

Lost in Plane Crash

Witzke's Remains Still Unrecovered

AE/2 Arnold Julius Witzke, 21, of Gagetown is among the missing victims of a plane crash off the coast of Sicily, according to a telegram received by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Witzke from the chief of naval personnel Friday.

The telegram sent from Washington said, "A report received here states your son, Arnold Julius, of the U. S. Navy is missing since May 27 when he was a passenger on a plane observed to crash in the water north of Sicily."

The message stated that everything was being done to locate the bodies, but the family has received no further report. The missing youth had been in the navy three years in May and was scheduled to return to the United States this summer.

He had a year remaining in his four-year enlistment. Stationed aboard an aircraft carrier, Mr. Witzke had achieved the rating of aviation electrician second class.

A previous report to the parents listed Mr. Witzke as being dead.

Besides his parents, he is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Vern Gettel of Unionville and Mrs. Roy Wildman of Gagetown, and two brothers, Dale of Detroit and Rudy at home.

From the Editor's Corner

Most old-time residents of the area know that there were two papers in Cass City shortly before the turn of the century—we'll wager, however, that very few persons knew that there were three at one time.

The third had a very brief existence. It was called the Cass City Times and was published by Gamble and Wickware. The first issue was dated July 1, 1885.

The paper published at least 18 issues—in the files of the Chronicle is a paper marked number 18.

The Times must have been one of the first "pocket book" editions. The sheet size was four and one half inches by six inches. Each edition was four pages. Subscription price was 20 cents per year.

At the time when the Times started publication, the Cass City Enterprise, published by A. A. P. McDowell, was going strong.

Started in 1881, the paper was a flourishing five-column, eight-page sheet by 1886. By 1892, the Enterprise had expanded to six columns.

It was not until 1899 that the Tri-County Chronicle was founded by Rev. Frederick Klump, a three-column, 10-page paper.

Both papers existed until April 20, 1906, when H. F. Lenzner, who had purchased the Tri-County Chronicle, purchased the Enterprise and changed the name to the Cass City Chronicle.

The Chronicle recently celebrated its 49th birthday as Cass City's newspaper.

Kindergarten Class Graduates Friday

In ceremonies scheduled today (Friday) at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m., members of the kindergarten class of Cass City school will receive the first diplomas of their school careers.

Seventy-two children are expected to graduate into the first grade—40 students will receive their diplomas in the morning and the 32 pupils will be honored in the afternoon.

The students have been working on a program which they will present for their parents and other interested persons attending.

Ice cream and cookies will be served at the conclusion of the ceremonies.

300 Attend Annual Memorial Day Program Here

An estimated 300 persons waited an hour while rain delayed the annual Memorial Day program at Cass City and then gathered at Elkland Cemetery to hear Rev. Earl M. Crane deliver the feature address of the day.

Prior to his speech, the crowd witnessed the annual Memorial Day parade. Featured in the parade were two school bands, boy scouts, girl scouts, American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The bands played three numbers as part of the program. Joseph Dann spoke briefly for the veterans and William Profit, Tuscola County register of deeds, introduced the speakers.

Dedication Caps Campaign for School

The final step in a project that received the approval of voters June 9, 1952, when the district authorized a bond issue of $70,000 was completed Friday when members of the district and guests gathered for the dedication ceremonies of the new Evergreen Township Unit School held in the school auditorium.

The program climaxed the construction of one of the most modern rural eighth-grade schools in the state.

Members of the board had proposed the plan when they learned that the former building would be impossible to transport to surrounding villages.

Arthur Dondineau, superintendent of Detroit schools, said, in the feature address, that the farms, people, towns and definitely the children would be improved by the erection of the new facilities.

Other parts of the program included the invocation by Rev. Louis Caister, the welcome by Lloyd Severance and the response by Mary Leslie.

The group was entertained by music from the Cass City Grade School Band. John Francis introduced the guests and Jason Kitchin traced the history of the township school.

A tribute to Marian Keyworth, who donated eight acres of land for the school site, was presented by Bruce Kritzman. Presentation of the building was handled by Norman Rasch, contractor; A. Charles Jones, architect, and John W. Thomas, attorney.

The building was accepted by Milton Fox and Arlington Gray. A musical interlude was presented by a girls' quartet of JoAnn Burns, Janice Dorman and Audrey and Wanda Bader. The girls were accompanied by Mrs. Keith Murphy.

The dedication ceremony was led by Paul Murray and Elder

Scouts to Gather Clothes Hangers For Added Funds

Almost any day now you can expect a boy scout of troop 194 to be knocking at your door, asking you for unwanted hangers that the troop can turn into cash.

Through an arrangement with King's Cleaners, who has volunteered to pay the boys one cent each for the hangers, the scouts hope to swell their treasury.

The idea was suggested by Mrs. Harry Little, who saw the plan operating in Texas where a concern gave one half cent each for the hangers.

