Caro Youth Fails to Elude Police in High Speed Chase

From the Editor's Corner

We thought that the traffic past our house on South Seeger street would be greatly diminished with the bridge on Cemetery Road out and the elimination of traffic coming to Cass City from the south. But up to now there hasn't been much less . . . especially in the evening as crowds of boys on bikes and older "boys" in cars come riding past on their way to posts as sidewalk superintendents of the project.

When the Caro school district passed a special tax for operating last week on the third try, they borrowed a page from the Cass City School Board. Their all-out effort included letters in the Caro paper from leading citizens, supporting the tax, a well organized advertising campaign and personal contact with voters.

With this campaign they got out a record vote for the district and squeezed through the tax by a narrow margin.

Earl Woolner is in a quandry. He is in the Naval Reserves. Recently he received two notices . . . one saying that he was physically disqualified for service and the other ordering him to report for duty.

Even computers have their off days.

Last year the International Festival held in Tuscola County was so successful that it was written about in magazines and most area papers.

The Rev. William Lutz of Mayville is the man that made the program go last year and he will ramrod the event this year.

Some 200 foreign visitors are expected in the county and the program includes a petcock supper and entertainment at the Caro fairgrounds Sept. 19. A well-known speaker is planned.

Area residents who would like to host a guest can make arrangements by calling Mr. Lutz at Mayville.

A 19-year-old Caro youth is in Tuscola County Jail awaiting arraignment on a reckless driving charge after he tried to elude sheriff's deputies in a 45-minute chase at high speeds down county back roads and through state land Tuesday.

Arrested at a road block set up by Deputy Paul Berry was Sam Trisch, 19, Caro.

Trisch was originally sought on a kidnapping warrant issued by Donald Langmaid, Caro, in connection with the taking of the five Lang-

Social Aid Dept. Announces New Help for Blind

Mrs. Irma Hicks, Tuscola county Bureau of Social Aid supervisor, announced this week that additional services are now available to area blind, with the appointment of Dean McWethy as rehabilitation counselor.

These services include vocational rehabilitation as well as non-vocational aids. More time will now be given to improving existing services and widening the scope of services as well as increasing the number of persons being served.

Many blind persons, according to Mrs. Hicks, are not aware of the services and county residents who know a blind person are asked to contact the Bureau of Social Aid in Caro.

Eligibility for the services is based on a lack of vision which is defined as "legal blindness" and does not need to be a total lack of sight.

Services now being given include scholarships in college, job training, occupational and personal counseling plus teaching of Braille, and distribution of recorded material with the "Talking Book."

Slate All-day Grid Session

Football physicals will be given Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock, Coach John Bifoss said this week, and boys will be able to order shoes at the same time. A shoe salesman will be present. Mouthpieces are available from the school at anytime, Bifoss continued.

maid children, ranging from age nine to 13, Saturday.

The Langmaid children were with Trisch when he was arrested. Trisch and the Langmaid children had been camping on state land just off Phillips Road, near Deford. He was in that area when spotted by deputies.

Three sheriff's cars and the Cass City village police car were involved in the ensuing 45-minute, high speed chase. Trisch was finally chased into a road block set up by Deputy Berry at the intersection of Curry and Hurds Corners roads. At one point he left the road and drove through state land in an effort to escape.

Trisch was believed to have been carrying weapons in his car during part of the chase, but no weapons were found when he was stopped. He offered no resistance.

A check of Trisch's camp site revealed a "truck load" of items he later admitted he had taken from five houses he had broken into over the week end, according to Sheriff Hugh Marr.

Trisch is being held on the reckless driving charge until the county prosecutor returns from vacation. Sheriff Marr stated that the kidnapping charge and the breaking and entering charge would be considered then.

Fire Losses Up Across County

Tuscola county fire losses for the month of July totaled $23,760, county firemen learned Thursday night, Aug. 19, at the monthly meeting of the Tuscola County Fire Association at Vassar.

The figure was $1,400 higher than June's losses.

Featured speaker for the evening was Mr. Aldrich of the Amway Co. who spoke on "Water Water," and small car extinguishers. Later in the evening, the Millington department showed the film, "Fire and Your Household."

A mix-up in civil defense signals in those towns bordering the Saginaw-Tuscola county lines was straightened out when the Saginaw civil defense director for the area agreed to use the same signal as Tuscola county.

County firemen were invited to participate in the Reese Homecoming parades Sunday and Monday, Sept. 5-6, at 12:30 p.m.

