

THE NORTH BRANCH of the Cass River as seen from Reed Road graphically illustrates the lack of rain in the area. Aurey Frederick, who lives near the river, says that never before has it been dry this late in the year...and only seldom has it been dry at all. It's what you could expect, he said, when there has only been about a half inch of rain here since the middle of July. Two years ago at this time, the river was overflowing its banks and normally we have plenty of water in the stream in the fall, Frederick noted.

Supervisor for 10 years

Johnson quits board

Harold Johnson, chairman of the district board of supervisors, submitted his resignation.

HAROLD JOHNSON

nation to the board in its regular session Tuesday at the courthouse.

The resignation will be effective Dec. 31 and Johnson said in his official letter that it was for personal reasons that he did not want to be made a part of the official record.

His resignation will leave a vacancy to be filled by the board. The man appointed will serve one year until a representative from Johnson's district can be elected. Johnson represents the district composed of Indianfields township, including Caro. His successor must also live in this district.

Johnson has said that he hopes to extensively travel after he leaves the board. He has served on the board of supervisors for 10 years.

The board spent the majority of its time, other than conferring with members of the Court-house and police bargaining teams in committee sessions over wages, deciding how office space in the courthouse would be allotted.

After about two weeks of off and on again discussion, the supervisors decided on the following arrangements:

The district court now in two rooms on the second floor of the courthouse will be switched to the civil defense rooms in the basement of the jail.

The agricultural extension office will switch from the jail basement to rooms formerly occupied by the district court and also to the rooms formerly operated by Intermediate School Superintendent and his staff.

The Social Welfare Department will expand into rooms held by the intermediate school department.

Cass Cityan dies in tractor mishap

William Sinkutch, 74, of Elmwood Road, rural Cass City, was fatally injured when he was pinned under a tractor he was driving in a field near his home Tuesday afternoon.

According to Cass City Police Chief Carl Palmateer, who investigated, Sinkutch was evidently riding his light tractor with double disks behind when the accident occurred.

The disks were attached by a 7 to 8-foot long chain hitched near the bottom of the tractor seat. Evidently the disks became plugged and pulled the tractor over backwards, pinning the driver.

He was still in the seat when authorities arrived on the scene. The accident was observed by Mrs. Sinkutch who rushed to Cemetery Road and hailed a passer-by, Tim Finkbeiner, who notified authorities.

The accidental death was the second in about a year in the family of Mrs. Sinkutch. A brother previously drowned in the Cass River.

He was pronounced dead at the scene by Coroner Ben Colton. The body was taken to Little Funeral Home.

Final rites will be held in Detroit, but funeral arrangements are not complete.

Plan penny hunt for harvest sale

Members of the retail division of the Cass City Chamber of Commerce hammered out details for town-wide promotions at a meeting Tuesday night at the Cultural Center.

The first will be next week end, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Oct. 16-18, when the annual fall Harvest Sale will be held.

In addition to the usual sale bargains, a returning feature will be a penny hunt when 10,000 pennies will be placed in sawdust to be picked up by children 10 and under.

The site will be the parking lot at the corner of Main and North Seeger.

An ambitious program for the Christmas season has been arranged. There will be three drawings for cash prizes with tickets available from every member of the retail division of the Chamber.

In addition, four free kiddie shows will be shown on Saturday afternoons starting the week end after Thanksgiving. Santa Claus will be in town as usual with candy for the kids.

In cooperation with the Chamber of Commerce, the retail division will also sponsor a free Halloween movie, "The Traveling Saleslady."

Sentence Franks to 3-10 years

An Otisville man was sentenced Monday by Judge James Churchill in Tuscola County Circuit Court to 3 to 10 years at Jackson Prison for assault with intent to rape.

Ronald Franks was sentenced for assaulting a married woman in the kitchen of her home and threatening her with a knife. Credit was given for 152 days spent in jail awaiting trial.

The judge also passed sentence in two other cases Monday.

Theron Shaw, Flint, was found guilty of assault and battery. He was ordered to pay a fine of $100 and costs of $125 within 30 days or spend 30 days in jail.

He was found guilty of assaulting Harley Barber, Caro, and the case dates back to Sept. 1968, when it was appealed from Justice Court.

Arnold Clappett received a 3-month jail sentence and was placed on probation for two years for driving with a revoked license, subsequent offense.

In addition he was fined $50 and costs of $100, payable at $15 per month. Stipulations of his parole prohibit drinking and driving.

Cass City men's club forming

A new men's club will be formed in Cass City next Tuesday night at Cass City High School gym, Tom Woody announced this week.

