

A HAYDAY—Youngsters had a "hayday" during an afternoon on the Donald DeLong farm Thursday, July 17, when several area farm families opened farm gates to inner-city youngsters.

Inner-city kids have heyday on area farms

Eighteen Saginaw Negro youths spent a day on a farm for the first time in their lives last week.

Nine farm families, most of them part of a 4-H group, opened their farm gates last Thursday.

Project coordinator Bernard Jarbot, County Extension 4-H Youth Agent, reported it was the first year that the county has participated in the program which has its headquarters in Saginaw, Cass City area families, he said, accounted for nearly half of the number of participating families.

The project was initiated last year by Gerald Robins, Extension Youth Agent in Saginaw, under the auspices of Michigan State University and sponsored by a United Fund grant.

Participating area families included Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Eubank, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Delong, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Battel.

The youths were reportedly "shy and reserved" at the first of the day, but later "opened up" and created much of their own recreation on the farms including baseball, bike riding and swimming in farm ponds. In addition, some helped make hay and milk cows.

Thursday evening, the nine families, their children, and their "farm day guests" met at the Caro fairgrounds for an outdoor potluck picnic. Jarbot reported about 65 to 70 persons attended.

Robins said the crowded home conditions and finances of the inner-city children seldom offer opportunity for a reciprocal exchange of children. He said the farm families "appreciated having their children exposed to those they would not normally come in contact with."

Robins said some of the black children's reactions "came out" on their return to Saginaw. Some he said, "literally bubbled" on the ride home. "Listening to them talk, I feel they gained."

One boy, who reportedly seemed gloom and melancholy during the entire farm day visit, led the family to believe "he did not have a good time."

In the city of Saginaw at 8:30 a.m. Friday morning, the boy went to his "neighborhood house" and told a counselor he had the greatest time he has had in his life. The boy was sixteen years old. Robins said he mentioned the hay, driving the tractor, and seeing a calf born.

Robins said the "day on the farm" visits expanded the experiences of the inner-city youths, many of whom he said felt "locked in."

The Saginaw youth agent expressed hope more farm families would participate yet this year and he did not rule out week ends during this fall and the school year. He said any family may contact Bernard Jarbot in Caro at the 4-H extension office.

Food Poisoning strikes 7 after family reunion

Seven persons were seriously stricken by food poisoning Sunday, July 13, at the annual Sam Robinson family reunion held at the Bob Bader home in Decker.

Five of the seven were treated or admitted into Hills and Dales General Hospital Monday or Tuesday following the picnic.

Mrs. Lynn Fuester was admitted Monday. Admitted the following day, Tuesday, July 15, were Mrs. Bob Bader, Clair Auslander of Decker and Arthur Severance.

Mrs. Clair Auslander was treated and released. Mrs. Bader was a patient until Sunday morning. Described as in good condition but still hospitalized Tuesday noon were Mrs. Fuester, Auslander and Severance.

Mrs. Robert McConkey of Durand and a friend were reportedly ill following the picnic, a member of the family reported.

FROM THE Editor's Corner

Louie Salas took a deep drag on his cigarette one day last week, standing in the driveway of the Cass City gas station that he runs so successfully together with Floyd "Shorty" Luetke, and asked what good banning cigarette advertising would do?

Stopping the advertising won't make anybody quit, Louie opined.

The statistics tend to prove that Louie is better at fixing cars than he is judging advertising. After all, the campaign against smoking has produced the first leveling off in the steadily increasing number of cigarettes consumed per capita in a quarter of a century of "walking a mile for a Camel." If the cigarette pitch is dropped it's logical to assume that smoking would drop even further.

After all some pretty sharp boys aren't spending all that dough on TV for nothing. I disagree with Louie's opinion about results, but not his stand against restricting the cigarette companies' right to advertise.

For the Federal Communication Commission to say that it has been proved that cigarettes are a health hazard and as such can't be beamed via the boob tube into the home is pussyfooting around the main issue.

As if banning it from television will cure the problem. If smoking is dangerous enough to health to be banned from TV then it is dangerous enough to stop selling. If it is legal to sell it should be legal to advertise.

And if you can advertise in newspapers, billboards, magazines and with trading stamps, it just doesn't make sense to ban it from the airwaves.

It's certain that when the proposed ban starts to bind, the tobacco promoters will be looking around for new ways to reach customers.

It may be that they will reach all the way down to the grass-roots and seek out the small circulation dailies and weeklies to promote their product.

At that time a good many thoughtful publishers are thinking about whether they should accept cigarette advertising or not.

There is no one more sanctimonious than a reformed sinner...and as a reformed two-pack or more a day man I guess I qualify.

Anyway, I've just about decided that I don't want cigarette advertising in the paper.

And no, Louie, I can't say what good it will do.

Already I hear the cynics say that it's easy to give up something you've never had.

You know the story; the customer goes to the butcher and complains about the price of

Fire hall plans creep along

Village-township readies offer for Hunt property

If the price is right the village and Elkland Township are now agreed that the property between Leach and West Streets owned by C. R. Hunt is the best available for a new Elkland Township Fire Hall.

Elkland Supervisor Maynard McConkey discussed the project with the village council at its regular meeting Tuesday night at the Municipal Building.

The proposed agreement still leaves the community far, far away from acquiring the new facility.

Don't look for the final chapter in the 10-year saga of the drive for a new fire hall in the immediate future.

But, according to McConkey, the township board has pulled a little closer to agreement. For several months now the board has been hung up deciding if the Hunt property was the one that should be selected.

The green light has been given, but not at the price that C. R. Hunt has been asking...$50,000 net for the entire block including a house and the building used by the construction company.

The township is only interested in the Hunt building and is prepared to offer $20,000 for it and a lot and a half of the property fronting on Pine.

McConkey asked the village to buy the two lots next to the alley that extends from Leach to West for parking.

The village agreed in principle. No price was established, but in an earlier meeting a figure of $12,000 was bandied about. It is likely that the offer will be in this neighborhood.

Because Trustees Mrs. Gladys Albee and George Dillman were absent the council took no formal action Tuesday.

Assuming that the figures mentioned are correct, the total offer for the property that the village and the township is interested in will be $32,000.

Neither the village or the township wants to acquire the house located in the area Hunt offered in his original sale proposal.

The house has been valued at about $8,000. In effect, the total village-township offer is $10,000 less than the net figure requested by Hunt in his proposal to the township.

Even if agreement could be reached at once it would still be a while before any work could start on the property.

McConkey said that the township would have some $35,000 available by next April, but not before.

After the purchase, plans for renovation of the building have been estimated to cost between $15,000 and $20,000, bringing the total cost to the township for a firehall to $40,000.

If our costs were much higher than this, it probably would be better to start and build a new building, McConkey said.

Our board would prefer a new building but the cost of a Main Street location places it out of reach.

McConkey also reported to the village about Doerr Road.

He said Hunt furnished 2,300 yards of base free for the project. Total cost for the job has not yet been received. Concluded on page 4

QUICK WASH—After winter storage, it took a quick wash to clean off Jim Mosher's 1947 Town and Country Chrysler. It has all and only its original equipment, including the smooth running straight six under the hood.

Antique cars driving Jim Mosher out of farming

A rural Gagetown man, discouraged with farming, has driven the cows out of the barn, and antique cars in.