More information on a fire school at Selfridge Air Force Base is to be presented at the association's next meeting, September 16, in Fairgrove. The school is tentatively scheduled for late September or early October.

Bifoss Definite, Determined As Football Season Nears

John Bifoss, 38, is an amiable, soft spoken, friendly young man who has moved to Cass City from western Michigan.

He is also Cass City's new football coach. And when he starts talking about his profession, a subtle change comes into his voice.

For the tall, excellently conditioned Bifoss has definite ideas about football. Friday he told the squad some of them. "Smoking and drinking are out, of course," he said, "and I expect all of the players to go all out."

It was easy to see an iron determination to produce a winner lurking behind every sentence concerning football and his connection with it.

"Bad Axe had a good team last year, but I hear they might not be quite as strong this year," Bifoss remarked, "I hope that's true . . . or rather," he corrected himself, "that we are stronger than they are, regardless of how powerful they may be."

"I hear that some of the boys have been working out by themselves this summer and I regard that as very encouraging. There will be plenty of work ahead for all of the fellows this fall," he said a trifle grimly.

"One thing that I hear is extra good in the village, is the sports tradition . . . that's one of the reasons I decided to move to Cass City."

Bifoss comes to the community from Benzie Central. "It is a class C school and I left with about half of the teaching staff because of a low salary schedule," the new coach explained.

Factory Opens in Village

Cass City's newest plant, Cole Carbide Industries, has started limited production in Cass City, Scott Kelley, manager, announced this week.

The new plant is housed in the building at the corner of Sherman and Main. "We manufacture carbide tools, primarily for the automobile industry," Kelley said.

Our machinery is moving in now and will be shipped for the next few weeks, he explained.

The plant will hire some 15 men when it is in full production, Kelley said.

The plant in Cass City is a branch of a plant operating in Warren. We have some 60 men employed there, Kelley reported.

The manager said that they selected Cass City for expansion because of the village's location in the center of the Thumb and the availability of a building here.

Kelley has already moved to Cass City with his wife and four children, Melanie, 6, Craig, 5, Wendy, 4, and Melissa, 2.

Take $1,300 in Tools at Shaw's

An estimated $1,300 in hand tools and power tools were stolen from Shaw Implement Co., four miles east of Cass City, early Sunday morning in the second area break-in in the past two weeks.

Sandusky State Police Trooper Alex Fisher reported that the theft was discovered at about 8:00 a.m. Sunday by Brewster Shaw, owner of the firm.

Entry into the cement-block garage was gained by breaking a window in an office door. The tools were the only items reported missing.

The break-in was the second reported in the past two weeks. Saturday, Aug. 14, thieves broke into Erla Food Center and stole a large quantity of beer and cigarettes.

Both thefts are still under investigation.

His coaching record since entering the high school ranks is 34 wins, 32 losses and four ties. His top team was at Honor in 1956.

The Class D school played in the Northwestern C League and was undefeated, untied and unscored upon. Honor was later consolidated with Benzie Central and Bifoss moved into the consolidation as the head football coach.

To Use Slot T

"I will be using a slot T this year. After talking with Orlie Lemanski (last year's coach) it seems that I have the material to make this offense go."

What's it take? In Bifoss' opinion, you have to have a good short passer and a couple of good ends. "Naturally, I haven't seen any of the boys in action, so I can't say who I am counting on, but I have some ideas after talking with Orlie," Bifoss said.

Bifoss is used to a small school. He went to high school at Pellston. We had just one year of football while I was in school, he said. Basketball was the big sport. During my junior year Pellston went to the quarter finals. The next year we were knocked out in the regionals, he recalled.

Before going to Honor, Bifoss earned his bachelor's degree from Central Michigan University.

Check Nitrogen in Drought Stricken Corn, Says Ballweg

Drought-stricken corn is causing headaches for farmers in some areas of Michigan along with Tuscola county, said Alfred Ballweg, county extension director. Yields of grain and forage are expected to be very low in some areas. In addition, farmers are concerned that drought-stricken corn silage may contain high levels of nitrates, which can cause a potential problem of low production for livestock feeders or possible nitrate poisoning of livestock.

Farmers are cautioned not to be too hasty in putting corn in the silo, said Ballweg. The moisture content of corn ensilage may remain very high although several leaves have turned brown near the bottom of the stalk. This could result in poor quality silage. Likewise, allowing more time for the plant to grow and ears to develop could increase yields. Much of the nitrate may disappear as a result of growth and maturity of the plant.