The club is for all male adults who feel the need for a little exercise. This is for the men who feel slightly bleary eyed from watching TV, the men who feel their trousers shrinking...or the men who just want a night out, away from it all.

The club will meet from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. every Tuesday, Woody said, and is open to all. The Cass City teacher said that he would be present to get things organized. We plan to offer volleyball, basketball, table tennis and weight lifting as well as coffee and cards for those who desire something more sedentary, he noted.

We hope to elect officers and have a formal organization. The only cost to members will be in figuring a way to pay the cost of using the gym which is $10 a night, Woody said.

FROM THE Editor's Corner

"Protest without plans or programs for progress are games that children play." When I read that the other day in a Detroit daily I thought immediately of Dr. John Karpovich, Caro, and his tax protest group.

Dr. John was the catalyst that brought the tax protestors together almost immediately after the State equalized property valuations in the county and some rural property taxes jumped 50 to 75 per cent.

The organization seems strongest in townships where the property taxes jumped the most. Since most rural counties received the same treatment it wasn't long before the revolt spread over many parts of rural Michigan.

The original idea was to hold back taxes for as long as legally possible (3 years) and pay the penalty while hampering the operation of the State's business, to force attention to the high property taxes. As a group, the protestors were determined to vote against any tax regardless of merit (and many of them did).

But to be really effective, tax protest groups need the massive vote of the city...and simply revolting against the property tax gets little sympathy there if it means an increase in another type tax.

So it wasn't long before the protest theme switched from the abolishment of the property tax to the cutting of all taxes.

In line with this economy in government became the rallying cry. There were the usual requests for cutting the salary of the legislature (always popular) and other proposals that bring instant accord but have little practical value in denting the huge cost of government.

The original group included many hard-working, dedicated persons who ordinarily were not associated with groups and causes...and there is no doubt that the calls they made in Lansing and their lobbying efforts helped call attention to a serious problem.

It is probable that this effort forwarded their cause more than the catch phrases and the tax threats ever did. But when individuals in the group made an all out effort to defeat school millage measures some of the goodwill faded away before the concern of parents.

In the east half of Tuscola county you hear relatively little about the original group.

Meanwhile the tax protest instigators kept plugging away and moved to broaden their base. Soon they had a state-wide organization, the "Voice of the People". Dr. John is president.

Last week the rebels from other States and Michigan formed a regional group. Dr. John is chairman.

The next step will be a meet- Concluded on page 3.

BOBBY WAYNE MIRACLE and his mini-bike.

From accident injuries

Bobby Miracle, 9 fights to recover

Nine-year-old Bobby Wayne Miracle isn't riding his bike these days the way he used to.

Until three weeks ago riding his new mini-bike up and down the dusty, seldom traveled gravel road in front of his home, 7 1/2 miles southeast of Cass City, was a favored pastime for the cheerful, friendly son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Miracle, Deford.

He was playing the way he had hundreds of times before when a simple spill caused an accident that drastically changed his and his family's life.

With his brother Mike, 7, and sister Lois, 14, riding his bike up and down a roadside ditch in front of his home on a Saturday morning when the pedal of his bike caught in a root and he went tumbling.

His head hit the bank and Bobby slumped unconscious to the ground...although a subsequent examination showed no sign of a bump, cut or external bruise.

But the boy failed to regain consciousness and an ambulance rushed him to Hills and Dales General Hospital. After 3 hours he was transferred to St. Mary's Hospital in Saginaw for a 3-hour operation.

Bobby remained in extremely critical condition for six days...it was the following Thursday before he regained consciousness. They took part of a bone from his head, his mother said, and found a large knot on the inside of his skull...but it wasn't a blood clot, she said thankfully.

While the worst is over the family will be feeling the effects of the accident for many months. Bobby is confined to his house. He can't move around too much...is forbidden to walk up and down stairs...will be out of school until the second semester.

His mother is on a leave of absence from General Cable in Cass City. But I won't be able to go back, she said simply. I can't trust his care to a babysitter until he's completely better.

At first glance it's impossible to tell that Bobby suffered a serious accident. There are no scars, no bruises, it's not until you've been around him for a while and see that he can't move his eyes normally that you realize that the boy is a ways yet from a complete cure.

The doctors say, Mrs. Miracle confided, that the condition may cure itself within a year. If it doesn't, he goes back for more surgery.

But the physicians have promised a complete recovery. All it will take is time and patience.

Not too high a price to pay...unless you happen to be nine years old...are feeling fine again...and can't go out and play.

Village seeks cooperation of home owners

Village authorities issued a warning and made a request to residents this week.

President Lambert Althaver cautioned home owners against burning leaves on the concrete curbs or blacktop roads.

