Coach Irv Claxman has been struggling all year to make both ends meet financially. He believes that if interest is going to be sufficient in the team to pay costs, it should be evident Sunday.

The game should provide all the drama and interest that can be generated in one contest. It's the final game of the season and will decide the play-off champion of the league.

With a good crowd, the club can pull out of the red for the year. Neither Coach Claxman nor the players on the squad expect to make money while playing, but if the team can't break even with a championship contender, they see little hope for the future.

Another meeting that should be of interest to local residents is the Community Chest election scheduled for next Tuesday.

Naming officers for the one-year charity drive is important, too often in the past those present have had to call friends in order to make the quota of 12 persons necessary to have a quorum. The meeting doesn't last long and subscribers in the area should make a point of attending.

Sixty-eight ladies of the Women's Society of Christian Service met for a prayer circle at 6:15 and dinner at 6:30 Monday evening, Sept. 12, for the first meeting of the year.

General Telephone Company of Michigan signed an agreement Friday with locals of the AFL serving the company calling for wage increases ranging from 3.5 cents to 20.5 cents per hour.

The increases became effective Aug. 24 for the plant group with five cents per hour of the increase retroactive to May 10. Increases ranged from four cents to 20.5 cents per hour.

Increases for traffic employees concluded on page ten.

Three Cass City Children Injured In Mishaps

Three Cass City youngsters were injured in mishaps during the week that required medical attention. Two of the children were hospitalized.

Melvin Thorpe, eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Thorpe, is a patient in Cass City Hospital with extensive burns on the head, face, neck and left side sustained Saturday when he threw fuel oil on a trash fire he was trying to burn.

Mark, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Abraham, sustained a concussion Tuesday when he fell from a tree at school and was taken to Cass City Hospital.

Susan Schuckert, 7, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schuckert, fell about four feet from a clothes pole Tuesday and broke her left arm in three places.

According to the parents, Susan was believed to have been trying to climb down from the pole when one of her feet became tangled in the clothes line. When her foot became loose from the line, she threw out her arm to break the fall.

Susan has a cast from her shoulder to her wrist.

Merchants to Face Millington in Championship Tilt

Championship baseball is on tap for Cass City baseball fans Sunday when the Cass City Merchants meet Millington for the 3-Star League championship at the Cass City Recreational Park.

The game will decide the play-off champion of the league. Millington, winner over Richville 5-1 Sunday and the regular season co-champions, will be the opponents in the title tilt.

Cass City won its way into the championship round by defeating North Branch 3-3 Sunday at Cass City.

Behind fine pitching by Gerald Whittaker and the strong Merchants' hitting attack, Cass City had little trouble with North Branch. Whittaker allowed eight hits, three of which were of the scratch variety.

Joe Kilbourn paced the Merchants with three hits, including a triple.

Cass City jumped off to a 5-0 lead in the first two innings and were never in danger of losing. North Branch scored a run in the fifth on a single and an error. In the eighth they narrowed the margin to 6-3, but in the last of the eighth the Merchants scored their two final runs on three hits.

Hawk Grid Team to Meet Elkton Friday

Cass City High School football fans will take their first look at the highly regarded local squad in action tonight (Friday) at Elkton when the eleven opens the season with a non-conference tilt.

The team has been plagued by injuries in early season workouts and a patched line-up will take the field tonight. Several of the regulars that will probably be in the game will be operating at less than 100 per cent effectiveness because of injuries.

Definitely out of the game is Ron Behr, 180-pound senior and one of the best linebackers in the league. He has a sprained ankle.

Jerry Dearing is nursing an ankle injury and may not play. Don Root, scheduled to start at center, is on the doubtful list. He was cut in the forehead and several stitches were required to close the wound.

Jim Johnson, slated for the starting nod at quarterback, may see little action due to a shoulder injury and Jim Ellis has a leg injury that has him hobbling now. He is expected to see at least limited action.

Although he is expected to play, Jack Clara is bothered by a back ailment. Despite the injury, he is expected to anchor the left half spot tonight. Quarterback will be Jim Johnson, if he's ready. If not, Tom Hulien will get the starting nod. Dick Hanby has been switched from right half to fullback in the absence of Behr. At right half, Bob Walpole, a transfer from Fenton, has gained the starting nod.

