

From the Editor's Corner

We notice that the village crew is busy removing the Main Street decorations and assume that by the end of the week the last visible trace of the holiday season will be gone.

It is always with mixed feelings of relief and regret that we see the last of the holiday season drawing to an end. The strain of the extra work for the community should be greatly tempered this year by the feeling of a job well done.

Several ideas for improving the project next year have already been advanced, but will probably be placed aside until next fall when the community will again grapple with the 1957 Christmas season with a new exuberance that comes with a seven-month rest.

We had the right surname but the wrong picture and girl in our "Faces that made news in 1956" feature last week. It was Constance Bartle, not Janice Bartle, who won the scholarship to the University of Michigan. The girls are cousins.

Reduce Death Toll On Roads in '56

According to figures released by the Michigan State Police, fatal accidents in the state show a decline in 1956 as compared to the previous year.

Projected figures which take into account delayed reports show traffic deaths for 1956 will number about 1,775, a reduction of 229, or 11.4 per cent, below the 2,004 recorded in 1955. The death rate of 5.9 per 100 million miles of travel was the lowest in the state's history.

Injuries dropped from 62,234 in 1955 to 59,900, or 4.4 per cent. Although accidents totaled 197,800, a gain of two tenths of one per cent, they were of less severity.

The traffic record was accomplished despite more drivers, cars and miles traveled. Drivers increased to 3,500,000, or 3.4 per cent, vehicle registrations went to 3,184,500, a gain of 1.1 per cent, and miles traveled rose 2.4 per cent to 30 billion.

Of 328,806 arrests, not including juveniles, made during the year, 217,090 were for traffic offenses, a gain of 49 per cent.

Arrests of juveniles for traffic offenses totaled 4,368, an increase of 26 per cent. Other arrests of juveniles for non-traffic offenses numbered 3,773.

Department vehicles traveled 16,334,530 miles in all activities, up 23 per cent.

Hawks Return to Cage Action Tonight

After a two-week layoff for the Christmas holidays, the Cass City High School basketball team will return to the cage wars tonight (Friday) with a conference game with Sandusky at Cass City High School.

The game promises to be close. Sandusky's attack will feature the conference's leading scorer, Duane Cubitt, and a veteran quintet.

Cass City will probably counter with the same line-up that has won three of five games this year. Jim Johnson will be at center. John Meininger and Dick Harby will be at forward and Bob Martus and Chuck Gunther at guards. Almost sure to see action will be Forrest Walpole and Fred Leeson.

With five games played, Coach Irv Claseman is still looking for a smoother working quintet.

The Hawk mentor is hoping that the squad will improve as the season progresses. It trails last year's team in the won-and-lost column. After the holidays last year, Cass City was unbeaten in five games.

However, the club failed to improve in the second half and slumped badly at the end of the season. It is still possible that the Hawks could post a record as good or better than the 1955-56 team, which finished second in the conference.

Cass City's two losses have been by narrow margins. They lost to Marlette 78-73 and to Mt. Pleasant 52-50. They will not have an opportunity to avenge the loss to the Oilers but have a return engagement scheduled with Marlette at Cass City Feb. 5.

Anthony Repshinska Feted on Retirement

A grateful village presented Anthony Repshinska, 68, of Gagetown with a spanking new television set in appreciation of his 34 years of service to the Gagetown community.

Mr. Repshinska has retired after being responsible for the village's streets, water works and other municipally owned services since 1922. The TV was purchased and placed in his home while the Repshinskas were on a four-day visit with their children in Detroit and Pontiac.

He married the former Rhea Weiler, a native of the Gagetown area, Nov. 27, 1917.

The couple has five children: William, of Tyre; Mrs. Robert Christie and Edward, both of Detroit; Vincent, of Pontiac, and Paul.

Mr. Repshinska's place on the village staff will be taken by Jules Goslin.

GAGETOWN

Miss Cheryl Rice entertained 14 girl friends at her home Sunday afternoon. The occasion was her 12th birthday. Games were played and dancing enjoyed. A decorated birthday cake and other refreshments were served. Cheryl received many nice gifts. The rain had stopped not long after Trice had murdered that man in a Oro Grande saloon. Now, the biting wind was driving him frantic. This cabin could be the thing.

