MSU College to Help Relieve Doctor Shortage Problem

Doctor in the House
Finding a doctor in a nighttime emergency is difficult, at best, partly because of a shortage of men in this profession.

One attempt to relieve this situation will be made next year when Michigan State University enters the medical education field.

Starting with its first class in a new college of human medicine, the East Lansing institution hopes to provide a means for students who drop out of full-course medical schools before the third year. Later, as the public need grows, it is likely MSU will provide its own four-year program.

Michigan is now served by medical schools at the University of Michigan and Wayne State University. The former is at capacity enrollment and Wayne officials have room for only a small number more with present staff and facilities.

Although there has been some opposition to MSU's effort to establish the first two years in medical training, officials have progressed with plans for more than three years.

The new college will utilize several existing departments at MSU, such as anatomy and physiology; and add a department of medicine to round out the course work necessary for preliminary medical education.

Original plans were aimed at opening the new unit this year, but problems in staffing, building construction and funding pushed it back a year.

Most people in Michigan have been troubled to one degree or another in trying to secure medical care, so there is little disagreement about the need for more doctors.

The location of the training facility has been more of an argument. Now, however, MSU officials have completed arrangements with Sparrow Hospital in Lansing for cooperation in the various clinical training requirements.

While financing the new college may still pose some problems, the national medical school accrediting agency has given MSU enough assurance of recognition to enable university officials to seek available federal funds. They have already received indications of substantial amounts.

No one contends this two-year program will provide all the doctors needed, but there is little doubt that it can improve the basic shortage of fully trained men.

Advertise it in the Chronicle.

BOOK REVIEW

"President '64" 2nd in Series

By the Rev. R. J. Searls

If you are interested in knowing what goes on both behind and in front of the political scene during a Presidential election, THE MAKING OF THE PRESIDENT 1964, by Theodore H. White, is for you! Known for his THE MAKING OF THE PRESIDENT 1960, reporter White now can be counted on to have a new book after every Presidential campaign and election.

The older of the two volumes, (he has written both novels and previous documentaries) was written with the student in college in mind who would expect big words when he read the book. Then, surprise! the book caught the fancy of the people and overnight it became what every author dreams about — a best seller.

White tells the story of the 1964 election in terms of the persons who lived near the center of either the nomination or the election that brought into the political arena Lyndon B. Johnson vs. Barry Goldwater. Almost everyone conceded the election to Johnson, who had been catapulted into the Presidency with the assassination of John Kennedy! He ran his first campaign for the Presidency with several years of experience in the job. Part of that time had been spent completing, as best he could, the programs and dreams of the young President so brutally taken from us. Now, he was running for the first spot on the ticket, as much as possible on his own.

Barry Goldwater, a congressional contemporary of the President's, became the Republican candidate, and tried to keep his party together. In the end, however, Johnson won the race by the largest majority ever to be voted a candidate for the highest office an American can hold. Goldwater is shown as a General (he holds that rank in the Air Force Reserve) carefully marshalling his troops at the Republican National Convention at the Cow Palace, just outside of San Francisco. Rockefeller, Lodge, Scranton and Romney, the pre-primary hopefuls for the Republican nomination, are politely but firmly sidetracked by Goldwater who had coolly planned to be the Republican candidate since being sidetracked himself, four years earlier. (The book's description of the men whose names are listed above is alone worth the price of the book.) The indecision of ex-President Eisenhower and his vice-president, Richard Nixon, (himself an inept candidate for President) bear no small part, White says, in bringing the nomination of Goldwater at a time when there was no lack of Republicans who could head the ticket, possibly taking it to victory. This Barry Goldwater could not do! Americans proved they did not want a conservative for President by voting, not so much for Johnson, as against Goldwater.

Johnson had an also-well-picked group of men to analyze the mood of the people for him—largely carry-overs from Kennedy's successful team of 1960. A lengthy, but, I thought, interesting chapter was given over to the selection of a vice-presidential running mate. Robert Kennedy, the late President's brother, and Robert McNamara, the maverick Secretary of Defense (in state matters, a Republican; in national matters, a Democrat) are just two of the many men who were considered. It is a mark of White's journalistic ability that he can and does create excitement for the reader during the time Johnson was making up his mind, even though we know all the while that Hubert Horatio Humphrey was selected, elected and inaugurated vice-president.

In the chapter, "Freedom Now!," we have been given a summary of the role civil rights played, both in the days of the nominating conventions, and in the election itself.

I wish that space were sufficient to quote at some length from sentences in the book. While this was written with the college youth in mind, the oversize pages turn surprisingly fast if you are interested in the subject matter. With the necessity, in our day, of each citizen becoming interested and alert, books like this are a boon.