Others who will probably see action will be Gene Wilson and Andy Kozan at tackles, Dale Bader and Leroy Magel at guards, Clayton Nelman at halfback and George McKee at fullback.

In addition, other boys who could get into the game are: Bernard Kelly, Ray Fox, Mike Rocheleau, Ed Freeman, Mike Fritz, Bob McGrath, Chuck Patterson, Lester O'Dell, Roger Wright, Ralph Leyva and Jack Hartwick.

Although Cass City will remain as a heavy favorite tonight, Coach Mike Yedinak recalled last year's game when the teams battled down to the wire before Cass City took a six-point decision. The game starts at 8 p. m.

"We thrive on ARCADIAN 12-12-12"

If wheat could talk it would tell you how well it likes ARCADIAN 12-12-12, the modern, balanced, complete, granular fertilizer. Actually, wheat, barley and other small grains tell you this story without words, if you watch them grow strong and sturdy, with extra stalks loaded with plump grain — when you use plenty of ARCADIAN 12-12-12.

For top grain yields, drill in ARCADIAN 12-12-12 with the seed at planting. Use 400 to 600 pounds per acre now, save the chore of top-dressing, and still feed your grain all the plant food it needs to turn out big, profitable yields. Free-flowing ARCADIAN 12-12-12 dissolves quickly in the soil, gives grain a fast start that helps it come through the winter strong for an early-ripening, big crop next year. SHORT STORY

Wrong Fellow

By F. L. Rowley

OUR train had stopped. My friend Danny pointed to a young lady who was dropping huge tears on the railroad platform.

"That girl's in trouble," he observed wisely.

I didn't like the way Danny's nose was twitching. He'd always been a soft touch for hard-luck stories; obviously the girl on the platform had a goodie.

"SHE is in trouble?" I scoffed. "What about us? We just lost our jobs. There's less than ten bucks between us. And now that we're aimed in the direction of New York you're looking for someone who needs a helping hand."

The girl in the station had her handkerchief out now. Keeping one eye on our window, she lifted the other heavenward, at the same time emitting a howl like the noon whistle at the rubber works.

This was too much for Danny. He bounded toward the end of the car with me at his heels—he was carrying out train tickets. (While we were listening to the girl's tale of woe the train pulled away.)

Her story was a dilly, yet Danny swallowed it without blinking. According to her, she and her father were stuck with a small hardware store. Business was bad.

"We'll be most happy to help

Her story was a dilly, yet Danny swallowed it without blinking.

you, my dear," he said gallantly. "My friend Artie and I have had quite a little experience in merchandizing. What your store needs is new ideas—new blood."

I didn't approve of this arrangement one bit, but nobody asked me. I had to follow Danny, though, because he still had the railroad tickets. The set-up at the store was about as unsavory as I had anticipated. Mr. Jackson, the owner, gave us a cock-and-bull story that shaded his daughter's.

The following day my suspicions were confirmed. An old chap who introduced himself as John Townsend shuffled up behind the store while I was fitting a pane of glass to a window-frame.

"Yep," he said, shaking his head wisely. "I seen it happen a'fore—several times. That young Maria's even foxier than the old man. How much you being paid for this job, bub?"

"Why," I said, blushing. "I'm not quite sure."

"Hee! Hee! That's a good'n. You'll work for two, maybe three weeks, then chuck the job like all t'others. Maria'll soon be down to the railroad station crying her pretty eyes out for more free help. Someday she'll pick on the wrong feller."

About this time Danny came out of the store. After nodding in our direction he strode down the street, whistling.

"Who's that feller?" asked the old man. "Never seen him a'fore." Suddenly an idea hit me. Why couldn't Danny be the "wrong feller"? I winked knowingly. "Him? Why he's a special agent working for the State Better Business Bureau!"

And it worked. John Townsend scurried off without a backward glance. Maria came into the store carrying doughnuts and coffee.

"Daddy doesn't feel well," she announced. "Furthermore, he has asked me to pay you gentlemen off; we really can't afford two clerks. Would twenty-five dollars be all right?"