Trice's eyes swept the rise above the cabin.

The coming darkness made him feel safer. It would slow up the posse. Quietly he crept up to the cabin. Whoever owned it could not know of the murder. For scarcely an hour had passed. If by chance, the Miss Elizabeth Quinn, Sunday guests were Mrs. S. Brown of Pontiac and Mr. and Mrs. J. Grande folk easy going. After three days there, he knew that murders, fights, and stealings did not draw sympathizers.

Cautiously, he looked inside the only window. It was dark inside. He knocked on the door but there was no answer. He stepped back, pushed his shoulder hard against the door and crashed into the cabin. Inside, he struck three matches. The final one sputtered long enough for him to appraise the shelter.

He uprighted the door and loosened his wet clothes. Soon his hands and face tingled with dormant heat. He hoped for a heavy downpour so the prints left by his stolen pinto would vanish. Make things harder for the posse.

After the warmth, his stomach drove him to seeking food. He dared not light the stove or lamp. He rattled dishes and pans and found a jug of whiskey. He gulped the liquor down eagerly. Twice. Three. Four times. The raw liquor warmed him further and gave a sense of security.

He drank more and more. He wondered how many more would make him forget about killing that hombre in Oro Grande. Over something with two-bits value.

It had been a funny murder. He hadn't known the guy. But Lusk Trice didn't like the answer.

"I can't risk givin' you any of that poison, friend," the man had said.

Trice had suddenly disliked the man, pulled out his pistol and emptied it twice. Two bits for a life, Trice thought. Fool!

And Oro Grande, dumbest town in all Grand County. Jackass Hill or Jackson or Murphy's Diggings would have stretched him in a minute. Oro Grande? The bartender had lifted his hands like a coward and the customers hadn't batted a eyelash even after he had gotten away. Oro Grande would be good to go back to. Just a change of clothes, he wagged.

Lusk Trice lost count of his drinks. There was no more. He pulled a blanket off a cot and wanted to doze off. But, instead, the cold shook him like a trembling leaf. A fire! That was what he needed. He pulled the blanket over the only window. Then he lit the fire. Greedily, feverishly. And soon the heady wind sucked out the smoke fast and Trice had a roaring fire.

He became comfortable. His wet clothes began to steam and dry. And his eyes kept closing. The liquor returned to make him drunk. And very, very sleepy. So sleepy he didn't know he kicked over the coal oil lamp. The liquid hissed and then exploded. The cabin was soon a roaring blaze. And Lusk Trice slept.

Two miners saw the blaze from a nearby settlement. When they reached the scene, the fire was almost over. Lusk Trice's pyre had finished etching eerie pictures on the wet, bare rocks nearby.

The older miner warmed his hands. "Too bad," he muttered.

"Sure is," the other said. "But I don't guess Ol' Calvin will need his cabin now."

"Guess not. Say, I wonder if they've ketch'd that hombre who murdered Ol' Cal this afternoon?"

Nearly 25,000 graduates have received diplomas from President Harlan Hatcher in the five years since he became President of The University of Michigan.

In the first fall semester following V-J Day, enrollment at The University of Michigan totaled 11,847 resident students. By 1948 it had reached its post-war semester peak of 21,365, including approximately 12,000 veterans.

BULEN TALKS CARS

CARS OF THE FUTURE

When friends of mine in other businesses look into the future they talk about the prospects for the next five, ten or twenty years. But in the auto industry the future is always as close as next year. Five years is an eternity. Things change fast.

I've made a hobby through the years of honing up on what the experts think is coming in cars. I talk to the industry people when they come through town and I talk some more when I go out of town.

Take the two-car family, for instance, the institution that's grown so rapidly since the end of the war. Not all of us can afford to be two-car families, and those who can, sometimes find the two cars don't quite suit the jobs intended for them.

The business of the auto industry is to build cars that will fit the needs of people, so they're planning quite a lot of changes to satisfy the two-car family.

The big car of the future—say 10 years from now—will be larger than today's station wagons, powered by an economical and smooth gas turbine engine. The car will be big enough for long family vacations and will store all the gear that's needed.

The small "second" car will be a really small electric job for shopping and commuting to work. You can charge it up in the morning from an electrical outlet and it'll be good for about 35 miles. It will cruise at 25 or so and 35 will be its top speed.

