

Large Crowd Expected

Lewis to Address Community Club

Members Vote to Raise Capital of Local Corporation

Members of the Cass City Development Corporation voted to raise the capital stock of the concern from $12,500 to $35,000 at a meeting held at the Cass City Municipal Building Tuesday evening.

The move was authorized by stockholders to give the board of directors more latitude in working with companies interested in coming to Cass City.

If the members should deem it advisable to build a building for a new concern that would help the village, the old capitalization would not be large enough to raise the needed funds.

With the raise in capital stock, the corporation could sell up to $22,500 more stock for another building.

Members of the board are talking with another concern interested in coming to the village. Whether they will decide to move here or whether a building will be needed for them is not known.

Plan for Local Entry in "Babe Ruth" League

Cass City may possibly have an entry in a "Babe Ruth" league this summer, if plans discussed at a meeting held in Bad Axe Tuesday materialize, Coach Irv Clasen reported Wednesday.

The league is for from 13 to 15-year olds and would include entries from many Thumb communities. Expressing interest in the proposed league were representatives from Harbor Beach, Bad Axe, Elkton, Pigeon, Caseville, Kinde, Ruth and Sebewaing.

All games would be twilight contests. Another meeting has been scheduled for May 12 when definite plans for the league will be formulated.

New Books at Public Library

Six hundred and one books were checked out by readers in the Cass City and Elkland Township public library during the month of April and $14.04 was collected in fees and fines, according to the librarian, Mrs. Arthur Little.

Newest arrivals at the library include a novel, "Bella North," by Diana Marr-Johnson; a western, "Whispering Canyon," by Stuart Brock and two pieces of light fiction, "Runaway Nurse," by Ethel Hamill and "Roberta, Lab Secretary," by Francis Dean Hancock.

20 Candidates for Independent Nine

Irv Clasen, coach of the newly formed Cass City Independent baseball team, said this week that about 20 men have indicated they are interested in trying out for the team that will play in the Tuscola County League.

Most of the candidates for spots on the club are former Cass City High School players.

League play is expected to start Sunday, May 22.

James Lewis, vice-president in charge of student affairs at the University of Michigan, will be the featured speaker at the annual ladies' night of the Cass City Community Club Tuesday at Cass City High School.

Mr. Lewis is remembered by older residents of the community as a teacher in the local school system. He came to Cass City after graduation and served here from 1927 to 1936.

After he left the village, his rise in the educational profession was rapid. He went from Cass City to Dowagiac and served as junior high principal and later as senior high principal.

He was named superintendent of schools a short while later. He moved to St. Joseph as superintendent and held the head position there until he resigned in 1948 to accept a similar position in the large Dearborn High School system.

He moved to the college level from Dearborn, when he accepted a position with the University of Michigan. He advanced in responsible positions until he reached his present post as vice-president in charge of student affairs.

Mr. Lewis received his BA degree from Central Michigan College and his MA degree from U of M. At the present time he is working for his doctorate from Harvard.

Persons who knew him when he was in Cass City say that they expect an entertaining and enlightening address Tuesday.

Zinnecker Speaks At Gavel Club

Jim Seals, toastmaster, introduced Bob Zinnecker as the guest speaker for the regular meeting of the Cass City Gavel Club Tuesday evening at Parrott's Dairy Bar.

Mr. Zinnecker, speaking without notes, gave club members a complete run-down of the 16 teams in the major leagues.

He analyzed the strength and weaknesses of each team, position by position.

Like most observers of the game, Bob has his own predictions on the outcome of the races. He picks the Yankees to win and Cleveland to finish second in the American League and favors Brooklyn for top honors in the National League.

He has placed the Tigers in fifth or sixth place this season.

Two new members of the club attended their first meeting as members Tuesday. They are: Dick Hampshire and Rodney Kreuger.

Dr. I. D. McCoy Guest Speaker at Rotary Club

Dr. I. D. McCoy of Bad Axe, a charter member of the Cass City Rotary Club, returned to Cass City Tuesday as guest speaker at the club's regular meeting at the New Gordon Hotel.