Official days for the drive are the second and third weeks of June.

Leaders in charge of the event said that village residents will help the scouts if they tie their surplus hangers together for easy pickup.

Carrying out a money-making pasture-silage program is like working a forage crossword puzzle—you seed the crops that fit across the farm operation and then put down as silage what wouldn't go up as hay.
Agricultural economists at Michigan State College have worked out figures on costs of establishing and maintaining different kinds of forage crops—but farmers must do some figuring also. The particular farm problems and the livestock operation will play a big role.
Then, when it comes to silage, farm croppers point out, you may put some weedy forages into the silo that would not make good hay. It will feed out pretty well and the weed seeds won't mature.
James Nielson, MSC farm economist, offers some information on seeding and annual costs—and returns—for six Michigan forage crops. Seedbed, seed, fertilizer and lime are included in seeding costs. Annual costs are based on length of use and include seeding costs, interest, taxes, overhead and added fertilizer for alfalfa-brome and reed canary.
At current prices and recommended rates, alfalfa-brome costs $30 per acre to establish and $16 per acre per year. For the $16 farmers can expect 120 days of pasture for a mature cow.
Red clover-timothy costs $21.50 per acre and yields slightly more than one year—for $20 cost per year or 90 days pasture for a mature cow.
Reed canary—harder to start but a longtime yielder—costs $40 per acre but only $11.25 per year and gives about 200 days of grazing.
June grass costs only $6.75 to start and only $3.75 per year but it only gives 50 days of pasture in May and June.
Rye costs $12.75 per acre—which rates as $20.75 per year—and that is high for only 60 days, but it comes in early spring and late fall when other pastures may not be productive.
Sudan grass, another emergency crop, costs $18.25 to establish an acre, or $24 per year—and it gives about 100 days of grazing.
In an Ionia County study, an average of 2,045 pounds of 4 percent milk were produced per acre of rotation pasture such as alfalfa-brome. From reed canary it was 2,560 pounds and 1,087 for June grass and 2,222 for sudan grass. Grain, labor, management and cash helped the pasture do this job, Nielson stresses.

SHORT STORY

Rented Suit

By Jack Creek

The boy hesitated outside the shop with the sign in the window that said "FORMAL CLOTHING FOR RENT." Then he went in. He was relieved to find that he was the only customer.

The proprietor, over whom he towered, waited patiently while the youth took out his wallet and counted out the required number of one dollar bills. The man completed the transaction by handing a brown paper parcel over the counter.

"The boy was turning to go when the shopkeeper's voice stopped him. 'Any time you want to buy that suit, son,' he said, 'you bring in the money and it's yours.'"

The boy looked back. "I don't sell it on the installment plan," he suggested hesitantly.

"Can't, young fellow. Don't make enough on it for that. You'd be surprised at the suits that come back here with gravy or ketchup splashed all over the front."

"Don't forget," he added, "that suit's got to be back here Monday. It's promised for Monday night."

The young man gained the street and then the main street with his precious package clutched under his arm.

At home, in his room, he carefully unwrapped his rented dress suit and as carefully tried it on. He looked in the mirror. Not bad. The waist was a bit big. It fitted him as well as a custom-made suit, almost.

He took it off Saturday. He had half-promised to go ice-fishing with a couple of the boys. But, somehow, he didn't feel like it. He sauntered downstairs. His father was reading the paper. He stood there till his father looked up. "I figure I'll have enough," he spoke casually, "but I don't want to run short. Just to make sure, could I have a five?"

At last the big night came. The suit didn't look too bad with a tuck in the waist of the pants. But he caught his breath when he saw Fern. Her creation was a dream, violet and white and fluffy. But then her old man had dough. Everybody said so. Being a girl, she didn't really have to work. The boy felt suddenly awkward. Then his mouth tightened. He'd show them. He'd make more money than Fern's father ever thought of having.

Fern looked up at him half-shyly. "Shall we go, Jimmy?"

They took a taxi. His old jalopy was good enough for picnics but it'd sure look cheap beside all the other expensive cars.

The dinner was a success. Jimmy could hardly keep his eyes off Fern. And, in the dancing that followed, he got a chance to hold her in his arms. Delicate, sweet, fragrant.

"Are you enjoying yourself, Jimmy?"

"What-oh, sure. Yeah, great." She sighed. "The music's heavenly, isn't it?"

One a.m. when the dance broke up, "Would you like to walk?" Fern asked as they left the floor.

He knew she meant "can you afford a taxi?" Fern was like that, considerate. Any other time he would have fallen in with her suggestion, but tonight was different. "It's late," he said. "Your folks 'll be worried." He'd show her he was no piker.

Monday evening after work he returned to the clothing store. He hoped that nobody saw him. They might tell Fern and he didn't want her to know that he couldn't even afford a dress suit. With apprehension he entered but again he was the only customer.

