BULEN TALKS Cars

At a used car lot I know of, a salesman was looking over a car that had been offered as a trade. Before he even started it, or stepped inside, he said: "Too bad it's using so much oil."

The owner was startled and a little annoyed. First of all, it wasn't true. Secondly, what made the salesman think so?

There was a quick explanation: the rear bumper was clouded with oily fumes around the exhaust pipe.

The salesman, nine times out of ten, would have been right. But an exhaust will smoke for a lot of reasons. The use of special oil, or additives in the oil, may cause it. It's not such a hot test anyway because it's easy enough to wipe the cloudiness off the bumper.

But smoke at the exhaust can tell you a lot. The bluish variety that I've discussed before means oil is being sucked into the cylinders, probably because of bad rings.

Black-looking smoke, or smoke with a brownish tinge, means the mixture of gas and air is too rich with gas.

The best engine burns only 75 per cent of its fuel. When the Mixture becomes just a little too rich, this quickly drops to only 50 per cent. You can see why it's important, then, to watch for that tell-tale black smoke.

There are many adjustments that can be made to clean out, or enrich the mixture. Some of them you can easily do yourself if you want to, but we'd much sooner show you on your own car when you bring it in. If and when you pick up a used car from us, I hope you'll remember to bring it in every so often—not only for servicing but also to let us know how it's going. We can often recall something about the car that will straighten things out in a second.

At this time I should like to add a note of appreciation to the many friends and customers alike who have patronized our agency during the 1956 Model year. Our new models will soon be shown and we are in the midst of an orderly cleanup of our present remaining 1956 models—Chevrolets and Oldsmobiles. If you feel that perhaps now is the time to make that put off new car purchase, see us while selection is still pretty good. We are unable to reorder 1956 models from the factory.

As you may have noticed, our used car selection is again unusually good and we wish to keep the inventory low in anticipation of a volume of trade-ins on our 1957 models. Strike while the iron is hot! We wish to serve you and will make an honest effort to sell you a new or used car on terms that you can afford. May we see you soon?

What Is Fallout?

FACTORS AFFECTING FALLOUT distribution over countryside downwind from a nuclear blast are the size of the earth particles carrying the radioactivity, their altitude and the speed and direction of the wind. Generally, in the United States, the winds which would dominate the direction of fallout would be the strong, usually west-to-east winds at about 40,000 feet. For this reason, the Federal Civil Defense Administration warns that only weather experts, with their methods of tracking high-altitude winds, can predict with reasonable accuracy the area to be affected by fallout. Men with radiation monitoring instruments are also required to determine whether an area is "safe" from radio active fallout after a nuclear attack. (FCDA Photos)

MICHIGAN MIRROR NEWS BRIEFS

Any town seeking new industry could be the big loser in the recent battle between the Governor and the Michigan Manufacturers Association.

The dispute started when Gov. Williams, in what is considered by some a blatant political move, made a strong effort to increase Michigan's unemployment compensation payments. He was answered by a deluge of arguments from the Michigan Manufacturers Association saying that present taxes were driving business from the Michigan state. Again, some believe the MMA stand also painted an incomplete and unnecessarily gloomy picture of the situation.

On the one hand, the governor said Michigan's "many unemployed" were in dire financial straits and would suffer seriously if state compensation benefits, containing the highest maximum payment in the nation, were not increased even more. When the question turned to loss of industry and jobs because of high taxes, he argued that Michigan had 97,000 more jobs now than in 1954.

On the other hand, business and industry leaders appeared before a senate committee with "facts" from a questionnaire circulated by the MMA among its members. They said no further unemployment legislation is needed because economic conditions are very good. Then, at the state senate tax hearings, they also argued that things are so difficult that manufacturers are moving out of, or bypassing Michigan. Other manufacturers were quoted as saying they "contemplated" leaving the state but had not yet done so.