Dr. McCoy recalled interesting episodes of life in Cass City during the "horse and buggy" days when he was a young, practicing physician.

MAKE DECISION—Making decisions is part of the training for students in the Early Elementary Student Council at Cass City School. The council assisted Lyle Clark in planting a small tree in the schoolyard. The tree, given to the school by Michigan State University in commemoration of its centennial celebration this year, was planted near the northeast corner of the grade school. The council decided where to place the tree and helped plant it. The grades have two student councils. Besides the early elementary council, there is a council for the top grades in the school.

From the Editor's Corner

Unusually warm weather early in the year is regarded with suspicion by persons in Michigan. Besides commenting on the heat, nearly everyone starts recalling the years when snowstorms hit in late May—some recalling the time it snowed on Decoration Day.

With the fine start that all area farmers have this season, it is only natural that skeptics should feel that it's "too good to be true."

However, the Thumb in general has not enjoyed ideal weather conditions for two or three years—wet springs or wet falls ruining crops and hurting the economy in general.

Maybe this will be the year that the entire area experiences a banner year on the farm.

The fifth annual Value Days town-wide sale promises to be the biggest and best of any of the previous sales, judging by the values local merchants are turning in to the paper.

In case you've forgotten, the sale is slated for Friday and Saturday, May 13-14, and bargains offered are for those two days only.

Lions to Sponsor Eye Tests for Two More Grades

The Cass City Lions Club voted to have eye examinations for students in the seventh and eighth grades at Cass City School, at their regular bimonthly meeting at Parrott's Dairy Bar Monday.

When these tests are completed, the club will have sponsored tests for all students through the eighth grade at the local school.

He suffered a slight concussion and cuts below the eye and on the forehead. He was taken to Pleasant Home Hospital for treatment and was still hospitalized Wednesday.

Evidently, the plow was snagged on a root of a tree when the doubletree broke. The horse dragged Mr. Decker over the front of the plow.

A certified or cashier's check in an amount of $2,500.00, drawn upon an incorporated bank or trust company and payable to the order of the Treasurer of the School District, must accompany each bid as a guarantee of good faith on the part of the bidder, to be forfeited as liquidated damages if such bid be accepted and the bidder fails to take up and pay for the bonds. No interest shall be allowed on the good faith checks and checks of unsuccessful bidders will be promptly returned to each bidder's representative or by registered mail.

Punch-line to the year's hottest power story—

Chevrolet "Turbo-Fire V8"!

This is the engine that's writing a whole new chapter in the book of automobile performance records. This is the engine that has stock car timers doing a "double take" at their stop-watches wherever experts gather to compare the abilities of the 1955 cars.

For example, in the recent NASCAR stock car competition at Daytona Beach, Florida, Chevrolet literally ran away from every other car in its class—and a raft of others besides. In the one-mile straightaway run for low-priced cars, the first two places—and six of the first ten—went to Chevrolets. And in acceleration runs from a standing start against all comers, Chevrolet beat all other low-priced cars—and every high-priced car except one!

What's behind this blazing performance? A compact honey of a V8 that only the world's leading producer of valve-in-head engines can build. Chevrolet's new "Turbo-Fire V8" has the shortest piston stroke in the industry (that means less piston travel...longer engine life!) And it delivers the highest power per pound of any V8 in the low-priced field. It's so efficient that it requires only four quarts of oil instead of the usual five...needs less radiator coolant, too. It's the most modern V8 under anybody's hood!

It puts a new kind of fun in your driving life. You're in charge of 162 high-spirited horsepower—or if you're looking for even more excitement, the new "Super Turbo-Fire V8" (optional at extra cost) puts 180 h.p. under your toe!

Pick the one you'd rather have fun with, then come in and get behind the wheel. You'll see why the Motoramic Chevrolet is showing its heels to everyone else on the road!

No other low-priced car has any—no high-priced car has all—of these great Chevrolet features!

