Nominate Slate For Local Chamber Board

Joint Service Club Banquet Slated Monday

Residents of the Cass City area will see the value of the Lions Club-sponsored leader dog training school Monday evening when Mr. Johnson, a blind man. and his leader dog will show how his "seeing eye" dog enables him to get from place to place without other aid.

Guests of the Lions Monday at Cass City High School will be Cass City Rotarians and Rotary-Anns and Gavel Club members and their wives. The meeting will begin with a supper at 7:30 p. m. served by the ladies of the Evangelical United Brethren Church. The program will start at 8:30 p. m. and is open to the public. The Lions Club has announced that any proceeds from the supper will go towards the support of the leader dog training school.

Mr. Johnson and his dog will appear at Cass City High School earlier in the day where he will demonstrate obedience commands for the students.

What About Healing?

- Can we trust God to heal our bodies?
- Is God obligated to heal?
- What about this healing that is being taught on radio and television?
- ... Does God heal people today?

These questions and others will be answered by the WORD OF GOD Sunday evening, 8 p. m. at the First Baptist Church, Cass City, pastor, Rev. R. G. Weckle.

BUT sheriff, it's not fair.
Ever since Dick started this drive to rebuild the Harveys' burned-out farm he's been laughed at. Why?'

Sheriff Giles leaned across his desk to place a gnarled finger on the tip of the girl's turned-up nose: "Why? It's, simple, Annie. Folks in Hillcrest J Fiction don't love Dick Thompson like you do. They remember him as the fun-loving rascal who kept me busy chasing him around the countryside. I'll admit he's a Chantilly lace bodice designed with pleated skirt, tucked bodice changed a good deal since his stretch in the army, but he's going to have one sweet time proving it."

"People talk like he was stealing the money that he's collecting for the Harveys!" said the girl hotly.

"Can you blame them, Annie?" asked Giles bluntly. The door crashed behind her.

Giles stared thoughtfully at the ceiling: then with a deep sigh he reached for the telephone. Several minutes later a husky young man entered the office. "Ma tells me you want to see tinued Giles hopefully. "Sure. I put all the names in an old wallpaper catalog at home. I can even remember some of the figures.' On Saturday evening the Hillcrest school auditorium was packed. All week long stories about Dick Thompson had shuttled back and forth over the party grown into something monstrous.

Giles cleared his throat: "We are gathered here this evening extremely unpleasant business. The subscription drive to raise funds to rebuild the Harveys' farm seems doomed to failure. To date we have collected only ninety dollars."

"It's an outrage!" cried Mayor Fulcrum getting to his feet. "You should have collected the money yourself!" shouted Red Peepers. "Where's the rest of it?" asked Curly Ellis.

A roar went up from the crowd. Dick Thompson blushed. Sheriff Giles raised his hands for silence. "Suppose we let Dick give his own report?" he suggested.

Dick waited patiently until the grumbling subsided. Looking up from his huge book, his eyes swept the first row of seats settling finally on the chubby figure of Mayor Fulcrum: "What part of a house would one dollar and thirty seven cents buy, mayor? That was your donation.'

A cry of delight shook the audi-Mayor Fulcrum turned purple.

name to be called. He trotted toward the stage waving a fivedollar bill. Dick entered this in his wallpaper book, then stared in surprise at the line forming behind Curly. During the next half hour he scribbled names and numbers in his big book. When the rush was over he had enough in cash and pledges to begin work on the new house.

"It sure was a close one!" said Dick, placing his arm across Annie's shoulders. "It's a good thing Curly Ellis didn't ask me what his donation was-I plumb forgot."

"You forgot? But you had all the figures in the wallpaper book." "That's just it. My mother burned the original book this morning. This book was blankuntil a few minutes ago. I had to use my memory-