Overlooked in the publicized statements of discontent received by the association were such comments as "in spite of taxes, we still like it here." "Nature has endowed us with many advantages not enjoyed by other states—the political situation can be changed." "The state is wonderful for business, health and sports. What else is there to live for?"

The MMA staged a public airing of manufacturers' gripes. But its own members were by no means unanimous in denouncing Michigan's economic climate. Relatively few said they had pulled out of the state. Replies to the MMA questionnaire represented less than two per cent of the 16,000 companies listed in the Directory of Michigan Manufacturers.

The problem largely is confined to the big cities with established industry and large labor forces. But the battle has cast a shadow over the entire state. Big losers could be small communities trying to build a sound economy for their people with new industry. The MMA quoted some manufacturers as saying they will advise or already have advised other companies against moving into Michigan. This was a severe blow to those working hard to promote the state and encourage industry to locate here. Scores of communities have pledged themselves to help existing local companies and to create a good climate for industry. They favor fair tax treatment, good industrial facilities and cooperation with businessmen.

Industrial development specialists urge communities to help existing companies whenever possible. Home, they point out, is the best place to build and maintain a sound economy. The responsible industry likes to see its home community develop solidly. But roundhouse political punches in maneuvers like these often cause unintentional damage.

Perhaps both sides accomplished their particular aims in this squabble. But something else happened too. Something which may have a far reaching and serious effect on Michigan's economic well being.

Unfavorable "facts" from both sides of the issue received nationwide publicity. Long after the argument is settled here, it is feared that industries considering expansion will remember with bleak disapproval, unpleasant points that were made by the governor and by business leaders.

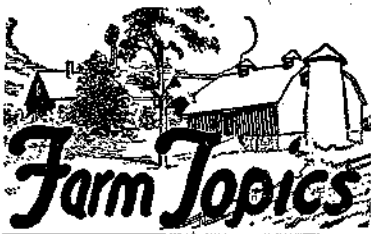

Those whose duties include stimulating new industry, report that this reaction is making their work more difficult right now. Other states are using these "facts" in their constant attempts to wean industry away from Michigan.

Major job now is for those most interested in Michigan's industrial future to set the record straight, cut through the political shadow boxing. Plant location specialists point out that Michigan has many very desirable points. Many factors including those economic and geographic, make it the great industrial state it is.

But the task is a bigger one than it was. In addition to locating suitable prospects, community leaders are faced with presenting facts to overcome distorted data already publicized from political activity.

The theory has been advanced that the man with more money than brains usually needs it.

It takes a lot of education and experience before a man really begins to realize how little he actually knows.

Woodland Profits Require Planning

Better Program Leads to Profits

Higher prices are making today's best farm woodlands pay top dividends.

Farm woodland profits depend on the volume of timber produced and on its quality. Much of the farm timber now is of low quality because poor harvesting methods in the past took out all the good trees and left the poorest. But the tree farmer who started long ago to improve his woodlands, and who followed a proper harvesting plan, is today taking profits from his investment.

Take out cull trees so that good timber may have better chance to grow.

There is no better time than the present, foresters suggest, to begin a long-time improvement program aimed at future profits. They recommend taking out all cull trees by girdling, cutting or poisoning. A cull tree is one that is not merchantable and will never produce one salable log.

Poor risk trees should be harvested. They are the ones that will not live until the next cut. You can tell them by their broken tops, large rotting limb stubs, basal scars and poor crowns.

Large, limby poorly formed "wolf" trees that take up more space in the woods than their value justifies also should come out. Taking out the less valuable trees gives the more valuable ones room to grow.

Good lumber comes from large, straight, clear logs and as such will always command a market. Farm woodlands can be turned into profit-makers instead of profit-takers by investment of time and care to put timber into condition.

