 When money talks people seldom take time to investigate the truth of its remarks.
 The pessimist always looks for trouble, and isn't satisfied even after he finds it.
 To get the measure of a man give him a public office, or let him inherit a fortune.

DEPUTY Sheriff Lee Moore got down from his horse and entered the sheriff's office. "Where's Sheriff Wilson?" he asked Jim Watkins, who was in charge at the moment.
 "Gone to Big Hole Pass," answered Watkins. "Matt Conrad was held up there this morning and robbed of the mine payroll. Matt got shot in the arm."
 Moore walked slowly across the room and sat down at the desk. His weathered face took on a thoughtful expression.
 "Seems queer," he mused aloud. "I used to be in on all the big cases, but lately I happen to be miles away on some fool errand when one breaks. Funny, too, that I was near the Pass this morning serving papers but didn't hear of any holdup."
 Watkins dropped his gaze to his hands and asked softly "Do you reckon your coming out against Wilson at the election has anything to do with it? He's jealous of you an' your reputation as a lawman."
 Lee replied: "Might be. You cause a fellow to think, Jim."
 "He said yesterday you'd never be elected. Must have somethin' up his sleeve."
 Moore did not answer at once.

Quick-Fix Citrus Sherbet

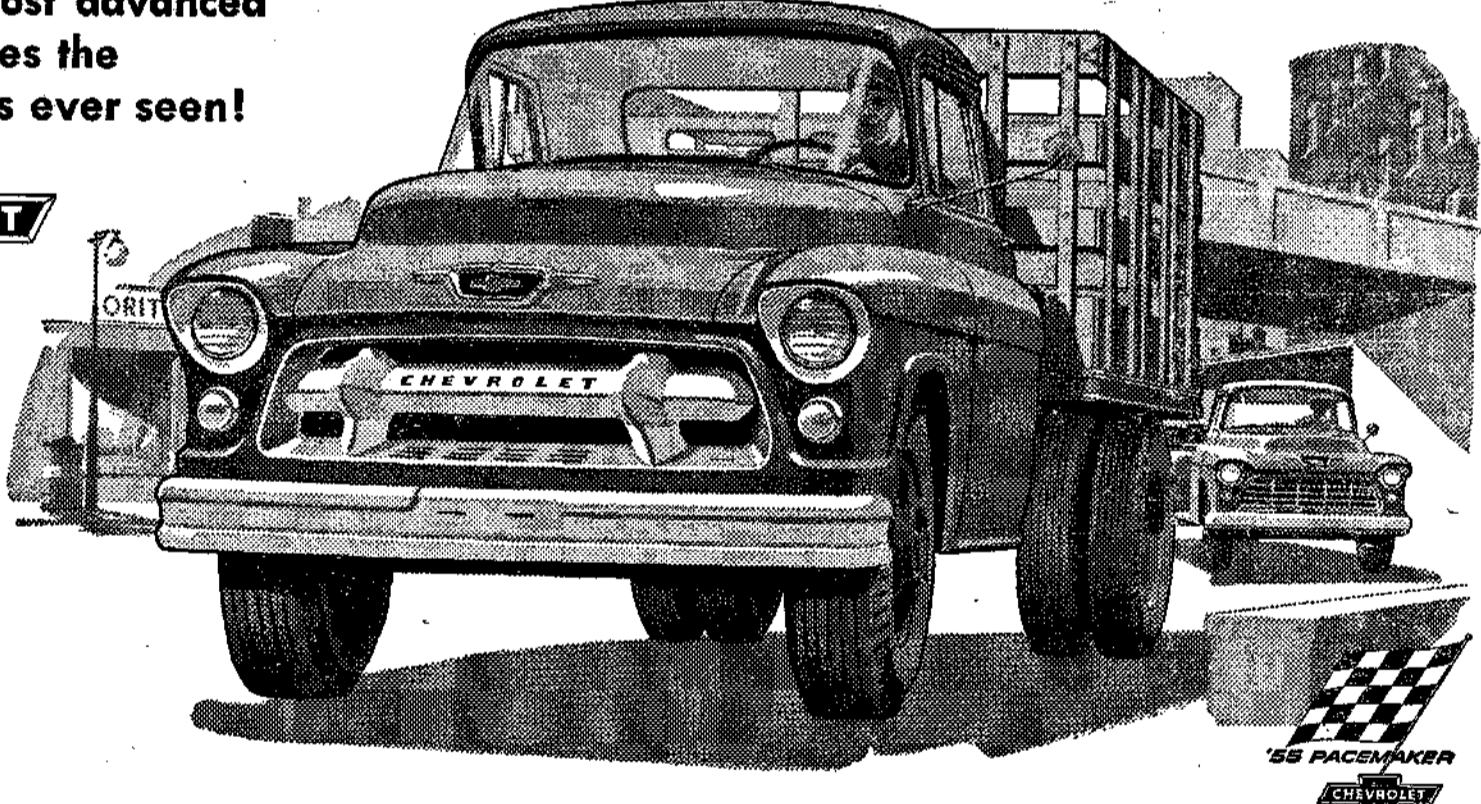

Fruit cups are one of the most cooling first courses or desserts, becoming increasingly popular as people become more diet conscious. This time of year, there are plenty of colorful fresh fruits to choose from, such as watermelon, cantaloupe, blueberries and raspberries. For the final cooling touch, (and to stretch fresh fruit servings) add a scoop of a wonderful sherbet topping made so simply you'll find lots of uses for it—simply a can of Florida's plump tangy grapefruit sections, placed in the freezer unit of your refrigerator until contents are solid. Spoon over cut fresh fruits and you have a delicious dish. The canned grapefruit sections are one of the best buys right now, too, so you'll want to keep several cans chilling in the refrigerator to add cooling goodness and vitamin reinforcement to late summer salads.

Grapefruit Shrub Fruit Medley
 1 can (1 pound) Florida grapefruit sections
 3 cups diced fresh fruit, chilled
 Mint
 Place can of grapefruit sections in freezing compartment several hours, or overnight until frozen. To serve, spoon fruit into sherbet dishes. Top with several spoonfuls of frozen grapefruit sections. If desired, garnish with mint.