Load limits have been established by the Tuscola County Road Commission for two bridges in Tuscola county. A limit of ten tons for the Hurds Corner Road bridge on the Cass River has been set. The bridge over White Creek on the same road now has a load limit of five tons.

Protect the house cleaning you have done by doing a thorough job of cleaning fireplaces, radiators, hot air grills and ducts. Dust and grime accumulated for months will cling to them and sift onto clean floors, walls and furniture unless you do a complete cleaning job, say Michigan State University home management specialists.

KOMMENTS BY KRAFT

Firelight Was Okay for Abe...

By Dave Kraft

Gotta fireplace at your house? Give you much trouble? Thought so. Hmmm? Does mine give me much trouble? Well, let me put it this way. If the house ever catches on fire, I'm going to jump in the fire place because nothing ever burns there.

for heating the whole house. We do have conventional heating. It's just the principle of the thing. You read all this literature about a cozy hearth... reading by the fire side... all that jazz.

Look how far Abraham Lincoln got from reading his books by the fire place. Am I going to have to deny my children their unalienable right of doing their school work on the back of a shovel by fire light just because my stupid fire place won't fire light?

Verily I say unto you, "Nay!" I'm going to buy one of those artificial fire places with a red light bulb. May not help crack the ice in the bucket on a cold day, but just wait until my kid's president... then we'll see.

Joe Weiler and a bunch of his cronies are going out west to hunt antelopes... or should that be antelope? Beautiful animal. We saw a lot of them in eastern Montana and western North Dakota on our vacation.

Anyhow, we were sitting around at the coffee shop the other morning and the question arose as to the proper name for the male antelope. Is it a buck, bull, ram, or drake? (I know, I know!)

Joe recollected as how he didn't care what they called them because he intended to hunt them, not correspond with them.

Still it posed an interesting question. I could look it up, but I'd rather have you tell me. How about it? Does anybody know... besides a male antelope, I mean.

Al Avery asked me if I knew why new houses are so expensive and like a fool I said, "No, why."

"Because," says Al, "they have to dig the basements so deep for those 10-foot tall washing machines."

Don't wait for opportunity to knock—be on the job when the main chance comes along.

Tolerance should be a part of every one's life—not just a matter of conversation.

Add Urea to Corn Silage for Nitrogen

Adding feed grade urea to corn silage when it goes into the silo can save 50 per cent or more on the amount of protein that needs to be added to make a balanced ration at feeding time, said Alfred Ballweg, county extension director.

Ten pounds of urea per ton of silage is a cheap way to add protein.

Urea breaks down into ammonia and carbon dioxide in both the silo and the cow's rumen. The ammonia combines with acids and makes protein, the specialists explained.

From 90 to 100 per cent of the urea nitrogen is recovered in good corn silage.

MSU research studies and field trials by dairymen have proved that the practice pays off in the milk bucket.

Dairymen putting up silage should weigh one or two loads of silage and determine the amount of urea to be added to equal 10 pounds per ton of silage. Urea can be spread on the top of the loads or added mechanically at the blower as silage is put in silo.

SIX-YEAR-OLD SHOULD SLEEP ALONE

Q. Is it harmful for a 6-year-old boy to sleep with his father?

A. In general it is more healthful for a child to sleep alone. Although serious harm would not result from a 6-year-old son sleeping with his father, it would be better for him to have a separate bed or room if the size of the home will permit.

SOMETHING TO CONSIDER

Q. Is it harmful for a person to "put off" going to the bathroom to urinate?

A. Probably not, for males. For females it might definitely be harmful. The reason is that the female urethra (tube leading from the bladder) is short. Unless it is promptly flushed out by urination, opportunity is afforded for bacteria to get up into the bladder and cause infection. This may be less likely to occur when the urge to urinate is not ignored.

Rick Turner, Cass City's plucky guard, was selected by Coach John Bifoss as the Hawks' player of the week.

Eliminate wood damaging insects from your home immediately when discovered, say Michigan State University entomologists. The more serious the damage the harder it is to control the insects and repair the damaged areas. The control measures will depend on the type and extent of the damage present. First identify the problem and then apply the proper insecticide to halt the damage.

Hawks' Rally Ends 2 Feet from Victory

Friday night's game against the Red Raiders of Marlette could be the turning point of Cass City's football season. Coach John Bifoss will be watching closely to find out several important factors.

Foremost among them will be finding out if the Hawks found themselves as a club in the final quarter last Friday against Vassar. Coach Bifoss is hoping that the spurt means that the gridders have finally jelled as a team.

