SLUDGE HAMMER SERENADE—Joe Gruber may not be noted for his touch on the keyboard, but give him a sledge hammer and he's another Van Cliburn. This scene took place recently as Gruber assisted Eldon Stoutenburg and Ed Anthes in removing debris from the Cultural Center upstairs. The long box in front of the piano is a child's casket, apparently used in ceremonies of one of the clubs that met in the building at one time. (Chronicle photo)

THIS IS CULTURE? Cliff Ferguson is all "keyed" up over the progress being made in work on the new cultural center and just couldn't wait to try out the old upright piano being reconditioned for the building. Looking on is Cultural Center Corp. official Clinton House, at right. Trying to ignore the shenanigans on the left is Steve Frank who is reconditioning the piano, one of two originally in the building. (Chronicle photo)

Thumb Pharmacists Schedule Meeting

Thumb pharmacists are slated to meet tonight (Thursday) at Teales Restaurant in Marlette to hear two hospital officials speak on poison control.

The meeting is being held in conjunction with "Poison Prevention Week," just past.

Cass City officials of the Thumb Drug Club, sponsoring the meeting, include: Tom Proctor, president, and William Ruhl, treasurer. Donald Everts of Caro is vice-president.

Both Cass City druggists, also in conjunction with "Poison Prevention Week," announced that free poison labels and a counterpoise chart are available at both drug stores.

The label is a red and yellow design with a snake and the word "Warning" featured.

year from the first bricks to come from Depew's Brick Kiln. A check with two of Cass City's senior citizens, Mrs. O. W. Nique and Mrs. Alfred J. Knapp, along with a few comments by Mrs. Bauer, revealed the center has had a varied history.

Basketball Court
In the 1920s, according to Mrs. Bauer, Cass City high school basketball games were held and to make things just a little harder, they were playing around an old coal stove. There was no seating, just lots of standing room.

"Meredith Auten was married the first time in the township hall," Mrs. Bauer chuckled. "He was the groom in a Tom Thumb wedding when he was a boy."

Square Dance
Mrs. Nique recalls sneaking into the hall to watch them square dance. "We weren't allowed to dance and it was the only way I could learn."

"George Dillman's grandfather used to play the violin and his mother played the piano," she tells.

Mrs. Knapp made her first public appearance on the stage of the hall in a play. She had stage fright.

"I was very reticent about appearing," she explains. "I was 16 at the time." She is now 90.

"There are a lot of precious memories for all our older people. We were always very proud of it . . . because we, unlike so many other towns, had a place to go to."

The building was used for caucuses and she recalls that one time over 300 persons attended a single caucus.

Organizations such as the Macabees, Gleaners, Odd Fellows and the Rebekas held their meetings in the hall.

Members of the Cultural Center Corporation have been holding meetings to set up regulations and bylaws for use of the center. Members of the corporation include: W. E. Walpole, Horace Bulen, James Ware, Ed Golding, Clint House and Mrs. Bauer.

ELECTRIC SHAVERS

Q. Have electric shavers and blade razors ever been subjected to scientific comparison?

A. Yes. A group of Boston doctors conducted a detailed study of shaving with both electric and blade-type instruments. They found that in general, the blade razor cut the hair closer to the skin surface than did the electric shaver. The ends of hairs, examined 24 hours after last shaving with electric shavers, showed ragged edges and splitting. These effects were not observed after blade shaving.

NORMAL CHOLESTEROL LEVEL

Q. My cholesterol is 210. Is this normal? Does smoking increase cholesterol?

A. This question is frequently asked and can be answered only in the following manner. For various reasons, a "normal" cholesterol level is difficult or impossible to define. Cholesterol values in presumably healthy persons vary considerably with age, sex, diet, stress and other factors. In addition, the cholesterol value goes up and down in any person, from time to time. Further, the values vary considerably according to the particular laboratory test used. To define "normal" the question must be asked: "Under what circumstances?" Actually, your physician is the only one in a position to evaluate the significance of the blood cholesterol value (or any other laboratory finding). So far as is known, smoking has no significant influence on the cholesterol level.