"Thanks," he said, handing the parcel over. "And I might want it again in another two weeks."

He left the shop.

"All right," said the man, "your boy friend's gone."

A graceful young lady emerged from behind a hangar of old clothes.

"Thank you." She smiled gratefully. "And-will that same dress be available in about two weeks time, I may need it then."

One man finds it much easier to be tolerant of another who has the same faults he has.

Farm Topics

New Insecticides Nip Resistant Fly Have Low Toxicity To Stock and Humans

Mixtures of sugar and organic phosphate insecticides that can be shaken like salt onto floors of livestock buildings are showing great promise as a method of controlling flies resistant to such chlorinated hydrocarbon insecticides as DDT, report U. S. Department of Agriculture entomologists.

Three phosphate insecticides—malathion, diazinon, and a dialkyl phosphate material—were tested at the Orlando, Florida, laboratory of the USDA's Agricultural Research Service during 1953, and all of them provided effective in controlling DDT-resistant flies.

The three phosphates appear to be well suited for farm use against resistant flies because they are not only the best fly-killers of several chemicals tested, but have relatively low toxicity.

In practical tests in dairy barns in the Orlando area, the Department entomologists got excellent control of flies by applying the dry sugar bait at the rate of 100 grams (about 3.5 ounces) in each building. They found it necessary to treat five times a week for 2 or 3 weeks to reduce fly populations to a low level in locations where the pests could breed readily. Enough insecticide for the entire fly season would cost less than a single residual insecticide spray.

Tractor Tires

Experiments show that water placed in tractor tires to make them heavier does not make them easier to puncture. Tests showed that at 10 m.p.h. and pressures of 12-20 pounds, normally used for farm work, a tire 75 per cent filled with water resisted vertical pin as well as air filled tire. At 32 pounds, water-filled tire, tho, is not as resistant.

Michigan education circles were shocked last week when a giant-sized fly turned up in the oatmeal, an ointment carefully prepared to lubricate state school finances.

Cause for the concern was a letter signed by Prentiss M. Brown, former U. S. Senator. Writing as chairman of a group called the Michigan Committee for Better Schools, Brown makes a strong plea for changes in the State Constitution. Since these changes must come about by referendum, the letter urges that readers circulate petitions so that the question can be listed on the ballot.

Government finance involves technical economic terms. It is extremely difficult for Mr. Average Man to understand. Talk of equalization, valuation, millage limitations, etc., seems very complicated to people who do not deal often with such terms.

State school people, who now consider the Conlin plan for improving sales tax diversion provisions much more desirable, are worried that the voter will become confused about which amendment to vote for. The result they fear is that he will vote against both. Quickest way to beat the new threat is to keep it off the ballot.

Opposition to the "Better Schools" plan was not long in developing. Representatives from the State Department of Public Instruction; MEA, a professional organization representing 38,000 of Michigan's 43,000 teachers; Michigan Association of School Administrators; Michigan Farm Bureau and several other groups took stands against the proposals.

Strong terms, were used.

Dr. A. J. Phillips, executive secretary of MEA, said the passage would "seriously curtail the educational opportunities of public school children." Wesley Thomas, director of public relations for the group, called the "Better Schools" publicity "misleading to the public." Harold R. Brown, chief of finance for the State Department of Public Instruction, charged that "real dangers" for the school system exist in the plan.

Surprise was exhibited by several of these people that Prentiss M. Brown would identify himself with a program they considered to be so poorly conceived. Stanley Powell of the Farm Bureau said that apparently the Detroit group "had tried to solve speedily problems other groups have worked on for years in search of fair, practical answers."

Biggest objection is to a provision which would freeze into the Constitution a formula setting definite percentages of income for schools. This matter, opponents say, should be left to the discretion of the legislature. Secondly, they claim that proposals restricting amounts school districts could receive to two thirds of funds raised there, would make it impossible for some districts to operate schools at all. Still another objection is that terms of the proposed amendment are very unclear.

Since only schools in metropolitan areas are expected to benefit under this plan, and because Nicholas J. Kinn of the Detroit Board of Commerce has advanced proposals similar to this, a finger of suspicion is pointed in the direction of Detroit.

"This is another attempt to improve on situations described in the 'Princeton report,'" said Jack Milligan, assistant director of the Department of Public Instruction. "But the cure is worse than the disease."

Some counties receive much more money back from the state under present law than they pay in, according to the Michigan State Aid Survey of 1953, compiled by two Princeton tax experts.

Classic example is Kalkaska which is listed as receiving $716 in state aid for every $100 raised by local taxation. Wayne County residents, who compare that figure with the $53 they receive from Lansing for every $100 they send, are anxious to revise things in their favor.