List Steps

In attempting to avoid nitrate toxicity problems, Livestock Specialists Dr. Clifford Beck and Don Hillman, MSU, suggest:

- (1). Allow the crop to reach maturity before ensiling.
- (2). Let the silo stand two to three weeks after filling before feeding the silage.
- (3). Make feeding changes gradually. Feed small amounts for a few days and give added roughage in the form of hay for about a week to permit cattle to adjust to the new feed.
- (4). Feed grain liberally to dilute the nitrate-containing feed and enhance conversion of nitrate to ammonia.
- (5). Be sure cattle are receiving adequate levels of Vitamin A. Cattle getting a heavy silage ration and very little hay should receive 30,000 I. U. of Vitamin A per head daily.
- (6). Be sure cattle are getting iodized salt. Nitrate problems are more serious when cattle are deficient in iodine. The iodine contained in salt fortified with dicodisallylacid is reported to be

Zemke Turns Defeat into Victory

By Dave Kraft

Bill Zemke was in the other day and asked, "You know that picture you took of Jim Winchester in a field of corn? Well, I got some that'll beat that."

He went out to his car and returned with a stalk of the corn. It was a full foot and a half high. The tiny ears were perfectly formed and tasseled and when husked looked just like the real thing.

The sample was from a field planted by the White Creek Club crew which may or may not explain something.

"Scientists have been trying to perfect dwarf corn for the last 50 years," Zemke beamed, "and we did it in just one year."

I might say that that's one way of turning defeat into victory. "We got some nice potatoes, too," he added. "About half the size of a penny."

I think those White Creek boys might have the answer to a lot of surplus problems. With an output like that, there'd be plenty of shortages in no time.

Guy Landon, the mailman's mailman, now retired, stopped by with a picture of Mrs. Alfred J. Knapp and himself, taken during the centennial.

It was a picture of a teacher, Mrs. Knapp, and a student, Landon. Mrs. Knapp was holding a first grade diploma she issued to Landon some 70 years ago!

She also held a report card belonging to Landon. Guy didn't comment on the grades but from the way he succeeded in life, they couldn't have been too bad.

One big problem I had on our recent trip to the West Coast was getting off one road onto another road.

Some roads have signs about a mile from the turn off telling you what's coming up. Others, however, have the sign about five feet from the turn off.

Consequently, you hit a 35-mile an hour exit doing about 70. This makes for some very interesting driving. Something akin to the Indianapolis "500".

Sometimes I'd just chicken out and go 10 to 20 miles out of my way rather than try to make the exit.

The signs that used to perturb me the most were the ones that read, "You have just missed your turn off."

Most servicemen, so the rumor goes, find their tour of duty less than to their liking. Not so Norman Sawicki, according to his mother.

As Norm says, "As long as I've got to be in here, I might as well make the best of it."

Norman has gone into business. He takes pictures of servicemen with a Polaroid camera and sells them for a buck a shot.

He's also gone in the hair cutting business with a partner and charges 50 cents a head in his barracks and $1.00 a head in other barracks.

When he gets his discharge, he's either going to have to become a picture-taking barber or a tonorial photographer.

There are seven ways to be happy — stay out of debt and you won't need the other six.

Name R. Opperman To FHA Committee

Ronald D. Opperman of Vassar has been appointed as a member of the three-man Tuscola County FHA Committee, the agency's County Supervisor Robert B. Abbott announced this week. The appointment is for three years.

Opperman succeeds Vernon M. Zimmer, whose three-year term expired this year. The other two members serving with Opperman are Roderick V. Hood of Silverwood and Carl F. Bittner of Reese.

Opperman started farming in 1947 and is currently operating a 300-acre dairy farm. He keeps a dairy herd of 80-90 cows. His herd average last year was 14,270 pounds of milk per cow and 479 pounds of butterfat.

Opperman raises corn, oats and hay to feed his cattle and has no cash cropping program.

Many a man who reaches the pinnacle of fame finds it an uncomfortable place to roost.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Sez:

Dear Mister Editor:

The fellers at the country store Saturday night was in a complaining mood and, general speaking, didn't have a good word fer nothing or nobody.

First off, Ed Doolittle, that is still wearing his Godwater button, reported he had saw in the papers where they was going to remodel the west front of the Capitol in Washington. According to this piece, said Ed, the Capitol architect claimed the west front was gitting in such bad shape the vibrations from jet planes was liable to start it tumbling down.