 YIELD: 6 servings.

Farm Prices Up Despite Cost Squeeze

Despite the cost-price squeeze, farm owners who wish to sell their farms are still getting as good or better prices than they did a year ago. The U. S. Department of Agriculture indicates the dollar value of farm land in Michigan in March 1955 was 4 per cent above the value at the same time last year.

In addition the farm land market was more active. The number of farm title transfers in Michigan during the year ending March 13, 1955, was about 5 per cent above the number one year earlier. There is a stronger demand for the good quality than for the poorer farms.

In some areas, however, the number of farms listed for sale in 1955 is less than the number so offered one year ago.

"The new social security benefits for farmers may be delaying the sale of farms in some areas," explains E. B. Hill, Michigan State College farm economist. "A farmer who is near 65 or over and who had planned to sell his farm in 1955 may find it advantageous to delay the sale for about two years in order to qualify for such payments."

In the long run, Hill says, the social security changes could mean that older men will quit farming sooner. The last census showed that nearly one-fifth of the farmers in the U. S. were 65 or older.

When this retirement income becomes available to retiring farmers they may be willing to accept lower down payments and longer repayment periods, Hill believes.

So, this could be the chance for younger men to become farm owners earlier and it may lower the initial cost to them.

Be careful what you may start when you try to stop something.

SHORT STORY

Anderson Place

By Mary Pourchet

IT HAD been the Anderson Place for fifty years. It was one of those farms that defied a man to make a living from it. And yet, old Newt Anderson had tried. As a young boy he had worked with his dad against the sandy thin soil. He had married and returned to the farm with his Rose, taking over the place when his dad died. Side by side, he and Rose had plowed and fertilized and struggled to make the land pay for food and clothing for them and their three children.

So when the Anderson Place went for taxes, and Old Newt, alone now, had moved out, the neighboring farmers were surprised. They wondered how anyone who had loved the soil and who had put muscle and sweat and years into it, could leave.