"As an antique dealer," said Jim Mosher, "things are pretty good. As a farmer, things aren't worth a darn."

The father of four grown boys, Mosher resides in a mobile home on his father's farm. Tired of milking cows twice a day, and "donating" his time to his farming enterprise, Jim Mosher sold his dairy herd three years ago. He still cash crops.

For several years, Mosher has been collecting antique cars and he now finds himself with 15 cars of yesterday that are making his two barns a museum of auto history.

The antique cars and trucks line a long farm shed, as well as the barn where Surge milking machine once had thumping pulsators drawing milk from his black and white Holsteins. Two are nearly restored. His gem, a 1947 Town and Country Chrysler, didn't need restoring, he said. It had sat in the garage since early spring, but he gave it a buzz on the starter and presto, it was running so smooth you'd swear it had no moving parts.

It features original green leather seats, authentic wooden slides (with the normally heavy doors) hydraulic cylinders for truck hinges, the original carpeting, dual swan-neck mirrors, two heaters, a lavish chrome interior, and a spotlight.

This one is Mosher's prize and it's questionable if the old maxim "Every man has his price" will hold up. Mosher, a fellow of tallish build and thinning brown hair has a mysterious gaze when you ask him that question. It's a gaze that wanders from you, arrests itself on his dear prize, and ends with a "nope."

His "lineup," which he can recall completely out of the top of his head include a '31 Chevrolet Coupe, a '30 Model "A" pickup, a '31 Durant, a '40 Ford sedan, a '31 Ford pickup, a '32 Model "B" Ford, a '28 Ford "A", a '23 "A" Roadster, a '44 Ford convertible, a '34 Chrysler.

Mosher has obtained most of his antiques in Michigan's lower peninsula, especially from the west side of the state. His first test as a successful hobbyist will be learned when they auction a few on August 6.

The large shed, though, contains far more than antique cars. One piece is a horse-drawn, single cylinder, 3HP gas upright engine (with pump) fire-wagon once owned and used by the City of Detroit Fire Department.

Another beaut is a hard rubber-tired horse buggy which Mosher claims "was used only for driving to Church on Sundays."

88th Tuscola County Fair recalls glory of yesteryear

Cass City was the home of champion livestock

BY RICHARD HAINES

The county fair hot dogs didn't taste nearly as good the last couple days as they did the first couple days, he said. But of course that was long ago when the kids stayed with their livestock at the fair for the entire week.

Area youngsters are now preparing for the Tuscola County Fair slated for July 28 through August 2 and it is sure to bring back nostalgic reminiscing by folks in the Cass City area.

One of the youngsters who exhibited during the 1920's and who still helps with fair programs, and programming, is Clarence Merchant. Merchant, now a successful beef farmer, was one of the many youngsters who helped load his 4-H animal on the truck when it came to pick up the area's 4-H projects during this era.

For most farm kids, fair week was one of the most looked-forward-to events of the year. And to assure they could take fair week off, they worked doubly hard during the summer. Fair week was largely a task of cleaning, combing, curling, and preparing animals. It was a day when cleanliness was next to...winning.

After nightfall, the 10:30 curfew, it seemed, came too soon, and Merchant related how the club leader "often had difficulty rounding some of us up." The midway, he said, continued through one or two o'clock.

Those were the days when several forksful of loose hay went into an empty stall for a makeshift bed and often the night was spent sleeping with one eye open on the show animal that could possibly win a blue ribbon.

And if it was just too hot in the barn, the big haystack under the stars made sleeping a little more comfortable.

Actually, no one thought much about sleep the first couple of nights at the fair. The excitement of the competition ahead, the magic of the midway and the general excitement of the fair often kept young 4-H'ers up to the wee morning hours.

A quarter century or more ago, fair week was a summer highlight for teens and their parents...eagerly anticipated. For businessmen it was a time for doing odd jobs and preparing for the fall season ahead. While the fair was running...that's where the action was. It was taken for granted that fair week would be the slowest business week of the year.

For farm kids the big day came when the judging was slated to commence and the moment of truth came when their animal was ranked. One of the biggest thrills, Merchant said, was outdoing your friends. You were in there for all there was in it...that's the way you played the game.

Sometimes the boys may have been beaten in close competition because a pretty girl with a pretty calf looked pretty good to some of the judges.

"Still, an important part of the competition was being a good loser." One year they would beat me; the next I would beat them, he said.

Ma and pa was usually there to watch the judging, he said. And when their son or daughter

Undefeated Decker falls as Church League race tightens

The race in the Cass City Church League tightened this week as previously undefeated Decker bowed for the first time to a hard hitting Catholic nine and lousy hitting marked most of the games.

CCSS moved into title contention with a 3-1 victory over Decker in a well played game.

Dale Smith, a veteran of the diamond wars, used experience and good control to lead CCSS to the win.

Friday the Catholics used home run power to defeat Decker, 12-9. Phil Gray, Dave Asher and John Maharg smashed circuit clouts and lashed out three hits each to pace the Catholics' victory.

In the nightcap, Fraser-Gagetown rolled past United Missionary, 16-7. Roger Root picked up the win and Mark Tuckey was the loser. Jim Tuckey hit for the circuit for United Missionary. Gagetown slammed three round trippers.

The big blows were picked up by Larry Hartwick, Rick Hartwick and Gary Summers.

The Cass City Baptists used a combination of power and walks to run roughshod over the Novesta Church of Christ, 10-1, Monday.

Gary Mellendorf pitched steady ball for the winners. Elwyn Helwig hit a grand slam home run. The Baptists were helped by the wildness of Don Englehart and errors by the Novesta team.

COUNTY FAIR

The jam-packed Thursday will also feature performances in front of the grandstand by some of the area's top high school bands. The annual Tuscola County Bean Queen Pageant will be presented at 7:30 p.m. in which this county's candidate for the State Bean Festival Queen Pageant will be selected.

Thursday night's program will be rounded off with the final night of harness racing. Friday is "Merchant's Day". A gigantic, thrilling auto demolition derby will be featured at 7 p.m. in front of the grandstand as dozens of courageous drivers battle each other in front of the grandstand in one of the biggest "wrecks" ever seen in the county. Last year's Derby drew dozens of entries and packed the grandstand with enthusiastic spectators.

Saturday is "Sportsman's Day" with horsepulling contests featured all day starting at 9:30 a.m. In the afternoon the Flint Motorcycle Club invades the Fairgrounds for the big annual motorcycle races. Practice sessions get underway at 5 p.m. followed by the races at 8 p.m.

Cash prizes will be given away Monday through Thursday in special drawings. Fairgoers may register at the gate as they enter for a try at the free cash prizes.

The county fair was always a big thing to the kids, he said. And one of the lasting memories "was that we all did it together."

Recalling county fairs in the Cass City area brings back the saga it created throughout the state for its unbeatable livestock.

"Willis Campbell started it." He said Campbell, now a retired resident of Cass City, personally bought many of the calves, lambs, and young livestock to start the kids on a 4-H project.

One of the recipients was Merchant whose calf eventually brought home prize winning ribbons.

Campbell told the Chronicle that at Detroit state fairs, "They would get mad at us because we stayed up all night the day before the judging preparing and manuring our animals."