Body by Fisher—Nine engine-drive choices in any model—12-volt electrical system—Anti-Dive braking—Outrigger rear springs—Ball-Race steering—High-Level ventilation—Double-Arch cowl construction.

BEST POLICY

In the long run it's much easier to tell the truth than it is to keep white lies whitewashed.

OUT OF STEP

When you think the whole world is going wrong, stop and consider if you are going right.

Getting experience for yourself is expensive—avoid mistakes by profiting by the other fellow's experience.

Half a dozen politicians can talk at the same time and each thinks his train of thought has the right of way.

The less luck some people have the more they believe in it.

Kolyton Farmer Lauds Band Seeding

Dean Crawford, Kolyton Township farmer and former operator of the Lockwood farm northeast of Caro, has high praise for the band method of seeding grasses and legumes, said Alfred Ballweg, county agent.

Dean used this new seeding method for the first time in 1954. Said Dean, "According to the stand, I believe every seed grew and I also cut down on my rate of seeding." He used 200 pounds of 5-20-20 at seeding time. "By using old garden hose, little or no expense was involved in converting my drill to the band method of seeding," said Crawford.

Dean is a dairy and cash crop farmer and believes in grass farming as an aid to good soil conservation.

The want ads are newsworthy too.

National Home Demonstration Week May 1-7

Most women keep mum about their age when they reach 40, but there is one group of women in Michigan who are proud to boast their 41 years of accomplishments. Over 40,000 Michigan homemakers will join other home demonstration members in the United States and the world in observing National Home Demonstration Week, May 1-7.

Having its beginning in 1914, the home demonstration program is state wide branching into Michigan's 83 counties to teach methods of better living. Its aim is expressed in the national theme, "Today's Home Builds Tomorrow's World." In Michigan the home demonstration program is carried on as a part of the Michigan Cooperative Extension Service cooperating with the U. S. Department of Agriculture and local county governments. In 1954 there were more than 2,500 home demonstration groups who received training in the fields of foods and nutrition, parent education and child development, home furnishings, home management, housing, clothing and other phases of home economics. Bringing this information to the women of Michigan are the county home demonstration agents. They in turn are aided in their program planning by subject matter specialists on the state staff. Home demonstration work in Tuscola County is offered through home demonstration agent, Jean E. Gillies.

They tell me that the first man to cry out, in effect, "What is this younger generation coming to?" was a king named Hammurabi, who ruled Babylon 2,000 years before Christ.

We seem to have made out all right since then, and I always remember old Hammurabi raising hob with the kids when people today start crying out that our youngsters are on the skids.

There was an automobile manufacturer, probably wearing a self-satisfied smile, who advertised this message in 1912: "The car I now bring out is pretty close to finality. I do not believe that a car materially better will ever be built."

Yet that car (and the manufacturer was not, incidentally, General Motors) lacked such elementary equipment as a top or windshield. After that "final" announcement, it was another 15 years before cars had the sure-firedness of a fuel pump.

I pulled out the fuel pump as an example because it illustrates two things about GM cars, as true as ever in today's Chevs. General Motors has been consistently first with the important innovations, and these innovations have stayed with us through the years; every advance has had good reason behind it.

The automobile's first fuel pump, which replaced the vacuum tank, was a first of GM in 1927—and the original is preserved today in the Smithsonian Institute.

As the people who introduced the fuel pump, GM has remained the leader in the manufacture of this important "vital organ" of a car, a combination of pioneering and quality that has given Chevrolet its first-place position in America.

Traffic Deaths Up Sharply in March

Michigan traffic deaths and injuries increased sharply during March as compared with the same month last year, but accidents were fewer, according to the State Police monthly report.

There were 126 persons killed and 3,975 injured in 14,757 accidents. Deaths increased by 26, or 26 per cent, and injuries by 379, or 11 per cent. Accidents dropped 117, or one per cent.

The record for the first three months of 1955 shows 380 deaths, 11,905 injuries and 45,919 accidents. Compared with the same period a year ago, injuries and accidents show a one and three per cent drop, respectively, while deaths increased seven per cent.