But Newt was through. He left his 120 acres of sand and built himself a tar paper shack on an acre of ground next to the highway.

"It's yours, Dad," his son Paul said. "You needn't pay us back."

3-Minute Fiction

Cement and sand were delivered. By April, Newt had laid the foundation.

either. An acre isn't much for a farmer, but it's all we can do now."

"It's all right," Newt assured his son.

But it wasn't all right. It was admitting a lifetime of failure to be accepting charity from a son who had his own family to care for. Newt missed the barn, and the warm bodies of the cows at milking time. He missed the machinery that always seemed to need tinkering over. When autumn brought sharp frost to the air, he missed the pungent smell of walnuts as his feet had crushed their green shells.

Most of all, he missed his friends and the laughter of children.

Through the long winter, Old Newt watched the cars whiz past his tar paper house near the highway, his nose keenly sensitive to the gasoline fumes. When March came in with a whisper of spring, Newt had an idea. There was no time for nostalgic daydreams now. A lumber company from town brought the first load of two by fours and concrete blocks. In the next week, bags of cement and a load of sand were delivered. (By April, Newt had laid the foundation.) When Paul came for a visit, the little building with windows on three sides was roofed and painted.

"Why Dad, what are you up to?" Paul asked, astonished.

"This," Newt answered with a sheepish grin. He held up a large freshly painted sign that read in bold letters, "Newt's Drive-In."

"Well, doggone, Dad! Who would have thought an old farmer like you would be running a drive-in!"

Newt surprised everyone that summer. Even himself. He sold soft drinks and sandwiches so fast he had to hire help from town to relieve him. By September when the books were added up, Paul informed him of his profits.

"Can't be right," Newt objected. "That's more than we ever cleared on the Anderson Place, after a whole year of hard work. You just check those figures again."

But the profits were genuine, and Newt's Drive-In prospered more with each summer. From June until September the farmer enjoyed serving new friends by the car-load, and heard the laughter of more children than had ever visited the farm.

One day Paul returned from the bank with "You're a rich man, Pop. Look!"

The figures were staggering to Newt.

Paul asked, "What are you going to do with all that money—buy up more root beer stands?"

A smile spread over Newt's weathered face as his words came slowly.

"No son, I thought I might... well, when I get enough together... I'd just like to buy back the Anderson Place. You know just to retire on."

Cement and sand were delivered. By April, Newt had laid the foundation.

CARS ARE MY LINE

By H. M. Bulen

The saying used to go that people were putting "the cart before the horse." A wag who was in our place the other day said that nowadays too many people put "the car before the house."

Sure, a car is an important investment. But figures I came across the other day pointed out the really dramatic way in which cars are becoming cheaper all the time.

In 1908, the finest car on the road was the Cadillac Model G limousine. It was really a dandy with its four-cylinder, 25-horsepower engine, its passengers' seat upholstered in goatskin and ceiling trimmed in satin. At no extra cost you got a cut-glass flower vase and a speaking tube for shouting at the chauffeur out on his drafty front perch.

Based on federal government figures of the time, that car cost 3,100 bushels of wheat or 15,700 hours of factory labor at the average rates of the day.

Today, the current Chevrolet, a far better car in every way (even without the flower vase) costs less than 900 bushels of wheat and just under 1,000 hours of average factory labor.

And, in terms of wheat and factory work, today's Chev costs less than the Chev of 1940.

New cars, with their advantages of style, lower maintenance costs and good trade-in value, are becoming a better and better buy. Especially with the tremendous advances this year, the one-year or two-year trader is becoming the smart car buyer.

If you haven't driven a 1955 CHEVROLET, do me a favor. Come in, I'd like you to try one even if you're not interested in a new car. If you like it, and I know you will, you'll tell others. As "Speed Week" at Daytona proved, this year Chevrolet really has IT. "Be My Guest."

They're making it the BIGGEST-SELLING BUICK OF ALL TIME

Maybe you'd better see for yourself why folks just won't do without this great car.

PEOPLE say success makes success—but we say people make success, and how!