"They had to look nice," he said, and "the kids earned what they got."

pork. How come, she asks, you charge $1 a pound for pork while Joe down the street charges only 75¢? How come you don't go to Joe? the butcher asks. I did, she replies, but Joe is out right now. Well, lady, the butcher says, if I didn't have any I'd sell it for 50¢ a pound.

So if you want to say I'm taking a chance to be a cheap hero, well go ahead.

An ad published or not published in the Chronicle will affect the total picture about like lifting a grain of sand from the shores of the Great Lakes disturbs the shoreline.

Still, if the grain happens to be a child of yours or mine it becomes the most important grain on the beach.

After all, the evidence is overwhelming that cigarette smoking does cause lung cancer, heart disease and emphysema.

We should be doing our best to make people quit, not start the habit.

BY JOHN HAIRE

(And anyone else he can get to help)

Summing up the awe inspiring moon landing in a sentence is patently impossible. But of the millions of words printed and spoken I liked a phrase in a story in Monday's Free Press the best.

It reads: ".....July 20, a date that marks the beginning of the exploration of the universe."

Isn't that what landing on another planet is all about?

***

A week or so ago I received two copies of "Playboy", the "magazine for men". They were addressed to John Haines, but carried my home address and were delivered to my box at the post office.

I haven't been able to decide whether they were sent by mistake or ordered by a friend with an absolutely delightful sense of humor. Chronicle Reporter Dick Haines swears that he has been getting his copies regularly and that the ones I got weren't meant for him.

I "discussed" this happy state of affairs with my wife and "we" decided I would read them at the office.

It's about 50-50. First I'm happy, then dismayed with the post office. Locally, the postmaster and crew bend over backwards to give good service....but just as I'm about convinced a regulation or ruling comes along from the powers above that changes my mind....like closing the place unexpectedly.

For instance. It's fitting and fine to honor our spacemen and the moon flight, but I wish they wouldn't wait till the last minute to announce it.

Weeklies like the Chronicle depend heavily on the post office for news...especially from rural correspondents. When it closes on Monday a staff member has to jam around the country to get the items in time for publication.

Balancing this inconvenience is the help received from the local department.

A week or so ago the Chronicle was missing news from a correspondent. The envelope just wasn't in the post office.

Thinking about where it might possibly be, postal worker Alden Asher finally figured out that the only place it could possibly have gone astray was with the mail pouch for delivery to Walbro Corporation.

He jaunted on down to the company, checked the mail and Eureka! One lost envelope full of news.

You can't hardly get service like that no more.

I know of four Cass City gay blades who are simpatico with our astronauts. They went into orbit Friday and stayed right there until after the flyers arrived on the moon Sunday afternoon.

Erla's roll to Ugly loop title again

Erla's successfully defended its Ugly Recreational League Softball title Friday by rolling over Carling's of Bad Axe, 10-2, in the game that decided the regular season championship.

The two teams had split games played earlier in the regular season. It was the second victory of the week for Erla's in the league. They defeated Air Base on the way to the title, 3-1.

The Foodmen pounded Mazure of Carling's for 13 hits, including a home run clout by Engelhart and four hits in as many tries by Elwyn Helwig. Dean Hoag and Rolie Nichols also banged out two hits each.

Al Bosch hurled the victory, allowing five hits and striking out 13.

Helwig pitched a masterful game against the Air Base. He struck out 12 and allowed four hits as he went the distance. The run he allowed was unearned.

Erla's scored first in the top of the fifth. Jim Knoblent smacked a triple and Chuck Erla singled him home. Air Base bounced back to tie with their only run of the game to set the stage for a two-run rally by Erla's in the top of the sixth.

While Erla's continued to dominate league action, the team's record in exhibitions reflects the top caliber competition faced in the Saturday night double headers at Cass City Recreational Park.

Erla's lost a double header to Tri-City Collision Saturday night, the team's third loss in four tries in Cass City.

Actually, the record is not as bad as it looks. Erla's have been impressive, even while losing. In all but one game a run at a crucial time would have made them winners instead of losers. The opener Saturday is a good example. The game went eight innings before Erla's lost, 1-0. Bosch had a no hitter over the regulation distance, but a triple followed by a sacrifice in the eighth led to defeat.

While Tri-City could do nothing with Bosch, Rousseau was equally effective against Erla's. He also allowed just one hit, a harmless single by Hillaker.

Helwig pitched the second game and didn't have much better luck than Bosch. He allowed four hits while losing 3-1. Two of the runs were unearned.

But Ryan was almost as effective against the Cass City nine as Rousseau had been in the first game. He allowed just two hits while striking out eight.

Erla's moved into the playoffs at Ugly this week and expect to finish league play Friday. They will be looking for exhibition tilts while waiting for the State tournaments to start. Dan Erla, manager, reported. Erla's are the defending Class C State softball champions.

SPORTS FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

By H. M. Bulen

Can you imagine a baseball player batting .406 for a season and leading his league in runs scored and home runs, and still NOT winning the Most Valuable Player Award? That oddity happened once to Ted Williams. Ted batted .406 in 1941, led the American League in runs scored and home runs, but Joe DiMaggio won the Most Valuable Player Award—even though DiMaggio's batting average was 49 points lower than Williams!

Do you know why golf balls have those indentations or dimples on them? They help the golf ball hold truer in its line of flight....Tests show that golf balls --with indentations--fly far more accurately than if they had a smooth surface.

Did you know that one man was responsible for originally getting umpires to use hand signals to signify strikes, safe and out? ... Bill "Dummy" Hoy, an outstanding outfielder who played for St. Louis, Cincinnati, Washington and Chicago from 1888 to 1902, was a deaf mute. Since he couldn't hear the umpires call, they began hand gestures to tell him what the count was, and whether he was safe or out....It thus started a custom which is used to this day.

Three area collisions smash autos; no injuries

A series of two-car collisions damaged several cars during the week but no one was injured. Richard Lee Lorentzen of Cass City was ticketed for failure to stop in a clear, assured distance ahead when, Friday, July 18, he struck the rear of an auto driven by Kathryn Mary McCullough, also of Cass City.

Lorane Smith was a passenger in the McCullough vehicle and the three were uninjured. They were each travelling west on Main street.

of Akron Friday, July 18, on M-138 at the junction of Darbee Road. Both drivers were alone. Downing was also uninjured. Both were traveling north and Downing told Deputy Mattlin of the Tuscola County sheriff's department, "I looked down and as I looked up I saw the right brake light on the car was on."

Village trustees said that it was their understanding that Hunt would finance its share of the cost for three years. The village is paying for work from the village limits to Garfield street and the township from the village limits to Elmwood road.

Al Krueger, Rodney Krueger, and Jack McDaniels from Anrood Screen Cylinder Co. appeared before trustees to discuss the costs of sewer for a new building to be erected by Almar Realty Co., a company created by the Anrood owners to handle real estate.

Cost of sewer and water will approach $3,500 and the village agreed to pay half of the cost if the new building is erected. Construction was promised this fall if requested.

HELP WANTED

It was disclosed that work on the baseball fields on the north park addition had progressed as far as possible using construction equipment.

A stone picker has been over the area twice picking up the larger stones and the area has been graded.

What is needed now, President Lambert Althaver said, is hand labor for raking and similar projects.

He issued a call to the community for volunteer help and said that he would contact all service clubs. Interested persons can contact Althaver or at the Municipal Building to learn details of upcoming work nights.

