MAYVILLE VOLUNTEER counselor Robert Weaver administers a dexterity test to an inmate at Tuscola County Jail.

Teacher group to counsel inmates

Led by the president of the Tuscola County Teachers Association, Ronald Laeder of Caro, 12 teachers from the county have registered for volunteer teaching and counseling services for inmates of the Tuscola County Jail.

Commencing into its second month, Laeder said the program was the first of its kind in a rural county, to his knowledge.

Originally suggested by county sheriff Hugh Marr, who obtained the idea from the Genesee County Jail in Flint, Laeder took a group to Flint and investigated the program there, where it had been found to lower the percentage of inmates returning after their release.

Laeder, a youthful, personable speech correctionist of the Special Education Department of the Intermediate District School Board, said the intent of the program was to rehabilitate inmates and provide a common goal for county teachers.

He said the counselors and teachers could not work with them until they have been sentenced, because of guidelines set by attorneys.

Laeder described a wide array of services the group hopes to perform. Practical skills such as filling out a job application, are as important, he said, as basic instruction in teaching them to learn to read and write.

He said reading and writing instruction for Mexican-American inmates was one area of the volunteer program, but that he had hopes for a comprehensive alcohol education program.

"Some of the inmates have as low as a 3rd grade education," he said. Mexican-Americans who grew up as their parents traveled the circular route from Texas to Traverse City from Christmas to August, and never remained in a school long enough to get their books. Some schools, he said, never gave them, any way, because they knew the Mexican-American kids would soon be leaving.

The more educated inmates, he said, have the education but the wrong attitudes. "They feel society is against them," he said. "We want them to know others want to, and can, help."

Materials such as books are being donated by the teachers. He said continued expansion would probably warrant a funding program of some sort, "but we would like to keep it volunteer supported by donations."

Two teachers interviewed on the evening of the interviews, Robert Weaver and Francene Smith of Mayville, have been conducting comprehensive interest, aptitude and intelligence tests. However, of the 4 conducted so far, three of the men have been released.

It hasn't discouraged the teachers doing the tests. Mrs. Smith said the individuals were allowed to take their test scores and results with them so they can use them and show them to employers later on. Laeders said its a myth that jail confinement "helps" or "cures" the sentenced. "It doesn't," he said. They end up back in jail and their kids on Aid to Dependent Children.

He said retired teachers were also starting to volunteer for the program.

One additional idea he had was what he called a "Community Resources Roundtable" whereby community leaders could come in and talk on such topics as adult education, employment potentials, the need for laws.

Laeder praised Sheriff Marr saying he "has shown a lot of initiative" in the entire program.

No ambulance service here after June 30

Harry Little announced this week that after June 30 Little's Funeral Home would no longer offer ambulance service to the community.

Little's will be joining an ever growing list of concerns in rural Michigan who are discontinuing ambulance service.

The reason is the new requirements of a recently adopted State Law that goes into effect July 1. The law lays down stringent equipment requirements and manpower regulations.

While the equipment needed is raising costs, it is the manpower requirement that is chasing concerns from the ambulance business.

I would have to have two men on duty around the clock to comply, Little said this week. Basically, he continued, operating an ambulance in Cass City is a service we offer in conjunction with our business. But it is just economically impossible to operate under the revenues available, he said.

The wave of protest that the new law has invoked has resulted in a public hearing in the Civic Center in Lansing at 1 p.m. Tuesday, May 20, to hear protests.

Persons wishing to comment should contact Dr. R. G. Rice, Director, Michigan Department of Public Health.

Case dismissed

Timothy Andrew Miller of Kingston appealed a charge of driving under the influence Sept. 29 in the village of Caro from Justice to Circuit Court. His hearing was Tuesday before Judge N. Baguley and his conviction of guilty from Justice Court was reversed in Tuscola County Circuit Court. His case was dismissed and his bond cancelled.

School board outlines curriculum cuts

After wrestling with possible reductions in the curriculum for over an hour Monday night, the Cass City School Board agreed to a single proposition asking for four mills for one year for school operation in the June 9 election.

In a previous meeting, the board had toyed with breaking down the total four-mill request into two propositions while listing what each of the voted levies would bring.

But when Supt. Donald Crouse presented sample program reductions, trustees could find no practical way of reducing certain segments of the curriculum and still be fair to all students. The total four-mill reduction program hits all three schools - elementary - intermediate - high school - and is a program that can be managed if the voters again axe the levy request.

The box accompanying this story presents the skeleton outline of the reduction areas. Possibly the three areas where the public will be immediately aware of the cuts are in the areas of self-supporting athletics, reduction of elementary staff by 7 teachers and the reduced transportation.

The reduction of seven teachers means half-day classes nearly half the time for grades one through six.

Instead of singling out one or two grades for the entire year, the board plans to spread the cuts over all the entire elementary school for shorter periods. All of the affected grades will be on half day sessions at one time or another.

Supt. Donald Crouse estimated that grade pupils would be attending half days some 40 per cent of the time on a staggered basis throughout the entire school year.

The intermediate school would be hit by the loss of art, boys' and girls' physical education and the complete elimination of Junior High sports.

To put sports on a self-sustaining basis means that all junior high, freshman and spring sports programs are out the window.

Remaining in the program will be only varsity football and junior varsity and varsity basketball. Athletic Director Robert Stickle said that even those sports wouldn't remain self-sustaining for more than about a year. We can cut costs by not buying new equipment, but in a year or two at best the school would be forced to buy more or quit, he explained.

The proposed savings in transportation means that children will be riding the busses longer.

Tentatively the schedule calls for two instead of three busses at Deford and Evergreen. This means, Crouse explained, that the students will be boarding earlier and getting off later.

The extra bus trips listed for elimination means all school activities except transportation to and from school. Buses will no longer be used for field trips, attending athletic functions or class functions under the plan.

Many members of the board feel that one of the reasons the voters turned down the request for operating millage in the first election is that they failed to believe that the situation is as critical as it is. Several members of the board said that they have heard people say that Caro educators said the same thing and then when the millage didn't pass the school found the money to operate without the cuts promised.

Each member of the board has gone on record that this is not the case in Cass City. They said individually and collectively Monday night in no uncertain terms that if the millage fails, the curriculum cuts as outlined will start with school next fall.

There will be no further votes for extra operating millage this year. The program stands or falls on the June 9 vote, President Horace Bolen said.

CASS CITY, MICHIGAN—THURSDAY, MAY 8, 1969

FROM THE Editor's Corner

Every parent shares a secret dread whenever the kids are out driving . . . a fear that the phone will ring and the voice will say this is the police . . . there's been an accident.

All parents have it, but few relate the fear to their responsibilities.

It would be comforting to be able to say that some good will come of the tragic Elmwood Road crash Sunday. That from the multiple deaths will come a new awareness of the dangers of the road and a resolve by responsible adults to do something about it.

But the truth is that it won't. Already the initial shock has worn off and Cass City and Tuscola county goes merrily on its way setting records for the number of highway deaths in relation to its population.

Possibly only his very closest friends, his parents and other relatives often think about Donald Wernette, the likeable, bright Cass City High School student who was a victim just about a year ago. The first of two members of this year's graduation class to die in an auto accident.

Sure to be among the first to forget the recent crash will be the ones most often involved in accidents caused by high speeds and often by drinking . . . the teenagers and young adults.

There is a tendency to look for the scapegoat . . . to point the finger and say the police are to blame. The high-powered cars should be outlawed . . . the poor visibility of the road should be corrected . . . it was raining. . . the sun was in the driver's eyes.

There is always an excuse, if not a reason.

It was just a year ago this week that the various law enforcement agencies announced a crack down campaign to try and curb deaths in the county.

But hampered by tight budgets and under quota staffs, it was a limited success . . . the police cannot cope alone.

We can no longer shrug off the facts and evade our individual responsibility. It's time to make a point of helping apprehend speeders and driving fools wherever they are and whatever the circumstances.

Perhaps the biggest culprit of the death derby is the affluent times. More youngsters are driving more miles than ever before because they have the money for cars and for gas.

If we're truthful, many of us can look back to youthful escapades in cars where we escaped arrest or worse only through divine providence.

So we tend to sympathize with youth as he takes his fling. After all, we weren't perfect either, were we?

But it isn't a favor at all when the grim statistics reveal the rising death tolls and youth after youth is cut down in the prime of life.

Perhaps the best you could do for them is to remove them from behind the wheel before it's too late and the knock comes to your door.

It's a parent and community problem and perhaps the parents and the community should be starting a concerted effort to solve it.

If we could save just one it would be well worth whatever effort it takes.

Fire, police call problems aired

Interested representatives from several organizations aired problems in communication Tuesday night at the Municipal Building in an informal discussion designed to improve service to the community.

No definite answers were reached, but information gleaned provided guidelines for future action by the village and Elkland Township Board.

Sheriff Hugh Marr kicked off the discussion by saying that his department was in business to offer service to the community.