Estimated mileage traveled the first two months of this year, the latest information available, totaled 4.1 billion, an increase of nine per cent over 3.7 billion in the same period last year. The death rate of 6.0 per 100 million miles of travel, however, was down 13 per cent from 6.9 for the same period in 1954.

Money never made a fool of any man—it only shows him up.

The ability to do without has put many a man in a position to do as he pleases.

Food Sense—Not Nonsense

Heed The Storm Signals

By heeding storm signals one can avoid a deluge of small fry stubborn "No's!" which may rival a hurricane for upsetting mealtime atmosphere. Knowing how to recognize the forerunners of "table time storms" is almost a necessity for parents.

Youngsters and appetites easily are parted—a fact to remember when otherwise healthy children dawdle over food. The best food can fail to appeal if emotions are in a turmoil. Where meals are peaceful, stubborn feeding problems are not so apt to occur. The dining room should never turn into a court of appeals with father forced to play judge and mother is on the jury. Excitement of any kind—particularly anger, fear or other intense emotions—hinders digestion.

The overly hungry, overly tired child does not enjoy his food. School age children, constantly on the go, should have a few minutes rest or quiet before meals.

Children with hearty appetites at mealtimes and who eat a good variety of foods, often are genuinely hungry by mid-morning or afternoon. They need an "extra meal"—a sandwich of enriched bread and a glass of milk or some fruit—eaten at mid-morning or after school to supply required nutrients and energy.

New foods or new ways of serving well-liked foods can help keep mealtime interest high. To avoid an "I won't eat it" storm, only one new food is offered at a time. Only small portions of it are served the first time.

It should be kept in mind that children like simple, colorful foods—foods neither too strongly flavored nor highly spiced.

Youngsters' attitudes follow the course set by mother and dad. Dad's frown or ill-timed comment about a food can bring on a crisis, with mother's plans going aground. Happy parents keep family meals a pleasant adventure—in quiet harbors—by steering clear of possible "stormy weather."

IT'S A FACT

Cerebral Palsied children are no longer "forsaken." Today people know CP is not a disease, not contagious, not hereditary, and not a condition of which to be ashamed.

Cerebral Palsy is an outward reflection of damage to the brain. With proper care a high percentage of CP's can live useful, independent lives.

The United Cerebral Palsy Association of Michigan provides therapeutic treatment, special education and diagnostic services in which nearly six hundred Michigan children participated last year.

Safety Is Designed Into Your Car

By Mary Lou Chapman

Did you know that automotive engineers are continually working to make all cars safer? We talked to some of these mechanically-minded people the other day and found out a lot about modern safety features that are built right into your automobile. Many of these features we had never heard of before, and we thought you might be interested in hearing about them, too.

We learned, for example, that many of the things that are likely to rattle or unwind have been designed so that they tighten up as the car rolls along. A couple of these items are self-tightening wheel bolts (the "threads" or grooves on the bolt are so designed that wheel rotation keeps the nuts tightened in place) and rotary door latches (which are tightened for safety and silence by the motion of the car).

When we heard about all the devices that are used to hold the various parts of the car together, we were really impressed.

15,000 Parts

Considering that there are around 15,000 separate parts in the average car today, it amazes us that cars hold up as hand-somely as they do! But the engineers are well aware of this, and take triple precautions to secure everything. They talk of cotter pins, locking bolts, castelated nuts, and horse-shoe clips. We don't understand all these terms, but we appreciate the fact that the complex modern cars are constructed so sturdily.

Here are some other safety features that engineers have developed over recent years:

The padded instrument panel, to cushion a fall against it in the event of an abrupt stop.

Tail lights that are easy to see from a distance even from the sides, so that everyone knows when you're stopping.

Directional signals—no more confusion about which way you're turning.

Back-up lights—helpful to light your path at night when you are backing up, and also to signal your intentions to the person behind your car.

The ignition key starter system—insures that your car cannot be accidentally started, by a child for example, if you have the keys with you.