KOMMENTS BY KRAFT

The Old Man Just Ran Out of Time

By Dave Kraft

The old man sat huddled in the corner. His head drooped to his chest and from time to time he coughed... a cough with a tinge of finality in it.

"So this is how it's to be," he thought to himself. "This is how it ends."

"I knew it would come, but it seems I've been here such a short time."

He chuckled to himself. "Short time, maybe, but it'll be a cold day before they forget me... I gave 'em something to remember, I did."

A shiver shook the ancient, withering frame and though his eyes took on a glassy look, the mind behind them continued to work.

"I had a few more tricks up my sleeve but I've run out of time," he lamented. "I had 'em guessin', though, I did. I gave 'em my worst and then I let off, just enough to let 'em think it was finally all over."

"Then that last blast... last Wednesday. That was something. I was specially proud of that. It was a good way to go... one final, all-out push."

He chuckled again and the effort made him cough. His skin took on a gray hue and his breathing became coarser and fainter.

A tear squeezed from the corner of one of his tightly closed eyes and rolled down the old face.

And it was sad because the old man was only five months old.

And then, as the first warm breath of a new season whispered across his face, Old Man Winter died.

Let's hope so.

I read the other day where deer at the Cusino Wildlife Experiment Station near Shingleton have been fitted with radio transmitters so that game management officials can study their living habits.

This is supposed to help the officials determine what happens to the deer during harsh winters and so forth in order to set up better management programs.

CASS CITY CHRONICLE

VOLUME 58, NUMBER 49

CASS CITY, MICHIGAN THURSDAY, MARCH 26, 1965

Fewer County Dairy Farmers Producing Huge Milk Surplus

There were more than three times as many dairy farmers on Tuscola County Farms in 1940 as there were in 1960 and the amount is diminishing every day, Al Ballweg, Tuscola county agricultural agent, reported this week. But the drastic cut in the number of farms has done very little to curb the huge surplus of Class I (bottled) milk. For the herd sizes have jumped and the production per cow has also skyrocketed, making more milk available even though the number of animals has diminished. The 1960 census showed that there were 16,920 dairy cows in the county. In 1940 the number was 21,994. But in the past two years milk production in the state has increased three times as fast as the market for Class I milk. As the number of dairy farmers decreases, the herd size jumps. In 1960 there were 23.2 cows in the average herd. In 1940 it was just 14 and this figure was five more than the eight that was the national average 25 years ago.

Help Shortage

Another problem on the farm is the shortage of help. The booming economy has removed much of the available farm labor from the market. Workers who normally were on the farm have driven to the city to work in the factories.

Money paid is not the sole problem. The nature of the dairy business requires help six or seven days a week and morning and evening milking stretches 11 to 12 hours apart.

Compensation insurance, unemployment pay and group hospitalization are not available on most farms and the number of hours worked are not a determining factor in the amount of pay at most farms.

Prospects are not good for better milk prices in the immediate future and the labor problem could be a problem indefinitely for the farm that must rely on help outside the farm.

A man soon learns that he can't travel far on a lame excuse.

Stay on the level—people who try to hit the high places usually land in the dump.

Cut your speed, motorists—the turnover is always more costly than the upkeep.

HAROLD CUMMINGS stands by his two tractors equipped with bottled gas. He says that the fuel is the most economical for him. Using LP gas in tractors is a relatively new application for the fuel in this area although it has gained wide acceptance in other parts of the country.

Cummings Likes LP Gas for Tractor Economy

In the constant battle to increase efficiency and reduce costs, Harold Cummings of Grant township is one of a growing number of farmers who believe that LP gas tractors is one of the answers.

Cummings became convinced after he purchased a tractor with LP gas at an auction about five years ago. Since that time he has converted a Farmall M to bottled gas.