We want to serve, he continued, but we also want to defend ourselves against charges. He then flatly denied that there was ever a time that it took from "20 minutes to two hours" to answer a call.

Members of the sheriff's department and Cass City Chief Carl Palmateer both conceded that "human error" was possible and that it was possible that a call to the department from a police car might go unlogged at headquarters or that the patrolman would leave his car without signing out, resulting in a communication gap.

Patrolman Bruce Tait said that regardless of this, there would be action on any serious complaint within minutes of the call. We would send a car that we could contact, he explained, and illustrated that it was just recently accomplished in Cass City.

For Cass City and Elkland

Township, the police routine is just half of the problem. The other half is the fire alarm system. Both calls are handled over one direct line to the sheriff's office.

The fire alarm problem has several facets that make solutions more complicated. As outlined Tuesday by the various police officials and Elkland Fire Chief Jerome Root Jr. they are:

- The overload of calls that the sheriff has during the day, with 8 phones and 5 radio frequencies to handle.

- The occasional periods when transmission over the direct fire line is indistinct.

- The ringing of the phones in the sheriff's office regardless of whether the call is handled in Cass City.

- The cost of changing the system.

Root said that he felt the principal time that the phones were indistinct was when the fire was reported through the operator rather than ringing the fire number.

Because of the way the system works the call goes to Saginaw and back to Cass City and then on the direct line to Caro and also activates 15 phones in firemen's homes.

Marr explained that this problem was not new . . . but that it was unique to Cass City. He cited other communities and said that the problem did not occur there.

Albert Gallagher, Elkland township trustee, said that the Telephone Co. in Caro said that it was possible.

As of right now, the responsibility for all fire and police calls from Cass City rests with the sheriff's department in Caro.

It was disclosed that a system could be installed where the whistle could be blown from the municipal building in Cass City and the calls handled there, and by turning a switch the calls could revert back to the sheriff's department. Unless the switch was activated the calls would go only to Cass City.

Village President Lambert Althaver said that the sheriff was now performing a service for which taxpayers paid nothing extra.

He asked for cost estimates for establishing a local system.

Palmeater said that he advocated the local call system to help relieve the overload on the sheriff's department during the day.

Clerk Mrs. Ruth Hoffman said that at times she had trouble contacting the sheriff's department.

Marr said that it would help his department if Chief Palmeater would put in a listed phone number. We get call after call for Palmeater's number, he said, and cannot give it out.

The chief replied that his phone was unlisted to protect his children from annoying calls from drunks in the early morning hours.

M. Kelly voices opposition to funding private schools

Marilyn Jean Kelly, Democrat member of the State Board of Education, addressed the Tuscola MEA Thursday night in Cass City voicing strong objection to parochialism.

Master-of-ceremonies and outgoing president Ron Laeder of Caro said he intended to lead a local movement against parochialism.

About 160 teaching and retired teachers and guests heard the attractive young state board member outline arguments against parochialism including that if public funds went to support private schools it is possible the stature of the public school would decline.

She stressed that when private schools were publicly supported in the Netherlands, the public student population dwindled while the private student population soared, leaving the public schools in a flimsy position.

We each have the choice of where to send our children to school, she said, if the argument of parochial promoters is that public aid is necessary to preserve that choice, then the same argument could be used in asking for public aid for flagging newspapers to preserve freedom of the press. For more meeting rooms to encourage free assembly, and that the public should purchase a soapbox for everybody to guarantee freedom of speech.

She said the most critical argument against publicly financing purchase of services for private schools is the lack of finances. She speculated that about 50 public schools might not open next fall unless new state aid was forthcoming and that the state education budget this year didn't allow enough to keep them from financial disaster.

BY JOHN HAIRE

(And anyone else he can get to help)

I went to school last week end to learn to operate an IBM composer (a glorified typewriter).

What I learned outside of some basic operations of the machine the Chronicle is leasing, is that IBM has all chiefs ... no Indians.

My teacher wasn't an instructor, she is an "Educational Service Representative" and Al Nelson who came in and sold me the lease is not a salesman. ... he's a "word processing specialist".

Regardless of what you call them ... these people are sharp, well trained. Every businessman could learn from the way they treat the customer as king.

The officer manager whipped up and carried my machine out as I was leaving and if I'd been a dozen years younger and available I might have tried to date the teacher.

Rejoice! You aren't going to have any trouble getting tickets to see the Tigers play in 1969.

The school cafeteria has provided many a story over the years and sparked heated discussions at school board meetings. Here's another. I ate the school's goulash the other day when we covered a noon meet at the school.

It was delicious.

How would you like to be the new football coach in Cass City if the next millage vote goes down the drain?

There has been an outcry for teen activities in Cass City for years. Jim Hatch is trying to do something about it with his teen dances.

The first dance wasn't the most and if the next affairs are not better, the effort might well go down the drain.

It's all up to the teens. But regardless of the final decision, give Hatch a big "A" for effort.

Flames damage tractor, home

Two fires were reported during the week, doing extensive damage to a farm tractor and the other, minor damage to the interior of a mobile home near Cass City.

Late Monday afternoon a main from the gas tank of a farm tractor belonging to Warren Kelley, 1 mile southwest of Cass City, broke spilling a tank of gas over the tractor and igniting. The Elkland Township fire department responded.

The rear tires of the tractor were destroyed, electrical wiring was damaged and possible damage was done to the tractor's hydraulic pumps.

Kelley reported Wednesday morning an insurance adjuster had not yet estimated damages.

Late Saturday afternoon, a gas stove at the mobile home of Robert Tuckey ignited, damaging the interior area of the home near the stove and doing smoke damage.

The Elkland Township Fire Department responded but was mis-directed to the Tuckey Block Co. They were radioed to return to the city and drive west to the Robert Tuckey home.

The Tuckeys and neighbors had removed a portion of their belongings by the time the fire department arrived and the gas tanks had been shut off. The fire was extinguished by the time the fire truck arrived.

Pondering renewal

Owen-Gage school district superintendent Allen C. Fennell reports his school board may be requesting district voters to renew the three mill levy which has expired this year.

He cautioned that the exact millage or a time for a vote has not yet been determined by the board.

Fennell said the area property tax protest appeared to be hindering area millages. However he felt the district's recent vote to keep the district intact expressed a feeling of solidarity and public backing in preserving the welfare of the school.

He said the board has been expressing hopes of adding speech and art to the high school curriculum in the next year.

He projected the school budget this year would be "in the black" and said the board hoped to operate likewise the next year.

The district has $21,000 assessed valuation behind each student and Fennell said valuation increases in the district would up the per student valuation, but that the school State-aid formula would have a corresponding decrease per student.

Behind the Counter

Tranquilizers—

Tranquilizers have become one of the most widely accepted of the newer drugs, especially those used for non-psychotic patients who experience occasional anxiety.

Whether or not a person receives these drugs is decided by his physician. But while tranquilizers are prescription drugs, the doctor has no control over the number of pills that a patient takes at any one time. If he ignores the doctor's orders, the patient may become "intoxicated"—drowsy, confused and irritable. He has impaired judgment and movement, and has difficulty in thinking clearly. He is more apt to get into a fight, or to be involved in an automobile accident.

Tranquilizers have proven to be too valuable for them to be abandoned because of occasional abuse. They are widely accepted as safe, effective and non-addictive, when taken in small doses. The "major tranquilizers" have been helpful in treating mental illness. Others, who are not ill enough to be put in an institution, can function effectively with "minor tranquilizers."

It is the patient's responsibility not to misuse this (or any other) prescription drug. He should consult his doctor if he intends to drive, drink alcoholic beverages or take other drugs while taking tranquilizers. And he should not attempt to refill the prescription without his doctor's instructions.

Junior High bright spot at school

Cass City's Junior High teams continue to provide the only ray of hope in a gloomy sports picture at the high school.

Providing money is available to continue the program, today's little Hawks hold the most promise of any group at the school in several years.

Undefeated in two meets, the Hawks won both by convincing margins. In a triangular meet Monday Cass City raced to a lopsided victory, capturing eight firsts, eight seconds, six thirds and seven fourths for 82 1/2 points.

Sandusky was a distant second with 27 1/2 points while the Lakers followed closely with 27 points.

Lopptien of the Lakers was the outstanding individual performer at the meet scoring first in the 60-yard dash, 100-yard dash and the high jump. In the high jump he leaped 5 feet, 2 inches, an outstanding performance for a junior high student.

Cass City won both relay events. Salas won the 75-yard dash in :9.05 and Strickland won the 440-yard dash in 1:2.85.

Ross picked up the win in the 100-yard low hurdles in :13.5 and Turner was victorious in the 220 with a time of :27.95.

In the first Junior High meet, the Hawks scored a 69-57 decision. They won six firsts in the meet but were weak in the field events where they picked up just 12 points.

Cars demolished; victims recover

Danny Frederick Heintz of Unionville lost control and rolled into the ditch on Ringle Road 1/2 mile north of Gotham Road April 30. His passenger, Alex L. Alegria of Akron, received visible injuries and bruises. They were treated at Hills and Dales and then released.