The diamonds must be ready for seeding by early fall if they are to be in good condition next year.

Sontag quits: 'recent events' alleged cause

Gagetown Mayor Elery Sontag submitted his resignation Monday night at the rescheduled meeting of the Gagetown village council. James England was named acting mayor for the remainder of the year.

Sontag gave only reasons of time consumed in carrying out the duties of the mayor's office for his decision in resigning.

Acting Mayor James England reported the resignation stemmed from Sontag's "distress over recent events". He would not elaborate.

The council heard reports on the city's project to update their water system. Engineer Vern Spaulding reported that contractors John Hill and Ron Thomas have been unable to finish the project which was rescheduled for completion June 21.

The council moved to penalize the contractors $100 a day for four days because of the delay.

CASS CITY VILLAGE COUNCIL MEETING

A regular meeting of the Cass City Village Council was held June 24, 1969 at the Municipal building. All members were present except Trustee Selby and Ross.

The minutes of the regular May meeting were read and approved.

The Financial report for May was reviewed. Miss Ann Sheppard appeared and asked the Council to approve a higher wage for the people working in the pool who have W.S.I. qualification. Council agreed that the Park Committee be given authority to raise the pay to $1.75 an hour providing that the hours be reduced. Admissions to the pool are to be increased to 15-25-35-5.00-7.00.

Park Committee reported that the activity at the park for the summer program included free films, dances on the tennis court, golf lessons, and archery. It was also reported that the pool heater was due in soon.

Sewer and Water Committee reported that nothing had been done to correct the conditions of the Sanitary Sewer manholes existing in the Hills and Dales Subdivision. It was also suggested that a study be made to investigate the funds available from all sources to install the interceptor sewers proposed by the Village Engineers.

It was reported that the proposed Ordinance concerning Junk Cars was still under investigation. Trustee Rawson moved that 9 additional meters be installed on N. Oak St. between the alley and Main St. Trustee Dillman supported that motion. Yes 4 no 0-motion carried.

A request from the Retail Division of the Chamber of Commerce for the meters to be covered for two days during annual side walk sale was granted providing no advertising as such would be made. Trustee Dillman moved that bills as approved by finance committee be allowed. Trustee Golding supported the motion and it was duly carried.

President Althaver read a letter of thanks from Richard Haines for the cooperation he received in taking pictures of the village from the water tower.

Five new picnic tables were reported to have been donated to the park, three from the Gavel Club made by club members as a winter project and two from the Fire Department. There being no further business Trustee Albee moved to adjourn. Motion supported by Trustee Dillman and duly carried.

SIDEWALK DAYS puts a helter skelter of bustling activity upon its sidewalks and last Friday and Saturday Cass City's was right in line. Starting upward from the lower left are four St. Pancratius ladies unloading goodies for a bake sale. Left to right in the bake sale picture: Mrs. Clifford Demo, Mrs. Julia Tekieli, Mrs. George Murray and Mrs. Edward Hahn. Continuing up, we have an unidentified young tyke asking Mom why they put pajamas on the parking lot meters and above her is Carl Zawilinski nosing around the American Association of University Women's (AAUW) book sale and we're not sure whether he's reading an interesting hardbound edition of Playboy or Plato. In the upper left corner Fred Leeson and Gerald Prieskorn sell a Rotary Club barbecued chicken. Mrs. Tom Proctor closely scrutinizes the operation. In the upper center a man's best friend doesn't seem to think as much of the merchandise as his master does, but he probably enjoyed the ride anyway. In the upper right, Mike Gruber, Joe Gruber and Dale Davidson lap their lickers onto that white fluff famous both for its sweet and sticky (goodness?). Continuing downward is young Ben Drews who did quite a lot of racing around on the sidewalks, and then young Miss Rochelle Peters who just discovered they didn't have that style she liked in her size. Finally in lower right is Barbara Parker who thought it somehow "sense" less to have bags over meters, with traffic jams caused by sidewalk days.

Lotteries helped fund early American militia

In the old days they called it gaming and it was the act of playing games for stakes or wages. Today we call it gambling and consider it to be the act of risking or staking anything on an uncertain event, a wagering proposition. No matter what you call it, gambling is a neurosis, a nervous disorder without any demonstrable physical evidence.

Some psychiatrists say that gambling is the result of a deep-seated guilt feeling and that gamblers want to punish themselves. Some say that gamblers suffer from some unresolved problems in their personal lives or conflicts carried over from childhood.

The compulsive gambler directs his attention to luck or fate as a savior would to his lady love. He risks his fortune on a horse race, a card game, or a throw of the dice. Actually, the urge is not so much to gain as to have lived dangerously.

Gambling is probably as old as man. Games of chance have existed in civilized societies since the dawn of civilization. The ancient Siamese people lay bets on sea mussels, wagering on which one would open first. The Greek warriors rolled dice between battles. The exploration of the new world by the early colonists was sponsored to some extent by money financed from lotteries. The colonists themselves used the gaming wheel to build bridges, schools and churches, including such institutions as Harvard, Yale and Dartmouth. Perhaps you will recall that George Washington instituted a lottery to raise funds to support, arm and train his troops.

The concept of a lottery is not new as a means of obtaining funds for various projects. This idea is now appearing alluring to state governments because it offers the possibility of a new source of revenue while traditional sources have been all but rung dry, although the experience of state-run lotteries has not been particularly good. The one instituted in New York on June 1, 1966, provided less than 10% of the amount of income expected in the first year of its existence. The revenue amounted to 31 million when a total of 380 million had been hoped for by the sponsors. True, the states have relatively little experience in running lotteries, and could well take some leadership from Israel which had a successfully operated system, and Mexico has carried one on since 1771.

That a sound economy cannot be built on any kind of gambling, including the lotteries. That was Governor Romney's position and so it is of Governor Milliken who stated recently, "I am against it (a state-run lottery), legally on the grounds that it would be an inadequate direct means of supporting the services of state government. One of the problems of relying on a lottery for state revenue is the difficulty of predicting how much it would produce. In any event, it would not be a major or reliable source of revenue. We need to face our revenue difficulties directly and should not directly rely on indirect means or what some people regard as a cheap and easy way to raise revenue through means that would play on people's interest in gambling."

To appraise recreation needs in Co.

The Tuscola Board of Commissioners increased their pace to make their bid for allocations from the State's newly voted recreational fund in Tuesday's meeting by scheduling a first-hand appraisal of Vanderbilt Park and by proposing the creation of a county parks commission.

Harold Johnson, Board Chairman, said the county has but one park which should be immediately studied for improvement and further development. Additional county recreational facilities, which has been foremost on commissioners' minds in recent meetings, is now receiving a serious appraisal. The commissioners will visit Vanderbilt Park next Tuesday.

Johnson said the county is potentially rich for the development of additional county parks, and he mentioned specifically the Cass River region including the area near the dam which he said is developing into a young, deep water lake.

In other actions, the commissioners allocated $688.04 to the East Central Economic Development Council as the county's share in the 14-county planning district.

The Commissioners received a request from Tuscola County Sheriff Hugh Marr for a heated tray as an addition to jail cafeteria facilities.

Today, the moral aspects of government-sponsored lotteries are being debated, but it is probably not the main reason why there has not been an initiation of a lottery in Michigan. Those opposing the lottery oppose it on the grounds

All the world's a stage, but few are chosen for leading parts.