It was a strange thing, allowed Ed, that the White House and the Capitol was always tumbling down under a Democratic administration. He said he could recollect when Franklin Roosevelt remodeled the east front of the Capitol at a cost of several million dollars, then Harry Truman came along and had to have a front porch on the White House fer another few million, and now Lyndon has got to patch up the other front of the Capitol fer some more millions. Ed claimed he spent 8 years in Washington and never spent a dime fer repairs.

Personal, Mister Editor, I don't know if Ike was letting things go to pot around the house or Harry and Lyndon was working on the "Make America Beautiful" program, so I didn't say nothing.

Zeke Grubb reported he had saw a ad in a magazine fer a new book called "Teach Your Wife to Be a Widow." It was wrote by some feller that is a expert in family money matters and, the ad said, on account of wives general outlived their husbands by several years, ever husband ought to teach his old lady how to carry on. Zeke allowed as how he was gitting mighty tired of this "drop dead" attitude towards old men like him that could be good fer another 20 year. First off, said Zeke, he figured the Great Society had ought to git busy on this gap between husbands and wives, and in the second place he was writing to his Congressman complaining about letting such ads go through the mails.

Bug Hobokum was lamenting about a piece in his pamphlet from the Agriculture Department saying the price of beef was up 10 per cent since January 1, and pork was up 18 per cent. Bug don't raise nothing around his place but a few chickens and he was glad to note the piece said chicken prices was "firming." Bug said "firming" was a $10 Washington word meaning rising.

All in all, Mister Editor, it was a pretty gloomy session and I wished I had stood at home. They brung up at the session. Clem Webster announced he had saw where a young feller that was graduated from college in June had set on a fireplug fer 72 hours and had established a new world's fireplug-setting record. Clem said it renewed his faith in American youth.

Yours truly,
Uncle Tim

OVER-THE-COUNTER DRUGS

Q. Certain drugs which I have been able to purchase in the past without trouble now require a doctor's prescription. Isn't this done mainly to force people to go to doctors?

A. In a way yes, but not for the reason which you imply. While the average person receives much information about drugs, he lacks the required professional training to use the knowledge intelligently. The public must realize that every drug is dangerous when it is in the hands of unqualified persons. Certain drugs can be exceptionally dangerous and should not be used indiscriminately. Federal and State laws require that they be available only on a doctor's prescription to be filled by a pharmacist. This is done solely to protect people who would become amateur prescribers as well as diagnosticians.

KIDNEY TROUBLE AND DIET

Q. Is it wise for a person who has kidney trouble to eat meat?

A. Some kidney disorders require more dietary protein (such as that provided in meat), others may require restriction of protein. The attending physician decides which is best.

Send questions to Science Editors, Inc., P.O. Box 1174, Louisville 1, Ky.

Not having a prescription filled to save money is like stopping the clock to save time. The unfilled prescription is the costliest one in relation to fast recovery from illness.

Experts Predicted Changes For New State Constitution

Judge Not

Predictions were made almost before the 1963 state constitution was adopted that changes would be required in several sections, including one regarding judicial vacancies.

Now, less than two years after the new basic document took effect one of the more influential writers of that constitution is calling for a change in this area.

Gov. George Romney, who served in the important No. 2 spot at the Constitutional Convention, worked with Attorney General Frank J. Kelley to put on an early ballot the question of restoring the Governor's power to fill state judicial vacancies by appointment.

It becomes apparent in this short time that it is not feasible to live with the constitutional provision. It calls for vacant court posts to be filled until the next election by a temporarily-appointed retired judge.

The trouble with this very noble bipartisan idea was that there are not enough retired judges able and willing to serve in the number of court vacancies which tend to occur between regular elections.

Basic argument for this provision during the 1961-62 convention was that the previous appointive power gave the governor essentially the power to get a friend a court post, since voters most often gave the appointee a full term if he ran in the next election.

Proponents of the constitutional amendment feel this situation is much better than having an unworkable requirement which keeps court benches unfilled and slows the judicial process.

Ubiquitous Need

Safety problems are not limited to Michigan's highways, according to a state civil service commission study.

Industry has long been known to wage continuing safety campaigns among employees. Almost every industrial shop in the state has safety reminders in various places.