Heintz was ticketed for failure to stop in an assured clear distance. Deputy Sheriff Richard Hunt investigated the accident.

Zona Mae Hornback of Cass City received visible signs of injury when Saturday, May 3, she reportedly hit the right shoulder on M-81 1/4 mile west of Spence Road and then swerved left into the path of an auto driven by Charles Franklin Mitchell of Birch Run, according to deputies.

Mitchell and his passenger, Charles A. Mitchell, also of Birch Run, were both injured. Z.M. Hornback reported to investigating deputy Earl Mathlin Jr. that she "slept very little last night."

Z.M. Hornback was admitted to Hills and Dales with shock and knee injuries. She was reported in "good condition" Wednesday morning by hospital officials.

The Mitchells were treated at the hospital and released.

At Bach, three persons suffered cuts and bruises in the collision Saturday night of automobiles driven by James E. Brandenburg of Sebawaing, and Frederick O. Polley of Gagetown. They collided on South Bay Port Road, near McAlpin Road, one mile north of Bach.

Injured were Mr. Polley and his two brothers, Albert, 44, of Hemlock, Mich., and Clemence, 51, Birch Run.

Deputy sheriff Brent Woodward said both cars were going south and Polley was attempting a left turn.

At Caseville, Lowell T. Fibranz, Owendale, suffered cuts and bruises Sunday afternoon when his car left Champagne Road, one half mile south of M-25 in Lake Township and overturned.

Deputy sheriff Larry Ringvick charged Fibranz with careless driving.

Hawks split 2 Thumb "B" tilts

Cass City split a pair of Thumb B Conference baseball games, winning a 5-6 nod over Marlette with a two-run rally in the last inning and losing to Vassar 8-1.

It looked for awhile as if Cass City were going to have an easy game against the Red Raiders. The Hawks charged out in the first inning and scored four times.

Key blow in the rally was a home run by Smentek after a pair of walks and a single by Kolb.

But that was the last time Cass City was able to score until the last inning. Meanwhile Marlette kept pecking away with three runs in the second and single counters in the fifth and sixth to set the stage for the winning rally.

Rob Alexander started the rally with a double and rode home on Hopper's triple. Hopper scored the winning run on a fielder's choice off the bat of Bifoss.

Alexander went the distance for Cass City, whiffing nine and walking two while allowing eight hits. Kolb, Wencley, Alexander, Hopper and Smentek each garnered two hits in the victory.

Nobody fattened their batting averages against the Vulcans. The team was limited to just four hits while Hopper was combed for eight safeties.

The game was decided in the second inning when Vassar romped home with six runs and after this it was just a matter of how much the margin was going to be.

The Hawks scored in the fourth when Alexander walked, Hopper doubled and Kolb hit a sacrifice fly.

The line scores:
M 030 011 0 5 8 2
CC 400 000 2 6 12 2
V 060 110 x 8 8 1
CC 000 100 0 1 4 2

McCormick licensed to build homes

John V. McCormick of Cass City announced this week that he has been granted a license from the State of Michigan as a home builder.

McCormick said that he qualified for the license under the state's "grandfather" clause because he built 17 new homes and one commercial building in Cass City between 1957 and 1965.

Hawk thinclads need extra work

Coach Robert Watson promised a week of intensive work for Cass City thin-clads following what he described as a poor team effort at the Chip relays Friday and in a triangular meet April 30.

Typical of the desire of the boys this year, Watson said, was a boy I caught this week smoking right behind the school and was forced to kick off the squad.

At Mt. Pleasant, Cass City was not able to notch any points. They finished last in the meet with Caro and Sandusky.

The results were: Caro, 56 points; Sandusky, 52 points, Cass City, 41 points.

Cass City placed first in four events. Jim Selby won the mile in 4:50.5. Tom Guinther annexed the 120-yard high hurdles in :17.25 and the mile relay team won in 3:48.1. Team members were McLeish, Craig Guernsey, Wentworth and Selby. Scott Guernsey won the long jump with a leap of 18 feet, 7 inches. Oddly enough, there were no double winners at the meet.

Gov. Milliken still waiting for governor's mansion

"MARVELOUS MANSION"

That marvelous mansion on the banks of the Grand River in Lansing remains unoccupied by Gov. William G. Milliken because the motorized drapes, antique chairs and hideaway bar inside are proving a bit too rich for political philanthropists.

Milliken and his wife Helen refuse to move from their two-bedroom apartment in East Lansing to the posh "Governor's Residence" until the $250,000 fund drive to purchase furnishings is successful.

Reportedly, the campaign, headed by a committee of former governors, is $100,000 short. Plans to obtain $25,000 pledges from select industrialists have been scrapped.

"The delay is only temporary," assured Lockwood. "We'll get the money by the end of May, and the Governor can move in then."

The goal should be met soon, said Senate Majority Leader Emil Lockwood, R-St. Louis, after foundations and other organizations interested in contributing hold their monthly meetings.

The Millikens and their family cat have been on standby for two months now. Initially the delay was attributed to confusion over deed restrictions, but that was cleared up by the Attorney General March 18.

The fund-raising snag has caused the Governor minor embarrassment. For the past month he has been telling his weekly news conference he expected to move "any day now."

The mansion, valued at $500,000, was donated to the state by Lansing trucking executive Howard Sober. But the gift included a provision the state would pay for the furnishings, many of them priceless antiques.

If the Millikens ever move in, they won't need to lift a finger. The home is loaded with electronic gadgets such as motor-driven drapes and a bar that pops from a wall at the push of a button.

There are 13 rooms, servants' quarters, five bathrooms and a four-car garage. Custom-made sofas flank the marble fireplace in a massive sunken living room.

BIG PRIZE

Next year's state Supreme Court elections will determine if the Democrats or Republicans benefit from Legislative redistricting in 1971.

That's the prediction of Justice Eugene F. Black, who is not up for re-election.

Presently the court is comprised of four Democrats and three Republicans, though members are technically elected on a nonpartisan basis. The terms of two GOP members expire in 1971.

Black predicted the court will ultimately redistrict the legislature because of a deadlock within the apportionment commission following the 1970 federal population census.

"We are apt to see a partisan-divided Supreme Court deciding in 1971 whether the Legislature shall be elected for the next 10 years according to a strictly one-sided Democratic plan, or a strictly one-sided Republican plan of legislative apportionment," Black said.

The Justice proposed the Legislature change procedures for nominating court candidates at party conventions, and make the selection process purely nonpartisan.

As an alternative, he suggested the parties nominate candidates "willing to commit themselves to an open presentation" of their views on criminal justice and other key issues.

"Michigan needs such a Supreme Court contest," Black said. "We then could have a campaign turning upon a really genuine as well as publicly critical issue-- not one of those fake issues like last year when each candidate went about the state saying only: 'Don't you like me better than the other candidate?'"

MSU recommends new herbicides
New herbicides and herbicide combinations are being recommended for 1969 by the Michigan State University crop science department.

Alfred Ballweg, County Extension Director, reports that the new recommendations apply only to corn, soybeans and alfalfa.

Corn -- For annual grass and nutsedge control in corn the new recommendation is butylate (Sutan) at four pounds per acre of active ingredient applied preplant. This material must be incorporated or mixed into the soil immediately following application.

For control of annual broad-leaved weeds, follow with a post-emergence application of 2,4-D amine at one-half pound per acre.

A new herbicide combination recommended for control of both annual grasses and annual broadleaved weeds in corn is atrazine (Atrazine 80W) at one pound of active ingredient per acre, plus butylate (Sutan) at three pounds of active ingredient per acre.

Ballweg says this combination should be applied preplant and incorporated immediately after application. For nutsedge control, increase the rate of Sutan in this combination to four pounds per acre.

Soybeans -- For weed control in soybeans, a new combination is Amiben at two pounds of active ingredient per acre plus linuron (Lorox) at one pound of active ingredient per acre with pre-emergence application.

According to the agent, there is less hazard to the soybean crop on sandy and sandy loam soils with this combination than with Lorox alone. The combination also gives more effective weed control than Amiben alone under conditions where only small amounts of rainfall occur after application.

On sandy and sandy loam soils low in organic matter, the rate of Lorox should be reduced to three-fourths of a pound per acre.

These and other recommendations are given in the 1969 revision of the Extension Bulletin "Weed Control in Field Crops," available at the Tuscola County Cooperative Extension Service Office.

Petition to halt pay-TV available Cass Theatre

The national campaign to halt pay-TV has enlisted the support of Dick Hendrick of the Cass Theatre.

Hendrick is availing a petition in the theatre lobby for those who wish to sign in an effort of the national group to attain 45,000 signatures from the Thumb area.

Hendrick explained that private companies will be authorized to operate pay-TV beginning June 12 unless a national petition movement can forestall it.

The Chronicle interviewed an FCC official in Washington via telephone who requested his name be withheld because he wasn't the official public information source.