"The unhealthy, destructive conditions," says Brown's letter, "is largely traceable to the alarming and fantastic dispersion of state tax collections through uncontrolled and unneeded grants-in-aid and other payments

The Conlin plan makes sales tax diversion more sound financially by requiring that current returns be used as a basis for payment rather than totals from previous years. It changes the present breakdown only slightly; a flat two cents of every three collected is earmarked for schools. Local cities and townships would receive, (as they do now) one-half the remaining penny, minus collection costs. The other half cent goes to the treasury.

Room for honest difference of opinion exists under the American system of government. Whether voters of Michigan will decide in favor of the Conlin plan, the proposals of the Better Schools Committee, or neither is something that they themselves will decide.

Tradition is a fine thing if used to set a course in life—not as an anchor.

Some girls are reluctant to play ball with a guy until he gets a diamond.

Michigan education circles were shocked last week when a giant-sized fly turned up in the oatmeal, an ointment carefully prepared to lubricate state school finances.

Cause for the concern was a letter signed by Prentiss M. Brown, former U. S. Senator. Writing as chairman of a group called the Michigan Committee for Better Schools, Brown makes a strong plea for changes in the State Constitution. Since these changes must come about by referendum, the letter urges that readers circulate petitions so that the question can be listed on the ballot.

Government finance involves technical economic terms. It is extremely difficult for Mr. Average Man to understand. Talk of equalization, valuation, millage limitations, etc., seems very complicated to people who do not deal often with such terms.

State school people, who now consider the Conlin plan for improving sales tax diversion provisions much more desirable, are worried that the voter will become confused about which amendment to vote for. The result they fear is that he will vote against both. Quickest way to beat the new threat is to keep it off the ballot.

Opposition to the "Better Schools" plan was not long in developing. Representatives from the State Department of Public Instruction; MEA, a professional organization representing 38,000 of Michigan's 43,000 teachers; Michigan Association of School Administrators; Michigan Farm Bureau and several other groups took stands against the proposals.

Strong terms, were used.

Dr. A. J. Phillips, executive secretary of MEA, said the passage would "seriously curtail the educational opportunities of public school children." Wesley Thomas, director of public relations for the group, called the "Better Schools" publicity "misleading to the public." Harold R. Brown, chief of finance for the State Department of Public Instruction, charged that "real dangers" for the school system exist in the plan.

Surprise was exhibited by several of these people that Prentiss M. Brown would identify himself with a program they considered to be so poorly conceived. Stanley Powell of the Farm Bureau said that apparently the Detroit group "had tried to solve speedily problems other groups have worked on for years in search of fair, practical answers."

Biggest objection is to a provision which would freeze into the Constitution a formula setting definite percentages of income for schools. This matter, opponents say, should be left to the discretion of the legislature. Secondly, they claim that proposals restricting amounts school districts could receive to two thirds of funds raised there, would make it impossible for some districts to operate schools at all. Still another objection is that terms of the proposed amendment are very unclear.

Since only schools in metropolitan areas are expected to benefit under this plan, and because Nicholas J. Kinn of the Detroit Board of Commerce has advanced proposals similar to this, a finger of suspicion is pointed in the direction of Detroit.

"This is another attempt to improve on situations described in the 'Princeton report,'" said Jack Milligan, assistant director of the Department of Public Instruction. "But the cure is worse than the disease."

Some counties receive much more money back from the state under present law than they pay in, according to the Michigan State Aid Survey of 1953, compiled by two Princeton tax experts.

Classic example is Kalkaska which is listed as receiving $716 in state aid for every $100 raised by local taxation. Wayne County residents, who compare that figure with the $53 they receive from Lansing for every $100 they send, are anxious to revise things in their favor.

"The unhealthy, destructive conditions," says Brown's letter, "is largely traceable to the alarming and fantastic dispersion of state tax collections through uncontrolled and unneeded grants-in-aid and other payments

Suggest Ways to Fix Concrete Floors

Those cracks in the concrete floors of your milk house or dairy barn can be repaired easily. Quentin R. Ostrander, Tuscola County assistant agricultural agent, says that those objectionable and unsightly cracks can be filled with a mixture of cement and sand mortar.

James S. Boyd of Michigan State College's agricultural engineering department, suggests that large cracks—those about a fourth of an inch in width, should have their edges smoothed with a chisel. Then, after the cracks are swept clean, wet the cracks thoroughly with water and you are ready to pour the mortar. If you don't want the trouble of mixing the cement and fine sand, you can buy it already mixed at most hardware stores, according to Boyd.

The same repair job can be made on cement walls, too. The mortar should be wet enough to penetrate the cracks readily. Small cracks can be sealed by using ordinary road asphalt. You can heat the material in an old coffee pot or teakettle and pour the liquid into the cracks while it's boiling hot.

The man who wastes his time has little else to waste.

It always seems so much easier to regulate the lives of our neighbors than it is our own.