We blinked as she pulled out a roll thicker than an axe-handle. "We'll take it!" I cried. "When does the next train leave for New York?"

Maria's eyes narrowed as she looked at me—hard. "In about thirty minutes," she said evenly. I was glad we were leaving.

"I still can't figure it out," said Danny about an hour later as our train rolled along. "Twenty-five dollars for one morning's work. And Maria claimed they were broke."

"Looks fishy," I agreed. "Perhaps we should contact an agent of the State Better Business Bureau?"

"There's no such thing!" scoffed Danny, frowning at my ignorance.

Most self-made men act as if they were real proud of the job.

Any question settled by force invariably comes up for re-settlement.

This old world has too many church members and too few Christians.

CARS ARE MY LINE

By H. M. Bulen

You're driving merrily along at a good highway clip on one of the first warm days of spring. You have to slow down at a traffic jam. Suddenly the car stalls and won't restart.

It's obviously the fuel pump, you say, and sometimes it is. But one of the possible causes people seldom think about is "vapor lock."

It's a mysterious thing, and since it's a condition you can't see, vapor lock is a dilemma that's not too well understood.

But if you remember about it, you may save yourself the expense of a new fuel pump.

Vapor lock usually happens in the season's first warm days when some service stations haven't received their supply of summertime gas. The difference is important, for in the winter gasoline is made to vaporize easily for ready starts. In the summertime, that advantage becomes a disadvantage.

When you slowed down in that traffic jam, the engine heated up a bit and the gasoline in the carburetor, fuel line and pump began to vaporize. But the pump is made to force through liquid gas, not vapor. The engine stops. It looks like a case for a new fuel pump.

If it is vapor lock, it can be cured easily by pouring cold water over the fuel pump and fuel lines to condense the gas.

That's a simple answer to a complicated problem. Only experience can give you the answers, and it's experience that gives a good mechanic the ability to tell when you need repairs—and when you DON'T need repairs. That's just one of the reasons so many owners leave their cars in the careful hands of our service department.

Ollie, our Service Manager, has the toughest job in the Place. He has me "on his neck" to get the used cars reconditioned so we can guarantee them conscientiously. He must get the new cars conditioned for delivery by Kelley, Tom or Greenlee. Then, you come in with a small job that should take only a few minutes. But, everyone is tied up. Should we take a man off another car (the other man wouldn't like it) to do yours?

Of course, sometimes we have plenty of time, and then everyone comes in at once. IF YOU WOULD LET US KNOW WHEN YOU WERE COMING, WE'D SAVE TIME FOR YOU. Anyway, thanks for cooperating and being patient. We, and particularly Ollie, do our best.

Pair Speak Vows In Bach Church

The marriage vows of Miss Arlene Grace Schnell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Schnell of Gageton, and Donald E. Bielat, son of Mrs. Jessie Murray of Detroit, were solemnized Saturday afternoon at St. Peter's Lutheran Church in Bach. The double ring rites were spoken in a setting of garden flowers and palms before some 250 guests by the Rev. Elmer W. Scheck.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a bridal gown made of French imported rosepointe lace and nylon tulle. It was designed with a lace over satin bodice featuring an illusion neckline with lace and iridescent accents, a Peter Pan collar and lace wristpoint sleeves. High-lighting the full bouffant skirt was pleated nylon tulle caught by a peplum of rosepointe lace which cascaded to a chapel length train. Her fingertip veil of pure silk illusion, hand rolled, was held by a pleated nylon headband. The bridal bouquet was comprised of cascading white gladioli centered by an orchid.

The maid of honor, Miss Linda Haggert of Unionville, and bridesmaids, Misses Betty Schmidlin of Detroit, Marlene Weisenberg of Unionville, and Mrs. Steve Timko of Nashville, wore similar floor length gowns of Nile green crystallette.

Miss Ona Jean Johnston, junior bridesmaid, and Jane Callahan, flower girl, carried pink and white carnations.

Best man was the bride's brother, George Schnell, Jr., and the ushers were James Bielat, Donald Johnston, Donald Courtney and James Schnell, also a brother of the bride.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Schnell wore a tea rose lace and acetate taffeta frock with navy blue accessories and Mrs. Murray was attired in a pale blue lace gown with black accessories. Both wore similar cor-sages.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the American Legion Hall in Unionville.

