SHORT STORY

Ghost Voice

By Joe Ringland

WITH a ripple of notes from the organist Phil Martin raised his hands to direct his first church choir rehearsal. But the voices were too high pitched and nervous to do the song justice.

He stopped them, laughing. "At ease," he said.

They were smiling when he started again, but the sopranos were still off. He moved near them and watched an elderly lady put her hand into the words. He could see that she was caught by the magic spell of the music, making her unmindful of anything but the voices following her lead when they should have been following his.

What a pity her voice was gone.

After several warnings, Phil began to suspect that changing the elderly lady's course was impossible. As professor of music at the nearby university he knew that either his reputation or her heart had to be sacrificed.

She was caught by the magical spell of the music, unmindful of anything but the voices following her lead.

Rehearsal ended and Phil went to her, hating what he knew he must do. Because she reminded him of his mother his task was so much more difficult. "I would like to see you, Mr.—" she smiled.

"Don't we have a wonderful choir, Mr. Martin? My greatest pleasure comes from helping the church with their music." She squeezed his arm.

Phil picked up a hymnal, trying to appear casual. "Won't you sit down?"

He started thumbing pages. "Have you done much singing?"

"I've been soloist here for twenty years."

"You have?" He almost dropped the hymnal.

"Of course I'll be happy just to sing with the choir if you have other plans. We expect you to make changes and bring in new ideas. We have never had a professor as director before."

He cleared his throat. "There are many ways a person can be valuable to his church. Molding a child's character is equally as important as the background music to the pulpit. Have you ever worked with children, Mrs. Higgins?"

"I raised five."

"What I had in mind was a children's choir. They need someone experienced to organize and lead them."

She stood up slowly. "I can't resign with the adult choir anymore?"

"The right beginning means much to a child's future. You may find one or two as talented as yourself." He hesitated. "We can't have you wasting a rehearsal. Please come next Sunday."

She turned and the proud way she held her shoulders prompted him to add, "You'll do the solo, of course."

"Thank you, Mr. Martin," she said and disappeared around the corner.

Next Sunday the church was filled to capacity.

After the offertory, Mrs. Higgins stepped to the front for her solo. She sang with much emotion, but her tired voice cracked on every high note.

Phil watched the congregation for averted faces, whispering, grinning, but he was completely bewildered. They showed nothing but respect and admiration.

He realized then that she was a part of the church. Such a part of them each Sunday that they hadn't noticed the gradual change in her voice. How long would it be until the congregation realized what they were hearing. How long?

When the service ended Mrs. Higgins followed Phil to the robe room.

"You were right, you know," she said. "For the first time in years I listened to my voice and knew I had been hearing a memory. A ghost of a voice that no longer exists." She dabbed her eyes with a bit of lace. "And to think that I have caused discord. It's most humiliating. I will be happy to help train the children."

CARS ARE MY LINE

By H. M. Bulen

In a New York junkyard of old cars not so long back, a man with a sharp eye for antique autos found a delapidated hulk that appeared to be of European vintage.

He paid the unsuspecting junk dealer $850 for it—and thereby got the world's rarest and most valuable classic car. It was a Bugatti Royale, made around 1927 by a strange feudal sort of auto maker in French Alsace-Lorraine. Every piece of the intricate, 130-mile-an-hour beauty was hand made and to antique car collectors the $850 junk was priceless. It is to car collectors what a rare stamp is to stamp collectors.

Originally the car cost $40,000—for the engine and chassis, and King Alfonso of Spain, its original owner, paid extra for the coachwork.

This car, in the language of car dealers, was a "clunker." Most dealers run across chunkers now and then, although few ever have the thrill, or the misfortune, to acquire a hidden gem like the Bugatti Royale.

But the "as is" car can be a godsend for the man with a little mechanical knack, or the time and interest to patch and mend. An old car though, is a problem for the car dealer—he knows that the car is basically sound, but the price it would bring even in top shape isn't worth turning skilled mechanics loose on it.

We often have good "as is" models, older cars that need the do-it-yourself touch of someone with a greasy thumb. Or, quite often, we get a car that can be run for a year or a summer without fixing and then tossed on the scrap heap, offering transportation that's almost cheaper than shoe leather.