If the final quarter was no fluke, then Cass City could come on and have a respectable season.

The Hawks trailed 21-6 going into the final stanza and looked like a beaten team. But suddenly they came alive and came within just two short feet of pulling the game out of the fire.

Paced by fine passing by Dave Schember and top receiving by Wayne Copeland and Bob Wallace the club moved to the six-yard line from where Jim Walters scored on a six-yard sprint early in the final period.

When the try for point was missed, it still looked like an easy Vassar victory as Cass City trailed, 21-13.

But after taking the kick-off the Vulcans fumbled on their own 30. Cass City was quick to take advantage of the break. Picking up big yardage around the end and off tackle, the Hawks moved briskly to the 11-yard line from where Schember tossed to Copeland for the tally. Now there was just one touchdown between defeat and victory.

The charged up Hawks had no trouble containing Vassar on the next series of downs and then, with five minutes on the clock, started a drive that could have pulled a sure defeat into a win. Behind good blocking, the Hawks rambled on the ground and in the air. They moved quickly to just inside the 11.

Three plays later the team was on the two-foot line with four downs to push over the winning touchdown.

Hawk fans will be talking about the next play for the rest of the season. Schember took the ball and started what looked like a roll out pass-run option play. This particular series had been a big ground gainer all night for Cass City.

But the play backfired and Schember was smeared for a five-yard loss. Cass City was never able to recover.

With fourth and still five to go Schember tried to hit Wallace in the end zone but the Vulcan defender was there to break up the play and the team's golden opportunity for victory went glimmering.

Vassar Dominates

Before the last period, Vassar dominated the game. Vulcan backs galloped through holes in the Cass City line and completed a key pass or two to keep the defense honest.

A big break early in the first quarter sparked Vassar to a marker. An attempted lateral was fumbled and Vassar was given possession in a call hotly contested by many Hawk fans.

With the ball deep in Cass City territory, the Vulcans had little trouble moving in to score.

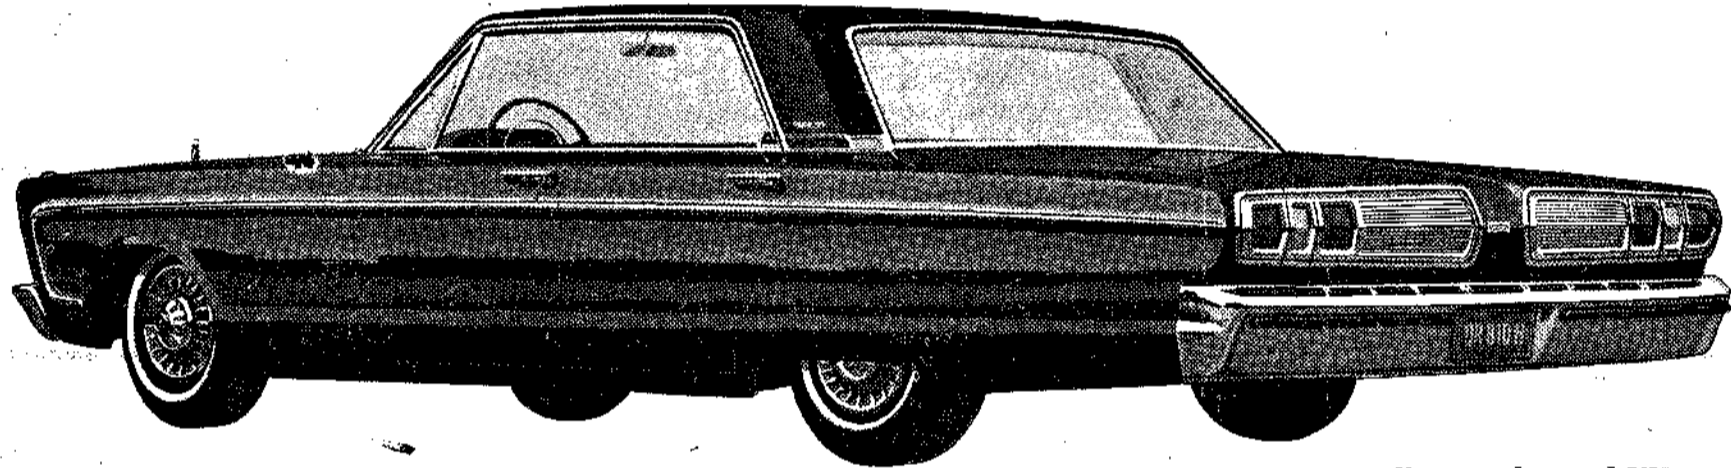

Cass City took Vassar's punt and moved from their own 20 to the Vulcan 15 on the strength of a long pass from Schember to Wallace, but a 15-yard holding penalty stopped the drive.