New USDA Pamphlet Tells Timber Story

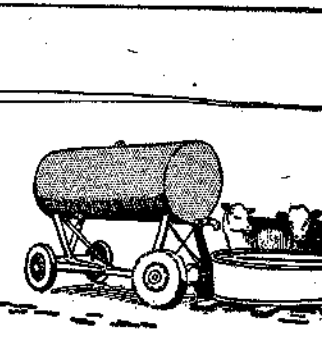

To let everyone know what the timber situation is in this country, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has issued a non-technical publication entitled "People and Timber." Whether we realize it or not, timber resources are important to us all, because one-fourth of all raw material used in manufacturing and construction comes from timber.

The booklet reveals that one-fourth of the forest land in this country is not growing anywhere near the amount of timber it can. Included are about 50 million acres of cut-over, burned-over, or otherwise non-productive land that will require planting to restore it to timber.

Insects, disease, and fire each year kill 13 billion board feet of sawtimber, an amount equal to one-fourth the net sawtimber growth. In addition they weaken big trees, destroy little ones, delay natural restocking, and cause other serious losses in growth. These intangible losses are greater in the long run than the immediate toll.

Of the timber cut, 25 per cent is not used at all, the Forest Service says. Some residue will always be left in the woods and at the mills, but development of new uses for wood residues and improved methods of logging and sawing can reduce such losses.

Mobile Waterer

Filling of scattered stock waterers is made simple by a mobile 600-gal. water tank that is filled by pump or windmill and emptied by means of a quick-release valve fitted in one end as shown. Tank is elevated several feet above chassis to simplify filling stock water tanks in the field.

Down Memory Lane FROM THE FILES OF THE CHRONICLE

Five Years Ago
Miss Mary E. Willerton, Spover, was given a diamond award for her many years of 4-H service in part of a ceremony at Michigan State College recently, honoring 122 Michigan 4-H workers.

Frederick B. Auten was among the 649 students from 31 states who have just completed a two-week residence session at the School of Banking at the University of Wisconsin.

Jim Niehouse, 26, formerly of Bad Axe, has been chosen to replace Jim Woodard as manager of the A & P Store here.

Rev. Robert Pelletier, who has been the assistant pastor of the St. Pancratius Church of Cass City and St. Michael's Church of Wilmot, has been transferred to St. Stevens Church in Saginaw.

Cass City will receive $401.56 and Tuscola County will receive $23,164.05 as their share of the first vouchers covering distribution of motor vehicle highway funds to the 83 counties and 487 municipalities in the state.

Attending Michigan State College from this area this year are: Sally L. Colbert, Carol J. Howarth, Marilyn L. Wagg, and Tommy Townsend, all of Cass City; Frederick A. Ackerman, Gage, and Carolyn J. Hirsch, mover.

itchers of the Thumb of Michigan district gathered at Cass City to decide the championship of that territory. This honor fell to Ezra Kelley of Cass City with J. Belknap of Mayville in second position. Players in the finals continued the contest until after one o'clock Friday morning before it was decided who had carried off the honors of the match.

The first meeting of the Bethel Nutrition Club was held Monday, Sept. 14, at the home of Mrs. A. H. Maharg, for the purpose of electing officers and making plans for the coming year. The following officers were elected to succeed themselves for another year: president, Mrs. Wm. Proffit; vice-president, Mrs. John Doerr Jr.; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Alton Mark; project leaders, Mrs. Twilton Heron and Mrs. Delbert Proffit.

TO ALL TRUCK OWNERS = URGENT... BUY YOUR NEW FORD TRUCK BEFORE HIGHER STEEL PRICES RAISE TRUCK PRICES... YOUR LOCAL FORD DEALER

Everything considered... initial cost, operating cost, resale value...

FORD Trucks COST LESS

Ford initial costs are still low. Smart truck buyers know this—they also know that Ford on-the-job costs are low.

Take operating costs—no other trucks with engines of comparable horsepower can beat Ford's pioneered Short Stroke engines for gas and oil economy. And with Ford trucks, you get money-saving Short Stroke power in every model—V-8 or Six.