Interior door handles that open upward instead of downward, so that an accidental push on them from above will not open the door.

Ash Trays, Too

Even such a thing as an ash tray helps make your car safe, because it permits you, the driver, to devote attention to the control of the car, instead of worrying about those cigarette sparks.

And there is the group of features to reduce mental and physical effort in driving. These are the automatic accessories such as power-steering, automatic transmission and power brakes. These also contribute to greater safety by allowing you to concentrate on the road ahead.

The automotive engineers have worked hard to make your car as safe as possible. There is one other safety factor that should be mentioned in this list. This one is the most important of all. It's you!

(Fashion writer, artist, and TV personality, Miss Chapman is a native of Detroit and has spent the last several years working with automobile stylists, designers and engineers at Chrysler Corporation.)

SHORT STORY

Memorial To Julia

By Kay Francis Cole

SOME faint sound coming from outside the library window disturbed the man bent over the desk.

"Chir-up—chir-up—two-up," John Bannion lifted his head.

The blood, running slow in his veins, quickened.

He got reluctantly to his feet and plodded to the window and peered out at two robins preening on his lawn.

Returning to his desk, he put the paper on which he had been working into a drawer, hesitatingly got his hat and cane from the rack in the hall and went out to the pavement where he laboriously walked the four blocks to Kensington Park, found an empty bench and sat down.

Always, with the coming of the robins, John Bannion made this trip to the park. Fifty-one years ago it had started. He had been a lad of twenty-one when—John strained to remember. Something to do with a romance—a girl named Julia. He felt no sentiment now, or nostalgia. At last, wearied with the effort to remember, he thought instead of the fifteen houses he was building.

Chuckling he thought of the vast fortune he had accumulated, the property that was his; old houses, new houses, and this project he was working on.

He was unconscious of the stirrings and noises around him. Of the people intoxicated with the coming of spring. He lived within himself, gloating, yet strangely unsatisfied. Soon he would go back to his house. The pretentious stone house that sheltered himself and his servants.

That girl—Julia—Julia what? Marriotti, that was it, Julia Marriotti! His lips moved, soundlessly, as he remembered. Voices, loud arguing, coming from a bench a short distance behind, disturbed him.

"But, you little idiot, what about money! We can't get married without it, you know!"

"I don't care. It's spring and I love you and I want to be married now."

"But where'd we live? We'd have to have a place to live!"

Excitement warned John's blood, stirred long dead memories and it was as real as though he were again the stubborn, young John Bannion of those long ago years. In this very park—a lovely girl beside him—they were watching a pair of robins building a nest.

"See, John, the birds know it's spring. Oh my dear, I don't want to wait. I'm in love. I want to be married now."

But John was proud. He must do this—do that—finish school, get established in business.

John Bannion tapped his foot impatiently on the grass. Why didn't the little idiot say something! Wasn't she ever going to answer the boy! Then, out of the silence, John heard sobbing.

"I want a kitchen—geraniums in the window, and babies. I want them now."

"Yes, yes, child, you are right. Don't wait! Don't wait!" The old man's lips were moving with an urgency to do something. Charity? No—not that stubborn young man! There must be a way. Then he thought of the fifteen houses he was building. One of them would be just the thing.

John became sly—using his good business sense. They must be made to do something for him. Then, out of gratitude, he could repay them. And that wasn't all, there must be other boys and girls like these two. Crazy ideas were hurrying themselves about in his mind. He felt alive, vital, it all had something to do with his long ago romance—a sort of memorial to Julia. Fifteen new houses. More cold, hard cash to add to his account or—fifteen couples made happy.

Quickly he jumped to his feet, feeling the pain in his joints, and staggered backward until he was in front of the bench on which the young people sat. The shock of the fall forced a groan from his lips but he was able to see the concern and pity on the faces of the couple as they bent over him.

Many a bright-eyed person looks on the dark side of life.

It may be true that wealth is within the reach of all, but few are able to stretch that far.

Old-timers feared congress might adjourn without doing anything—today that is what people hope for.