Vassar came back to score again. Moving smartly on the ground for consistent yardage they rambled to the Hawks' 25. On the next play Gary Pabalis caught the Hawks' secondary flat footed and heaved a 25-yard scoring toss to Gary Opperman.

Tom Main smashed through the center of the Hawk line three times for points after touchdown and in the end his conversions spelled the difference in the game.

EUB Mid-week Prayer and Bible Study Series Slated

The Salem EUB Church mid-week prayer and Bible study hour begins its fall and winter sessions the first Wednesday in October, Oct. 6, with a four-week series entitled "Studies In Protestantism." The topics included are: "Doctrines about God," "Doctrines about Man," "Sacraments and Vows," and "The Church and its Purpose." Consistent prayer and study of the Bible is vitally important for Christian faith and growth," states R. E. Betts, EUB pastor. "The mid-week services, which will meet each Wednesday at 8:00 p.m. at Salem EUB Church throughout the year, are designed to offer this opportunity."

The Salem EUB Church extends a cordial welcome to all to share these services of prayer and study.

Agent's Corner

Barbara Henriksen Working mothers, as housekeepers, fall into three categories: (1) sloppy but clean, (2) neat but dirty, and (3) completely neurotic. There just aren't enough hours in a day for a woman to keep a neat clean house, fulfill her responsibilities to her family, and hold down a full-time job.

To the good mother, the family comes first. This is as it should be. Talks about report cards and homemade cherry pie, a button stitched on at the last minute and time to laugh together have to fit in if the family is to remain close.

If the mother pictures herself as a glamorous career woman, the job may come first. In this case, she should find a woman to take over the mothering of the family.

Whether the job or the family is more important to the mother, they both have to be taken care of. This leaves housekeeping pretty well down the list.

Of course, there are many shortcuts that can be used: buying clothes that don't have to be ironed, using of prepared foods and paper plates, doing away with all unnecessary decorations that collect dust.

It doesn't take a working mother long to learn the three methods of cleaning house. She can move all the furniture and clean in all the corners. She can hit the high spots, with a lick and a promise for the rest. Or she can close the draperies and entertain by candlelight.

The working mother has to realize that she can't keep house like she did before. The family members have to help more. Some duties have to slide.

She will find out that if her house tries to keep it neat and clean, she is clean, it will be cluttered. If it is neat, it will be dirty. And if she will go stark, raving mad.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

The fellers at the country store has final found out what's wrong with the national economy. Ed Doolittle explained it to 'em Saturday night.
 Ed brung along a magazine some feller had sent him with a piece in there marked fer him to read. The name of the magazine was The Atlantic and this piece was wrote by a expert named Truman Moore. The piece was taking the stand that, after everthing in this country was cut and dried, manufactured and sold, hauled and delivered, the farmer was the real backbone of the nation on account of nobody could eat if it wasn't fer the farmer and when folks can't eat that is all she wrote.
 Well, this feller Moore took a example from McAllen, Texas, where a truck farmer averaged $68.85 per acre fer his tomato crop and them same tomatoes brung a net total of $9,660 a acre sold over the counters of stores in Denver. The difference between that $9,660 and $68.85, claimed this writer, was what was wrong with the American economy and was the cause of the dole, give-away programs and the national debt.
 It could be, Mister Editor, that this feller has got a point, but you would know more about these matters than me. But I do know on the other side of the fence they was a heap of so-called farmers that sin't actual contributing nothing to the national food box but that was sharing in the hand-out benefits. Bug Hookum, fer instand, is so lazy it makes him break out in a sweat to whistle a short tune and when he gits to whittling on a piece of soft pine he breaks out in a sweat all over. He don't raise nothing but a few chickens and then his old lady has to gather the eggs. Actual, if the Government keeps insisting on taking over the farm business, they had ought to make Bug sell his chickens and take a job at the sawmill.
 But Clem Webster of the Great Society was of the opinion that sooner or later the Congress would git the farm problem worked out. He claimed the day was coming when the farmer from McAllen would git more fer his tomatoes and the consumer would pay less. Clem said he could recollect onct when old Vice President John Nance Garner said them Congressmen, if they put their mind to it, could "air condition hell."
 I don't know Mister Editor, how they was on the air conditioning business but I recollect when they passed the Stabilization Act a few year ago it took 'em 7 months to stabilize prices and the steel industry come along and unstabilized 'em overnight. I got a hunch the tomato business was going to stay unstabilized a long time.
 Yours truly,
 Uncle Tim