For travel, the new Mrs. Bielat chose a periwinkle wool suit with beige and brown accessories.

The couple will make their home in Detroit after a honey-moon trip through Northern Michigan.

SHORT STORY

Out Yonder

By Allen Wishert

THE floor boards on the front porch of the ranch house were taking a terrific pounding as Jim Williams, with long, swinging strides, traveled the length of the "Vee-Ran-Dee," so-called by some Easterners who had ventured west the year before.

Rancher Jim Williams was nobody's runt; he tipped the beam at 209, and could scrape his chin on the top rail of a six-foot corral while standing flat-footed.

3-Minute Fiction

His only child, a daughter, Lula Mae, sat in an old rocker at the east end of the porch, turning the pages of a magazine.

That was the rub, her seeming lack of attention had aroused his anger. He had strived, then raved and ranted, topping it off with a mild oath, while trying to reason with her. The only reply he received was a somewhat disinterested "Huh," or "Ugh-ugh." An extreme contrast existed between father and daughter. Jim Williams was born of the old west. He was rugged, saddle-colored, and his eyes were squinty, made so by the burning sun and hot winds of the prairie. Powerfully built, he was as powerful as he appeared and could buck like a wild horse just brought in from the Mesa if spurred in a tender spot.

"Lula Mae, put down that infernal book an' look at me."

Lula Mae, his daughter, impressed one as not belonging to the same outfit; a mild-mannered young lady of 19. Fair, though slightly tanned. Dark blue eyes with a "Welcome, glad to know you'll all," expression. A girl easily liked, eventually loved.

"Lula Mae," Williams had completed another round-trip. He stood above her, battling to control himself, then glancing down he noted the magazine, so by causing the next explosion:

"Lula Mae, put down that infernal book an' look at me."

"Very well," she answered, placing the magazine in her lap. "I'm looking, Dad, but I see only parental lightning and mottled thunder."

"Now, loo-a-hyar, young lady..." he began.

"Dad," she arose, stood facing the towering storm cloud, mildly replied. "Why all the confusion? You're most unreasonable, treating me like a two-year-old. I am not a child. I know what I do and do not want. Does that clear the situation?"

"Now, listen, Lula Mae, I ain't a-tryin' to force you, not even askin' you to marry, but some day you will." He paused, then quickly continued: "That's why I'm a-arguin' in Tanks favor; he's a top hand, don't drink—er—ah—that is, not too much. He's a good foreman, best I ever had. Why can't you git interested in him?"

"Easily answered; Fayette Tankersley just isn't the right man."

Jim Williams removed his sombrero and ran his bridle-knared fingers through the thinning strands of his sandy hair, then said: "Reckon that's what Eve would a-said to her Father had that been 'nother wrangler 'sides Adam in the pasture—I mean, Garden. Why the thunder is it, the feller a parent picks for his daughter is all 'us wearin' the wrong brand?"

"Perhaps," she smiled, "The daughter recognizes her range brand when she sees it."

Jim opened his mouth; words failed to materialize. He gave a disgusted grunt, wheeled, clattered stiff-legged to a cottonwood where his pony was staked, vaulted into the saddle and vanished out yonder in a cloud of dust.

Lula Mae gave way to joyful laughter as her mother came through the front door and onto the porch.

"Well," beamed Mrs. Williams, gathering Lula Mae into her arms. "That settles that."

"Yes," exclaimed Lula Mae, delightfully squeezing her mother. "You naughty old schemer, your plan worked perfectly. Had dad known that I really was in love and wished to marry Fayette Tankersley, he would have fired the best foreman he ever had."

Too often a man's reputation is injured by his character.

Girls are like violinists in that they like to get the beau on a string.

Usually the man who inherits a barrel of money starts right out to whoop it up.

Life On Farms Getting Better

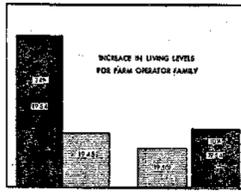

Level Of Living Still Going Upward

Families of farm operators have considerably improved their levels of living since 1945, according to a report by USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service.