He uses the tractors to farm some 200 acres . . . 120 of which he owns and another 80 which he rents. Cummings is a native of the area. He married the former Doris Spaulding of Bad Axe and the couple have two children.

He is both a cash crop and dairy farmer. Now milking 10 head, his cash crops are beans, wheat and corn.

When discussing his operation, Cummings explained that he likes LP gas tractors for several reasons. Besides being cheaper to operate, he claims, the maintenance is much less.

I change oil every spring and never had to touch the engine until I had an accident with it, he said.

Loading the fuel is easy, too, with the automatic pump that is furnished when a farmer converts a tractor to LP gas.

4-H Service Club Honors Ed Schrader

A huge decorated cake held the spotlight at the meeting of the county 4-H service club March 18.

Thirty members gathered at the 4-H building in Caro to honor their sponsor, Ed Schrader, who is leaving the county.

In appreciation for his work in the county 4-H program, the group presented Mr. Schrader with a desk lamp.

During a brief business session, Pat Toohy of Gageton and Mark Roller of Unionville were chosen to attend the state service club workshop scheduled for April 24 at Camp Kett.

Punch and cake were served by the committee.

Live one day at a time and the future looks less awesome.

A great many people favor rigid revisions of most everything except themselves.

New Ideas Boost State's Corn Yield

Corn is Michigan's most important field crop. And corn growers are becoming more efficient all the time.

In fact, today's corn acreage has increased over 300,000 acres from the 1941-1950 average. Yields during the same period have increased from an average of 36 bushels per acre to over 65 bushels.

Early plantings, new varieties, and better weed and insect control are in part responsible for this remarkable record.

However, some growers have failed to take advantage of new ideas. This has resulted in lower yields and often lower quality grain than their neighbors.

To help this harassed farmer, the Michigan State University Co-operative Extension Service has developed four new publications aimed at helping achieve maximum yields, said Alfred Ballweg, county extension director.

"Hybrid Selection and Cultural Practices" are the subjects of a bulletin written by three MSU crops and soil scientists. They explain how to select corn hybrids and compare seed rotation practices, planting dates and many other areas of soil preparation.

MSU crops scientists compared hybrids available to the farmer for many characteristics in all parts of the state, and results of these trials are presented in "Hybrids Compared-1965."

"Weed Control" and "Insect Control" were both prepared by MSU crop scientists and entomologists to give the most helpful methods for controlling these problems. Practical tables outlined weeds and insects that affect corn production—giving the most effective way to cope with these—are presented.

The bulletins are available free of charge from the Tuscola County Extension Service office located at the Court House, Caro. Just ask for bulletin No. 431, Corn Hybrids Compared-1965; No. 436, Hybrid Selection and Cultural Practices; No. 438 Michigan Corn Production Weed Control; No. 439 Michigan Corn Production Insect Control.

More and More Area Farms Turning to Soil Testing

The car bounced across the corn field and stopped. Two men jumped out, twisted a two-foot probe into the soil, pulled it out and dumped the contents into a small paper sack. Then, once more in the car, they headed for another section of the field and the operation was repeated.

This scene might take place any time and anywhere in the Cass City area as local farmers take advantage of a fast-developing farm tool... soil testing. Although not a new tool, soil testing is rapidly gaining acceptance among area farmers. Where once only the state tested soils, more and more local fertilizer distributors are making soil testing facilities available to their customers.

One such dealer in the Cass City area is the new Smith-Douglass plant at the intersection of M-53 and M-61, managed by Clinton Law.

The plant's facilities comprise one of the most complete in the area and is unique in that it is able to test for nitrogen content at its laboratory.

Other area fertilizer plants also offer soil testing facilities. Less than 25 per cent of the farmers in the area soil test, calculates Law. This, however, is a definite increase, he contends.

Green Acres Group Meets at Lindquists

The Green Acres Farm Bureau met Tuesday evening, March 16, at the August Lindquist home with 12 members present.

Reports were given by Mrs. Ronald Fox, Gerald Bock and Mr. Lindquist.