Safety first signs may one day soon be seen in state offices judging from the injury rate piled up in the past year. The commission said: job-incurred injuries cost nearly $1 million in the past 12 months, triple the rate just three years ago.

A six-month period recently turned up nearly 400 temporarily disabling accidents, two permanent disabilities and two deaths of on-the-job state employees. Michigan has 32,500 civil service workers.

The commission set its training division to work on ways to cut down this high accident rate.

More Tax Income

Michigan's Revenue Department boasts it is doing its job in a unique way.

While most state agency operating costs go up in some proportion to the services rendered, the Revenue Department says it is spending less to bring in more money.

During the last fiscal year, Commissioner Clarence W. Lock said

Harvest All Hay, Regardless Of Lower Quality

Tuscola county farmers should take advantage of harvesting every possible ton of hay even though it may not all be of the best quality, according to Alfred Ballweg, county extension director.

Extension agents in the lower part of Northern Michigan have indicated a very short crop of hay and that the shortage of hay will become more critical as they move into the winter months. They indicated that some of their farmers have been shopping for hay as far away as Wisconsin where prices are high for this time of year.

Our farmers should also give some real serious thought to harvesting corn for silage where it will no longer produce a crop of ear corn. Farmers without livestock or silo storage may want to sell his field of corn to someone who has storage and the need for more roughage, said Ballweg.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

General

Driver Training Can Sharpen My Driving

By the Rev. R. J. Searls

While driving about Cass City during the summer months, I have frequently noticed one of the Driver's Education cars. Taught by specially-trained high school teachers, what has really happened is a revolution in driving. I wonder how many persons respond as I do when I encounter one of those cars. I drive much more carefully when one of them is sharing the street with me. I check my speed, check the placement of my hands on the steering wheel, and turn on the signal that warns that I am going to turn way too early.

I think that the school system is to be congratulated, as are the dealers who donate the use of the cars. I have had two children in the course, and am very pleased with, not only the techniques of driving they were taught, but with the good attitudes they have. In my day, all the training necessary to teach a teen-ager to drive was given by the youth's father — who conscientiously passed on many poor driving habits, and omitted much that is essential in this age which sees many more cars on the highway. I can remember when cars cut in and out of traffic at will. Now such dangerous driving habits have all but disappeared!

There is no accurate way to know how many lives have been spared from death or serious injury because of the programs in high school, assisted by all major automobile companies! It is startling to be forced to know that the teen-ager-caused accident rate has dropped; because they are better drivers than their parents were, and part of this is due to vastly improved driver's attitudes. Or, so IT SEEMS TO ME.

Writing in Fortune Magazine, Dr. Vannevar Bush, one of this nation's foremost scientists, reminds us that, "There is cause for much concern over those who follow science blindly." He cautions against over-optimism about man's ability to create life. We recall a professor's statement in college to the effect that certain questions must be asked of all such discoveries. Why is the creation of man-made life desired? And, to what purpose will it be put? You and I can, and should, give as much thought to questions like this as the scientist gives to his experiments in the laboratory. Or, so IT SEEMS TO ME.

Writes Letter from England

No Finer Way to Spend A Summer, Says Churchill

August 4, 1965
154 Bitham Lane, Stretton
Burton-on-Trent,
Staffordshire, England

Dear Editor and people of Cass City,

First of all may I take this opportunity to thank the people of Cass City for what they have done for me. England would still be five thousand miles away to me if certain people back home hadn't taken an interest in me. I can think of no finer way to spend a summer than promoting world peace and understanding by living with a family in another country for two months. As many of the people of Cass City know, thanks to an article in the Cass City Chronicle, I am spending the summer in England as part of the Youth For Understanding Teenage Exchange Program. May I add that I am only a small part of this program. All told there are better than six hundred teenagers (sixteen and seventeen years old) living with families in Europe, South America, and Japan. There is also a sixty-eight voice choir singing in Ireland, England, Holland, and Germany called the Michigan Youth Chorale. About 90 per cent of the exchange students and all of the Chorale are from Michigan. Because of this the most popular state in Europe is not New York, California or Florida; as one would think; but it is Michigan. My own personal feeling is that teenage exchange programs such as Youth For Understanding do more good than exchange programs at any other age level. I believe the reason for this is that teenagers have the energy to go day and night, which is a definite need of anyone who wants to show what the average American is like. No matter where I go the English are always asking me questions. They want to know what life in America is like. Many times I find it very hard to answer their questions. I am lost for words when they ask questions like: Explain American censorship. Why do they wear crash helmets in American football? Explain the American tax system. Why do all American boys have crew cuts? Do you think Nixon would've made a good President? What does the average American think of the Beatles? What does the average American think of Harold Wilson? These questions do not sound very hard to answer but trying to explain our tax system isn't as easy as it sounds.