Well, that's for the future—but have you thought about a second car for the family now? The way to do it is with a bargain-priced used car. With our large selection and high turnover we can find exactly what you need in price, style and economy. Whatever you want a car for, this is the time of year—and our place is the best place—for real bargains.

WOMAN'S WORLD

Exciting Trends In Kitchens Show Charm, Good Design

ONCE upon a time when homes were planned the kitchen got the least attention. It wasn't really designed; it was simply put there to house a range, refrigerator and sink.

New kitchens are entirely different. The first thing that strikes you is their color. You'll find almost everything, but especially the soft aquas, pinks and all shades of orange from tangerine to copper.

The appliances are a completely wonderful story in themselves.

New, straightline design is used in this refrigerator with nothing protruding from top, bottom, back or sides. This makes it easy to achieve a built-in look with a refrigerator. Recessed hinges permit the door to open fully within its own dimensions and eliminate swing-out space or clearance.

They come in color, too, if you want them or still in white to accent the bright bold shades in the kitchen.

Wife-Savers

Appliances are especially planned to save the housewife. Ovens, dishwashers and refrigerators are being constructed on a waist-high principle to eliminate much of the bending that causes so much fatigue. You don't have to drag a mixer out of the recesses of an old-fashioned pantry. It's housed permanently in a kitchen cabinet. Press a button and it comes up to your most comfortable work level.

More and more laundry units are being installed in kitchens, too. These will save a million steps up and down to the basement. You can do the laundry as it accumulates rather than having one laundry day a week to take the stunk out of you.

Present kitchen too small? Pantries can be torn out to make more space available. Back porches can be enclosed and made a part of the kitchen.

Let Living Room Look Alive Again

If you suddenly realize that it's a long time since you have really lived in your living room then it's time to take stock and see what can be done about it.

Many living rooms across the country have slowly been relegated to a status as store room for too large or too formal furnishings, too stiff or too uncomfortable for the family to feel at home. You would do well to confer with a reliable contractor about what can be done with it.

Removing Wall

In many cases the contractor will recommend removing the partition between living and dining room. This will give you a larger space and more informality to the design of the home. It will certainly solve the problem if the original living room is a bit small. The recommendation above will also prove good if the original room is a difficult shape.

Should the room be dark, much can be done to make it look larger by giving it light. This is done by enlarging the window space, if any wall of the room looks on a good landscape, that's the spot for a picture window.

Decorating Scheme

Once the living room becomes a part of the dining room, decorate as carefully as possible. If the area is still not too large or bright, use the luscious pastel shades which decorators are featuring, then use textured treatments in the furniture coverings. These all give a feeling of spaciousness.

If you still want to keep the dining area separate, then you'll be amazed what can be done with the new room dividers well placed. They serve as a separator and their shelves, open on both sides will be wonderful for holding vases and other decorative pieces such as figurines, plants and china.

Sliding door shelves on a divider are wonderful for holding games and cards and such things which can now be enjoyed in the lived-in living room.

Rebuild Farm Fields To Make Them Pay

Profits go over the fence when farm fields limp along at half speed, reports the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

In the Corn Belt alone, says the committee, several million acres of land are producing about half to two-thirds as much crops as could be produced with reasonably good management and the use of sufficient amounts of fertilizer.

As a result, corn yields are only about 65 per cent of the potential yields. Wheat production is only half what it might be and hay and pasture production less than one-half.

Overhead is eating up a good portion of the potential profits on farms that are producing only part of the yields of which they are capable.

Much of this so called "second-class" land can be made to produce high crop yields, with the proper fertilizer and management, says the committee.

A good deal of this land has the essential framework of good soil. It has the ability to hold plant nutrients against leaching; and it often has good water holding capacity.

Southeast Farmers Can Profit on Bermuda

Southeastern farmers needing extra grazing can supply it at a profit by timely, heavy fertilization of their Coastal-Bermuda pastures, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reports.

Results of cooperative 13-year investigations by USDA and the Georgia Coastal Plain Experiment Station show that high Coastal-Bermuda production can be maintained over a period of years with adequate fertilization.