Mrs. Lindquist led the discussion, "To Serve Tomorrow's Farmers Today."

Cards were played with Don Becker winning the traveling prize. Lunch was served by the hostess.

The April meeting will be at the Ken McRae home.

"Ten years ago, there were hardly any farmers testing."

"The practice of soil testing is carried on more in the Saginaw Valley than here, but it is getting to be a tool that the farmer must use in order to plan his crops," Law explains.

Smith-Douglass stresses complete soil mapping of farms. To achieve this, samples are taken from each field, tested, mapped and recommendations are also made each year and the land is completely re-tested every three years.

Most of the testing at Smith-Douglass is done by Fred Martin, the firm's state licensed fertilizer applicator. Sales supervisor and assisting with the testing is Richard Shaw.

Although samples are comparatively easy to get, Shaw stressed the importance of clean soil samples and proper procedure in securing the samples.

"Observe the terrain and take the samples from the same soil types. Make at least 10 to 20 probes for a composite of a particular soil type," he says.

"Samples should be mixed well and taken at plow depth. Be sure to label sample bags."

Cleanliness is also important. Foreign material of any sort can upset a test. "Even excessive nicotine on the sampler's fingers can throw a sample off," says Shaw.

Samples are taken back to the plant and air-dried. The soil is then ground and sifted.

"Tests are taken from relatively small samples as compared to the total sample," says Martin. "That's why proper procedures in securing the samples are so important."

First on the list of tests is the acidity test which is done on an electric pH meter.

Next is the nitrogen test in which the nitrogen is digested out of a small amount of soil, distilled and measured. Potassium and phosphorus tests are similar and consist of mixing the soil with various chemicals, filtering and measuring.

Samples can either be taken by the farm, using Smith-Douglass equipment or by one of the firm's

USDA Releases 2-Level House Plan

A new two-level house plan developed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture may be just right for that sloping site you would like to build on.

USDA housing specialists have designed this four-bedroom house with the sloping site in mind. Part of the basement has full sized windows.

The basement provides an added area for family living where a fourth bedroom and a second bathroom are located. There is also space for recreation and utility rooms, space for storing canned goods and a closet for work clothes.

An outside entrance to the basement workroom permits washing up before you go upstairs to the main part of the house.

With these facilities in the basement, there is more space upstairs for a roomy kitchen and dining area.

On the first floor, the front door opens from the porch into a small entrance way at one end of the living room. Here there is space for a built-in desk, a music unit on another closet.

The upstairs bath has two lavatories. If you have a small child, the space for one could be used as a baby dressing table.

You can order the working drawings of this plan, number 7151, from Tuscola County Extension Office, Court House, Caro. It costs $1.00

Children should be treated like dogs. The best way to learn how to handle children is to enroll in a dog obedience training class.

The first thing you learn is never to give a command without gaining the attention of the dog. You speak his name in a firm voice until he looks at you.

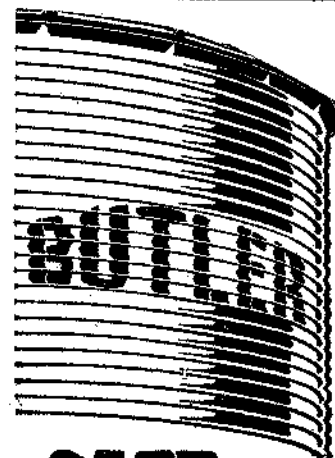

The command is given in as short a manner as possible. And the same words are always used for the same action. You would not vary between "sit", "sit down", "now sit down", "stop" and "squat."

The next step in dog training is to show by the tone of voice that you expect to be obeyed. If you don't know what you want, don't give the command. Mumbling, weak or confused commands, or not making it clear to the dog what is expected, all lessen the chance of obedience.

When a dog obeys, you praise and pet him. When he disobeys, you punish him, according to his sensitivity. One dog may growl at a sharp word, another stop at a loud noise like a newspaper smacked on the hand, another needs a rough tug at the leash or a swat on the rear.