It's people—just like you—who are snowballing Buick sales this year to an all-time peak.

It's people—just like your neighbors down the street—who are snapping up these gorgeous new Buicks almost as fast as we get them from the factory, and causing Buick production to climb to new levels every month, to handle the unparalleled demand.

And it's people—just about from every walk of life—who keep Buick sales soaring without letup—and who have moved Buick more solidly than ever into the charmed circle of America's top best sellers.

But why? Why this phenomenal swing to Buick on the part of people who can choose any new car? Because Buick's a buy—definitely.

And because it's a bold beauty that catches the eye and holds it—that's for sure.

And certainly because it's supremely level of ride—and a sweet joy to handle—and a mighty bundle of high-voltage V8 power to melt away the miles and the high hills.

But most of all, because Buick this year is a performer like no earth-bound vehicle ever was before. . . .

Because Buick—and only Buick—has the airplane-principled magic of Variable Pitch Dynaflo* where you switch the pitch for big gas savings in cruising—or for whip-quick getaway response and acceleration when you need a sudden safety-surge.

It's sheer thrill, and pure pleasure, and a big boon to your gasoline budget—and you really ought to try it.

Come visit us soon—this week, at the latest—and see for yourself why this is the car folks just won't do without—the biggest-selling Buick of all time.

Michigan Mirror News Briets

Citizens already paying new taxes and obeying new laws are being bombarded from all sides by legislators seeking to make political hay out of the record. Republicans claim they control the legislature and have given Michigan a hatful of wonderful new laws. Democrats say the Republicans would not have rolled up their 1955 record had there not been minority party members there with a club, forcing them to act. "The majority must be just as responsible for the things that were not accomplished," snapped Senator Patrick H. Doyle (D-DeARBORN). Senator Creighton R. Coleman

(R-Battle Creek), majority caucus chairman, issued his annual record-of-accomplishment statement as the legislature waited to adjourn. He said the legislature was responsible for:

1. A $35,000,000 highway construction program which will concentrate on four-lane divided highways in the arterial road system. It is financed with a 1 1/2 cent increase in the gasoline tax.
2. A $23,000,000 budget-balancing tax program which will increase the load on business but not directly on consumers. It is an increase in the $30,000,000 Business Activities Tax.
3. Lifetime incomes for workers totally and permanently disabled on the job and increases in the maximum unemployment compensation benefits of from $42 to $54 for men with families. The $30 weekly maximum for single workers idled remains unchanged.
4. A new Fair Employment Practices Commission (FEPC) to bar discrimination in employment by reason of race, creed, color, national origin or ancestry. Increased budgets for mental health, public health, more Michigan State Police, additional probation and parole officers, all were part of the legislative record.

Gov. Williams praised the legislature on the last night of the session, saying they had done a good job but had fallen below his hopes. "Perhaps I'm a perfectionist," he said. Williams had asked for more money for mental health and once held a special meeting to pressure the legislature. The increases granted, he said, will handle only part of the natural expansion.

While refusing to kill or cripple the controversial Michigan Turnpike Authority, the Senate dealt it a blow when it ousted William E. Slaughter, Jr., as its chairman.

The move leaves the five member authority with two vacancies (one member, R. M. McConnell, of Detroit, died recently), and a third, Highway Commissioner Charles M. Ziegler, who has exhibited reluctant interest in turnpikes.

Insiders said it was the death knell of turnpikes in Michigan, at least temporarily. Bond houses and other financiers are reticent about dealing with authorities with two vacancies, and which have stirred up controversy.

Motorists have been hit by two gasoline price increases within a month and everybody wants an investigation.

The first boost of 1 1/2 cents a gallon came before the state tax increase added another 1 1/2 cents. Neither refineries nor wholesalers said they were in a position to absorb the new tax. Senator William S. Broomfield

(E-Royal Oak), chairman of a legislative investigation two years ago, said he would favor another this year. His 1953 findings, however, are sobering. "We found the state couldn't do anything about gasoline prices," he said.