He said that current films would be made directly available to the viewing public on their home set.

He said the intent of the act is to supplement, and not substitute current TV programming. He said a ruling in the act prevented viewers from being charged for TV programs they are now seeing for free, including such programs as the World Series.

He said the ruling was phrased to the effect that, "A program which has been shown on a regular basis for the last two years cannot be placed on a pay-TV channel."

He said whether or not a community could get a pay-TV channel depended upon whether or not a coverage-area station, or a cable TV channel optioned to program pay-TV.

He said no station or cable TV channel could program pay-TV unless there were 4 coverage-area stations, and, or cable TV channels already in the area providing regular TV programming.

Many Cass City viewers can now receive WJEM Channel 5, WJRT channel 12, WKXN channel 25, and an educational channel from Delta College, though reception varies with individual sets.

The Washington official interviewed said systems of payment vary including a monthly payment and also an "unscrambler" device on the set, which, when turned on, makes a tape recording of when the switch has been turned on.

He said a Hartford, Conn., experiment has operated from 1962 to January of this year and said 80 to 85% of the programs were films currently being shown only in theatres.

The act, which authorizes licensed TV stations to program pay-TV after June 12 of this year, has been authorized by Congress. A national petition movement to amend the act is underway.

Milton H. London, Michigan President of the National Association of Theatre Owners, told the Chronicle the economic power of major television stations that would be using pay-TV would deprive commercial TV of TV personalities and entertainment staff required to produce regular TV programming, except for only mediocre programs.

He charged the ruling of only 1 pay-TV where there are four regular TV stations operating would not hold up and that a ruling that easily made could be easily changed.

"It isn't the way it starts out, it's the way it ends up," he said. He added that pay-TV would charge what the public would bear and that the public won't have the choice to stop pay-TV later.

Duffy stands mute in district court

Bad Axe State Police arrested Gerald R. Duffy of Caseville Tuesday when he told police officials he shot a .45 caliber revolver from his car following an accident in which he collided with Donald R. Hoffman of Owendale Sunday a.m. on Elkton Road, one and one-half miles north of Elkton.

Charged with concealing a weapon, he was released on $1,500 bond in Huron County District Court Tuesday when he stood mute before Judge John Schubel.

Hoffman and his passenger, Paul Hunter of Gagetown, reported to State Police that a shot was fired from the other car as they walked towards it following the mishap.

Hoffman said someone shouted for them to go back to their car, which they did.

They said another shot was then fired.

Letter to Editor

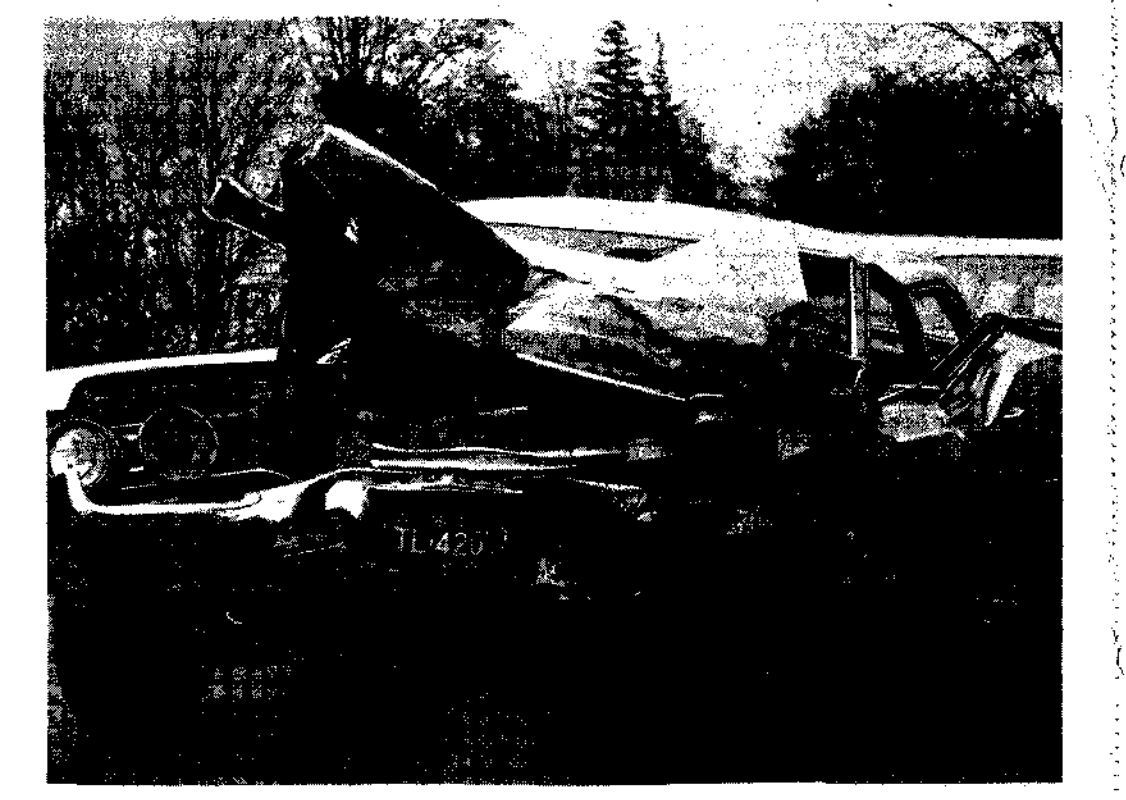

May 2, 1969

Mr. Editor,
Dear Mr. Haire,

We have many fine young men from this area who are now serving in the service of their country. They have given up much to go as do all men in every war who are called to serve. We can be very proud of them because they have obeyed the call to serve in a difficult war when others have set bad examples by demonstrations of all kinds. Many of these men are school mates and have known each other for a long time. Most all get the Chronicle from home, either from the family or their own subscription. I know they all look for news of the men from this area who are in the service.

I think it would show them their home town cares about them if in the May 28th issue of the Chronicle you had a section set aside for pictures and addresses of the men of this area who are currently now serving in the Armed Forces. I know when they would get the Chronicle from home they would all be pleased. This would be a nice way to show we care. Sincerely hoping this can be done.

Respectfully,
Mrs. Frank Guilds

Tax group calls for economies

The Tuscola County Taxpayer's Association in a news release this week calls for the abolishment of the property tax as a means of financing local schools and that the financial gap be filled by economizing in local and state government.

Calling for state support of public schools, the group advocates that 3 instead of 6 state representatives and 1 instead of 2 members be taken from each Congressional District.

It calls for an annual legislative session of only 90 legislative days, except on call of the governor. "Salaries and expenses of the legislators will be cut accordingly."

Defining the groups as "Voice of the People - Michigan", the group "requests that the State government shall also provide monies of the people for the operation of all public schools."

The release continues, "Cutting the law-maker population in half would probably mean at least a savings of $3,000,000 in only the salaries of the law-makers and their secretaries. A new state capitol building would also not be needed -- a savings of quite a few millions."

The group calls for a "Blue Ribbon Commission" including members of the taxpayer group, "to show how and where economy cuts can and should be made" if "our elected servants feel that it would be difficult to carry out these wishes of the 'Voice of the People'."

Tuesday Mr. Bixler, a representative from International Telephone and Telegraph, visited C.C.H.S. to speak with interested students about careers in the field of electronics.

Homerooms were held Wednesday morning to allow students to vote for Honor Society nominees and to complete their personal activity records, forms which are used to record a student's extra-curricular activities throughout his high school years.

Wednesday the senior council met with Mr. Holmberg to settle some matters relative to upcoming senior activities. The council scheduled swingout for Tuesday, May 27, at 9:30 a.m. and baccalaureate rehearsal for later in the day on the 27th.

After winning their opening game, Cass City's Junior Varsity baseball team dropped two straight. Wednesday the Red Hawks traveled to Mayville and faced a tough lefthanded pitcher, Osoyski, who allowed only two hits and one run, while Mayville chalked up nine runs on six hits against Cass City. Louis Salas was pitching for Cass City.

After their first loss of the season, the JV's were ready to tie into the Sebewaing Club, but it took Cass City eight errors and six runs behind, to finally settle down and play ball. Although Fred Harbec struck out twelve Indians and allowed only five hits, Cass City's JV lost 10-7.

The JV's record is 1-3, but conference-wise is 1-0. Coach Woody feels his team profited greatly from the last two games in that the guys now realize that they must be sharp in the field and keep a cool head while at the plate. He also feels that his team is over the "jitters" and are ready to play ball from the first inning of any game.

CLUB NEWS

The Future Homemakers of America had a meeting after school Tuesday. The club planned a picnic for its final meeting of the year, which will be held in May, and Yvonne Erla, Diane Rabideau, Carmen Danjou, and Geraldina Toro reported on their trip to the State FFA conference.

The C. C. H. S. golf club had a good turn-out for its outing Saturday at the Vassar Country Club. Eight of the club's fifteen members, including three girls, made the trip.