We can't offer you a Bugatti Royale (I just ran out and checked) but we've some old timers that can be good transportation. We have a dozen cars priced under $300.00. We're tired of supporting them in the manner to which they've become accustomed. Let's put them to work as good cheap transportation for you, a few bucks in the Bank for us. We'll both be happy.

Come in and browse around.

Uneasy peace reigns over Gov. Williams' office and the domain of Highway Commissioner Charles M. Ziegler. Both are keeping their powder dry.

Williams has been heckling Ziegler since last year over Michigan's road system.

It was a shambles and Ziegler was slapping on patches rather than building new roads, according to Williams. This session the legislature added 1 1/2 cents to the gasoline tax.

For weeks, Williams and his aides needed Ziegler to get started. Ziegler, one of two remaining Republicans on the State Administrative Board, said the money wasn't yet available, but he would see what could be done.

Then came the strategy. Ziegler popped up with a $1,200,000,000 highway program, complete with a priority schedule to give the state 1,440 miles of major highways and 400 miles of routes in metropolitan areas. It will be completed in 10 years, Ziegler said.

Slightly abashed at the sudden show of progress, Williams called off his running battle with Ziegler.

"He has developed a reasonable plan," Williams said.

It has been a long haul since last October when Williams and the Democrats made the highway issue a major plank in the party campaign for election. GOP Party leaders plainly were unhappy that Ziegler declined to come up with answers to toss back at Williams.

Through the legislative session of 1955, Ziegler was a storm center. At one point, there was talk of turning over the new highway program to a separate agency.

So now Ziegler comes up with a long-range plan for highways; an impressive presentation showing it must have been in preparation long before the tax bill for $36 million was passed.

Where does that leave politicians next year at the time for vote-gathering?

Republicans can point to Ziegler and take credit for the highway program.

Williams will say it wouldn't have been achieved without prodding from Democrats.

That way the motoring public will pay the tax, ride on new roads and accept any explanation they want, if they want one.

Farmers are getting another service from the state and Michigan State University.

The state agricultural commission approved a program creating a swine herd inspection system, complete with certification of herds.

And the commission also gave a boost to the promotion of Michigan agricultural products by granting funds to four major organizations for the purpose.

They are the American Farm Economics Association $480, the Benton Harbor Market Board $10,000; the Michigan Bean Shippers Association $1,300; the Michigan Beekeepers Association $240.

Clark J. Adams, a Pontiac attorney, should feel right at home in public life again.

He was appointed by Gov. Williams as the new fourth circuit judge in Oakland county. He will take office January 1, 1956, and be required to face his first election test the next November.

During his career, Adams has served in all three branches of state government, legislative, administrative and judicial.

First, he served three terms as a member of the House from the second Oakland county district; he was Williams' first legal advisor and was later appointed to the Michigan Supreme Court.

Defeated in his try for reelection in 1953, Adams returned to private law practice in Pontiac. He was appointed in the spring to the Michigan Corrections Commission.

He will serve on the commission until he takes the bench as circuit judge next Jan. 1.

"Adams has always done a good job wherever he served," said one executive office aide. "He will make a lot of friends for himself and do the public a great service."

Legislators are organizing a

15-member study committee to work out the future of higher education in Michigan.

There will be five members from each chamber and another five, composed of businessmen, industrial executives and possibly an educator.

Already a difference of opinion has developed.

Senator Don Vander Werp (R-Fremont) is anxious to aid junior and community colleges while Senator Carlton H. Morris (R-Kalamazoo) goes more for building up four-year colleges.

The committee will hold hearings in the capitol and around the state during the summer and come up with recommendations for the 1956 legislative session.

"We've got to find the answers," Vander Werp said. "This is a $150 million problem."

Bought in December ...
enjoyed in July!

Turkey, bargain-priced in December, tastes especially good in July. Thanks to a home food freezer, poultry (and practically anything else) will retain all its natural flavor.

No matter how you serve it—cold and sliced, in a salad, or piping hot with all the trimmings—your turkey will be as fresh and tasty as it was the very day you put it away in your home food freezer. And here's a hint—with a freezer you can convert leftovers to "planned-overs." In your freezer they'll stay as tasty as when first prepared.

