Michigan Certified Seed Pays Off

There's no point in paying exorbitant prices for seed wheat or getting inferior seed. Quentin R. Ostrander, Tuscola County assistant agricultural agent, points out that Michigan certified seed wheat is "unsurpassed in quality." And, he says, the good seed costs less than $1 per acre more to plant than non-certified seed that is of "doubtful quality." Some wheat seed from other states is being sold in Tuscola County at exorbitant prices, according to Ostrander.

Many farmers have learned that the certified seed pays for itself in higher yields. All Michigan certified seeds must pass a rigid field inspection and seed examination by the Michigan Crop Improvement Association. Otherwise, it can't be sold as certified. In addition to being a pure variety, the certified seed wheat must meet high standards on germination, be free from weed seeds and other crop seeds and free from disease. Only varieties that have demonstrated their superiority under Michigan conditions are certified. At present the Michigan Crop Improvement Association is certifying these varieties: Yorkwin, Cornell 595 and Genesee—soft, white winter wheats—and Seneca and Vigo—soft red winter wheats.

The county agricultural agent's office now has copies of the new bulletin, "Crop Varieties for Michigan." Just drop in at the office and pick one up or ask for it by mail.

Young turkeys of any size may be roasted. Stuff turkey just before roasting. Stuffing prepared in advance must be refrigerated to prevent danger of food spoilage, caution MSC foods specialists. Allow one cup of stuffing per pound ready-to-cook weight.

Army Seeks Way To Keep Meat

Atomic By-Products May Solve Problem

Using by-products of atomic fission to preserve meat is being studied at Oregon State college through two grants from the U. S. Army Quartermaster Corps. The two grants for studying irradiated meats are $22,500 to the food technology department for 18 months and $14,600 to the agricultural chemistry department for 12 months. The two departments are concentrating on flavor and color effects in meat that has been irradiated by radioactive materials. The agricultural chemistry department is attempting to pin down the part of the meat that develops off-flavors—such as protein or carbohydrates—and whether a compound such as vitamin C might lower these changes. Much of the work has been done with off-flavors of foods sterilized by accelerators, X-ray machines and low intensity fission sources.

Food technologists explain that some foods used by the military lose flavor, nutritional value or appeal when they are canned or dehydrated. Irradiation of meat is being considered as a way to preserve it and yet keep the appearance, taste and food value of raw meat. Many different cuts of beef and pork are to be used in the experiments.

H. W. Schultz, head of the food technology department, is coordinating research. He explains that gamma rays, which have great penetrating power, sterilize not only the surface of the meat but go entirely through it.

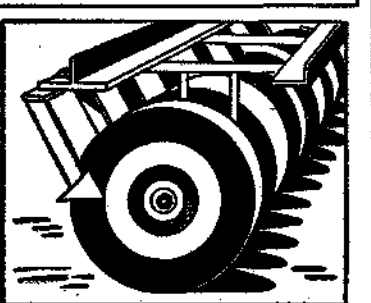

New Peach Variety Soon to Be Available

Outstanding for its bright red-gold color and firm flesh, and especially suited to the Pacific Coast area is the new peach variety called Redglobe. It was developed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture in cooperation with state and Federal experiment stations and has been released for propagation by nurserymen. Limited quantities of Redglobe trees should be available for planting by late 1955 and fruit from the new variety should appear on the market three or four years later.

High-colored, firm-fleshed peaches are often hard to get from vigorous-growing trees, especially with trees under the irrigation systems common to western growing areas. Agricultural Research Service horticulturists report that Redglobe was given particularly good results when tested in California and Washington and also showed promise in experiments in Texas and Michigan.

Redglobe trees are productive and vigorous with large, self-fertile blossoms. The new peach is suitable for areas where Elberta peach is grown. It requires about the same winter temperatures as Elberta, but ripens about 15 days earlier.

When the regular disc cleaners start to wear back, you can weld on old sickle blades in the manner shown above.

You Can't Beat—Fruited Ice Cream

Nothing tastes quite so good on a hot day as rich fruited ice cream. It's easy to make in your own refrigerator, and handy to have at hand for kiddie snacking, family favorite mealtime dessert, or on-the-spot refreshments for evening drop-ins.
This is a basic recipe and may be varied to fit your special likes. It calls for apricots, but canned peaches, pineapple, plums, figs or berries are just as good to use. For extra-special company or party, you may like to add an additional topping of shredded coconut, chopped nuts or sauce.
Apricot Ice Cream
1 No. 2 1/2 can (or jar) apricot halves
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Dash salt
1/2 cup sugar
2 drops almond extract
1 cup milk
1 cup whipping cream
Drain syrup from apricots into a bowl. Put apricots in the refrigerator to keep for topping. Mix lemon juice, salt, sugar, almond extract and milk with the syrup. Pour into refrigerator tray and put in refrigerator set at freezing temperature. Freeze until mushy. Whip cream and fold into the mixture. Finish freezing, stirring occasionally. Serve ice cream topped with the apricots. Eight servings.