If you allow a misdemeanor because it's cute, be sure you are prepared to take the consequences. A puppy sharing your favorite chair is cute. A boxer landing in the middle of your newspaper isn't. A puppy dancing to welcome you is good for the ego but a Doberman Pinscher with both feet on the man's shoulders is a threat.

A dog must be kept clean, well-fed and healthy. He needs affection, a place to call his own, and to know what he can and can't do. If more children were treated like dogs, they would be happier.

What Is A Farmer?

A farmer is a paradox - he is an overall executive with his home, his office; a scientist using fertilizer attachments; a purchasing agent in an old straw hat; a personnel director with grease under his fingernails; a dietitian with a passion for alfalfa, amino acids and antibiotics; a production expert with a surplus, and a manager battling a price-cost squeeze.

He manages more capital than most of the businessmen in town. He likes sunshine, good food, State Fairs, dinner at noon, auctions, his neighbors, his shirt collar unbuttoned and, above all, a good soaking rain in August.

He is not much for droughts, ditches, throughways, experts, weeds, the eight-hour day, grasshoppers or helping with housework.

Farmers are found in fields - plowing up, seeding down, rotating from, planting to, fertilizing with, spraying for, and harvesting. Wives help them, little boys follow them, the Agriculture Department confuses them, city relatives visit them, salesmen detain them and wait for them, weather can delay them, but it takes Heaven to stop them.

A farmer is both Faith and Fatalist - he must have faith to continually meet the challenges of his capacities amid an ever-present possibility that an Act of God (a late spring, an early frost, tornado, flood, drought) can bring his business to a standstill. You can reduce his acreage but you can't restrain his ambition.

Might as well put up with him - he is your friend, your competitor, your customer, your source of food, fiber and self-reliant young citizens to help replenish your cities. He is your countryman - a denim-dressed, business-wise, fast-growing statesman of stature. And when he comes in at noon, having spent the energy of his hopes and dreams, he can be recharged anew with the magic words: "The market's up."

SPECIAL SPRING FARM SECTION

Explain Vo-ag Program

Fifty years ago, when a farmer retired or died, his farm automatically went to his son and the son was ready for it. He had learned nearly every facet of farming through practical experience.

In today's complex, ever-changing world, it is no longer enough to know "when" and "how". Equally important is "why". Technology is constantly making new advances, even in an old profession as farming and answering the "why" question for Cass City area farmers of the future is the Cass City High School vocational agriculture class.

"The purpose, as I see it, is to get boys started in farm programs to get them more or less established," says Lyle Clarke, vo-ag instructor at Cass City since 1953. "Vo-ag begins to show them the different areas of agriculture... an introduction to agriculture and its related occupations."

As its name implies, vocational agriculture gives Cass City's 85 vo-ag students practical experience by involving them directly in the profession of farming with tie-in projects which they run at home.

Big Business
Even on the light scale done by the boys, the projects are big business. Last year alone, the 91 supervised farm projects reported by 70 students had a total income of $24,000.

Leading the projects was dairy, followed by swine, corn, beef, beans, sugar beets, oats and hay. Vo-ag at Cass City is divided into two main areas, farm shop and agriculture. Backing both is a fraternal organization known as Future Farmers of America (FFA).

Clarke stresses farm shop in the sophomore year. "This is the year in which they build projects for the mechanical part of the farm program," he explains.

Farm Shop
Farm shop features units in welding, wood building and motor repair.

In the welding portion, the boys may build wagons, trailers or rebuild machinery such as drags and discs. Wood work usually consists of hay racks for wagons, work benches, hog feeders or feed bunks for cattle.

In the motor overhaul unit, each boy is required in the fall to do overhaul of a one-cylinder engine as one unit of farm shop. Clarke explains that once finished with the small engine, the boys may go on to repair of larger engines.

Other farm shop units include introductions to basic electrical work, basic surveying and drainage and an introduction to farm building.