Custom pick-up camper destroyed by fire

A small building used as a camper on the back of a pick-up was destroyed by fire Tuesday afternoon at the farm of James Connolly, three-quarters of a mile north of Deford, The Elkland Township Fire Department answered the alarm and kept the fire from spreading.

The building contained a cot, card table and other similar items.

The blaze started, firemen theorized, when children playing in the building poured gas into an oil stove and it exploded.

Don't laugh at others' mistakes - it may be your turn next.

Ezra Mosher still accumulating bastion of guns, rifles, arrowheads

If a foreign army ever invaded Michigan's Thumb, the Gagetown area folks could go along their daily routine unbothered. Antique gun collector Ezra Mosher has enough guns to stop an infantry charge, even if the guns he owns are of civil war vintage.

A 79-year-old widower, Mosher related that he first started his collection when he was young and "Working on a building and a fellow brought out this old muzzle loading gun. I brought it home."

Mosher has become used to publicity and outsiders winding themselves around his potbellied kitchen stove and through his comfortable home. And he's managed to keep some of his visitors a considerable period as they marvel at his array of antiques.

His collection was started nearly 60 years ago when he bought that first muzzle loader and since then his collection has grown to about 100 handguns, muzzle loaders, rifles, and even a Nazi machine gun.

Most of his guns are of civil war vintage, with a few from the War of 1812 and a few late 1800 and also world war models.

His oldest group are early American 1800 cap and ball models, many with bayonets. Many are early Kentucky models and Mosher said the average price paid for his wide collection is $5.

He reported collecting most of them from the area during recent decades when he fished and peddled his catch in the area. He still owns the first rifle he's ever purchased, a 10-gauge shotgun he bought for $21.95.

He has bullet molds for most of his guns and he loads his own shells.

Whether his interest in guns was started by the accident which badly damaged his arm is not known. When as a young man he was hunting ducks with a flintlock-type hammer shotgun, it accidentally went off.

As he pulled the gun toward him by the barrel, the hammer caught on a board and when it released, it had enough tension to discharge the load into his arm.

But guns are only part of a larger pattern. Crowded into every corner, and heavily laden atop every table are an awesome assortment of antique home items.

Included are, for example, a key-wound pocket watch, a wooden salad bowl which Mosher believes was carved from Black Ash, and which measures about 14 inches across. Other examples are a 1902 Tuscola County plat book, and a large pictorial review of the 1893 World Exhibition in Chicago.

A vast assortment of table clocks sit throughout the house, especially in one corner on a bureau in his living room.

A large array of Indian arrow-heads has been collected by Mosher near his farm, and near Deford. He has over 100, many of which are the subject of elaborate chipping.

"I'm poor, I pick up stuff, resell it.....make a few dollars", he said.

Mosher has raised a boy and a girl of his own and 3 stepsons and a stepdaughter. One son, James, resides on the farm in a mobile home. He is quitting farming to be an antique car buff. Like his Dad.

EZRA MOSHER, 79, stands beside a portion of his gun collection that has taken nearly 60 years to accumulate.

Walt Goodall embraces tranquility of life on his farm; shuns city rush

It's a comfortable farmstead pleasantly surrounded by apricot trees, blue spruce, a crimson maple, yellow ash, and an assortment of yew trees. A purebred border collie sets his haunches on the grass as the morning sun dapples his young, black and white glossy coat. A swallow swoops down at him, missing him only by inches, then swoops again. "The swallow has eggs," said farmer Walt Goodall, as he rested his hands on his hips and gazed over the charm of his well landscaped yard. Tallish and thoroughly muscled from outdoor work, Goodall is still thin and his once brown hair is slowly melting to grey. The outline of his cheekbone evidences long hard farm workdays, confirmed by his ruddy complexion. Goodall, like most upright, law-abiding Americans, is disturbed by the disorder evienced across the nation, both in the cities and on the campus. Correcting himself, "you're supposed to say Negroes, I guess. I think they bring a lot of the problem up by just talking about it."

"City folks," he said, "don't always understand" and Goodall was provoked at a paper article calling "us a rural town womb".

When he and his wife finished raking their newlyseeded yard last year, "one of them came right up and drove on it." "They didn't know better, sometimes these city folks just don't know," he added, with a punchy gesture.

Goodall is repulsed by the rush of city life. He likes his farm where it's birds, sheep and cattle.

He doesn't favor increasing encroachment upon an individual's life. "Even farmers," he said, "have to be in contact with so many more things than they used to."

His yard is graced by well-situated shrubs and unusual, but well foliaged trees and when a species does poorly, like his English Walnut trees, he explains the soil conditions that probably thwarted its growth.

Goodall says he has "had fun" making improvements on the farm since its purchase in 1940. Preferring well landscaped surroundings to neglect, and order to disorder, he has slowly added to it over the years.

Goodall's farm is its own claim to calm, and that's the way he likes it. The west side of the farmstead is bordered with a wall of Colorado Blue Spruce, a windbreak that provides cover for an adjacent pen of Austrian cream white and dappled brown and white English Fallow deer.

"The deer like it out there," he said. "In the winter, it'll be howling and blowing and snowing, but you can walk down there by their lot next to the cover, and it'll be nice and peaceful."

Goodall hunted one deer season, but after he shot his first buck, he was repulsed by its "pitiful sight as it hung over that log," and he hasn't hunted since.

When some Detroit reporters received his okay to hunt on his land they left a stack of beer cans that Goodall had to go and gather up. "I guess they think that's standard out here," he said.

The deer in his lot look glossy and well-fed. "They see the saints when there is something you want them to do," he said of the spooked animals. (Like take their picture) "Come on down to the end of the pen; maybe they're nervous because they can't see you."

He continued that "when they're restless, they run stiff legged," and as he said it one jauntily pounced on all fours legs around the deer lot.

He took a long scythe and cut some of the deep-green clover next to the pen, gathered it with the easy stretch of his long arms, and threw it over some brush laying in the pen, its bark completely nibbled off by the deer's teeth. "They like to pick it from the brush," he said, walking right by the little manger previously built for feeding.

The small collie crouched down tight against the fence, his nose snuggled against it, his eyes intent upon the deer. "He's always close by when anyone else is around," Goodall said.

"We've got nice Angus out here," he said, as he started across the yard, not really waiting for a response.

The many plantings in the yard made it clear an effort was made to make it that way, an effort best depicted perhaps, by a towering bird house stretching upward, as if guarding, and perhaps confirming the yard's grace.

The farmstead is a quiet one, away from the "city rush...." "All that rush," he said, "...and those long haired....." And the look of something bothersome pierced his eyes.

The black Angus looked upward from where their thick lips and cutting teeth had been browsing the good ground's green grass. Their eyes wandered to those of the collie, though, as the small dog stalkishly trotted into the lot.

"Well, if you know anything about cattle....," he said, as he admired the awesomely thick quarters on his beef.

Goodall's beef feeder lot borders the east side of the house lot. The entire north side of it is barns, two large ones, and several gently shambling smaller ones.

A row of lush-green cedars, mostly about three feet high, line a narrow two track road through the rear of the sloping back yard, and it is here that Goodall's dark, lustrous feathered peacock slowly stalks during its day-to-day feeding about the yard.

