WANDERING WITH WARREN

Despite Spring Thaw It's Chill and Raw

By Ilene Warren

Spring arrived - officially, that is - last Monday. In the words of C. P. Cranch, "If there comes a little thaw, still the air is chill and raw, here and there a patch of snow dirtier than the ground below, dribbles down a marshy mud . . . this is spring." In February I thought spring was early this year - but March changed my mind!

Ron, my husband, has to work in the store in Bad Axe on Friday nights so I have the car on Fridays and do my laundry at the laundromat while I'm waiting for him. One such evening not too long ago, we didn't have supper together and this gave me an early start on the laundry. Finishing well over an hour before store-closing time, I drove uptown and decided to do some shopping. I parked near the bank and fumbled for my coin purse to feed the always-hungry parking meter. I noted that the meter designated a two-hour limit and since I had almost that much time to wait I decided to put in a dime and be done with it. Click, went the dime - but nothing happened - the red flag stayed up. I banged the meter a couple of times thinking that perhaps the dime hadn't gone all the way in. Still nothing. I tried another dime - same routine all over again. After that, I walked around and looked at the street-side of the meter; there, in very legible letters, was the information to use either nickels or pennies. Well, thought I, that'll teach me to read before I leap.

I thought I had learned a lesson. Not so. Last Thursday, David Baker of Bad Axe was coming to our house for supper. I wondered what to have for dessert then I remembered that a few weeks ago I had purchased a package of chocolate pudding-cake mix. I'm not a devotee of mixes and had never made pudding-cake before - but, having eaten it elsewhere and liking it, I had purchased a package to have it handy for just such an emergency as arose last Thursday. Humming happily, I glanced over the instructions: mix batter - sprinkle top with second mixture - then I spied instructions on the side of the package telling how to make a fudge-nut pudding-cake. Ah, I thought, I like nutty things (how true) so I'll put some walnuts in like it says here. I proceeded to mix the batter and spread it in the baking dish; picked up the sealed package containing the pudding mix and read the words "sprinkle over batter." This done, I shoved the pan into the oven, noted the time and went about my other affairs. When thirty minutes were up, I checked the pudding-cake and . . . good grief! There was the pudding mix still on top and just as dry as it was when I put the pan in the oven. Retrieving the carton from the wastebasket, I checked the instructions . . . I had failed to notice the direction to pour an amount of boiling water over the mix before putting it in the oven! Certainly it was no good, as it was, so anything I might do to salvage it would do no harm. I hesitated to pour water over it so I compromised and used milk and left it in the oven at reduced heat for another 15 minutes. My method of rescue must have been fairly successful for second servings (a la mode) - and ample ones at that. It didn't quite taste like pudding-cakes I have eaten but it was crusty and flavorful. One thing is for certain: I've been convinced that it pays to read instructions carefully.

Last Thursday forenoon the dogs were let out of the pen for a run. A light snow had fallen during the night giving the yard a fresh white covering. Pride likes to gallop and off he went in his usual pell-mell fashion. He was no more surprised than I when one snowy section suddenly gave way beneath him and he found himself breaking through the ice that coated a shallow water puddle. His hind feet slipped and he fell on his side. The temperature was below freezing and in a short time his wet hair was sticking together in frosty tufts so he spent the rest of the morning in the utility. I wonder if he's smarter than I've been giving him credit?

CAN YOU AFFORD A NEW CAR THIS YEAR?

If you've been looking over the new '61 models but holding back because you didn't think you could afford one, then here is something to think about. Recent national studies have borne out the fact that the difference in cost of owning and operating a new car compared to one three years old or more is diminishing.

In our growing automation economy, service costs are increasing faster than manufacturing costs, coupled with the fact that today's new cars are less and less subject to breakdown.

Anyone who owns a car purchased in 1955 or 1956, for instance, would be amazed at the improvements in this year's models. Even in the last three years there have been great changes. The new cars perform and ride tremendously better. Body squeaks and rattles have been almost completely eliminated and there is increased operating economy. Automatic transmissions are also vastly improved.

If you are driving a car you purchased three or more years ago then you owe it to yourself to take a demonstration ride in one of the new cars. Only sitting in and driving one of these new cars can make you realize what you are missing in not owning one.

Finally, if you add up the cost of depreciation and maintenance of your present car against that of a new one, you'll be surprised at how little the two figures will vary. You may find that the pleasure and comfort and safety of owning a new car will more than outweigh that difference.

Same Old Question: What To Do About Taxes?

By Elmer E. White Michigan Press Association Michigan's muddled tax waters are being stirred up by proposals, counter-proposals and just plain talk.

Honest efforts to correct the recognized inequities in the tax situation are not hard to find. Unfortunately, there is some self-seeking, a great deal of political maneuvering, a touch of misinformation and mountains of misunderstanding surrounding taxes.

Gov. John B. Swainson has presented his ideas on fiscal reform to the Legislature, and promises that these will be followed up by specific proposals in the form of bills.

He is giving his plan, which includes a 3 per cent personal income tax, a 3 per cent tax on corporation profits, tax relief for industry, sales tax exemptions on food and prescription drugs and increased state payments to local units of government, the hard sell.

At every opportunity he has to speak, Swainson presses the theme that his fiscal revision plan is a way to start solving Michigan's fiscal woes.

The Governor is also promoting governmental reorganization plans and economic development proposals whenever possible. Retarded Children Can Be Problem

Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of articles on mentally handicapped children.