High yielding ability, disease and drought resistance, and a wide range of adaptation are the leading merits of Coastal Bermuda-grass. This grass demonstrated its dependability to Southern farmers in 1954, when it continued to produce during the drought.

In most of the southeastern United States where Coastal Bermuda is being planted, soil fertility is generally the main factor limiting growth. Sufficient nitrogen for maximum growth is not available in the soil at most locations. Other factors involved in determining the kind and amount of fertilizer that will pay include temperature, rainfall, length of growing season, rate at which nutrients are released from soil minerals, associated plants, soil management, and grass yield.

A study of the problems associated with efficient nitrogen fertilization of Coastal Bermuda-grass has been made at Tifton, Ga., by geneticist Glenn W. Burton, jointly employed by USDA's Agricultural Research and Service and the Georgia Plain Experiment Station. His research revealed that nitrate of soda and ammonium nitrate are equally effective nitrogen sources (pound for pound of N), and are

Sun's Energy Used In Drying Grain

Michigan State University is putting Old Sol's energy to use for drying grain.

Agricultural Engineer Fred Bue low has rigged up a solar heat collector and a device for blowing the air it heats into the bin. The gadget is believed to be the only one of its kind.

Actually, it's a scale model but a larger unit would work the same way. The collector of heat is made of a piece of sheet metal painted with black asphalt and covered with a sheet of glass.

The collector absorbs heat when the sun shines through the glass. The glass lets the heat go into the black surface but won't let it back out. The underside is well insulated for that purpose, too.

So, air can be blown along both sides of the metal sheet and it's heated as it passes through these half-inch-wide spaces. This, then, could take the place of air heated by electricity or fuel oil.

Bue low figures that if the collector had 1,000 square feet of glass and was tilted directly toward the sun the device would be heating air as warm as could a 72-kilowatt electric heater or a furnace burning two gallons of fuel per hour.

But what if the sun doesn't shine while you're trying to dry grain? The air simply would not heat, admits Bue low. But, he hastens to add, this would not be a serious problem, because an unheated air would keep the grain from spoiling until Old Sol reappeared.

Be Sure to Use Proper Fertilizer

A Michigan State University soil scientist says that some of the new fertilizers on the market don't let phosphorus become available to plants quickly enough.

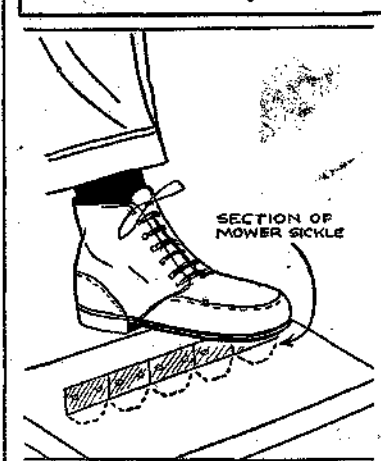

Some fertilizers, which include phosphates only slightly soluble in water, are being granulated to make them easier to handle. Some high analysis fertilizers also have phosphates of low water solubility.

Soil Scientist Kirk Lawton points out that as a consequence the phosphorus availability in some of the new fertilizers is being reduced to a critical level.

Lawton asserts that studies, both in the greenhouse and field, have shown that granulated fertilizers with a high proportion of their phosphorus soluble in water are best for developing vigorous young sugar beet and corn plants.

Farmers, he suggests, would do well to learn the various kinds of phosphates in fertilizer, some of which are soluble in water and some insoluble. Under the law, phosphates are classified as soluble if they break down in a certain acid but not in water.

Foot Scraper

Foot scrapers for the dairy barn, milk house or the back door of the farm home can be made by cutting 12-in. lengths from an older mower sickle and driving them into lengths of 2 x 8-in. stock.

The only way to win on a sure thing is to bet on something that has already happened.

commended that the Board set up in their next year's budget about $500.00 to be used by the Sheriff, Wm. J. Toms, Director of Civil Defense, in Tuscola County, to have the organization better prepared in case of a disaster. Moved by Supervisor Slater and supported by Supervisor Graham that this matter be referred to the committee on Co. Finance. Motion carried.

Poinsettias Last With Proper Care

Poinsettias, traditional Christmas flowers, will last until late January with proper care according to Mrs. Frances T. Clark, county home demonstration agent.