The committee went to Washington, was politely snubbed and told that refineries, if controlled at all, are under the jurisdiction of the Federal government. With the latest increase, Atty. Gen. Thomas M. Kavanagh started his own check in cooperation with Gov. Williams.

Representatives of major refineries met Kavanagh but the results were not disclosed. Kavanagh and others are interested in determining whether refineries operating in Michigan can be regulated by the Michigan Public Service Commission, which now controls utilities.

Some decision on the legal phases of the idea are expected before the summer is ended, but Broomfield said it would repeat his 1953 findings: Motorists will have to pay the higher prices.

Michigan State College will become Michigan State University July 1, the date fixed by the legislature for the long-sought name change.

The change will come in the midst of celebrations of the college's 100th anniversary as the nation's first agricultural institution of higher learning.

Since those early days, it has become one of the country's leading liberal arts and engineering colleges and ranks among the foremost universities in the United States.

Rayls are hosts to Farm Bureau

The June meeting of the Deford Farm Bureau was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rayl in Cass City.

The vice-chairman, Mrs. Hazen Warner, presided. A family night or a picnic was discussed and it was decided to meet at the Hazen Warner home in August for a potluck supper and program to be followed by ice cream and cake in the evening. Mrs. Malcolm extended an invitation for the July meeting to be held at her home and it was accepted.

The discussion leader presented the topic and questions were answered. The group enjoyed singing songs while the refreshments were being prepared and then visiting ensued until a late hour.

Most people want a lot of things—not because they need them, but because they cannot afford them.

Courtesy is always a paying investment—because its stock is never watered with tears or regret.

The man who is able to collect his thoughts can usually pull through without borrowing trouble.

Save Your Valuable Grass Silage Juices

In the near future many farmers will be putting up grass silage. The question often arises as to the proper moisture content of forages to insure good silage.

Don R. Keble, assistant county agricultural agent, claims that juices from grass silage are too valuable to be allowed to gush from your silo.

S. T. Dexter, farm crops specialist at Michigan State College, has devised a quick test to find out the moisture content of the silo. He uses a block and absorbent paper with the chopped grass between. By stepping on the block with different weights, you can simulate the pressure at different heights in the silo.

A bulletin describing the test and the pressures that should be used is available at the MSC bulletin office. Just write for Article 34-47.

By figuring out the pressure on each load of silage, farmers could easily put in silage at the right moisture. For example, the silage at the top of the silo should be wetter than that on the bottom of a tall silo. The same is true of a trench silo, though there isn't as much weight to squeeze out the juices.

Another folder—153, Grass Silage—is available both at the bulletin office or the county extension office, describing everything from growing the crop to feeding the silage.

Usually men with the most character have the fewest habits.

Make sure you are right—then hold the stakes while the other fellows do the betting.

A man's mission in this life is not to pull great problems down to his level—but to climb up and conquer them.

Alma College will begin construction on a new women's dormitory this summer. Ground was broken for the new building in a surprise ceremony held Commencement Day, June 4th. Dr. John Stanley Harker, president, announced that the Board of Trustees had authorized the start of construction when a special campaign for the dormitory had reached a total of $450,000. Dr. Harker announced a total of $454,000 at Commencement. The new building will be ready for the opening of the school year in the fall of 1956.

The new dormitory will house approximately 200 women and will cost $720,000. A campaign to raise the balance needed is expected to achieve the full objective before the building is completed.

Three new buildings have already been completed on the Alma College campus in the past three years, The Jerry Tyler Student Center, The Van Dusen Commons, and the Reid-Knox Administration Building. The Reid-Knox building was formally presented to the College by Mrs. Annie Reid Knox at a dedication ceremony held on Commencement Day.

Brucellosis Germs Easily Transmitted

Just a little common sense care can help in Michigan's fight against brucellosis.

Brucellosis germs are dangerous, Tuscola County Agricultural Agent Alfred Ballweg points out, because there are so many of them.

Dr. Glen Reed, Michigan State extension veterinarian, indicates there are five to 15 million organisms in one drop of fetal fluid from an infected pregnant cow. Most of the germs are in the genital tract of the infected animal, with some in the udder.