Mentally handicapped children are those who because of poor intellectual endowment are unable to cope with the standard requirements of regular grades. They are in particular need of special educational services planned for intellectually subnormal children. These include approximately two per cent of the school population. Regardless of the degree of mental retardation or the particular educational plan prescribed for the mentally handicapped child, the basic needs of these children are the same. Adjustment should be made in accordance with the limited capacities which they present. In whatever segment of the school system they may be found, they all call for sympathetic understanding and intelligent guidance.

The total cost of the dormitory is $25,000.

How many of you have memories of home baking from your mother's kitchen? When golden tender, crusty loaves of bread are cooling on shining racks, just smelling up a home with warm-hearted memories - that is a real memory.

From the Stone Age, when flour for breadmaking meant crushing wheat between stones, down to the remarkable precision of today's milled, blended, processed and packaged flours, the skill of the bread-maker has been a treasured art.

As you bake mouth-watering coffee cakes, batches of tasty cinnamon buns, crusty rolls or golden, tender-crust loaves of homemade bread, the flour chosen will make a difference. Each of today's different flours is a uniquely consistent product. So many homemakers ask, which flour for what?

An all-purpose, general family flour may or may not be a blend. When a blend of hard and soft wheat flours is satisfactory for all baking and cooking uses, it's an all-purpose flour. Bread flour is milled from a blend of winter and spring, hard, "high-protein" (12 to 14 per cent) wheat kernels. It is usually creamy in color, has a small proportion of starch and is heavy and "strong" with gluten. When rubbed between your fingers, it feels dry and slightly granular. When pressed tightly, then shaken, it falls to powder and will not show any finger prints.

In some sections, soft wheat is used for bread flour. In that case, bread recipe changes are needed. You will use less liquid or more flour and increase the yeast ½ ounce, sugar 1 tablespoon per pound loaf of bread. The dough rises faster but not so high, over-long fermentation weakens the gluten, causing the bread to collapse in baking. So handle the bread lightly and choose a shallow pan to bake it in.

I've been asked, "what is gluten?" It is a flour protein substance which combines with water or milk and develops a dough elasticity through kneading. The stronger the flour is with gluten, the more liquid it will absorb and the more loaves per pound of dough your recipe will make.

The amount and quality of gluten varies among wheat depending on wheat variety, growing, harvesting, milling and storage conditions.

Pastry flour is milled from soft "low protein" (8 to 10 per cent) wheat kernels. It is whiter in color, less glutenous, higher proportion of starch. It makes a "short" dough which breaks easily; when the flour is rubbed between the fingers, it feels smooth and soft. It is superior for cakes, cookies, doughnuts, biscuits, pastry and crackers.

Cake flour is milled from soft wheat kernels. Rigidly controlled blending yields a very uniform product, twice as fine as bread flour. It usually is a better grade of flour than pastry flour.

Self-rising flour has had calcium acid phosphate, baking soda and salt added to it. The baking powder ingredients, salt and flour are mixed more thoroughly and uniformly than can be done at home. Some self-rising flours also contain powdered milk and either egg or fat.

Bleached flour has had harmless, tasteless bleaching chemicals added to the flour to whiten and age it. Enriched flour is regular white wheat flour that has been enriched by the addition of iron and the three important B vitamins.

Graham, whole wheat or entire wheat flour means the same! They contain all nutritive value of the whole grain. They all contain the wheat germ and outer layers of the wheat kernel.

Wheat which makes the strongest flours are grown (with the exception of a bit of Illinois) west of the Mississippi. The big production states are Kansas, Montana, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Washington and Nebraska.

Soft wheat flours grow in three principal regions: Michigan, New York and Pacific northwest. Michigan's wheat production varies from 40 to 41 million bushels. Eighty-five per cent of this soft wheat goes into cereals and pastry flour.

Kind words never die—they just become victims of ingratitude.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Sez:

Dear Mister Editor:
I see by the papers where one of them safety organizations in Washington aims to lobby for a law in Congress making car manufacturers put safety belts in ever automobile.

If them Congressmen git to messing in such items as this, I ain't saw a single thing the folks that makes cars has ever done for the pedestrian. If the Congress is going into this field, I think they ought to work both sides of the street. When a fellow goes to town these days the only safe place for him to walk is where no motor vehicle can be drove, bounced, skidded, carroomed, catapulted, rickocheted, or flung. I recommend collapsible bumpers and padded radiators, and a slanted rubber ramp in front to scoop up the pedestrian, with a soft pad up on the hood for him to land on. After all, they is a few people left who has to walk and they need some consideration.

I admit they ain't too many pedestrians left and if the Congress is looking at the matter from the vote angle, them that has to walk to the polls won't git much relief. The old song about the boy "walking his girl back home" is out of style. Today if he ain't got a car, he ain't got no girl. The family car is gitting to be more important in the American household than the cook stove. It's a good thing it runs on gas. It don't stand still long enough to refuel on hay.

Well, I see by the papers where them folks in Washington has admitted that cheap money is here to stay. A news item says the Bureau of Engraving will now print $1 bills in sheets of 32 instead of sheets of 12 like they been doing since 1900. I reckon the number of Government checks they print to the sheet has been put in the top secret drawer. Sometimes I think that me and Senator Byrd is the only two people in the country that worries about these things.

For instant, I was reading the official tally sheet the other day where the private and public debt is now right at $390 billion, or an average of about $20,000 per ever family in the United States. Of course, me and my old lady will never live to pay ours off, but I shure hate to pass it along to my young neighbor and his family down the road a piece.

But debt or no debt, Mister Editor, I'm mighty glad to see the new administration coming out strong for funds for the schools. The principal over at our school was telling me they ain't even got enough money for new baseball uniforms this spring, let alone books.

Your truly,
Uncle Tim