Agriculture
The agriculture portion of vo-ag begins in the freshman year during which Clarke stresses livestock work. "We study the various breeds of livestock, do some judging work and study diseases." The boys also do some soils and crop work in the freshman year.

Junior and senior classes are held together and the boys concentrate on studies of crops and soils and on farm management.

Records of project products, costs and returns are required all four years.

FFA
Sixty-five of the 85 boys enrolled in vo-ag belong to a related organization called Future Farmers of America. According to Clarke, FFA is "designed to train the boys in the leadership part of the agriculture program."

"They elect their own officers, plan own recreational activities, encourage judging work and ag contest work. In short, they do some activities that they would not otherwise be able to do."

Four of Cass City's FFA boys recently distinguished themselves by becoming State Farmers.

The hardest thing in the world to get is an honest opinion.

Following a crooked path often leads to a strait-jacket.

When a man gets too busy to laugh he needs a vacation.

Thought for Lent

(Fourth in a series)

The writer of this week's Lenten column has been pastor of the Cass City Church of the Nazarene for nearly two years. Most citizens have seen him helping to build the new parsonage of the church. The Rev. Richard Spencer is also making a significant contribution to the religious life of our community.

Lent is the season of the year when we as professed followers of Christ need to engage in some serious introspection of our lives and of our motives. Perhaps the superficiality of our feigned sacrifices and self denial is somewhat vain.

True discipleship demands more than mere (seasonal) reflection of the sufferings of our Saviour. The inspired writer of Romans said in 12:1-2 "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."

Even in this land of ease and comfort the demands of true discipleship are imperative. There are crosses to bear. Jesus said in Luke 14:27 "And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple."

True discipleship is manifest in practical love for God and our fellowman each day of our lives. Paul said in Romans 12:9 "Let love be without dissimulation." In other words Paul was saying let your discipleship be genuine and unfeigned.

True discipleship means we are to be committed completely to Christ. The main reason communism has advanced more in the past 30 years than Christianity has in the past 300 years is because they are committed to their cause. As we commemorate the sufferings of our Lord, let us ask God to forgive our shallow commitment and our pretence of true discipleship. The poet expressed our divine imperative when he wrote: "Must Jesus bear the cross alone and all the world go free, no there's a cross for everyone and there's a cross for me."

Friday Is Grain Sign-Up Deadline

Friday, March 26, is the last day growers may file applications to take part in the 1965 feed grain program, according to Mike Singer, Chairman, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee.

He reminded farmers that only those who participate in the feed grain program will be eligible for price support on their 1965 corn, barley, and grain sorghum crops. As last year, the support is made available through loans and price-support payments.

Besides qualifying for price support, the participating grower also earns a diversion payment for shifting part of his feed grain base to a conserving use. Minimum diversion is 20 per cent of the individual farm's total feed grain base. Maximum diversion is 50 per cent of the base or 25 acres if this is more.

For diverting more than the minimum, the diversion payment will be figured at a higher rate. If the actual diversion is 40 per cent or more, the higher rate applies to the whole diversion.

Singer urges farmers who are interested in taking part in the year's program to call at the ASCS County Office as soon as possible. Office hours have been extended to 7:00 p. m. March 24, 25 and 26 to accommodate anyone who is unable to call during regular hours.

"We don't want anybody to be disappointed because he waited too long," the chairman said. "There's also the advantage of being able to get half of the estimated diversion payment in advance at the time of sign-up or as soon afterwards as possible."

68-Page Book Describes Best Swine Equipment and Housing

Agricultural engineers and animal scientists from 13 Midwestern colleges, including Michigan State University, have pooled their ideas for swine equipment and housing in a new 68-page book.

The book, entitled "Swine Equipment Plans and Housing Needs", provides many of the answers to questions concerning pork production facilities. The book serves as both a planning and construction plan guide in addition to containing space requirements and building layouts for farrowing, growing and finishing.