Level-of-living indexes in the report are based on four key items—percentage of farms with electricity, with telephones, and with automobiles, and the value of products sold from these farms—(adjusted for changes in purchasing power of farmer's dollar).

In terms of this index, levels of living for farm operator families in 1954 were 34 per cent above the level of 1945.

Farm-operator levels of living since 1950 have continued the upward trend maintained since 1930, the first year for which the indexes are available. The index increased rapidly during 1940-50.

These two illustrations show how farmer's level of living has increased from 1945 to 1954 and from 1950 to 1954. Rates of increase has been slower since 1950, but is still continuing upward. Reports are based on what the farmer owns and the value of his products.

A period of marked changes in the country as a whole. The rate of increase has slackened since 1950 but not at the same rate for all regions. For the country as a whole it rose 10 per cent from 1950 to 1954.

By regions, the Northeast and North Central States show the smallest percentage increase. The South continued to make the greatest gain, but still ranks lowest on the index. The West ranks highest but shows only moderate gains. New England and the Middle Atlantic States—the Northeast region—have identical ranking.

The indexes do not attempt to measure relative standards of living as between farm and nonfarm families. Despite substantial increases in the level of living of farm-operator families, the purchasing power of farm families on the average in 1954 was still considerably less than that of the nonfarm family.

Proper Treatment To Cure Mastitis

Advertising might lead some dairymen to believe all they need do to control mastitis is to inject something into the teat canal of cows giving abnormal milk, but it's not that easy.

Dr. H. S. Bryan of Illinois says that it is often necessary to treat infected quarters with the right drug to clear up mastitis. Permanent cures will depend upon combining the right treatment with proper steps to remove the cause, says the veterinarian.

Suggested methods to control mastitis:

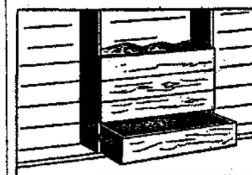

Keep barns in sanitary condition and lots free from mud and trash or equipment that might cause injury to the udder.

Make sure milker is operating at the proper speed and vacuum and that the teat inflations are in good condition.

Be sure the stall platform is long enough and cows are well bedded. Get cows ready for milking by washing the udder and teats with a warm disinfectant solution. Between cows, dip the teat cups into a chlorine solution. Check each cow daily with a strip cup.

Have the milk from each cow checked periodically in the laboratory. Treat infected cows immediately.

Feed Hopper

Boxing in a pair of studs and fitting them with shallow boxes provides hoppers for grit, oyster shell or laying mash. If held in place with screen-door hooks, the boxes may be removed easily for cleaning and refilling.

People who don't realize the value of money seldom have any.

He who feathers his nest dishonestly should plume himself for a flight.

Profanity is seldom a convincing argument except to the man who practices it.

O'Dell Attends Annual Convention In Indiana

Mr. William O'Dell, dealer for Edward J. Funk and Sons, attended the company's annual convention last week at Kentland, Indiana. The program consisted of lectures and tours dealing with processing plants and seed producing farms.

The bus trip among the 100-acre fields was one of the highlights of the meeting. There are 3,300 acres to harvest and the operation is on now.

Mr. O'Dell was much impressed by the elaborate experimental and nursery program carried on by Dr. Dienhart of Purdue University.

Many years of inbreeding for purity of strain, then a series of cross breeding and isolating and selecting are necessary to give the farm public the high producing seeds which are on the market today, says Mr. O'Dell.

If you are wondering what to do with party leftovers, we suggest that you don't invite them again.

By D. L. Alexander

"WE KNOW grandfather made plenty of money, Carl, but where is it? He didn't believe in banks. He was penurious, so we know he didn't spend it. Therefore he must have hid it about the place."

"I'll be darned," he said to himself, "I believe I know where that crooked tree is located."

self. "I believe I know where that crooked dogwood tree is located. He left the house and walked briskly to the place. 'What's the reason I've got so interested in that dogwood tree so suddenly.' He placed himself in the position he thought the elderly man had occupied while painting it. The crooked dogwood was before him, while immediately in the rear a snake-rail fence divided the land. Beyond it there were fields of fenced-in farms.