The exhibit shows the kinds of trees which contributed to the state's enormous coal deposits and includes a one-eighth size replica of a Carboniferous Age dragon fly which had a wing spread of two feet. MICHIGAN MIRROR NEWS BRIEFS

Troubled children have won half of their five-year campaign for a "master-plan" which will legally keep round pegs out of square holes.

Foster care versus state institutions has been the issue for years.

The rule of thumb for probate judges has been to provide foster care for youngsters on a local level if they were not delinquent enough to be sent to a state institution.

"Actually, however, we have had cases of children being sent to state training schools who could have been better cared for in local foster homes," said Robert H. Scott, youth expert in the corrections department.

For five years, alarmed legislators have sought an answer. It passed the Senate in a package of five bills.

The bills would require the state to pay half the cost of local foster care programs and require the counties to pay half the cost of keeping the youths they send to state institutions.

"There would then be less of a tendency to 'dump' children on the state," said Senator Creighton R. Coleman (R-Battle Creek).

The proposals would benefit those counties with good foster care programs and, in some instances, penalize those who prefer to send their wayward youths to state institutions.

The state training schools—Boys' Vocational School at Lansing, Girls' Training School at Adrian, and Michigan Children's Institute (a foster care operation)—have been overcrowded for years.

Without the bills, W. F. Maxey, state social welfare director, said all three institutions would have to be expanded—at some great cost to the taxpayers.

"An institution is the end of the line for some of these kids," Maxey said. "We could have saved some of them right now if local government will go along with these bills."

Michigan's attractions are being broadcast over the nation from Interlochen.

It is the National Music Camp from which advanced students cut tapes, make recordings and broadcast directly. They make music and, in addition, advertise the state.

Dr. Joseph E. Maddy, director of the camp, said that more than 6,000 broadcasts a year are beamed directly and indirectly from the camp.

For the legislature, Maddy listed 1882 stations carrying programs from Interlochen.

In addition, Dr. Maddy described the new motion picture, "Grand Canyon," featuring music students but also including promotional material on Michigan's "Water Wonderland."

Dr. Maddy asked the legislature for $16,000 for the next year to help with the programs "to help carry on this well-established promotional campaign which brings more and more people to Michigan each year."

Michigan State College will become Michigan State University July 1.

The change, made by the legislature and signed into law by Lt. Gov. Philip A. Hart, comes as the college celebrates its 100th year of service to the state.

Over the years, the college has grown to No. 7 in enrollment in the country and, everyone agreed "is a university in fact."

The name change was opposed by the University of Michigan on grounds that it would lead to confusion; that the new name was an "infringement" on the name of the University of Michigan.

As the name was changed, effective July 1, the University of Michigan Board of Regents was considering an appeal to the Michigan Supreme Court.

Dr. John A. Hannah, president of the college-soon-to-be-university, pledged to the legislature that there would be no attempt to start professional schools to duplicate those at the University of Michigan.

There has been speculation in the legislature that, when the name was changed, the new MSU would ask for a dental school, one for doctors of medicine and a law school.

Dr. Hannah also said that the new university would continue its long tradition of service to Michigan agriculture through its county agents over the state.

Seniors graduating in June were asked if they wanted "college" on their diplomas or wished to wait until July 1 when "university" would be used on their sheepskins.

By an overwhelming margin, the senior class voted to wait until July 1 and "university."

Honeybees Boost Red Clover Yield As Much as Nine Times, Tests Show

Research begun in northern Minnesota has shown that honeybee colonies placed near the fields can help boost red clover seed yields up to a healthy 500 pounds per acre—nine times as much as many seed growers get today.

Minnesota's legume seed growing industry has been plagued by low yields for several years and the problem was tackled recently by a University team of entomologists, soil specialists, plant pathologists and agronomists.

Entomologists report their red clover experiment shows bumblebees are more efficient pollinators than honeybees, but bumblebees can't be depended upon because their populations vary so widely from year to year.