"He often roosts on top of the shed," said Goodall. "And sometimes he'll roost on the back of the pickup in the garage," and he added, "He leaves his cards there, but we don't mind; he's kind of a privileged character around here."

Goodall has hopes of building a big farm pond on nearby property and putting a large deer pen around it. He hadn't intended to let his herd grow to the 7 or 8 he has now, he had planned to butcher them perhaps. But now he's given the idea up, "I couldn't really do it," he said with a slight sad smile.

"You know, these big beaches these days, and those long-haired...." "We want one where we can enjoy our own...." gesturing as if to finish the sentence.

Goodall likes the out-of-doors, and the more primitive and natural it is, the more he likes it. He scoffed at "leaving land open" and said he's always liked conservation. Rather than get all he can from farming it, he said, "sometimes I feel like going the other way."

His prize sheep have blazed a brilliant record at 4-H and county fairs over past years. As for now he wants to finish the cement sidewalk from the house to the garage, and build up a few other things around the farm.

THE SPOTTED BUCK and the doe are of the English Fallow species, while the others are Creme White Austrian. The deer lot on the Walt Goodall farm is nestled against a windbreak of Colorado Blue Spruce.

"IF IT FITZ...." Dad gets poor but honest BY JIM FITZGERALD

What I did on my summer vacation:

-Tested my honesty. For around 3,000 miles our family motel-hopped through several states, spreading our business evenly between Howard Johnson and Holiday Inn. Both landlords offer the family plan—no charge for children 12 years or younger. We also patronized countless tourist attractions and drive-in movies with the same policy. All of which can squirm the conscience of the father of a 13-year-old girl. Should I lie and save a few bucks? Or should I pay the full shot and thus give my children a splendid example of Christianity and Americanism in action? Heck, the kids also needed a lesson in Diplomacy, so I decided to compromise, and lie only half the time. However, it turned out that daughter Chrissie is proud of finally becoming a teenager and she wants the world to know she is practically 20. The little dear threatened to blow the whistle the first time I tried to pass her off as a 12-year-old infant. And that's how fathers become poor but honest. Onward and Upward.

-Read 10 books, the best of which was A. E. Hotchner's biography of Ernest Hemingway. It was an appropriate time to learn that I have one thing in common with Hemingway: he also thought the best way to travel is by auto, with frequent and lengthy stops, along the way to see what's behind the billboards and at the end of the exit ramps. We drove to the Smoky Mountains in North Carolina and then to St. Louis before returning to Michigan. And it probably took us 4 times as long as it would the normal motorist. On several days our driving time was a whopping 90 minutes. We kept arriving before Howard Johnson had the beds made. On no day did we drive over 4 hours. The greatest part of motoring is sitting beside a pool with a good novel and a cold drink. The important thing is to travel equipped for dry states.

-Played golf, tennis, Ping Pong, pool and baseball with my children. We also bowled and did 12 dozen belly-flops onto hard water. The only thing I refused to join them at was miniature golf. This is because miniature golf is the only thing I can't beat them at. My kids are insufferable winners and all-around lousy sports. I really don't see how they got that way.

-Reaffirmed my stupidity at the Atomic Science Museum in Oak Ridge, Tenn. It's incredible that I should nod my head wisely while some brainy youth explains how atoms are split and how nuclear hardware functions. And then I return to my motel and complain to the management that the TV won't work. And the management asks if I remembered to turn on the wall switch. And I didn't.

-Dressed son Eddie in his Detroit Tiger T-shirt and paraded him through beautiful Busch Stadium, home of the St. Louis Cardinals. This is the type of childish strutting I enjoy and I chuckled continually as we reminded Cardinal fans how our boys zonked their boys in the World Series. I chuckled until returning to the Busch parking lot and discovering a fresh dent in the fender of my new car. Even when I win, I'm a loser.

-Laughed a lot as I enjoyed my annual reintroduction to my family. There was Eddie with binoculars, on Howard Johnson's back lawn in Indiana, gleefully watching a drive-in movie across the street. There was my dieting wife, continually urging the kids to order food they couldn't possibly eat so she could eat it herself, claiming "it would be a sin to let this food go to waste." And there was Eddie, at a Smoky Mountain resort, suggesting that he and his big sister walk alone to the cafeteria that night, and dine without their parents. "We can pretend like we have a date," he said. "You don't have to like me."

I just read about the grand opening of the $60 million International Hotel in Las Vegas. One of the advertised features of this magnificent establishment is a separate dormitory for the youngsters. The idea is to get the little brats out of their parents' hair, thus freeing the adults for long nights of gambling and show-watching.

To each his own. Some day too soon, my kids will be out of my hair. And what I do on my summer vacation won't be near as much fun.

No man knows his best days until they're added to his past.

A PEACOCK BELONGING to Walt Goodall makes himself comfortable just about anyplace on the pleasant Goodall farm. In the early evening sunset, he roosts often on top of one of the farm sheds.

Mrs. Kenneth H. Hallock

Elkton United Methodist Church was the setting as Sharon Ann Snay became the bride of Kenneth H. Hallock Saturday, July 19.

Rev. E. D. Isaacs performed the double ceremony for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Snay of Elkton and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hallock Jr. of Owendale.

Music at the wedding was the Lord's Prayer and Whither Thou Goest.

The bride approached the altar with her father. She chose a floor length gown of chantilly lace over satin.

The scalloped neckline and long sleeves, tapered to a point, fashioned the bodice at the natural waistline. A redingote skirt revealed tiers of chantilly lace. The matching chapel train fell from the shoulders. Her elbow length veil of silk illusion was held secure with a caplet of lace adorned with chiffon bows and trimmed with sequins and pearls. She carried a cascade arrangement of white carnations and an orchid in the center.

Sandra Snay, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Marcia Snay and Betty Kopah, sisters of the bride, and Glenda Hallock, sister of the groom.

They wore floor length gowns of American beauty pink taffeta and chiffon styled with Empire waistlines, scooped necklines and long full sleeves of chiffon caught at the wrists with cuffs of soft green velvet leaves. The skirts were fashioned with back panels of chiffon attached at the waistline. They carried pink carnations with green streamers.

Julie Kain was the flower girl. She wore a floor length dress of chiffon over taffeta styled with a round neckline and three quarter length tiered sleeves. The full skirt featured lace inserts.

Herb Rapson was the best man and groomsmen were Milton Mellendorf, Russ Kopah and Dan Hallock, brothers of the groom. Ushers were Dale Snay and Harold Hallock.

Mrs. Snay greeted guests in a two-piece chiffon dress with a lace top and jacket. The groom's mother chose a blue chiffon three-piece suit. Their corsages were pink carnations tinted white.

A reception was held for 200 guests at the VFW at Elkton. Following a week's vacation in Northern Michigan the couple will live at Elkton.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

Dear Mister Editor:

After discussing the country's unhappy birthday and some of the problems we got with young folks, the fellers come back to the country store Saturday night and spent most of the session bringing up reasons why we old folks ain't so happy neither. Ed Doolittle served as chairman of the grownup grievance group.

We got students kicking up a ruckus during the regular school term, said Ed, and they slack off a little in the heat of summer. So this is a good time for the old folks to set in the shade and get some of our gripes off our chest, Ed allowed.