Also discussed in the book are the design and selection of ventilation and slotted floor systems, feeders, waterers, fences, loading chutes, pens and other handling equipment. A special reference section contains specifications for mixing concrete, building materials and electric motors.

Although the book was developed specially for pork producers, vocational agriculture teachers and farm suppliers will welcome it as a handbook, says Alfred Ballweg, county extension director.

The swine book is available from the Tuscola County Extension Office for $1.00 per copy or the Department of Agricultural Engineering, Michigan State University, East Lansing.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Sez:

Dear Mister Editor:

I see by the papers where a feller in Florida has poured himself a concrete front yard and painted it green. A heap of folks will figger he's crazy but he could be crazy like a fox. Back when I was a boy folks always had their front yard under a heavy grove of oak trees and they had no grass to mow, just let the hogs eat the acorns off in the fall. Sometimes, when the preacher was coming to take Sunday dinner, they would git the broom and sweep it off nice and neat. That feller in Florida has got plenty of sense, and the next time you got a little concrete left over, Mister Editor, just pour it in the front yard.

Incidental, I was reading where a feller in Wisconsin was lamenting that, with all the wonders we've done in science and agriculture, we ain't never come up with a lawn grass that'll grow to a height of 2 inches and stop. I figger the U. S. Department of Agriculture has just overlooked this little item and now that it's been called to their attention they'll git on it pronto, or just as soon as the Congress appropriates $25,000 for the project.

And I see where one of them Washington column writers says Secretary of Defense McNamara is still fighting that Battle of the Belt Buckle. He has saved a billion dollars by closing down shipyards, Government hospitals, air bases and Army camps but he can't git the Marines to wear a 10-cent belt buckle that is now uniform with the Navy, Army and Air Force. They bean working on this project now fer three years and the Leathernecks was still holding out fer their special 35-cent buckle. According to this Washington column writer, McNamara was so mad about the matter he has got some clothes designer working on a uniform for the Marines that'll have pants that don't need no belt.

The papers didn't give it no play, but I figger the top news item of the week was where some organization was trying to git Billy Graham to put on another crusade in Washington. I wish him well, but I don't think one man can do Washington any good. When Billy was there that other time he averaged about 100 converts a night, and I figgered that if he kept it up he could convert the nation's capital in 19 years and four months. Washington was built fer scheming, con-iving and pleasure and it's got past where one man can dent the situation.

And a Goldwater Republican was asking Congressman J. J. Pickle of Texas and Congressman Claude Pepper of Florida to introduce a joint bill, any bill, in the Congress, claimed what the Great Society needed was a Pickle-Pepper bill. Yours truly, Uncle Tim

USE CLEAN, GREEN SMITH-DOUGLASS PELLEFORM WITH TREL—THE THUMB'S MOST MODERN FERTILIZER

Decade Brings Big Beet Yield Boost

Michigan's sugar beet yields have increased by 82 per cent since the 1941-1950 period, thanks to several important factors.

Average yields have increased from 8.8 tons from 1941-1950 to the present average of approximately 16 tons per acre, says Mill Erdmann, Michigan State University crops extension specialist.

While it is rather difficult to determine exactly what has contributed to increased sugar beet yields, Erdmann has indicated the following have been of major importance:

-higher percentage of sugar beets grown on well drained and tilled land. Nearly 90 per cent are grown on this land today compared with less than 50 per cent back in the 1940's.

-earlier planting has helped increase yields. Tile has also helped farmers get on the land earlier in the spring.

-tremendous increases in the amount of fertilizer applied per acre. Most of today's growers apply 600 pounds or more fertilizer per acre, says the crops specialist.

-adoption of minimum tillage principles by sugar beet growers. Sugar beet growers—one of the first groups to adopt these principles—grow more of their crop on minimum tilled land than any other Michigan agricultural group.

-improved sugar beet varieties. Erdmann also pointed out that today's sugar beet producing areas are more concentrated and sugar beets are grown on better adapted land than was the case back in the 1940's.

Short cuts to success often prove to be the longest route.