Take maintenance costs—day-in, day-out dependability is a major reason why Ford trucks cost less. It means less downtime, lower repair costs, more work output.

And take durability—Ford trucks are built stronger to last longer. This accounts, too, for Ford's traditionally high resale value.

So consider everything when you buy—you'll buy Ford.

Cut Down Time Spent in Laundry

Any woman can become an efficiency expert in her own home if she will study her movements to see where waste motion and steps can be eliminated.

It is amazing how much time can be saved when laundry is done efficiently. There are certainly enough aids now available both in equipment and products that a substantial saving in both time and effort can be accomplished.

For instance, what do you do if you have an automatic washer and dryer? Go off to another part of the house and forget about the time when the washing or drying cycle is finished?

That's all right, but why not do your mending right there so you can get clothes out of the dryer as soon as this is completed? When taken out immediately, they're fluffy and will not need ironing in most cases. Those which do need it can be ironed right then and there while you have another load in the machine.

Use a Cart

Clothes coming right off the line or out of the dryer should be folded right onto a cart and wheeled right into the house to be put away. Then no stacks of clothes will be left lying around.

Use a cart right at your ironing board, too, so clothes can be stacked on it and then wheeled to their proper places.

Enlist the aid of the youngsters in putting clothes away. If they are responsible for their own stack of clothing, you can save a lot of time. They may even be interested in ironing some of the simpler things like handkerchiefs, pajamas and shorts.

TIPS FOR SURVIVAL

FCDA Offers Practical Defense Against Fallout

In a split second during the pre-dawn hours of a morning in November 1952, radioactive fallout came of age as a potential hazard to every living thing.

Since then, millions of words have been written and spoken about it. We are told that it cannot be detected by any of the human senses, only by radiation detection devices. It can hitch a ride on the wind for hundreds of miles from a nuclear blast, settle to earth even in remote places and make entire areas temporarily uninhabitable.

BUT WHAT, ACTUALLY, is fallout? Can its movement be predicted? And what can people do to protect against it?

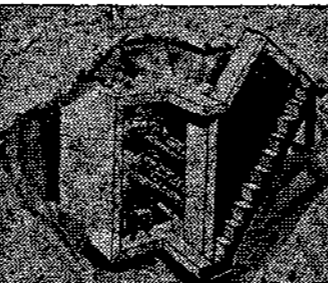

Fallout is nothing more than tiny dust particles blasted into the air when a nuclear weapon's fireball intersects the earth's surface. This material is then made radioactive by the fireball, and thus carries dangerous radiation to wherever the dust falls.

By plotting high-altitude winds, weather men can predict the area of fallout, and tell approximately where it will land. Radiological monitoring would then establish specific fallout patterns.

People can protect themselves mainly by staying under cover, and tuning a battery-operated radio to emergency civil defense frequencies for expert instructions. A basement makes a fair shelter, an old-fashioned root cellar an excellent one. This is because only 1/5,000th of the radiation that would hit a person in the open will penetrate three feet of earth.

MOST IMPORTANT, remember that fallout leaves no margin for errors, or amateurs. For example, just because the surface wind is blowing from a "safe" direction doesn't mean that the winds above 10,000 feet—which would usually dominate the direction of fallout—weren't blowing some other way. Only the experts have the equipment to predict fallout areas.

FALLOUT shelter designed by the Federal Civil Defense Administration would provide almost complete protection from fallout at low cost if built as a do-it-yourself project. It would also be a welcome haven and hurricane haven. (FCDA Photo)

RADIOLOGICAL monitor at Springfield, Ill., food store uses "survey meter" to measure mock "fallout" during Operation Alert 1956. Thousands of these and similar instruments are being stockpiled, and personnel are being trained by the Federal Civil Defense Administration against the day when they would provide the only way to detect "hot" areas and warn people to avoid contaminated articles.