Actually it is getting so England is a home away from home. To me. No matter where I go the English treat me like royalty. They give me everything but the Queen's Red Carpet. I'm getting to the stage of my visit right now where I want to get home to see my family and friends but I also want to stay so I can see more and learn more. As plans are right now, I will be home on August 27th. I will be leaving the city I am staying in on the 23rd of August. I, plus all the other exchange students in Great Britain, will go to Amsterdam, Holland. We will stay in Amsterdam until the 26th. We will fly to Detroit from Amsterdam at 9:00 p.m. (2:00 p.m. Cass City time) August 26. I am very excited about that week. Not so much because I will be coming home but because I will be seeing Amsterdam.

Now may I tell you a little of my own life in England. I am staying in the city of Burton-upon-Trent (about 50,000 people). The major industry is the brewing of beer. Burton is about 125 miles northwest of London. I am living with the same family all the time I am here. I have an 18-year-old "brother", who came to America two years ago as part of the Youth For Understanding Program. The first three weeks I was here I went to school. May I say right now that the American school system and the English school system are as different as night and day. I can not say which is better because they both have their good and bad points. I have visited most of the major tourist attractions including London, Stratford-on-Avon, York, Bath, Coventry, and Sherwood Forest. I am learning the English custom of drinking tea five or six times a day. The Americans make a lot of jokes about the English drinking tea all the time. Before I came to England I believed they would drink tea once or twice a day. After two or three days here I decided the jokes Americans make are actually true. I am completely honest when I say the English drink tea five or six times a day. I am getting so I like their tea and will probably get home-sick for some good old English tea when I get home.

I would like to thank you all again for sending me to England (I am not sure if you wanted me to have a good summer or just wanted to get rid of me). As the English would say, "cheerio" and I will be seeing you the end of August.

Sincerely yours,
Chuck Churchill

Friendship is a valuable item, and like all valuables, it carries a price tag.

The price tag isn't written out in dollars and cents. People who are interested in what you can give them in material goods disappear just when they are most needed. They may be most friendly, but they are not friends.

The friend in need is not always the best friend either. Very often the do-good'er who comes running when you have difficulty is more interested in having the inside story, in telling the countryside what great people they are for helping poor unfortunate you. He doesn't want you to improve, because he would look bad by comparison. The price tag attached to this friendship is your dignity and self-respect.

The true friend leaves the price tag blank. You pay as much as you are able and the friend does the same for you.

Friends share: both the good and the bad. They enjoy hot-dogs and instant coffee with you, but don't get catty when you can afford filet mignon and strawberry bavarian.

A friend is reliable. You can expect the same from him each time you are together. Closely tied up with reliability is loyalty.

A friend is generous. He gives, not because he is trying to buy you, nor because he feels it is required, but because it means more when it is shared with you.

