Agent Says Cottons Need Special Care

Summer and fall cotton dresses are sporting those rich, dark shades of browns, greens, blacks and blues. Keeping your wardrobe of dark cottons fresh and lintless-looking may be quite a chore for you. Here are some helpful pointers in helping them keep that newly-bought look.
 You can avoid that "shiny look" on dark cottons by ironing them on the wrong side. Put a covering of smooth fabric like chintz over the ironing board cover so the garment being ironed doesn't pick up fuzz from the cover. When you must press it on the right side, use a press cloth. The press cloth should have a hard finish so that it, too, does not leave its lint on the dark cotton.
 To get the best out of the years every individual must learn to live each minute well.

THE FOX AND THE GRAPES

We all know this one, the story of the Fox that found the delicious looking grapes hanging way up but jump as he might he couldn't reach them, finally muttering as he slunk away, "Oh well, they are all sour anyway."

Over the years that's how a lot of people must have felt about bakery buying, too. They wanted baked products but they felt that there were just none as good as those slaved over at home.
 With us it is a point of pride that we can produce a product so good that the homemaker of today is glad not to have to heat up her kitchen, mess up her utensils or fray her temper. She shops with us at her leisure, and is delighted with the variety, the convenience and the praise that is showered on her by her family.

By H. M. Bulen

Quite a while ago I talked about the "horsepower race," the stepped up energy that has been put into cars in the last couple of years. Added horsepower doesn't appreciably raise a car's top speed, but it does give more zip and acceleration at normal driving ranges, meaning you can get out of a tight spot easier.

One of the chief reasons for the added horsepower, however, has been the fact that without it today's cars would actually be more sluggish than those of a few years ago.

Many of the recent new developments for cars make added demands on the engine. Automatic transmission, a great help in city driving, is one example.

When the engine is working its hardest, some types of automatic transmission take eight percent of the horsepower produced. New efficiencies make it no more expensive to produce this power, but the power has to be there.

Power steering can take up to two percent of the power produced. Oversize, low-pressure tires, that give such a marvelously smooth ride, eat up as much as six percent of the power turned out at 60 miles an hour.

So today's added power is being used in two ways. It is giving greater maneuverability and safety, and it is providing the power for the new comforts in driving.

The enjoyment of these new luxuries isn't confined to those who can afford a new car. You'd be surprised how many used cars of recent years you can find with this equipment, turned in by our regular customers who trade in every year or second year.

We need used trucks. That's the first time I ever made that statement. But, we have only one Pickup (John Wilbert's '53) on hand; no heavy jobs at all.

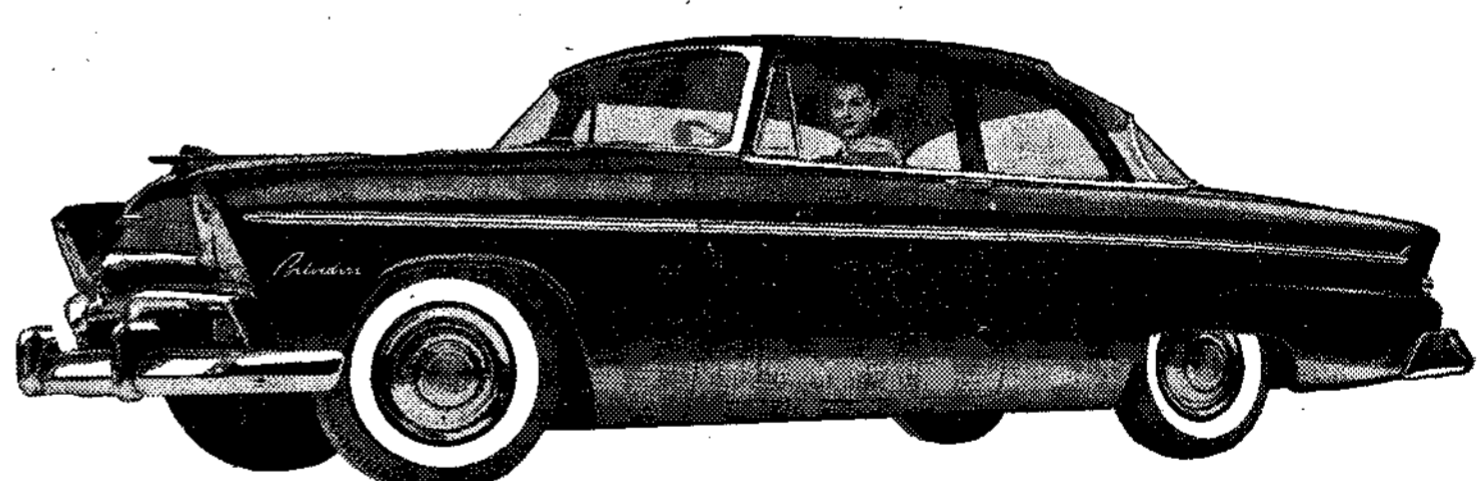

So, we are in a position to give a good price for your used unit on a 1955 Chevrolet Task Force Truck. I can't remember ever having been in this position before. It may never happen again. So, let's figure on your truck needs now while we're in this very unusual position.

