the town who bought at a good price and didn't much care whose brand rode on the horse's flank.

Jedd was the slickest hombre I'd ever heard of. No one could put a finger on him because the law hadn't caught him in the act.

It was late afternoon when we neared Jedd's place laying calm and peaceful on the outskirts of Pinto Plains. Ben was the first to spot the Lazy X studs tied outside Jedd's cabin. I halted the men some distance from the place, and got down and went to the front door on foot. I knocked and a small man with a dried face opened the door.

"I'm Mark Forsythe of the Lazy X." I said calmly forcing my way inside, over my shoulder I could see Ben coming toward the cabin, his lean hand resting on his 45.

"So?" Jedd looked troubled.

"What did the gent take for the critters outside?" I nodded to where Jube and Skipper were tied.

"That's my business," he spat.

I drew fast and leveled my Colt into his sagging belly. He squirmed, fear showing on his face.

"Half a grand. But... he told me they were his... no law saying a man can't buy a couple horses. I paid him off and he beat it." His thin lips were trembling.

"Well, I'm buying 'em back from you." I threw five hundred dollars at his feet and backed out the door. He stared at the green backs, then stepped and picked them up. "I can't prove you didn't know they were stolen; but if I ever catch your kind around my place I'll blow you to kingdom come."

When I got outside I saw something that made me stop dead still. The sheriff and Clint Stone were riding hard in our direction. Clint stayed on his horse when the sheriff pushed into the cabin. Then Jedd came out, his hands raised skyward.

"Thanks to your hand here, we finally got the goods on Jedd Masters. Pretty smart idea you had, sending Clint here to Jedd like he was unloading a pair of stolen studs. There's no law in these parts again horse dealing, but when a man signs a receipt saying he's paying for stolen property then I figure he ain't playing fair and square."

What ever reason Clint had for laying for Jedd I'll never know, cause a cowboy's business is his own as long as he can cut the mustard. Clint handed me a wad of bills which totaled five hundred and we started back to the ranch.

"Just goes to show you, boss, a man should read everything before he signs. You can't trust nobody these days." Clint had sort of self satisfied grin on his sun tanned face.

MICHIGAN MIRROR NEWS BRIEFS

Buck passing on bingo and other forms of "charitable" gambling is responsible for one of the dizziest political situations in years. Every government agency finds it wise or necessary to point its finger in another direction. Result: Any one trying to fix responsibility gets goggy running a circle from office to office.

Boiled down, the situation can be simply described. Banning of bingo depends on the prosecutor and sheriff in each county. These officials can order arrests. If they prove their cases, courts have little choice, must find defendants guilty. State law and legal precedence are plain. Bingo and raffles are unlawful according to Supreme Court interpretations.

"Outs" exist for just about everyone. The Governor, whose office permits him to remove a local official not performing his duty, refuses to become involved. "It's strictly a local issue," he says. The Attorney General cannot yield to requests that he permit "charitable" bingo games. He explains, he "can only interpret the laws as they are written."

State Police have a long standing policy of taking part in local law enforcement only when requested by local officials or when ordered by the governor. It is natural that they should maintain this practice with bingo. And they do.

Ducking out from behind the eight ball are local police officials and prosecutors. Cussed if they do and cussed if they don't, they face the dilemma of angering part of the local population no matter what they do. Since they are elected officials, their job may depend on the keenness with which they analyze hometown sentiment. If sufficient pressure is brought to bear, local officials forbid such lotteries; otherwise, they tend to overlook them.

So lottery is permitted in one part of the state; forbidden in others. Detroit firemen, who hold an annual raffle of automobiles at a field day, were warned by Detroit Police Commissioner Donald Leonard that they would be arrested if they sold tickets this year. They countered by securing an injunction from a Detroit Circuit Judge preventing enforcement of the gambling law in their case. Copies of the injunction were served upon Detroit and State Police Commissioners, prosecutors and the Attorney General. Legal mills grind sufficiently slowly so that tickets were sold and the raffle held before anything could be done—if anyone had wanted to do anything!

Only solution, says the Attorney General's office, is for the Legislature to make new laws which would permit "charitable" gambling; make practical definitions about the other forms of lotteries and games of chance.

Feeling runs high on both sides of this argument. In the minds of some legislators, the harm done is more theoretical than practical.

For these reasons, no one should be surprised if the Legislature is "too busy with more pressing matters" to consider the question at all.

About 70,000 more children are starting school this year than last September," says Clair L. Taylor, superintendent of Michigan Department of Public Instruction.

Youngsters in school relieve mothers of worries during class hours, but the vastly increased number of them add up to a man-sized headache for school administrators in crowded areas.

Most difficulties are encountered in lower grades of schools in metropolitan districts, those areas adjoining Detroit, Flint, Grand Rapids, Lansing and other cities.

Biggest educational problem is also an old one. Teachers and their salaries. Although pay in many areas is fair, average salary for all school teachers in Michigan is only $3,900 per year.

This, compared with $3,030 starting salary for untrained stenographers under state civil service, does not seem an amount to attract people into the teaching profession.

Financing schools will be more difficult, too. Mr. Taylor expects about $185 million to be available for school districts this year. This is one million less than last. Michigan's 1,250,000 school children need 45,000 teachers (2,000 more than 1952). Figured on a per student basis, schools must operate on $147 per year, a decrease of $10 as compared to last year.

Residents must be prepared to hear more and more about education problems. This year's increase of 70,000 students is largely made up of children born since the close of World War II. They mark the first part of an increase which is expected to swell each year. The meeting of this challenge is a primary consideration of leading educators. Even now they point out the inadequacies of schools at all levels from kindergarten to college.

A new tax form will soon be in the mail. It will be sent to companies and people taking in $20,000 or more a year.

It concerns the first payment of the Business Receipts Tax which was enacted mid the furor of closing days of the last Legislative session. The form is simple. It asks for only four figures: How much was taken in? How much can be deducted? How much is the difference? How much is due?