Place your poinsettia in a warm room—the average living room is the correct temperature. Keep the plant moderately moist. The soil around the plant should never be allowed to dry out. Place the plant near a window and away from radiators and drafts.

Poinsettias will retain their leaves until late January or the first part of February. If you wish to keep the plant permanently, dry it out when the leaves begin dropping off. Water it just enough to prevent the soil from becoming bone dry.

Keep the plant dormant until

May and then repot it with fresh soil. Cut branches back to within three to six inches of the original break or where the branches began. If there is only a single stem on the plant, then cut it back to within eight inches of the soil. Begin watering the plant in April or the early part of May.

To increase the number of plants, cuttings can be taken from the new growth that comes after dormancy.

You may put the poinsettia outside in the summer or you may keep it inside. In the fall be sure to bring the plant in before the temperature drops. From October on, place the plant in a room where lights aren't burned more than 11 hours a day. Keep the plant moderately moist. With this care, your plant should bloom at Christmas time.

Poinsettia flowers can be cut from the plant, but you can't depend on them not wilting. If you do cut them off, dip the end of the cut stem in boiling water or sear it with a flame. Then place the stem in lukewarm water (98-100 degrees). Cover the tops of the flowers with wax paper for six to eight hours and place in a cool place. Then the flowers are ready to be placed on the table. If you cut the stem again, you need only sear it again.

OLD STORY

With payments what they are, some car owners are hard pressed to keep the wolf from the garage.

It's a safe bet that you'll never know how cheap an article is until you know how good it is.

A man isn't henpecked as long as he has a roof over his head and is able to raise it occasionally.

EASY MARK

It seems that people always applaud a good loser just as long as the money comes their way.

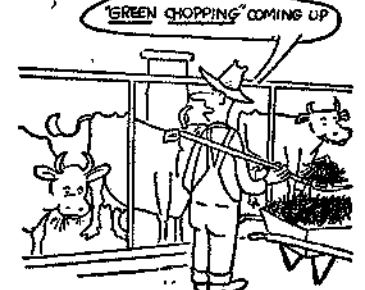

Zero Grazing Ups Forage Yields

Green Chopping Has Several Advantages

How does "green-chopping"—bringing the pasture to the cows instead of the cows to pasture—compare cost-wise with other dairy-herd feeding methods? To help find the answer, economists of Michigan State University, Pennsylvania State University, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture have checked the experiences of 38 dairy farmers in Michigan and Pennsylvania in preliminary cooperative research studies of expense and income factors related to green-chopping.

Results of these studies showed that this method—also called "zero-grazing" or "soiling"—usually does increase forage yields considerably. Increased yields with green-chopping averaged about double those from grazing in the Proper program of "green chopping" can increase forage yields considerably, but is more profitable for larger dairy operators.

Pennsylvania and Michigan tests. The studies indicate, however, that larger dairy operators may profit more than smaller ones from machine methods in feeding cattle, and that green-chopping appears to be particularly well adapted to dairy farms that are short of cropland relative to labor and cows.

Timeliness and skill in keeping machinery in good working condition become important considerations. Highly productive forages also are important. The investigators cite a Minnesota study which suggests that tall, quick-growing crops such as sudan grass or oats should be utilized as part of the program for best results. In Michigan, two of the three farmers who were most successful in their green-chopping used sudan grass as the major source of forage.

Farm Income Compared To Wage Earning

What are the income possibilities of farming compared to other types of work?

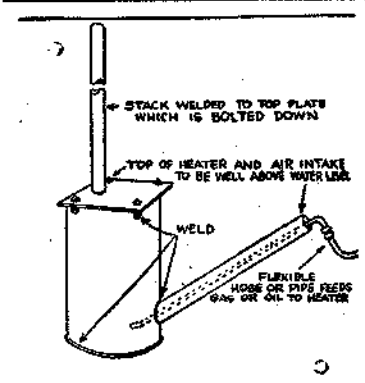

That's one of the questions some 4,000 Michigan farm boys ask themselves each year in deciding whether they stay on the farm.

James Nielson, agricultural economist at Michigan State University, reports that the average net income was $2,871 last year for a group of 500 farmers who kept account records with M.S.U. He defines net income as the farmer's return for his labor, capital and management. The average working week for these farmers was 57 hours and their average capital investment was $45,000.