Michigan Mirror News Briets

Michigan's hard-pressed taxpayers took a breather of a sort when Gov. Williams disclosed an $18 million surplus.

But they still kept paying. The governor said that the increase in collections and a number of economies in state government had built up the surplus from the dust of a $65 million deficit two years ago.

It was at this point of fiscal desperation that the legislature passed the $30 million a year business activities tax. A business boom did the rest.

Republicans said this year's surplus would be more like $13 million. Rep. Rollo G. Conlin (R-Tipton), chairman of the House taxation committee said.

"The governor seems to be optimistic."

Seers at the Capitol immediately predicted that agencies which have been pleading for years for more cash to run their services would renew their requests and the surplus would vanish.

"There will never be a tax reduction in state government," said one bureau chief. "Services may expand, and more people may be hired, but no less money will be required."

Gov. Williams took the opportunity to blast Republicans in the legislature for paring down his appeal for more building money for state colleges and universities. Republicans said the problems couldn't be solved with mere money, that a complete survey of the needs of higher education should be undertaken.

The study is now underway under the direction of Senator Don Vander Werp (R-Fremont), chairman of the Senate education committee.

"We'll have something for the 1956 legislature," he said.

Ancient problem of what to do with an overflow of mentally retarded children is coming home to roost.

The governor is getting ready to call a special session of the legislature late in October to cope with the same issues that have bothered lawmakers in regular sessions for years.

The story has been told many times.

There are more than 1,800 youngsters with mental problems who cannot be admitted to LaPeer Home and Training School because it already is overcrowded.

"Commitments have become a farce because there's no place to send these unfortunates," said a mental health expert.

During the last session, committees of both the House and Senate fought over bills which would take over tuberculosis hospitals at Gaylord and Howell for the care of mentally retarded children.

The battles were fought and lost. Tuberculosis officials pleaded that the space would be needed if those who already had contracted the disease could be found.

Grisly problem of traffic death will also be considered at the special session. An 11% increase in the number of fatalities for the first seven months of 1955 over last year was announced by State Police. This apparently convinced the governor that no more time can be lost before taking action.

The legislators will again be asked to pass laws which will tighten driver licensing, reduce highway speeds and provide funds to maintain files of driver records. Existing law provides for files but money must be appropriated if records are to be kept properly.

These and other laws have been recommended in past years by the State Safety Commission, but proposals frequently became enmeshed in politics.

Farm groups have taken new heart in their campaign to move the state fair out of Detroit.

For years the drive has waxed hot and cold with charges flying that the Detroit fair is "a carnival" and that farmers have little opportunity to display their products in the proper atmosphere.

Latest impetus to the take-the-fair-outside campaign came with Michigan State University's centennial farm equipment exhibition which drew thousands to the campus.

It was the first test of an out-state function devoted exclusively to farmers and their equipment.

"The campaign to move the fair out of Detroit is getting hotter by the day," said George B. McIntyre, state director of agriculture.

Opponents of the idea say that the engineering and industrial exhibits, the sideshows and midway at Detroit is what makes the state fair solvent.

After years of deficits, the fair is now earning a small sum or "at least it's paying for itself," said McIntyre.

The final decision rests with the legislature, however, and its membership is still outstate-minded though Detroit and other metropolitan areas are gaining in influence.

Government reform is continuing in Michigan, though the approach is slightly changed this year.

For five years, the Legislative Committee on State Government Reform has been operating as a research group, studying ways to improve the functions of state government.

There have been a number of notable ideas written into law for the agencies.

"That function is now finished and we must promote some of the other ideas we have developed," said Senator Frank Andrews (R-Hillman). He is chairman of the committee working for acceptance of new ideas. Among them: Abolition of the state superintendent of public instruction and the auditor general as elective offices.

Industry and prosperity may be spelled differently, but they mean about the same thing.

There are better ways of taking a vacation than getting sun-struck—try some of the others.

Maintaining Soil A Continuous Process

Under a grain and livestock farming program such as we have in the thumb area, the job of maintaining our soil organic matter content must be a continual process, says Don R. Kebler, assistant county agricultural agent.