The fire dries and cracks the concrete, he explained, and melts the blacktop and shortens the life of both.

Village Engineer Bill Schram reminded residents that the crew plans to flush water hydrants Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 15-16.

It sometimes causes rusty, red water, to come from home taps, he said. The water is still safe to drink but could stain clothes being washed.

Need UNICEF volunteers

It's getting close to UNICEF time again in Cass City and Mrs. Elaine Jezewski, chairman, reported that volunteer adults are needed to join the committee.

Persons willing to give this worthwhile drive a helping hand and hold an office are asked to attend a committee meeting Tuesday, Oct. 14, at 7:30 p.m. at the Jezewski home, 4190 Sherman, Cass City.

The UNICEF drive is annually held at Halloween and children canvass the area for donations instead of treats, to help the needy in other countries.

Comment's seed potato crop makes sandy soil profitable

Clare Comment, 33-year-old Gagetown area farmer, doesn't consider himself to be a wheeler-dealer, but if his business track record since he graduated from Cass City High School in 1955 doesn't qualify him for the label it comes close.

Heavy set and balding, Comment doesn't appear to be the shrewd farmer-businessman that he is. Married with three children, Lori, 8, Todd, 7, and Lisa, 6, he already owns a bar and farms 400 acres.

Before starting full-time farming he ran the bar near Bay City for several profitable years and then turned it over to a manager. He now returns only occasionally to see how his business investment is prospering.

He doesn't have time to do much more as working 400 acres with his father, Harry Comment, who lives across the road, is a full time job. Comment is strictly a cash crop farmer. Until three years ago he handled conventional Thumb cash crops: grain and beans.

But part of the land he works is light and sandy. In 1967 he decided to try this land for growing seed potatoes. Evidently it proved successful. The next year he jumped potato production to 23 acres and he now is in the process of harvesting his largest crop...50 acres.

Comment is the first farmer in the area to raise certified seed potatoes...but judging by the results he may not be the last.

This year's crop promises to be poor in comparison to the previous two years' crops when he averaged somewhere in the neighborhood of 650 bushels to the acre. Because of lack of rain the yield this year may be as low as 325 bushels to the acre.

Ordinarily, Comment harvests his potatoes and stores them loose in a 50 x 80 foot building...waiting until early spring to sort them. When the crop is harvested, I'll have this entire building loaded with potatoes that will reach a peak height of about 10 feet, he explained.

Because of a rush order for 1,000 bushels this fall, Comment was forced to alter the routine and grade potatoes as they were brought from the field.

Potato grading for seed customers means simply that the potatoes are run over a conveyor where imperfect or jumbo potatoes are removed before they are placed in 100-pound bags.

Comment sells the jumbo potatoes for eating potatoes and gets $1.25 for a 50-pound sack. The seed potatoes this fall brought $3.00 a bag.

This year he has grown three types potatoes: Superior and Onaway, early varieties, and Katahans, a late variety.

Comment says he has little trouble selling his certified seed. Big customers come from around Bay City-Saginaw rural areas who grow potatoes as part of a truck farming operation.

The only drawback to seed potato farming is the labor necessary to make it work...and that's probably the reason why many farmers hesitate to start.