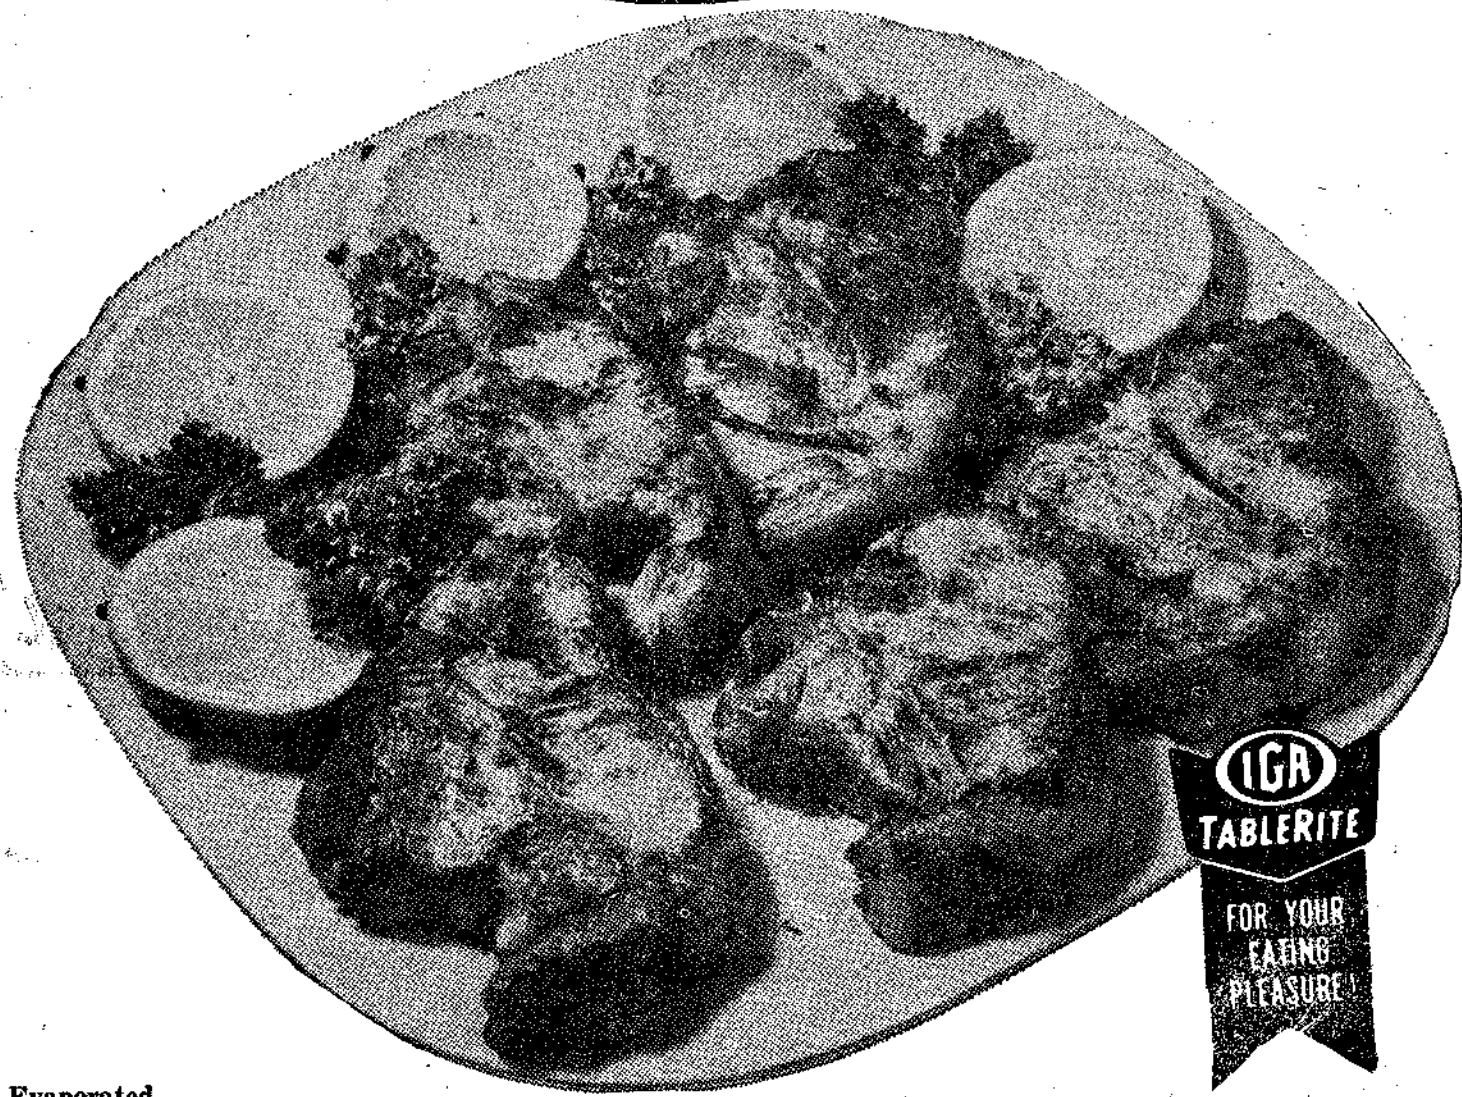

A friend accepts you as you are. He doesn't try to change you. Interestingly enough, you may find yourself changing since you value his opinion, but he would not insist on it. He is far too considerate of your feelings to insist on anything from you.

A friend does not waste your time; he lets you spend time; your hours together are productive or relaxing, but always worthwhile.

Friends cost time and energy, and sometimes money; you gladly pay the price since your return is so great.

Lucky is the woman who is married to a friend.