As the main source of this organic matter is from plant tissue, many wise farmers are helping to maintain their soil's organic matter level by plowing down green manure crops as legumes, sod, rye and buckwheat. However, fewer farmers are incorporating their good supply of organic matter such as dry wheat, oat and barley straw and bean refuse. Many farmers are still burning or selling most of these dry materials off their farms when it is worth more in potential soil building properties than in the immediate dollar value.

To better understand the value of a good supply of soil organic matter, let's look into what this material does for your soil.

Organic matter is the best potential and stable supply of plant food material in your soil; especially as a supply of nitrogen.

Physically it acts as a sponge to increase the water-retaining power of all soils, decreases runoff losses, improves aeration on heavier soils, holds lighter soils together, and produces a better soil structure or tilth by promoting granulation.

Going a bit farther, all soils contain air spaces between soil particles; so for examples let us look at clay and sandy soils as textural extremes with all the other soils in between in various degrees. First off, clay soils have small air spaces and let water move slowly in between them.

Sand has large air spaces. Organic matter will tend to force open the small air spaces or pores in clay and fill in the larger pores of sandy soils. This increases the water holding ca-capacity of both soils. Secondly, a soil in good tilth is loose and mellow, well granulated and easily cultivated. Clays low in organic matter are cloddy, tough and sticky while sands are loose and open. Next in importance is aeration, because air helps to break down soil minerals into plant and soil bacterial growth and development. Both plants and soil bacteria need an optimum range between air and soil water for best growth. Lastly it is most important for the holding of soils from wind and water erosion.

This brief analysis shows that soil organic matter is essential and its maintenance is a must as it is continually being used up. Therefore, use all your vegetative materials, green or dry to maintain this level. It is true that green manure has more plant food value than dry refuse but dry material has more fiber for physical structure than green. Your soil needs both forms.

No one will willingly burn up his money, yet farmers are burning up money in the form of wheat, oat, barley, bean and corn refuse, instead of plowing it under each year. More nitrogen is needed to decompose this dry refuse but add your nitrogen to your growing crop as their demands arise, and not with the refuse itself.

Men are bound to learn more as they grow older, but by then it seems less important.

No woman ever really makes a fool of a man—she merely lets nature take its course.

The man who takes the bull by the horns will some day have the world by the tail.

Buying Feeder Pigs May Pay Off
Saves Equipment, Labor Expenses

Buying feeder pigs may be the solution for farmers who can't afford to house or provide labor or equipment to farrow as many pigs as they can profitably feed out for market.

According to the nation's live stock publication, the National Live Stock Producer, there's a limit to what you can afford to pay and still make a profit feeding them.

It's best to get paper and pencil and do a little figuring before making any decisions. There are four things to consider: What price are you expecting to get for market hogs; How much does the feed cost; How much feed will it take to get your pigs to market

The wise farmer will take note of the above four important considerations in determining whether or not he should buy feeder pigs or do his own breeding. Buying feeder pigs is something less of a risk, since farmer does not have to predict market for a full year ahead.

weight; What costs are you going to have—labor, equipment, veterinary or death losses?

The answers to these questions will give you a good idea of what you can pay for pigs and still make a profit.

The farmer who buys his pigs has the advantage of only having to predict what is going to happen four months ahead. The man who must decide in September how many sows to keep for breeding purposes is actually trying to predict the market a year ahead.

LP Gas Must Be Stored, Handled Carefully

Like all other fuels, LP gas must be stored and handled right if you're going to get the safest, most satisfactory results and you can determine whether your installation is the best possible by looking at the "code."

The code is a pamphlet on safe storage and handling of liquefied petroleum gas. It is published by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and the rules set forth in the code have been accepted as law in many states.

Every LP gas dealer and fire insurance company inspector should have a copy of the code book. If your dealer has done a good job of installation, he won't mind checking your system against the code. If he doesn't know the code, better call on your fire insurance company inspector. As a starter, check the location of your tank. If it holds between 125 and 500 gallons, it must be ten feet from any important buildings. A tank holding 500 to 2,000 gallons should be 25 feet from buildings, and if you transfer the gas into a tractor or other tank, the job should be done at least 50 feet from buildings.