Buick's biggest hit brings you a 3-way bonus

- You get the car that's in step with tomorrow
From stem to stern, Buick today is styled a year ahead—with long, low glamor lines, with the very look of tomorrow, and with that broad panoramic windshield that many other cars won't have till 1955. Equally important, you get in Buick advanced V8 power, big room, luxurious comfort, the famed Million Dollar Ride—and all for prices that start just a few dollars above those of the so-called "low-price three." Is it any wonder, then, that Buick today is outselling all other cars in America except two of these "low-price three"?
- You get the car that's a sure high resale value
Buicks have always had a high trade-in value. But the 1954 Buick has an extra advantage in its year-ahead styling. That means your Buick will stay well up in the style parade for years to come—will stay fresh and new-looking well into the future. So you're bound to be way ahead in actual dollars when trade-in time comes.
Come see for yourself why—
- You get a bigger allowance from our volume business
Every month's sales figures this year have firming this fact: Buick sales are soaring; Buick is outselling all other cars in the nation, regardless of price range, except two of the "low-price three." So with this tremendous volume, we can—and do—offer higher trade-in allowances. Come in, see and drive a new Buick—then check for yourself that our volume business really does mean a far bigger allowance for you.

The farm vote is taking on an unusual importance. Democrats are sure they see a trend in rural areas in their favor.

But farmers will be reminded of what happened to them because of the recent milk strike in Detroit. GOP campaigners will point to the cut dairy farmers accepted several months back so that the price of milk could be reduced one cent per quart to consumers.

Important test for GOP will come at their convention. Can party unity be maintained? There have been indications that the best way to do this is to rename the incumbents: Brake for treasurer; Martin for auditor general; Cleary for secretary of state; Millard for attorney general.

Meter Reader

By Ona F. Lathrop

ED FENTON was whistling his usual merry tune as he turned into Maple Avenue that forenoon. Ed liked this job. It seemed sort of honorable to be working for the city after all the messy little jobs he'd had in his forty-odd years. You get to chat with a lot of nice folks and see how the women keep their basements and help people out occasionally. The only catch was that Water-Commissioner Thorpe was a hard man to work for. He caught you up on every little thing. Just that morning he had landed on Ed. "Fenton, seems as if it takes you a mighty long time to make the rounds on this meter-reading. What in tunket do you do all that time?" His big form creaked the swivel chair as he pushed the book at Ed, and his frown deepened.

"Well, I hustle along," Ed hastened to reply. "Seems as if all the women like to chat, especially if they are washing or ironing in their basements, and I just don't get along so fast."

And now he was late again. Could he help it if old Granny Mercer had asked him to get her washing-machine going when it stopped in the middle of her laundry? You couldn't turn an old lady down. And that new little bride up the street had trouble with her steam-iron. But he'd make up for it now. He glanced nervously at the big brick house at the end of the block. That was Commissioner Thorpe's own house and he hoped to make it before noon when Thorpe came home for lunch.

But (just as he started down the basement steps at the Claytons he heard the hubbub.) Five-year-old Bobby was shrieking frantically and his mother was crying too. "He's caught his hand in the wringer," she screamed. "Look at it! It's mashed flat. Oh, Ed, I'm so glad you came. How do I work this thing anyway?"

Ed strode across and hit the release and picked up the little kid. "You'd better get him to the doctor," he said.

"Yes, put him in the car and I'll get the keys," she yelled, tearing up the steps and back to the car by the time Ed got him in. "And you watch the baby, Eddie. She's in her play-pen."

Ed ran his hand through his tousled hair dazedly. "Watch the baby" indeed. Didn't the woman know he had work to do? But of course everybody knew Ed Fenton was an old easy-mark.

He went inside and found the baby clamoring to get out of her pen. He picked her up and tried to quiet her, but it was no use. She wailed her mother, and no mere man would do. He took her to the door to divert her attention and there he saw her little cart.

"Baby go bye-bye?" He wasn't up on baby-talk much but he'd helped some with his sister's kids. He'd take her to some neighbor. After all you couldn't expect a man to lose his job for baby-sitting. He installed her in the go-cart and wheeled her down the front walk.

And there around the corner came Thorpe in his big black car!

"Well Fenton, no wonder you never get your meter read. Taking the baby for a stroll in working hours, eh? I guess that does it. You can turn in your book."

"Now Commish, it's this way—" and Ed proceeded to explain how he happened to be wheeling the Clayton baby at this time of day. "So you see I was stuck with her. I'll find some neighbor woman—" But by that time the news had spread through the neighborhood and the women were converging from all the houses in the block.

"Eddie, give me the little darling." "Here Eddie, I'll take her. Good thing you came along just when you did."

"Oh, Eddie always saves the day," another one called. "He helped me with my clothes-line the last time."

"And he helped me move the junk out of my basement. Mr. Thorpe, you sure picked a good man for meter-reading. He makes more friends for the city than all the policemen."