The guys played 18 holes, but due to other obligations in the afternoon, the girls golfed only nine. Those who went on the trip were: Jill Auten, Mary Jane Croft, Cindy Marshall, Jude Patnaude, Tony Davis, Tim Karr, Rob Alexander, and Mr. Tom Woody, the club's sponsor.

The club wants to announce their school-wide tournament, which is slated for Sunday, May 25. Club members are now making arrangements to have it played at Sherwood Forest Country Club in Gagetown.

The G.A.A. had a softball practice session Thursday evening at the park. Their scheduled swimming trip for May 3 was cancelled because of lack of interest.

The French Club had a meeting after school last Tuesday. The members decided to hold a supper in latter May for their final meeting of the year. Each member is going to prepare a French dish for the dinner, which is to be held at Jean Daley's home.

TID BITS

Behind the scenes at every school there is always a group of people that work hard to keep it running efficiently.

One such group of hard workers at C.C.H.S. that gets little credit is the cafeteria crew: five cooks and 22 student helpers.

The cooks -- Mrs. Mona Phillips, head, Mrs. Ann Ellis, Mrs. Dean Toner, and Mrs. Basil Bigham rise early every school day to start preparing the food at 6:00 a.m. At approximately 8:00 they start packing lunches which Mrs. Ken Churchill picks up at 8:30 to deliver to Evergreen and Deford schools. Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Toner are in charge of taking the food to the elementary cafeteria, which serves both Intermediate and Elementary students.

The student helpers serve food, wash dishes, clear the tables and do other necessary bits of work for sixty cents a day plus their lunch. Those who assist in the high school are: Susan and Shelia Hartwick, Rosemary Bassett, Linda Dillon, Gwen Billis, Ruth Rayl, Sharon Crawford, Randy Kozan, Kaye Smith, LouAnn Kolb, Jill Johnson and Pat Bean.

Five high school students: Steve Hosner, Judy Snear, Pam Clara, Cheryl Nicol and Cathy Field, and five Intermediate students: John Parker, Becky Hollick, Karen Ashmore, Crystal Baker, and Carl Russell, work in the elementary school's cafeteria.

In charge of the entire cafeteria system is Mrs. Richard Hampshire. . . needless to say she has a BIG job.

Friday, May 9, the Twirp Week Carnival is to be held at C.C.H.S.

Among the booths at the carnival will be: a cake walk, a dunking booth, bash the nash, dart throw, ring toss, basketball throw, spook house, marriage booth and various refreshment stands.

C.C.H.S. FFA's dairy judging team won a gold award in its division. Members of the team were Bob DeLong, Randy Hampshire and Lee Deering. Congratulations, boys!

Last Monday the elementary schools didn't hold classes due to the parent - teachers conferences that were taking place. It's probably a good thing that there is no such thing as parent-teacher conferences in high school!

Deford Elementary

BY: Rosemary Novak

The students at Deford raised $67.00 in a seed sale, which was recently held. The money will be used to purchase a set of softball bases, a new tetherball and pole, and some seesaws. The extra money will be used to buy prizes and treats for the Track Field day in June.

The past few weeks have been busy ones for the third grade room. The class has completed their "Peanuts for Safety" cartoon series. The cartoon, "Don't Play With Fire," by Alan Pratt, Sandra Cori, Linda Alcorn, Vicki Wordan, Peggy Frederick, and Jerry Woodruff was voted the best cartoon by the class.

In Social Sciences the class has been learning the hows and whys of newspaper business. Last Thursday morning the class visited the Tuscola County Advertiser, where they were treated to a very interesting tour by the Advertiser's staff and management. The class learned how important a good newspaper is and can be to a growing area.

Mrs. B. Bigham, Mrs. A. Ellis, Mrs. K. Churchill, Mrs. M. Phillips and Mrs. D. Toner, cooks.

A spelling bee was held for the third, fourth, and fifth graders last Thursday afternoon. First place went to Rosemary Novak, while Lisa Zimba won second.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

The fellers at the country store was general agreed Saturday night that this country is being run by computers and paid for by credit cards. Ed Doolittle reported he had saw where a "backwards area" now is anyplace where cash money still is being used.

Ed, that is a Republican even when the Republicans are trying to run the Government, set the pace for the session with a short report on Mr. Nixon. Here it is May, allowed Ed, and the country is still in business. From the way the Democrats carried on last fall, that's a lot more than was expected. Furthermore, Ed said he had saw where the Nixon Administration is seeing a budget surplus, and he didn't think the Democrats left enuff money in Washington to mail a letter.

Looking ahead, Ed said he sees a chanct the Republicans can keep the country going without warfare or welfare. He said the first thing is, folks has got to realize a Government can't give more services than they got money, no more than a rancher can feed more horses than he's got oats.

Clem Webster brung in a report on health and surplus. He said first off that he had saw where San Diego is making a swimming pool out of sewer water and that was a sign man can do a better job keeping this world clean. If we can get our sewer water fit to swim in again, allowed Clem, we ought to be able to git our air fit to breathe again.

This Public Health Service report says flies git so used to DDT they can take a load equal to 14 pounds for a average person and keep right on going. If flies can learn to like DDT, said Clem, maybe people can grow eyes and lungs that thrive on dirt and chemics in the air and water.

Clem is a fairly strong believer in Government services. Per instant, he told the fellers the way to clean up all the junk yards in this country was Government price support for cars. If everybody else can git the Government to buy their left-overs, the least the Government can do is buy all the new cars and store 'em in warehouses. That way folks would have to keep driving their cars and use the junk for parts. Or you could make new cars out of this glass that melts when it is broke. That way, when they was a wreck, the cars would clean up their own mess.

Anyhow, Mister Editor, I see they is a growing market for second-hand computers. After that computer in Georgia lowered taxes $20 million instead of raising 'em $15 million, I reckon a future run by computers ain't going to be all bad.

Yours truly,
Uncle Tim

Tax protestors prodded for detail

By Richard Haines

The anti-school overtones of the tax protestor's group is becoming ruinous and self-destructive to the group's well-being and purposes.

Presently, Tuscola County townships are exceedingly low-service townships. But between now and the next 30 years, they will become part of the Great Lakes Megalopolis and the financial needs for water and sewer trunk lines and improved transportation systems will be drastic.

However, financial needs for schools will be much more so.

And the means for financing those schools must be equitable.

It is the responsibility of the tax-protest group to analytically and statistically document present inequities, and this they have not yet done.

I had an uncle in Southfield who used to harp about property taxes on a 10 acre parcel. He bought it about twenty years ago for a couple thousand, and sold it recently for over $100,000.

Many poverty-stricken Tuscola farmers could do the same right now without batting an eyelash.

The present "inequities" are the retiree and the low income farmer with large property holdings who are forced to borrow to pay their taxes. Whether or not this is inequitable remains to be proven.

If the cost of money (indebtedness) and price parity are unfavorable, they have failed to document a persuasive case. But so far, Dr. Karpovich has spent little effort documenting the actual plight of farmers.

And to my knowledge, the group has also failed to sit down and work out a clear set of objectives in conjunction with legislators.

In some States, and in the proposed House Bill 2533, property holders can defer taxes until the land is sold. If this bill were implemented, retirees and ex-farmers with large property holdings could defer that $1,500 annual tax bill and pay it off when they sell out in 1980.

Another proposal, used presently in Maryland and Connecticut, assesses farm properties for their worth strictly on the earning capacity of the land as farmland. Objections have been raised, however, because developers have placed haphazard farm operations on the properties simply to disguise the true intent of the developer.

Shifting the school-cost burden to the income tax won't be easy, as the tax-protestor group is learning. Some rural areas are bitterly opposed to an income tax for school financing.

The tax-protestors need to do two things:

First, develop a more responsible policy towards schools and millage votes until tax reform is implemented by the legislature.

Second, document and statistically analyze the inequities of the present property tax. Because until they do these two things, they won't get to second base.

Pfc. Philip J. Nichols, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harmond Nichols of Decker, has been assigned to a new unit, where he serves as a rifleman.

PFC. PHILIP J. NICHOLS

After a week of intensive instruction in the 9th Infantry Division's Reliable Academy, Nichols has joined the "Hard Core Recondo's" of the 4th Battalion, 39th Infantry. Presently based in Dong Tam deep in the Mekong Delta, the 4th Battalion, 39th Infantry, has compiled a brilliant combat record since entering the Vietnam conflict in 1966. As part of the 9th Infantry Division's 1st Brigade, the 4th Battalion, 39th Infantry has helped earn two Armed Forces Crosses of Gallantry for the Brigade's defense of the Mekong Ricebowl during major Communist offensives.

Nichols graduated from Cass City High School in 1967 and entered the Army Oct. 31, 1968. He completed basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., Jan. 18 and was stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash., before arriving in Vietnam April 10.

He was formerly employed at Saginaw Steering Gear.

Agent's Corner

Parents often recognize individual differences among their children, but fail to see the importance of sex differences between them.