Nielson compares this farm income with that of one alternative to farming—wage earning. The average weekly pay for wage earners in all Michigan manufacturing industries was $95 for 42 hours of work last year. Wage earners in other types of work received an average of $101 for a 43-hour week.

Nielson estimates that a farmer netting $3,500 a year would have to earn $100 a week to have a comparable living in town. The farmer has the use of the house on the farm, can produce part of the family's food supply and has no transportation charges in going to work. On the other hand, the wage earner has no large capital investment in his business.

Water Heater

Stock water heater can be made in a farm shop from pieces of old pipe. It's shown removed from water tank, for construction details. It burns natural gas, fuel oil, or bottled gas, is economical to operate.

Thyroprotein Use Studied by USDA

Held Not Practical For Smaller Herds

Recent tests by USDA and Montana scientists indicate that use of thyroprotein in mixed feeds to stimulate milk production in dairy cows has little practical value for most herds. Thyroprotein has been available in commercial feeds for a number of years.

The principal weakness in use of the drug, as shown by the USDA-Montana tests, is that there is no way to avoid a sharp decline in milk production following removal of the drug from the cows. Gradual removal of the drug, previously believed to be a means of preventing this drop in production, proved to be no better than abrupt removal or removal over varying lengths of time.

Increased milk production through the use of thyroprotein doesn't necessarily mean more total milk for entire lactation period.

Previous trials had shown that thyroprotein increased milk production as much as 20 per cent in some cows for short periods of time. The total milk produced for the entire lactation period was not increased, whether the drug was fed for short periods or throughout the lactation period.

More recent tests show that there are widely varying responses to the drug among individual cows, pointing to unpredictable results in its use in the average-size herd.

From the results of the tests, the scientists concluded that the only practical value thyroprotein might have would be limited to its use in large commercial herds where it might be used as a means of stimulating milk output during periods of normally low production when milk prices are high.

Use Drugs Carefully In Treating Animals

Indiscriminate use of drugs to combat parasites in farm animals can be dangerous, according to a recent report to the American Veterinary Medical Association.

"One of the most important factors, that often does not receive the consideration that it deserves, is that animals showing clinical evidence of parasitism are sick animals and toxicity may result from administration of drugs that cause no apparent ill effects in apparently normal individuals," said Dr. R. D. Turk, head of the department of Veterinary Parasitology, Texas A&M College.

Control of parasitism in farm animals does not consist merely of administering a suitable drug, Dr. Turk said, stressing the fact that changes in management practices and nutrition often will prove more effective than drugs alone. He pointed out that parasitism in the human race is not controlled by drugs, but by ever-increasing levels of personal sanitation.

"As yet, we have no medication that expels or destroys intestinal worms that possesses all the desired qualities," Dr. Turk said. "As a group, these medications are essentially toxic and dangerous."

Floating Nipple

Calves will be forced to drink their milk slowly if pail is equipped with this nipple, which is a 6-in. length of rubber milking machine tubing forced through a hole drilled in the center of a square piece of 3/4-in. board. Wooden plug is pressed into lower end of the tubing so both are flush with the underside of board. Drill 3/16-in. hole through the plug. Taper top of tubing so it forms a nipple.

Some men accomplish a great deal by getting others to do the job.

The University of Michigan has sought to increase the number of teachers and at the same time to maintain the scholarly distinction of its faculty.

MICHIGAN MIRROR NEWS BRIEFS

By Elmer E. White
Michigan Press Association

An old problem faces Michigan in the New Year! "Where is the money coming from—and where is it going?" Much more often than not in past years, both state and city governments have had more expenses than bankroll. This has led to a higher and higher tax bill for the man on the street.

Between $40 million and $80 million more will be needed to operate the state next year, according to present estimates by legislators. An accurate figure will not be available until the Governor outlines his ideas in his message to the Legislature, due within 10 days after the new group convenes.

His programs will indicate how much more must be raised in the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1957; not whether there will be a deficit.

Already apparent are some of the needs. About $10 million more will be needed to cover salary increases granted by the Civil Service Commission.