An infected cow in heat can transmit brucellosis by a switch of the tail to the person milking her.

The disease can be transmitted to other animals by a fork that is used for both cleaning the gutter and feeding cattle.

Sometimes it can be transmitted to cows that drink from muddy water that has drained from an infected manure pile.

And, sometimes milk from an infected cow will transmit brucellosis to humans if the milk is not pasteurized.

Remember, cautious Ballweg, that the brucellosis germ can be transmitted easily at calving time, when there is an abortion or when the cow is in heat.

FORAGE and the pounds of beef it will produce is the most effective yardstick for measuring the value of a pasture. Accompanying article tells how to get more milk or meat from pastures.

Midwestern farms with better soil and pasture management. Some authorities have estimated that nearly a billion more pounds of beef could be produced in eight Midwestern states if present grasslands were fertilized according to recommendations by agronomists in these states. Or the same amount of beef now produced could be got from about one-half to two-thirds of the present acreage.

Top quality pasture depends on three factors: 1—A high soil fertility level backed up by the use of nitrogen, phosphate and potash fertilizer when seedlings are made, plus regular top-dressings to keep the pasture's legume population high; 2—The use of well adapted seed from strains that are winter-hardy and disease-resistant; 3—Good management which rotates the grazing and permits harvests when the legumes' feeding value is high.

How Much Can Pastures Produce?

The "yardstick" of a pasture's value is the forage and the pounds of beef or milk per acre a farmer gets.

Midwestern agronomists recommend that farmers set goals for top yields of high quality forage and then manage its harvest so that the most pounds of milk and meat are obtained.

These soils men point out that 600 to 800 pounds of beef per acre could readily be produced on many

Treated Corn Stops Ega Production Line

Arsan-treated seed corn which got into feed channels in error stopped hens' production of hard-shelled eggs within two days at a Minnesota poultry farm. Arsan is a fungicide for treating seed grain.

Experiments were begun last fall after a severe drop in egg production hit several farms. On one, 700-bird pens which gave 500 eggs per day were down to 20 or 30 odd-shaped eggs daily. About 75,000 hens were involved.

One farmer tried a commercial feed and his hens recovered immediately. University of Minnesota poultry scientists checked his some-mixed feed and found corn "gully."

They then fed several corn seed treatments in hens' rations and found that Arsan SFX produced the same symptoms as on the stricken farms. Later, in 16-day feeding tests, hens fed lower levels of Arsan SFX—25 to 50 parts Arsan per million parts of feed—began laying fewer eggs after four days. By the end of the 16, they were laying a third as many eggs as normally, half misshapen.

Apparently, Arsan affects shell-application, which takes about 16 hours—the longest "stop" the egg makes.

Good Records for Two Area Holsteins

Two cows from Holstein herds in this area were listed in a summary of outstanding production records recently completed in Michigan, according to the Holstein-Friesian Association of America.

Elmcha Polly Grandmaster, a Holstein cow four years, seven months old, when tests began, owned by Elmer F. Chapman of Decker, produced 440 pounds of butterfat and 12,611 pounds of milk. She was milked two times daily for 865 days and averaged 16 quarts of milk daily. Pietje Hat Lass Clure Korn-dyke, a Holstein owned by Mike V. Hatlas of Owendale, produced 459 pounds of butterfat and 14,380 pounds of milk. She was milked twice daily for 358 days. She produced an average of 19 quarts of milk daily and was two years, three months old when testing began. Testing was done under the Herd Improvement Registry testing program and supervised by Michigan State University. Don't wait to see what happens—take hold and make it happen.

SHORT STORY Big Favor By F. L. Rowley

OLD PETE stood with his back to the cash register, his eyelids drooping. At this late hour the restaurant was all but deserted. I was the only customer. Down at the far end of the room lean-jawed Edgar Phillips wielded his mop like a flail, swinging viciously now as he worked toward me and Pete. Suddenly he ripped off his dirty apron and flung it into one of the booths.