FORMER EDITOR—Walter J. Gamble, 86, co-publisher of the Cass City Times, recently reviewed in the Chronicle, was a visitor to the community over the Fourth of July holiday. Now living in Daytona Beach, Fla., Mr. Gamble has fond memories of his experiment in the newspaper business. Equipment consisted of a small press that printed one sheet a day and made it necessary to start the week's four-inch by five-inch paper as soon as the previous paper was published. One of Mr. Gamble's favorite recollections is the time that, after a long dry spell, they started a story with "once again the dust flies" and before the paper was published it had rained for five days. Visiting Cass City with Mr. Gamble was Roy MacKenzie of Youngstown, Ohio.

Some men find it more difficult to get divorced from their habits than from their wives.

Unhappy is the man who is carrying the burdens of the world upon his conscience.

Usually the troubles that happen are more bearable than the worry that preceded them.

Most any married man will tell you nothing is too good for his wife—except him.

RICE-STUFFED FRANKS

Frankfurters are always a family favorite, but your family will find them a special treat when they're prepared with this unusual rice-and-cheese filling. For indoor or outdoor eating, winter or summer, these savory franks are sure to please—and they're inexpensive, too!

1/2 cup milk
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon onion salt
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
2 cups cooked rice

Self-Feeding Sheep Possible, Tests Show

Work being done at the University of Illinois proves you can safely self-feed sheep. These same tests show that you can make feeding easier and better by self-feeding.
In the past sheep growers have not self-fed sheep because of high death losses when sheep overeat. Studies now indicate that you can control enterotoxemia, or overeating disease, by adding a high level of salt, ground corn cobs or low-grade roughages to the concentrates.
Bred ewes should have about one pound of concentrate per head per day in addition to good-quality legume hay or silage. A mixture of 30 pounds of salt, 50 pounds of shelled corn, 15 pounds of soybean oil meal and 4 pounds of ground limestone makes a satisfactory grain ration that will keep ewes from eating more than a pound a day.
Or you can get the same results by using 75 pounds of ground corn or low-grade roughage with 15 pounds of shelled corn, 9 pounds of soybean oil meal and 1 pound of ground limestone.
C. E. Schoettle of the University's College of Veterinary Medicine reports that in addition to requiring less work, self-feeding did not cause any pregnancy disease. He warns, however, you'll need to supply more water and bedding when you feed a ration containing a high level of salt.

Friendship is a good deal like credit—the less you use it the better it is.

Don't blow your pennies and your dollars probably will be blown by your heirs.

Usually a man has to reach a "don't care" state of mind not to be prejudiced.

Mrs. Frank Decker Dies at Farm Home

Mrs. Theresa I. Decker, 63, wife of Frank Decker, died Wednesday, June 15, at her farm home in Greenleaf Township. She had been suffering from a long illness.
Mrs. Decker was born June 4, 1892, in Greenleaf Township and was a lifelong resident there except for a few years spent in Bad Axe.
She was the daughter of the late Andrew and Mary Ann Patrick.
Surviving, besides her husband, are: three sons, Nicholas, Cass City, and Francis and Arthur, at home; two daughters, Sister Ann Carmel, Chicago, and Miss Florence Decker at home; nine grandchildren; one great-grandchild; four brothers and three sisters.
Funeral services were held June 18 in St. Columbkille's Catholic Church, Rev. Edward R. Werm officiating. Burial was in the church cemetery.
Rosary devotions were held at the Zinger Funeral Home in Uby Friday, June 17.
The want ads are newsy too.

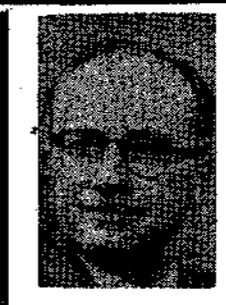

A practical joke played on a practical joker is no joke.
Anyone can take a day off—the big problem is figuring out a way to put it back.

About half of any man's time is spent in doing the things he should have done yesterday.

People who complain they never had a chance probably would be afraid to take a chance if they had the opportunity.

Any man who is deserving of a kindness usually is a person who quickly passes it on when it comes to him.