Boys and girls can't be treated or disciplined the same way. For one thing they mature at different rates. Both have different physical growth patterns in relation to sleeping time, diet, and physical activities. In general, girls mature physically much faster than boys.

Girls are also ready to accept social activities sooner than their brothers are. They tend to be much more sensitive to their social image and participate earlier than boys. This may cause some difficulties in mixed groups of the same age.

Parents need to keep these differences in mind when disciplining their sons and daughters. In fact, discipline appears to affect boys and girls differently. Often girls tend to be over-controlled and boys under-controlled. To some degree our culture is responsible for this.

In our cultural expectations, boys are to be masculine: play with masculine toys, such as trucks, cars, and trains; wear manly-looking cuts of hair and clothing; and assume responsibility early. Our culture says girls are to be feminine: play with baby dolls; wear dresses; enjoy the various housekeeping activities including sewing, cooking and dusting; and be dependent on their brothers, fathers and eventually husbands.

Too often parents are interpreting these cultural expectations without realizing it. And in the process they may affect their relationships with their sons and daughters by overlooking the physical and social sex differences of the two at similar ages. Before they discipline, parents must be aware of what each son and daughter is capable of doing at a certain age.

Test soil for zinc needs

By Don Kebler

When I take a soil test and make a fertilizer recommendation for beans and corn, the question of zinc needs arises. To make a decision I first look at the soil texture and if the texture is silt or clay loam and even sandy loam over clay, I then look at the soil alkalinity. If the soil alkalinity or p-H is 7.2 or above, there is a better chance that zinc may be needed.

I next examine the phosphorus test and if it is high then there is a real good possibility of zinc deficiency.

As far as the usual soil test is concerned, this is as far as I can go without a specific zinc test which is available. So without any further information I would recommend the use of zinc at a minimum rate of three (3) pounds of actual zinc per acre.

To be more absolutely sure in supplying the needed zinc to any one field I need the help of the farm operator. He can help by more closely examining his corn and beans for abnormalities and diagnosing the problem.

If zinc has been a problem on one or both of these crops on a particular field in the past, we can specifically recommend the use of zinc. Maybe zinc has been used on this problem field but, the amount previously used has been too little and an increase in rate may eliminate the problem. At this stage of a zinc problem, a soil test for zinc is certainly recommended. This test is available at the Michigan State University soils laboratory.

Assuming these techniques have found the level of needed zinc, what form of zinc do we use? Generally, we say either the sulfate or the oxide will meet the needs. The sulfate form of zinc is more water soluble than the oxide but, in the rate range recommended either form will generally supply the plants seasonal. So it isn't the form of zinc that is most important, it is whether we apply this trace element to the needs or not. In case of question the usual recommended rate is 3 to 4 pounds of elemental zinc per acre, then from here on greater or less rates observations direct.

To go into another subject, here are a couple of herbicide developments, one new the other not. There have been questions on the mixture of Eptam and Treflan for weed control of beans. Our tests show Treflan at 3/4 pound active ingredient per acre recommended rate will not control ragweed, smartweed and mustard. Eptam will at 3 pounds active ingredient per acre. The spray mixture of these two contains less active ingredients of each than the recommended rates of each when applied alone. When Eptam is applied at a less than the recommended rate above not even the weeds not controlled by Treflan will be controlled. From these M.S.U. experiments this is why they recommend Eptam and Treflan be applied one or the other, but not in a mixture and, at the recommended rates.

The other herbicide just cleared for the weeds in corn and soybeans is called Lasso. This herbicide is cleared as a pre-emergence control on soybeans and on corn used for grain, forage and silage. It gives a very effective control of annual grasses. Some control on annual broadleaf weeds as pigweed and lamb's quarter can occur. The rate of application of Lasso is 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 pounds per acre with the higher rates being used on silt and clay loam soils. There is no carry over problem on subsequent crops.

BATTLE BEGINS

With deliberations four months old, Michigan's Legislature finished drawing battle lines for lawmaking struggles at the 1969 session.

And if veteran observers of the legislative scene can be believed, it'll be quite a war before it is over.

Conflicts so basic and so numerous are involved in the 2,937 bills poured into the hopper that leaders have abandoned plans for a mid-summer final adjournment.

Fourteen weeks of moderate and somewhat sedate proceedings ended abruptly when an avalanche of 800 bills hit the legislative mill. They affect every segment of the Michigan economy.

Not only did the inpouring set a legislative record for bill offerings, but the measures contained seeds of some of the most bitter battles likely this session.

and those submitted earlier this session have emerged such fundamental conflicts as these:

Labor vs. management -- Shall the state minimum wage go from $1.25 to $1.50, $1.60 or $2 per hour? Should a three-year limit be imposed on the filing of job-connected injury claims under the workmen's compensation act? Should collective bargaining powers extend to migrant farm workers?

Public employee strikes -- Shall police and firemen be subject to binding arbitration? What about school teachers? Should they go unpunished under laws prohibiting employee work stoppages?

Parochialism -- Shall Michigan's 1,000 parochial schools receive state tax funds for teaching nonreligious subjects such as reading, writing and arithmetic?

Public Schools -- Shall their financing structure be shifted from major emphasis on local property taxes to state and local income taxes? What level of additional tax aid can the state afford? Should giant districts such as those in Detroit, Flint, Grand Rapids and other urban centers be decentralized?

Higher education -- Shall the medical schools at Michigan State, Michigan and Wayne State universities be expanded together or one at a time? What can be done about the $200 million tax fund increase sought by the other eight state-supported colleges and universities?

Water pollution and recreation -- Should the Legislature, State Water Resources Commission or the communities themselves have the final word on how the $335 million water pollution control bond money is spent? What were the voters promised last November with regard to the $100 million recreation bond program?

Crime -- Is there a need to relax restrictions against police use of electronic surveillance (bugging) devices? Should the Attorney General and county prosecutors be granted broader subpoena power? What benefit lies in revising the state criminal code?

Welfare -- What can be done to cut the state's steadily spiraling welfare costs? Should a comprehensive study of the Michigan system be initiated this year, with a hope or belief of improving it next year?

State Capitol -- What design should the future seat of state government embrace? Shall funding for the new Capitol get under way this year? What, if any, limit should the Legislature set on the overall price tag?

Spending -- To what degree shall the state yield to the money demands of its departments and agencies? Should lawmakers stick to Gov. William G. Milliken's $1.51 billion budget or go beyond it?

Taxation -- Shall the state income tax go up? What about the cigarette tax? Should a greater effort be made to improve administration of local property taxes?

These are some -- but far from all -- of the emotion-charged questions the Republican-controlled Senate and Democratic-dominated House must grapple with in the weeks ahead.

Several bills are involved in most of the basic conflicts, and each will represent a skirmish -- either behind the scenes in committee or out in the open on the floor.

ONE FOR THE ROAD

Characters in novels stem from newspapers

By Dan Marlowe

People are always asking me where I get the ideas for my books.

They look doubtful when I tell them that quite a few come right from the newspapers.

But it's true. It's rare for a newspaper item to lend itself completely to a full-length book, but it's common for such an item to serve as a starting point. Almost anything of a bizarre or tragic nature -- and the papers are full of them, day after day -- lends itself to fictional adaptation.

This is particularly true in the area of motivation. With the demise of the private eye in suspense fiction a few years ago, writers of detective and suspense fiction were faced with a dilemma. Unless they were writing a police procedural story, in which the protagonist was a member of a police department, they had difficulty in motivating the protagonist properly. The reason is simple enough: a private detective ferrets out crime because he is paid to do so, a policeman does so because it's his job, but why should a private individual become involved even fictionally in what is essentially a police matter?

The easiest and perhaps the best way for the writer to involve his protagonist is emotionally. Perhaps someone close to him is killed, and he embarks on a private vendetta. Perhaps he is called in by an old friend to help in a situation where the friend feels that the protagonist's special skills would be helpful, and then something happens immediately which involves the protagonist personally.

The key word is PERSONALLY. The reader must feel the immediacy of the circumstances which surround the protagonist, and his character must be developed in a manner that permits him to react in only one way. Explosively, in this type of story.

The writer is always looking for character-reaction situations which will characterize his protagonist for the reader. The writer doesn't tell the reader that the protagonist is rough, tough and nasty. The writer SHOWS the reader he is by an incident -- hopefully on the first page and certainly in the first chapter -- which sets the tone for the story.

Last fall I was looking for a jumping-off point for a story, an incident which would get the story off to a fast start and at the same time vividly characterize the chief character in the book for the reader.

The papers carried an item about an incident in the Port Huron area where a group of boys broke through a pasture fence, cornered a horse in the pasture, and broke the horse's leg in five places with an iron bar.

What would happen, I said to myself, if in my book my rough, tough and nasty protagonist came upon such a scene? If I made him an animal-lover, his reaction should certainly be such as to characterize him vividly for the reader. All the rest of the way through the book the reader should have no difficulty in believing that the protagonist had the capability of reacting violently to provocative circumstances. The basic tenets of his character would be established in one swift, action-filled scene.