The research, still in progress, has also found the Lygus bug the most important damager of red clover seed crops. They studied damage by such insects as the Lygus bug, the rapid plant bug, alfalfa plant bug, clover seed midge, clover seed chalcid and the pea aphid.

The University scientists found they could effectively control plant bugs by one application of insecticide during the red clover bud stage. They found 1½ pounds actual DDT per acre or two pounds actual toxaphene per acre will check Lygus bugs.

In two fields which had honeybee colonies nearby, about 90 per cent of the pollinating insects were honeybees. In two other fields about a mile away from colonies, 62 to 75 per cent of the pollinators were honeybees.

Many Factors Affect Chick Feeding Program

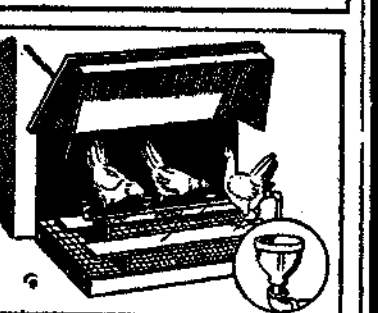

No one method of feeding chickens is the best for all situations. The difference in strains and breeds, whether or not you have farm grains to use and the different management abilities of operators all have some effect on the feeding program.

The most common program makes a high-protein mash available to the hens all the time and adds grain once or more times a day in the litter, in separate hoppers or top of the mash. It's a good way to regulate the relative consumption of grain and mash without home-mixing your feed.

In free-choice mash-grain programs, the hens get mash and farm grains free-choice all the time. This program is best for flocks that are bred and managed for high egg production. Hens from low-producing strains may eat too much grain and get too fat.

In both these programs it is important that hens get grain and mash in the right proportions to get a protein content in the total ration of about 15 or 16 per cent.

SHORT STORY

Wayward Busman

By Maurice Vincent

AS JEFF has been telling us for quite some time now, maybe elaborating a bit more at each telling, "I thought there was something funny about that bus driver!"

Old Jeff had gone to the city to visit his sister and had boarded the bus after carefully consulting his sister's letter that gave him his exact instructions on how to arrive at his sister's home. Old Jeff took right good care of that letter, glancing at it anxiously from time to time as though it were a map of darkest Africa . . . indeed, the old man considered cities as nothing but jungles anyway.

So when he got on this bus he knew he was on the right bus because his sister's letter said so. He just wasn't prepared for the bus driver he had drawn for the trip!

"Drop yer dime in that cup, Dad," says this driver. He lets out the clutch and the bus ripped down the street like a North wind trying to catch up with a tornado. Old Jeff, reaching for the coin, was trapped with one hand in his pants pocket and the other hand totting his suitcase. He fell heavily to the back of his neck.

Old Jeff, entering into the spirit of the thing, howls, "Yippee!"

"Whoa!" shouted old Jeff. But the driver just ignored him. "Now, the most embarrassing thing about the entire deal," old Jeff tells us, "is the fact that I busted my suspenders!"

"Keep yer shirt on, Grampaw, we're goin' fer a ride!" says this driver with a gleam in his eye.

Old Jeff was the only passenger and it was plain that the driver wasn't taking on any more because he passed up people on the corners as if they just weren't there at all; ignoring their cuss words as he splattered them with mud. It was a wild ride!

"It seems," says old Jeff, "that this here driver has been fired for some infraction of company rules or other and this has plumb made him recklesslike."

"Slow down sonny," Old Jeff tells him. "No use killin' yerself," he adds.

"Nuts to you," says the driver. "I'm sick of picking up you folks and goin' over the same old route day in and day out. Why . . . I might even decide to take this here bus to Florida!"

The idea seems to appeal to the driver and he breaks out in a wide grin and spins the lurching bus down an alley. It looks as though he were in earnest about Florida at that.