The sad fact is, Ed declared, it is the average feller that ain't saying nothing that is gitting soaked the cleanest in this country. Pore folks don't pay no taxes at all, and they is talk about turning the income tax around and paying them. The rich hire sharp lawyers to figger out ways around taxes. So it is the middle man, the feller with a steady job and no lawyer, that is paying the freight fer everybody.

It's true, as the fellers was agreed last week, Ed said, they is advantages to living in the United States, but paying the way fer the rich and the poor ain't amongst them. We got to level up the load people in this country is carrying fer themselves and the rest of the world, was Ed's words.

And Mr. Republican Ed, that looks fer reasons to go along with the new Administration, said he was pleased that President Nixon was trying to shift some of the tax burden off the back of the middle man. It's hard to stay happy when we got 10 million people in this country on welfare, and welfare rolls is growing twice as fast as the population, and the best answer we can come up with is to call welfare "special services" so bums won't be ashamed to take handouts that right now is costing more than four out of ever 10 tax dollars.

Farthermore, went on Ed, the cost of gitting handouts from the taxpayer through the Government to the bums is going up. He said he had saw where it cost 35 cent of ever tax dollar jest to process it. Fer that kind of overhead, Ed allowed, we ought to get money managers that won't give $1 million to known gangsters and pay $3 million to one farm fer not farming.

Zeke Grubb butted in to say they is some problems a feller is stuck with. He saw this study that showed men over six feet tall had higher incomes. Since the average feller is five feet 10 inches, allowed Zeke, it looks like another case of the common man taking it on the chin.

Ed got the last word, Mister Editor. He said the Army was bumping all that nerve gas around the country in railroad cars jest to gitt our minds off our problems.

Yours truly,
Uncle Tim

Paperback books can open a whole new world of entertainment and education to your child.

No longer do parents need to consider that paperbacks are cheap editions of low-brow subjects. Many new children's books come out in both hard and soft-bound editions, now.

As a rule, unless it's noted that the paperback has been edited, adapted or condensed, it has the same content as its hard-bound brother from first to last page. And this includes pictures. Of course, this means that if the hard-bound edition is poorly written, the corresponding soft-bound one will also be of low quality.

Paperbacks can even help develop creativity in young children. Youngsters seem to identify with them more. The format is similar to their home-made drawings. The big, thick, heavy-bound book often is beyond their dreams. And, paperback publishers, realizing that preschoolers need books with large illustrations, are making larger, yet lighter books than the traditional "pocket-sized" ones.

Building up a modern children's library can be costly if you narrow it to hard covered editions. If you concentrate on paper editions the job can be done for approximately one-fifth the cost. While most parents are reluctant to let their children lend or trade hard-bound books, paperbacks can be easily borrowed and traded—giving children a greater opportunity to read about different topics. And if your youngster "misplaces" his paperback book, the loss will be much less.

Reputations men try to buy are usually delivered too late.

It's extravagant folks who miss the freedom train - they live beyond their station in life.

Mrs. Richard A. Hall

Leaving for their wedding trip to Quebec and the Eastern States are Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Hall, following their marriage Saturday, July 19, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in Saint Paul's United Methodist Church, Elkton. The double ring ceremony was performed by Reverend Thomas J. Wood of Elkton. "The Sweetest Story Ever Told" was rendered by Mrs. Leonard Seely, guest soloist. Mrs. E. J. Ramseyer was organist.

The bride is the former Marjorie Louise Krohn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Krohn of Elkton. The groom is the son of Mrs. Alvin Hall and the late Mr. Alvin Hall of Gagetown. The bride, who was escorted to the altar by her father, was attired in a Victorian gown of ivory silk organza over taffeta, styled with a bell skirt. Alencon lace appliques outlined with pearls and crystals fashioned the Alencon lace bodice, Victorian neckline, elbow sleeves and wattleau chapel train. Her ivory lace bonnet held her waterfall silk illusion veil. She carried a bouquet of ivory roses and lilies of the valley entwined with an English sixpence.

Miss Ruth Ziel, former college classmate and friend of the bride, served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Phyllis Hunkele of Pontiac, Miss Sharon Noble of Detroit, Mrs. James Cullum of Cedar Springs, former college classmates of the bride, and Miss Shirley Thompson and Mrs. Kenneth Krohn, friend and sister-in-law of the bride. Junior bridesmaids were Miss Marilyn Kelly of Detroit, cousin of the groom; Misses Brenda and Carolyn Krohn, nieces of the bride, of Elkton.

All attendants chose Alencon lace gowns, styled with A-line pastel skirts, Empire ivory bodices with high Victorian necklines. Each attendant carried a basket cascade arrangement of blue asters and wore a matching floral headpiece.

Becky and Paula Krohn, nieces of the bride, dressed in miniature Victorian gowns of white organza, wore flower girls. They carried basket arrangements of asters and wore floral headpieces.

David MacRae of Cass City, cousin of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were Gerald Krohn of Norfolk, Virginia; Kenneth Krohn of Elkton, and James Cullum of Cedar Springs, Mich. Jeffrey Karr of Grosse Pointe, Bruce Krohn of Elkton and Ronald Krohn of Elkton seated the guests. Junior groomsmen were David, Curtis and Randall Krohn from Elkton.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Krohn chose a coral silk sheath dress and ivory Alencon lace coat with ivory accessories. A tango rose corsage and matching headpiece completed her costume.

FIRING LINE

Good times come with city cousins

By Richard Haines

Our confidence in Cass City was bolstered last week when we learned that several farm families had opened their farm gates to youngsters from the inner-city.

We commend the Lyle Clarke family, the Andrew Eubanks, the Donald Delongs, the Francis Butlers, and the Arthur Battels.

I can remember home on the farm when we often had city cousins visit. There was a whole bunch of them, from Indianapolis, and they were "led" by my Aunt Madalyn.

Over half of them were girls and we always slept in the hay-mow. We called it Bromegrass Sheraton. My twin and I (he's a boy, too) were as enthusiastic about their day on the farm as they were.

Of course we were only 8 or 9 years old (had you fooled, didn't I). Ahh, gee, farms are good to visit. I'm glad they're good for something.

I worked there 15 years and all I did was work, work, work. Now I work for slave-driver John, and do the same thing.

But I'll never forget one time when the city cousins arrived. It was the eve of the 4th of July and my twin and I had the cousins loading and unloading wagons. We worked until about 2 a.m. so we'd have the 4th off.

Dad was in the house watching TV most of the night, but never mind, that's where he's been for the last 25 years.

We put up a lot of bales that night. Of course, what only we good cousins together knew at the time was that besides putting up a lot of hay, a lot of other stuff was put down with it.

A haymow, you know, is an excellent place to sing "100 Bottles of Beer on a Wall" until 4 a.m. That is, if you can call that croaking, singing.

The next morning when I started down the lane, I had to hang on to the fence. I remember when I got to one fence post, I said, "Good morning."

After that, I got the tractor. I had to drive, I was too intoxicated to walk.

Cow getting was no big problem at our place. Sometimes I remember, we took the pickup, or even the car. As we drove down the back lane, Bossy would look up with stricken horror. Now if you want to know of a way to send the cows to the barn in a hurry....

At choretime, Ma and Pa would sometimes be away (but the pick-up wasn't) and I think we had the only Ford pickup (known around the community for its ancient graciousness) that could clock 130 MPH in a quarter mile narrow farmlane.