The book won't be out until next fall, so you'll have to wait until then to decide if I was right or wrong in my decision.

Meantime I'm reading the papers looking for an incident to begin the next book.

Windows of the Soul

Eyes have been called the windows of the soul. Clarity, expression and size—all of these are supposed to reveal character. A child's eyes seem innocent. But small, closely-placed eyes may also indicate deception. Some even say that you can tell a criminal by his eyes.

Calling it nonsense, even scientists find it hard to dispel the old wives' tales that have persisted for centuries.

Eyes, in a certain sense, can be the windows of the soul—precious windows through which you look at life. Don't judge another man by his eyes.
Look instead through eyes of

"If It Fitz..."

2 brands of justice

BY JIM FITZGERALD

Picture this, all you law-and-order fans:

Willie Chambers is driving down the main street of one of our largest cities. He's in a "right turn only" lane but he doesn't want to turn. There's a traffic officer standing in front of Willie's car, telling him he'd darn well better turn.

"Nuts to you," mutters Willie as he guns his car straight ahead, nudging the cop with a fender and knocking him flat. The officer quickly jumps into a passing car, and takes out after Willie. He catches him within 4 blocks.

So what happens next? Willie is arrested, of course. He goes to jail until he makes bail. He must face a judge and defend himself against the serious charge of assaulting an officer. It could have been worse. The cop suffered only head and body bruises which were quickly treated at a hospital. He might have been killed and the charge would have been manslaughter.

There is one thing about this case: Willie is black and the cop is white. This makes no legal difference, of course, but everyone involved is very careful. A common charge made these days, usually by white conservatives, is that Negroes often get favored treatment from judges who lean backward trying to prove justice is blind. And another common charge, this one usually made by black militants, is that police are brutal bigots who often use Negroes for punching bags.

So the authorities play it cool, right down the middle. Willie gets treatment equal to what would be given an important white man in the same sort of trouble. If a congressman had run down that cop, he would have received the same fair shake given Willie.

Like hell. I made up Willie Chambers. He never existed. But Charles E. Chamberlain does exist. He is a Republican congressman from Michigan. And he did deliberately disobey the law and run his car into a cop. In downtown Washington, D.C., Chamberlain did exactly what fictional Willie did. Two witnesses and the bruised policeman said so, and their testimony is on record.

So what happened to the congressman? Nothing. The minute it became known that Chamberlain was a big shot, his case was shifted from the ordinary channels to something called the Corporation Counsel's Office. A closed hearing was held. Chamberlain was white-washed. Not one lousy charge was placed.

A Washington law official even said the cop was at fault for getting in the way of Chamberlain's car. Which is hogwash but, even if true, does it justify hitting and running?

The whole mess stinks, but it is a familiar smell. Nothing new at all. Justice is not blind in the United States. Anyone who claims every man is treated equally is full of beans. The rich bigshots get an entirely different deal than that given Joe Slob. Joe goes to jail. Bigshot goes home and dies of old age before the courts catch up with him.

The Chamberlain case is simply the latest example of a corrupt system. It is particularly nauseous because Chamberlain has always been hot for law-and-order-and-let's make-the-streets-safe. Phooey. If he were any kind of a man, let alone a decent congressman, he would insist that he face charges. Instead, he sits in his fancy office, high above the peasants, and has "no comment" on his run-in with the law.

It is no wonder that so many people distrust the law. Why shouldn't they, when laws are made by such phonies as Chamberlain?

Creweling: hobby turns into business for Mrs. Ernest Lidbeck

BY RICHARD HAINES

Perhaps rare crafts are sustained by more than continual practice. In the case of Mrs. Ernest Lidbeck, 70 miles south of Cass City, it was sustained by memory.

Mrs. (Ruby) Lidbeck dropped the craft of crewel embroidery when about 15 years old and (with the exception of one piece of work) didn't start again until she was about 70.

Born in Maine and raised in New Hampshire, her New England family was well bestowed with textile crafts. She had four brothers who were tailors and three sisters who were dressmakers and tailors.

She worked near Detroit as a sewer most of her life while her husband worked at Chevrolet Gear and Axle.

When they retired they moved near Cass City. "We just love Cass City," she said.

Then, "just for something to do," she started the craft she left virtually untouched when she was 15.

Some of the stitches didn't come easy at first, she said. But with persistence she remembers what she called the basic 5 including the "outline," the "hemstitch," the "button-hole," the "cross" and the "chainstitch."

She said she also makes up her own.

Now, a remembered craft has turned into a business. Family and friends in Detroit have told others who drive to Cass City on week ends to examine and purchase her pieces.

She specializes in the embroidery of flowers and birds and some of her largest pieces are "the tree of life," a combination of a vine-like tree with a wide array of flowers and birds. She also does smaller pieces often of zodiac figures or flowers, and sometimes a pair of them.

Her linen upon which she does her embroidery, is purchased through Chicago and New York with sources in Ireland and England.

She gets ideas for patterns from pictures from magazines, largely, and sometimes she does patterns of animals.

A talkative and free conversationalist with dancing eyes and full, white hair, her hobby was slightly impaired when about a year ago she had cataracts on her left eye. Her right eye suffered the same ailment about 10 years ago.

However Cass City is about to lose its craftswoman because they have sold their house with intentions to move to near-Detroit for their final retirement.

Mild-winter storms result in power failures and, they say, often cut off their main heater and lights. The couple also contends the phone is often on the blink. But their children, who often worry about them, are begging them to move back to near Detroit.

One of them, a granddaughter, is being taught by grandma how to do crewel embroidery.

MRS. ERNEST LIDBECK showing a "Tree of Life" made by crewel embroidery.

Maverick's hot! Any questions?

Measure it any way you like. By the crowds. The news stories. The sales. Few cars have caused a sensation like Maverick or broken so many records. Every day more and more people are asking questions about it. Here are the answers.

Q. Why did you build the Maverick?

A. We think of Maverick as another one of Ford Motor Company's answers to the gold drain. Now Americans who want small car economy don't have to send their U.S. dollars overseas.

Q. Why did you call it Maverick?

A. You know what a maverick is. A maverick breaks the rules. A maverick is different. Maverick plugs the big gap between the compacts and the imports. It has a wheelbase eight inches shorter than a '69 Falcon, eight and one-half inches longer than a VW 1500. Nothing else like it.

Q. Why did you make it this size?

A. Maverick pinches pennies, not people. We gave Maverick more leg room. More shoulder room. More luggage room. Good example: the front seat of a Maverick offers you nine inches more shoulder room than the front seat of the leading economy import and its trunk can handle all the luggage for a family of four, including a set of golf clubs.

Q. What do I get for the price?

A. You get your money's worth. A complete, built-for-Americans kind of car. Room. Hot styling. Color-keyed interiors. Even the heater is included. Some economy car interiors are about as luxurious as a park bench. Not Maverick's. You get plush seats. Cloth and vinyl upholstery with unique tartan plaid cloth inserts. You also get safety features like smart pull-out door handles. Strong safety door locks. Two-speed electric wipers. Safety belts. Head restraints. Plus conveniences like armrests, coat hooks, lighted heater controls... important little things that add so much to your driving comfort.

Q. What about options?

A. You can get 'em if you want 'em. You can order integral air conditioning. (It's built in, not hung on.) Other options include 3-speed automatic or low-cost semiautomatic transmission, and a hefty 200 CID Six. But lots of people won't put an extra cent into this car. Because it's all there. A complete car all ready to drive home.

Q. What kind of gas mileage can I get?

A. That depends on you as well as the car. You can get as much as 25 or 26 miles per gallon—if you have an educated toe and the right road conditions. If you have a lead foot, or do a lot of city driving, you will get a lot less. In tests by professional drivers at our tracks, where we do our best to duplicate actual driving conditions, Maverick averaged 22.5 mpg.

Q. What kind of power does Maverick have?

A. Maverick's Six lets loose 105 galloping horses. That's 52 more than you get in the 4-cylinder VW 1500. Maverick can cover 417 feet in ten seconds from a standing start. That means you can get up to highway speed in a hurry. When you enter a 70 mph turnpike, you won't feel like a retired bookkeeper thrust into the middle of a pro football game.

Q. If it has an eight inch longer wheelbase than the leading import, does it still handle and park easily?

A. Maverick can U-turn in a tighter circle (35.6 feet) than the leading economy import (36.0 feet). Maverick can slant through traffic like a halfback. It can turn on a dime and give you nine cents change. If you've been driving any other American car, you'll find Maverick's neat size adds up to 5½ feet to any parking space.

Q. Can Detroit really build a small economy car that's tough and long lasting?

A. It's not easy, but we did it. Maverick's unitized body construction makes it light, strong and durable. It's welded like a battleship. Rustproofing compound goes into deep crevices that never see the light of day. Then all that strength is covered with four coats of paint for lasting beauty. Result: one tough little car that's put together to stay together. (The service schedule in the Maverick owner's manual goes up to 108,000 miles or nine years; that ought to tell you something about its rugged durability.)