Because income to school funds from state sales taxes are considerably less than was estimated, the Legislature must dip into its general fund to the tune of about $18 million.

More than $13 million more is needed by state's universities if they are to accommodate young people seeking college education. Operating costs for state buildings are increasing, and must be covered. Everytime the state opens a new office, or improves an existing service, there is an inevitable price tag.

What are other needs in 1957? Among recommendations made to the Legislature by Gov. G. Mennen Williams are expected to be the following, none very expensive to the state treasury:

a campaign to promote industrial safety; more emphasis on highway safety; higher (and more expensive to the employer) unemployment compensation; increased workman's compensation.

The tax problem is in the lap of the House. According to law, bills to raise revenue must originate there. This means that Representatives will spend much time trying to find ways to make ends meet in 1957—and new methods to raise tax money. This is never a pleasant task, and usually a thankless one.

While Legislators wrestle financial problems of the state, they will hear cries from the cities. Michigan municipalities, particularly the larger ones, are hard pressed for some new sources of revenue.

This problem was underlined by Dr. Arthur W. Bromage, political science professor from U-M, in an article in "Municipal Review." Prof. Bromage points out that cities and villages can follow only three courses. They can keep increasing property taxes, depend more on state collected taxes, or levy local, non-property taxes.

If they are to do the latter, they must have specific authority from the Legislature. Cities in other states have "successfully" taxed income, utilities and admissions to theaters and athletic events.

If Michigan cities are to do this, existing law must be changed.

Michigan's "Four Under Forty" are said to be one of the big hopes for the state's Republican organization. "Four under forty" is the catchy reference to the four young Republicans who are beginning their first terms as Congressmen in Washington. They are William S. Broomfield, Oakland County; Charles E. Chamberlain, Lansing—Flint area; Robert P. Griffin from the northern part of the lower peninsula; and Robert McIntosh from the Thumb area.

Party hopes for inspiration and leadership rest on the shoulders of these four. All have good records as young GOP leaders. All are considered dynamic, personable, bright and keen politicians. All are known as "modern" Republicans, subscribing in general to principles and policies of President Eisenhower.

As freshmen Congressmen in the House of Representatives, they will be watched by Michigan's Republicans in the hope that their record of activity there will serve to unify and advance the GOP cause within the state.

Dates have been set for State party conventions. Democrats will be meeting Feb. 23. Republicans will meet in Detroit Feb. 9. Both parties nominate candidates for positions on the spring ballot.

These include candidates for Superintendent of Public Instruction, State Highway Commissioner, Justices of the State Supreme Court, two members of the University of Michigan Board of Regents, two members of the State Board of Agriculture of Michigan State University, a member of the State Board of Education.

The GOP must also select a new chairman and vice-chairman to head the State Central Committee. John Feikens, present chairman, announced he will not continue in the post.

Holbrook 4-H Club At Cleland Home

The third winter meeting of the Holbrook 4-H Club was held at the home of Judy Cleland Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 26.

After the business meeting, members worked on notebooks. Gifts were exchanged and sandwiches, Kool Aid and cookies served.

Thursday, Dec. 27, the club met at the Lynn Spencer home. Skiing, skating and sledding were enjoyed and refreshments served. The club was to have met Monday at the home of Connie Decker.

Heart Attack Fatal For Mrs. Habersack

Mrs. Helen Habersack died from a heart attack Wednesday night, Dec. 26, at Receiving Hospital, Detroit. She had been a resident of Tuscola County for three years, moving here from Detroit.

She was born Oct. 16, 1921, in Lynch, Ky., the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ceresa. She was married January 31, 1956, to Stephen Habersack, who survives. Also surviving are her father, one sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Orban of Caro, one niece and one nephew. Mrs. Habersack's mother died Aug. 26, 1955, and her brother, John Ceresa Jr., was killed in an automobile accident Sept. 3, 1955.

Funeral services were held Saturday, Dec. 29, at St. Agatha Church, of which she was a member. Rev. Glenn W. Cronkite officiated and burial was in St. Agatha Cemetery.

Livestock Future Held Promising

Efficient Feeding To Spur Production

The livestock industry appears to be nearing a period of unusual progress, marked by more efficient use of feed, say research economists of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Although there have been marked advances in nutritional knowledge during the past years, USDA scientists look forward to still newer developments that will make possible rations of much greater efficiency. They see livestock production becoming more and more a manufacturing operation geared to convert feedstuffs into food in a more efficient manner.