At least it seemed 130 MPH. Pa would ask how those truck tracks "got all over the lane like that" and each of us would consistently respond, "Sure beats me."

That July 4, we had kept "Bossy" up so late, that in the morning her milk had caffeine in it.

I think it's getting about time for another farm visit myself.

Blight again a threat to bean

By Alfred P. Ballweg

Are we approaching another severe "Common Blight" year in our crop of white Navy Beans? The stage was all set for this kind of a situation to develop following the bean blight epidemic of 1968. I know many of our bean growers and others interested in the industry have been hoping this would not happen.

I discovered the first common blight infection in the '69 crop in a fairly large field of San-flacs during this past week over in Gifford township. They were planted fairly early and are now reaching the blossom and vining stage. The infection could not be seen from the road because at present it is confined to the lower leaves. By walking into the field one would have no trouble finding the infected spots. The growers became alarmed when while cultivating they noted the unusual condition of the bean plants.

The bean grower has few alternatives to prevent the spread of the disease once in the growing plants. The Gifford township farmers were cultivating the beans which is one way of spreading the infection from one end of the row to the other. After discovering the blight they discontinued any further cultivating. It can also be spread by just plain walking up and down the row hoeing or weeding. Since the prevailing winds are from the southwest, you can expect it to move with the winds. Insects may also carry it.

If we are able to detect it in its early stages, spraying the field with one of several copper compounds may help to control its spread.

I urge growers to keep out of bean fields in every way possible to keep from spreading the infection by man himself.

Common blight has the following symptoms—brown lesions begin along leaf margin and may spread over entire leaf—bright yellow zone surrounds lesions.

It is especially damaging in extended warm, wet periods.

Behind the Counter Drug Abuse

Druggists in a Midwestern city were recently alerted to a wave of forged prescriptions, written on blanks that had been stolen from a hospital clinic. The warning was not circulated by the police, but by the pharmacists.

Since a prescription is an order for drugs written by a physician, and since the druggists had no way of knowing forgeries were in circulation, it would not have been illegal for them to have filled the prescription and kept quiet about it. In most businesses, a sale is a sale.

But the pharmacists knew the dangers that the young thrill-seekers would encounter if they took heavy doses of the drug ordered on the fake prescriptions.

Used under a doctor's supervision, the drug is helpful and harmless. An overdose could cause permanent brain damage or death. That is the core of the drug abuse problem: products that can help may also injure, if the necessary warnings are ignored. This is one reason pharmacists are so careful about filling prescriptions, and even more cautious about refilling them.

The story of the forged prescriptions had a "happy" ending. The druggists not only refused to fill them, but they also called the police, and the youngsters were placed in custody for their own protection. When they learned of the danger, most of the young people were appalled, and to some extent, grateful to the pharmacists who had "blown the whistle" on their thrill-seeking.

Chain Reaction

With great ceremony, the boy gave the lead domino a gentle poke. A rapid series of sharp clicks preceded down the line, paused briefly at a gap too large, then continued onward. Then, abruptly, everything was still.

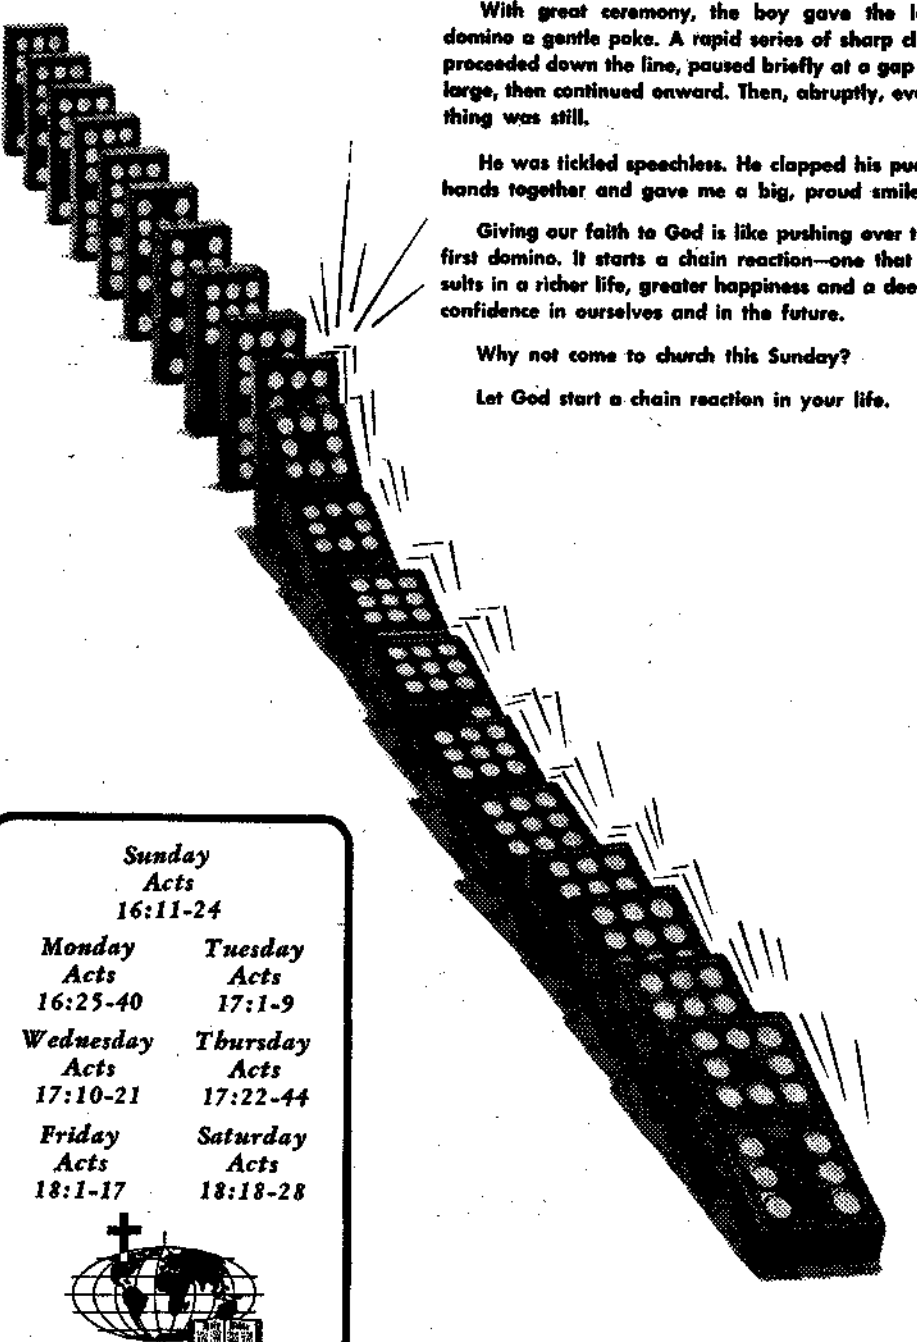

He was tickled speechless. He clapped his pudgy hands together and gave me a big, proud smile.

Giving our faith to God is like pushing over the first domino. It starts a chain reaction—one that results in a richer life, greater happiness and a deeper confidence in ourselves and in the future.

Why not come to church this Sunday?

Let God start a chain reaction in your life.