"I quit!" he cried angrily. Pete's eyes flipped open. A faint expression of triumph crossed his fat face, as if he had anticipated the outburst. Then, taking Edgar by the arm, he purred: "So you quit. O. K. I cannot stop you. But first you do me big favor—no? Work one more week so I can get a man to take your place."

Edgar looked at me. "It's a matter of courtesy," I assured him. "But Pete promised me a better job," argued Edgar. "He said if I went to night school and learned business management I'd wind up with something better. There's my 'something better'!" He pointed to the mop. Pete winced. "Then make it three more days," he pleaded.

"I'll stay here three more days—starting tomorrow," he said reluctantly.

"Work three more days for double pay. O. K. Edgar?"

Edgar weakened. It was plain to see that he liked Pete, even though the job didn't appeal to him. "I'll stay three more days—starting tomorrow," he said.

When the door closed behind him I turned to Pete. "It isn't like you to give anyone a shabby deal; why'd you promise him a better job? You don't have much to offer him here."

Pete grinned. "Remember that pretty girl he used to go out with a few months back?"

"Sure. She was a knockout. And some dresser. So?"

"Edgar wanted to marry her. When he got wind of her expensive tastes he changed his mind."

"So that's why you want Edgar to stick around for a few days. But why all this humbug about a promotion? You even had the poor chump going to night school."

"This Grace," explained Pete, "lives with her mother on the far side of town. Edgar doesn't know it yet, but the girl he loves owns a string of gas stations."

"Wow! Now I'm beginning to see."

"That's right," laughed Pete. "Edgar doesn't know it, but he's been studying for that better job I promised him. The only thing is—Edgar is proud. If he suspects trickery he'll never talk to Grace again."

"Why not put Grace to work?" I suggested.

Pete looked puzzled. "Let her work at one of her own gas stations—in overalls. Then send Edgar over there on an errand. When he sees her with her feet on the ground he might propose on the spot."

A look of gratitude leaped into Pete's eyes. He dashed to the telephone.

And it worked. The next thing I heard was that Edgar Phillips was managing a string of gas stations, and doing a fine job.

One day about a month later I stopped off at Pete's Restaurant. When he saw me he dashed around the counter to grasp my hand.

"You coming to the wedding?" he asked eagerly.

"Why, I thought that Grace and Edgar were already married," I said, raising my eyebrows.

"Who's talking about them? Of course they're married. I mean my wedding; mine and Mollie's. Mollie is Grace's mother."

"Grace's mother? You mean—you?"

"Sure," said Pete with a wry grin. "Mollie said she never would marry me until her daughter was settled. And now—well, what were you saying about a favor?"

"Nothing, Pete," I said looking at my own foolish reflection in the black coffee before me. "Nothing at all. When's the wedding?"

Raising Herefords Keep Boys Busy

Profits Marked For College Educations

The Clyde Johnsons of San Antonio, Texas, solved the knotty problem of three restless and spirited sons by deciding to invest in Hereford steers for their sons to feed, fit and show in the annual San Antonio Livestock Exposition. It all started three years ago when Hereford breeders Joe and Harry Freeman placed a steer from their San Marcos ranch in the ownership of 8-year-old Clyde Johnson III. Young Clyde, his parents and twin brother ranch hands, Mark and Mike, made the steer feel at home on their 16 acres.

The next year, the twins wanted a steer of their own. But, they accepted the decision of the family that they wait a year and helped Twins Mark (left) and Mike Johnson of San Antonio, Texas, pose with their steers. Both hard workers, the two dream of a championship at the San Antonio Livestock Exposition.

Clyde with his second steer, which won third place in the open class and brought $1,200 at auction.

Total returns for the two years, plus a donation by the parents, was invested in $2,500 worth of war bonds with equal shares for the three boys.

When steers were selected for the 1955 show, each boy drew straws and went home with a Hereford he could call his own. They cared for their steers before and after school each day and on Saturdays.

When show time rolled around, the boys proudly led their steers into the showing. Their winnings didn't make headlines, but they added $1,981 at auction which their parents converted into $3,000 worth of bonds.

Many a man has to go broke before deciding to break his bad habits.