The rapid growth of production-line broiler raising is an example of what may be in store for other livestock enterprises. Today's commercial broiler ration will produce

Greater and more efficient production is held the key to progress in livestock industry.

A 3-pound bird on 25 per cent less feed than was needed before World War II.

Addition of stillbrestol to beef cattle feeds can result in savings up to 15 per cent in feed, an increase in rate-of-gain of about one-third of a pound per day. State experiment studies show. Estimates indicate as many as half the beef cattle on feed last year received rations to which this synthetic hormone had been added.

Antibiotics, among the more recent arrivals in formula feeds, now are used in about three-fourths of formula feeds for swine. They are added to about 90 per cent of commercially mixed poultry starter, grower, and broiler feeds.

Other widely used additives include vitamins, minerals, urea, and fats—among many important to animal growth and health.

New Tomato Variety Is Willt Resistant

Increasing popularity of the paste-type tomato, rich in solids and in red color, has led to the development by the U.S. Department of Agriculture of a new, high yielding, fusarium-wilt-resistant variety called Roma.

This variety, developed by William S. Forte at the Agricultural Research Center, Beltsville, Md., gets its resistance to fusarium wilt from Pan America, another variety bred by Forte many years ago using a wild Peruvian tomato as the source of wilt resistance.

Roma was developed by using two popular red Italian paste tomato varieties, both susceptible to fusarium wilt, and Pan America, which is highly resistant.

Seed growers in various parts of the country, coast to coast, began increasing their small supplies of the seed from the Department last year, so there should be sufficient seed to supply growers' demands next spring.

Reports of 1955 tests received from growers and packagers of this type of tomato, and from manufacturers of tomato-paste products, indicate they are pleased with the new variety. In the various tomato-producing areas, efforts are being made by State experiment stations and the industry to develop strains of the Roma tomato especially suited to particular localities.

Easy Thawing

One method of thawing outdoor hydant: place large hell tile over the hydant and pour crankcase drainings over the inner walls. Ignite the oil, which burns slowly for a time while the walls prevent rapid dissipation of heat. Hydant is thawed quickly, without damage.

Nature's Camouflage

The snowshoe hare, in summer gray and in winter white, changes his coat twice a year—spring and fall—to blend with the landscape as protection against enemies. This fellow also has a pair of huge hind feet—snowshoe size—that may not exactly be in the best woodland style, but nonetheless help him bound over snowy ground in a hurry. And he and his brothers and sisters produce enough youngsters so that hunters can harvest 200,000-500,000 during each hunting season.

Willard's Career

Mr. and Mrs. Anson Karr School from which he graduated in 1949, Willard switched to quarterback and guided Wayne State through the 1955 season. This year he shared the signal calling duties with Ron Kowalczyk of Hamtramck.

In 1956 Willard literally quarterbacked the Tartars to the Presidents' Athletic Conference championship. In the final game of the season against John Carroll, Willard took over from the injured Kowalczyk with less than five minutes to play and the Tartars trailing 14-7. He passed to the John Carroll one-yard line, himself and then kicked the extra point that tied the game and assured Wayne State the championship.

Willard was co-captain of this year's Tartar eleven. An education major at Wayne State, he is married and lives in Detroit at 8116 Greenlawn.

Produce Clean Milk By Clipping Cows

Want to make it easier to produce clean, high quality milk in your dairy barn this winter? Then clip the flanks and udders of all your milk cows.

Alfred Ballweg, county agricultural agent, outlines five steps to follow in clipping a dairy cow.

(1) Clip the tail, and bob the switch so that it clears the ground at least four inches. Clip the tail, head and areas around the switch of the tail.

(2) Clip the entire surface of the udder.

(3) Clip the belly and hocks. Then make a mark line from the navel to the thurl on both sides. Hold the clippers on edge, with the bottom blade toward the cow's head, to make this mark.

(4) Clip the flanks and thighs by running the clippers up from the hock to the mark line.

(5) Clip up the backbone to help control lice.

Cows clipped in December will only need to be clipped once again during the winter, in February.