Q. How about parts and service?

A. Maverick is designed to be unusually easy to service. You're dealing with made-in-America parts and 6,000 easy-to-find Ford Dealers. Fast repairs and easy replacements mean extra savings in both time and money.

Q. Is Maverick really easier and less expensive to maintain than an economy import?

A. Definitely. Maverick oil changes come only every 6,000 miles and chassis lubrication once every 36,000 miles. The leading economy import recommends oil changes every 3,000 miles (twice as often as Maverick) and chassis lubrication every 6,000 miles (six times as often as Maverick). Those are just a few examples of the many ways Maverick lessens inconvenience and lowers operating cost.

Q. Can I do my own maintenance work?

A. Yes, if you have an average amount of mechanical ability. The Maverick owner's manual contains 24 pages of detailed diagrams and easy-to-follow instructions for routine maintenance jobs you can do yourself, if you wish. You'll find it easy to change spark plugs, replace ignition points... plus many other do-it-yourself repairs and replacements.

Q. Can a small car be safe? And how safe is safe?

A. This small car incorporates the latest advances in engineering. Maverick's brakes are as big as a standard compact's—designed to stop cars weighing hundreds of pounds more. Maverick gives you weight... power... stability. Designed for American driving conditions.

Q. How does Maverick ride?

A. Here's where Maverick's longer, wider stance really pays off. You get a smoother, quieter ride. Maverick's light, strong, unitized body helps eliminate squeaks and rattles. Special insulation blocks out road noise. The people who brought you a Ford that was quieter than a Rolls-Royce now bring you a small car that doesn't sound like a power mower.

Q. Is there an advantage in the fact that Maverick is really a 1970 car?

A. Slower depreciation is one money-in-the-pocket advantage. Maverick's 1970 model designation means it keeps its trade-in value higher, longer. (Maverick is built to be a good investment from the minute you buy it to the minute you sell it.)

Better come take a look at this one. You'll find it where the action is... right in there with other great Ford values like specially equipped Ford Galaxie 500's... Fairlanes... Mustangs and Falcons.

You'll find them at your Ford Dealer's... the place you've got to go to see what's going on.

For an authentic 1/25 scale model of the new Ford Maverick, send $1.00 to Maverick, P.O. Box 5397, Department , Detroit, Michigan 48211. (Offer ends July 31, 1969.)

Skin cancers: the cause and cure

Cancers of the skin are more often seen and recognized earlier than cancers elsewhere in the body. Consequently skin cancers have a higher cure rate than malignant growths elsewhere.

The skin is an organ made up of diverse structures such as sweat glands, oil or sebaceous glands, scent glands, hair follicles, pigment, nerve trunks, blood vessels and different types of supporting tissue. Any one of these structures may initiate a malignant growth. Hence skin cancer may be of many types.

Why a cell which is growing in a particular part of the body should slowly increase its multiplication rate and begin to invade other structures is that part of the cause of cancer which is unknown.

Certain substances which we may have contact with or ingest are known to be cancer forming, or carcinogenic, agents. The best example of these are produced by arsenic and tar. In both instances cancerous growth follows long after the contact or injection of these substances and in proportion to the character of the skin, as well as the amount and length of time these materials have been contacted or injected.

Those who work for many years in tar are, by virtue of their work, predisposing themselves to the development of a tar skin cancer. It is undoubtedly the tar derived from tobacco that produces the smoker's cancer.

Sunlight is a factor which seems too little appreciated as a cancer producing agent. The incidence of cancer of the skin in those living in the southwest with its bright sun and cloudless sky is about three times that of those who live in New England. The Western, or ten gallon hat, was developed by the Scotch-Irish-English pioneers of the southwest to protect their fair skin from sunlight. Even the concentration of light by the magnification of the lower portion of bifocal glasses has produced cancer in the lower lid cheek area.

The thickness and color of our skin is important in protecting us from the injurious effects of sunlight. The color or pigment of our skin is called melana, originating from the Greek word melos, or black and is similar to the same pigment in animals, birds, fishes and even the mushroom. The brown-eyed person has pigment on both the back and front surfaces of the iris, or that part of the eye which has the color. The blue-eyed person only has pigment on the back surface of the iris. The light reflecting from the back surface through the blood vessels of the iris give the blue color to it. Those who have thick, darkly pigmented skin seldom have skin cancer. The blond, blue-eyed person and particularly the red-headed, freckled person when exposed to much sunlight readily burns.

If constantly repeated the skin undergrowth may begin hardening. Later cancer forms.

One of the many types of cancer of the skin that is quite common is basal carcinoma. It most commonly occurs in the area on the upper two-thirds of the face. It begins as a tiny pearl colored round lesion which causes no symptoms. It slowly grows and later will ulcer and bleed. Cells from this type of skin cancer fortunately are not carried by the lymph or blood vessel to more remote parts of the body, growing as independent lesions in new areas. The local removal of all the abnormal cells which make up a basal cell carcinoma results in a complete cure of it.

Another common type of cancer of the skin is prickle cell type. It is more malignant than the basal cell cancer and often first appears as a scaly, tender patch on an exposed area of the skin. It grows slowly also presenting itself as a horny, hard and sometimes tender protrusion from the skin. Unfortunately it has the capacity to spread through the lymphatic and the blood vessels to more remote areas.

There is probably no person in the human race who does not have a mole on some part of the body. Many that are protruding, pink, or slightly tan in color with or without hairs in them are of no importance. Those that are blue black, smooth or shiny which are definitely growing and may be in an area that is irritated by clothing or by physical activity should always be checked by a physician.

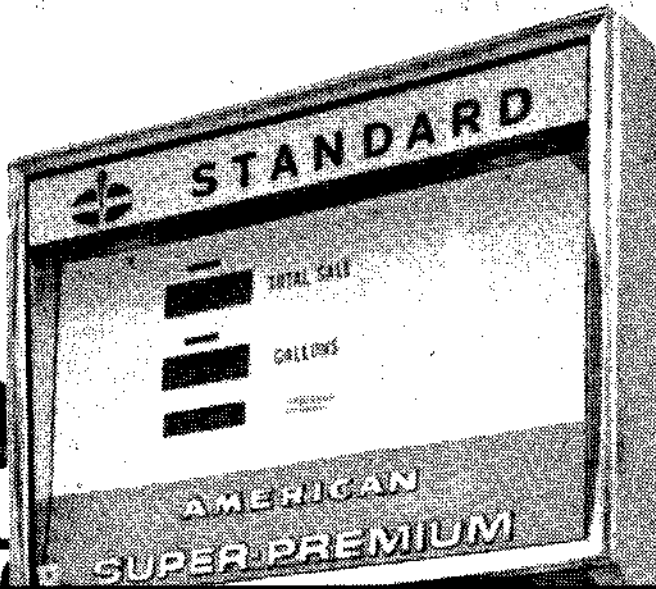

In children moles may be present in various sizes, shapes and color. They do not become malignant, if ever, until after puberty and often their growth is slow until puberty speeds it up. Pregnancy too is a stimulating factor in the growth of moles.

The mole which becomes malignant is not a common happening. But in the adult any that deepen in color, seem to have recently appeared, are undergoing changes in size or thickness, ulcerate or bleed should never be assumed to be unimportant.

Durable press can bring soiling problems

Durable press and soil release finishes on fabrics are a mixed blessing. Judith Schroeter, home economist with the Cooperative Extension Service in Tuscola, Huron and Sanilac counties, stressed that the new fabric finishes may eliminate some problems, but demand a different kind of attention than standard fabrics require.

"Durable press clothes are designed to stay fresh looking and wrinkle resistant during wear, and retain their smooth look, sharp pleats and creases when properly laundered," the home economist explained. "But, durable press finish creates other problems. The most crucial seems to be that durable press fabrics stain and soil more easily," she added. Recently a soil release finish was created to help ease this problem.

Other claims against durable press soil release fabrics is that they are warmer and wear out faster than standard fabrics and may have some chemical odor. Also, some may need touch-up ironing depending on the quality of the fabric and the laundry procedures used.

If you like the service and convenience features well enough to cope with the soiling and staining problems, some of these procedures should help: "Deal with the stain before the item is washed and dried. The older the stain, the more difficult it is to remove," she stressed. "Sponge oily stains with a safe cleaning fluid before laundering. Sponge grimy collars and cuffs with a full strength detergent and let it soak for an hour before washing."

She continued: "Since durable press fabrics stay fresh looking longer, the tendency is to wear them too many times before laundering. Durable press finishes tend to pick up soil from the air as well as contact with the wearer, and can also pick up redeposited soil from the wash water during laundry. If such soil isn't completely removed in laundering, it builds up on the fabric and eventually causes a gray, grimy look."

"Some people think the soil release finish will eliminate these problems, but that's not exactly true, Miss Schroeter concluded. "Soil release is an aid to make soil removal easier, but proper laundering is still necessary."