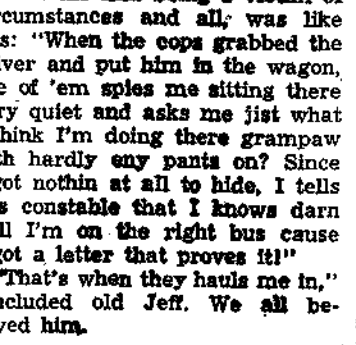

Old Jeff, holding up his pants, was trying to figure a way he could get off the bus without being killed and carried off by the undertaker and his assistants. It was sure that the driver would crack up sooner or later.

"Whoopie!" yelled the driver. Old Jeff, entering into the spirit of the thing, more out of fear than anything else, starts to howl a bit himself.

"Yippee," howls old Jeff. The driver gives him a suspicious glance and spins the wheel. Cutting through a backyard, the big bus churns up about an acre of ground, tore down a clothesline or two, busted a board fence and bounded out into another street. It was then that the police entered the scene, blockaded the street, and stopped the whole show. Quite a crowd gathered.

The way old Jeff explained about landing in jail, when it wasn't any fault of his him being a victim of circumstances and all, was like this: "When the cops grabbed the driver and put him in the wagon, one of 'em spies me sitting there very quiet and asks me jist what I think I'm doing there grampaw with hardly any pants on? Since I got nothin' at all to hide, I tells this constable that I knows darn well I'm on the right bus cause I got a letter that proves it!"

"That's when they hauls me in," concluded old Jeff. We all believed him.

GREENLEAF

The Greenleaf Extension Club met Thursday, April 27, with Mrs. Lucy Seeger. Ten members and four visitors were present. Roll call was answered with the name of a favorite poet, or a quotation from a poem. After the business meeting, the lesson on "The Needs of Younger Children" was given by Mrs. Elmer Fuester and Mrs. Douglas Cleland. The lesson was followed by a considerable discussion. The hostess, assisted by Mrs. Don Seeger, served a delicious dessert lunch. The next meeting will be May 19 at the home of Mrs. Robert Spencer.

Story of Farm Mechanization

This is the replica of the gateway to the Centennial of Farm Mechanization—a story to be told in a blaze of pageantry and exhibits at Michigan State College, Aug. 15 through 20. Prof. A. W. Farrall, left, head of the agricultural engineering department, and chairman of the event, expects a quarter of a million or more people to see the most complete assembly of farm and home equipment ever made in this country. He is shown here discussing the gateway model with his executive chairman of the centennial event, Robert L. Maddox, M. S. C. extension agricultural engineer. The program is a part of Michigan State's year-long centennial celebration. (M. S. C. Photo)

Peach Cake At Best With Maple Pour-On

"A Peach Shortcake served with the smooth, rich-tasting, summer pour-on, maple-blended syrup, is just the thing for gals who theorize 'time's a-wasted in the kitchen when friends get together for a visit.' The cake itself, if made with a mix, can be baked quickly in the morning. Then right before refreshment time, add the peaches. The syrup goes right to the table; it pours so easily and its bottle makes an attractive addition to the table. You'll find this syrup a popular pour-on for ice cream and puddings, too.

Here is the recipe for "Maple Peach Shortcake". . . remember you can't beat it as a lazy day dessert.

Maple Peach Shortcake

1/4 package (2 1/2 cups unsifted) 1 egg, unbeaten instant yellow cake mix Fresh peaches, sliced
1/2 cup water Maple-blended syrup

Measure cake mix into small bowl. Add water and egg. Beat 2 minutes until smooth and creamy. Pour batter into 8x8x2-inch square pan, which has been lined on bottom with paper. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 30 to 35 minutes. Cool cake; then split into two layers. Spread sliced peaches between layers and on top of cake. Cut in squares and pour syrup over each serving.

A practical way to highlight salad platters is with a bowl of mayonnaise which also serves as the dressing for the salad. For a salad tray that can be arranged quickly, use an assortment of your favorite canned fruits, garnishing with nuts and fresh berries for that luxurious look. Fruits should be drained well before they are arranged on a bed of lettuce.

The salad platter makes salad preparation easier for you, and family and guests can compose a salad of the fruits that please them most.