A summer-long search for a place to build a children's mental hospital is under way. The quest is a "halfway" answer by the legislature to the issue which stirred weeks of cloak-room debate during the last session.

About 1,100 mentally deficient children who need care and treatment have not been admitted to Michigan's three institutions because of overcrowding, said Charles F. Wagg, state mental health director. This is a pressing condition which concerns many lawmakers.

Dr. Harry C. August, of the mental health commission, said the proposed hospital should be in or near a metropolitan area near the source of a staff and in the area which draws most patients.

Commenting on the long waiting list, Dr. August said: "Some of the courts have stopped committing children because it has become only a gesture."

The commission is casting an eye on the Wayne County Home and Training School, which has 750 patients, and an area in Grand Rapids. These seem to be the two most promising sites.

Dr. August said the new hospital should be large enough to accommodate 3,500.

Last winter, the mental health commission rounded up some legislative support, but not enough to take over a tuberculosis hospital as a mental health institution.

It was blocked by health officials who said that, despite the fact that some of the tuberculosis hospital beds are vacant,

"we're just now gaining on the disease."

So the legislature ordered the study and expects a report on Michigan's answer to the mental health problem next winter.

Toll roads which augment, instead of compete with free highways, that is the pledge of Michigan's newly-constituted turnpike authority.

George N. Higgins, former state senator and now authority chairman, conferred at length with highway officials on the problem.

For months, the authority fought the idea that Highway Commissioner Charles M. Ziegler would build a free superhighway parallel to the 113-mile Kist Rock to Saginaw toll road route.

With Higgins now chairman, the authority will work with the highway department to provide the state with a combination of highways, for all kinds of users.

Retail gasoline dealers of Michigan are anxious to improve their lot in life particularly as regards their relation with oil companies that supply them with the products they sell.

National Congress of Petroleum Retailers, an organization of station operators, will most likely be spearheading the campaign. They are holding their annual convention in the Motor City Aug. 21-24.

The "average" gas station owner works for $1.02 per hour according to a survey undertaken by a Toledo CPA. He puts in more than 80 hours per week to earn about $4,288. Allowing interest of 6% on the average amount invested, he earns more like $1.18 per hour (for an 80 hour week.)

GPA figures also show that the gas station operator actually loses money on the gas he pumps and must count on income from service and sales of TBA (tires, batteries and accessories) to make a living.

Hub of the trouble, retailers feel, is that they are tied up too tightly by gasoline companies. The large companies, in most instances, own the station and lease it to the "owner." Lease provisions permit periodic increase in rent, so if the proprietor does a good job, his lease payments are increased.

Station operators are not free to handle TBA of their choice. They must deal with brands approved by gasoline suppliers and within terms set down by them. Station proprietors feel sure the large companies benefit financially from this arrangement. They are also sure they could do much better if gas companies left them a free hand to buy and sell tires, batteries and accessories under open market conditions.

Fried Turkey? That's right. This is another way of preparing one of Michigan's fancier fowl foods. Donald C. Miller, secretary of the Michigan Turkey Association, says fried turkeys have served for four or five years, and are now getting more and more public attention.

Miller might be called "Mr. Turkey" in Michigan. In addition to his work with the state's 1,000 plus growers, he is a poultry professor at MSU.

Incidentally, he says that consumers will be paying more this year for their Thanksgiving turkey than in 1954. "There was an oversupply last year," he explains. "People who bought turkeys then for 37 or 39c per pound were paying less than it cost to produce them." There will be fewer birds this year and demand is expected to be higher, he predicts.

Always the promoter of turkey, Miller hastens to add: "Birds produced this year will be better than ever before."

Everything seems to be higher today—even blood pressure.

Michigan Has Best Brucellosis Laws

Written by dairy and beef cattle farmers, the laws and regulations to control and eradicate brucellosis in Michigan are among the finest in the nation. That's the opinion of Alfred Bailweg, Tuscola County agricultural agent. He points out that a group of livestock owners spent 10 months reviewing the regulations then in effect. After the extensive study, detailed recommendations were handed to the Commission of Agriculture. They were passed by the legislature at its last session. The livestock owners had acted upon the request of George McIntyre, director of the Michigan Department of Agriculture. His department and the U. S. Department of Agriculture have the joint responsibility of operating the program successfully. George Parsons, extension dairyman at Michigan State University, said the program is successful because:

1. It was written by farmers and is one under which they can live and eradicate the disease.
2. Enough federal funds are available until July 1, 1966, to complete the initial tests in all counties.
3. There are well-trained men in charge of the program.
4. Livestock owners have a great desire to eradicate brucellosis.