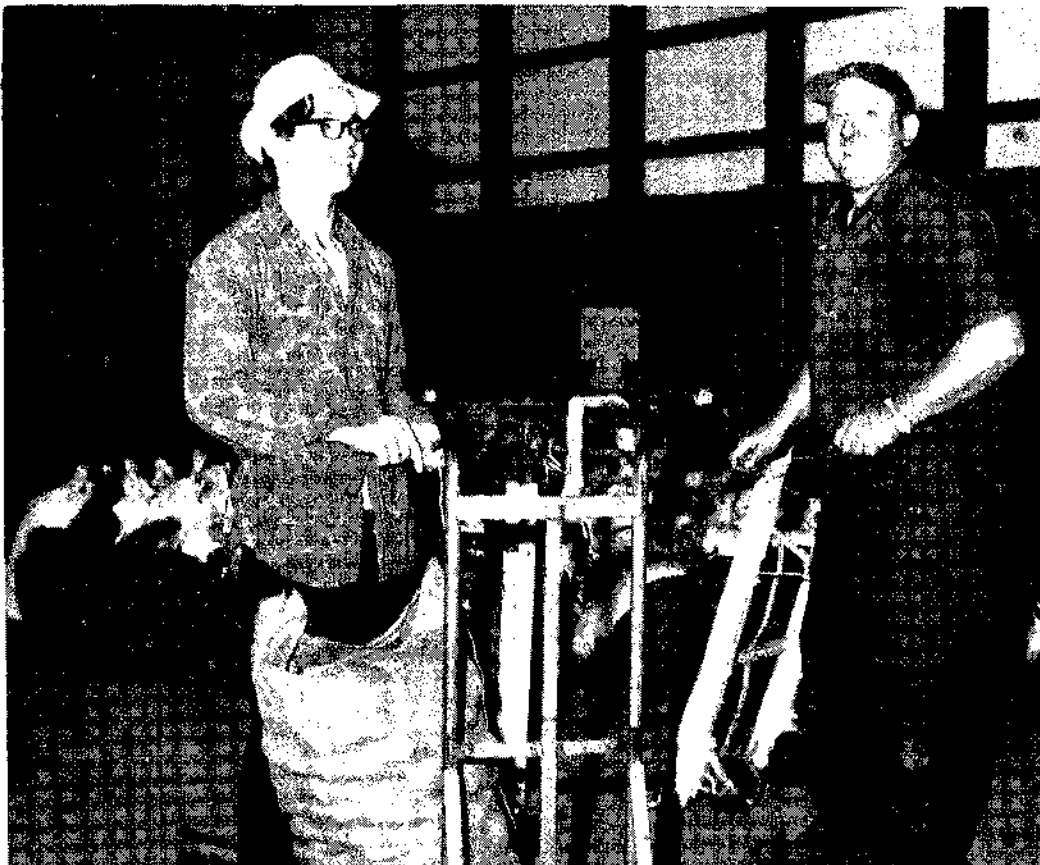

To harvest his 50 acres, Comment feels that it will take good weather and plenty of extra

Drugs From the Sea

You might not think of studying starfish and sponges and sea cucumbers to learn about cancer or viruses or heart disease, but a group of scientists near New York's famous Coney Island are doing just that.

For instance, the sponge is believed to live forever. Researchers at the Osborn Laboratories of Marine Sciences hope to find out why. And how does the starfish regrow new arms?

The sea cucumber has poisons that can stop cancer in mice, but which will kill a man if injected into his bloodstream. Oriental cooks and eat sea cucumbers without any ill effects — does this keep them from getting cancer?

The puffer fish, which blows up like a balloon when it's threatened, carries a remarkable poison that is 150,000 times more powerful than the curare used by South American Indians on their arrow heads. Now it's being used in experiments on heart and nerve-block studies.

"We are seeking drugs from the sea," said Dr. Ross F. Nigrelli, laboratory director. "They hope to turn information over to pharmacologists on new antibiotic agents, substances that affect the development of embryos, drugs that prevent blood clotting, and a wide variety of toxic and anti-toxic agents."

The search for drugs has been going on for centuries, with almost every type of growth on earth having been tested and studied. It's really not so unusual that scientists are now looking for new pharmacologicals under the sea.

Oct. 5-11 is National Newspaper Week. Oct. 12-18 is National School Lunch Week. What better way to celebrate both than to resolve not to say anything bad about the food and the cooks and the newspaper and its editor until they are over?

After you read about the race battles in Detroit schools such as Cooley, isn't it nice to be able to report that at Vassar High School Friday the student elected queen was black?

The team support in Vassar was great Friday. There was a very large home-coming crowd on hand for the game even though neither team boasted squads that are in title contention this year.

If Cass City can do as well for their home-coming Oct. 24 it should boost the team, the school and the financially hard pressed athletic coffers.

Oh yes, before I forget. The lady whom I couldn't identify a couple of weeks ago who exhibited the unusual potato was Mrs. Janice Peyrek.

After I made the boo-boo and lost her name it was almost certain that something else involving her would happen. It did. The Peyreks grew an extra large pumpkin (over 45 pounds) and we made arrangements with husband, Jim, to work out a shot for Halloween. Before the appointed time, Mrs. Peyrek came rushing in to tell us not to come...someone stole the pumpkin.

The new car license plates with 3 letters and 3 numerals will go on sale Nov. 15. Current plates will be good until March 31...a month later than the normal expiration date.

Secretary of State James Hare says the new date should help eliminate crowding at deadline time. But it's almost certain you'll find most of the same old buyers on March 31 that you found on the last day of February in previous years at the license bureau in Cass City.

Two years out of three I'm one of them.

Tell them thanks, said Dr. Ed Scollon, Lions president, this week, as he reported record broom sales in the community. We've already passed the $1,500 mark which is a new record and have several big industrial accounts still left to sell.

Despite booming sales the Lions aren't about to run out. Anyone needing a broom can get instant delivery by calling Alger Freiburger who stores them for the club.

SPORTS FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

By H.M. Bulen

Here's one hard to believe, but it's true...Each year, one boy is voted best college football player in the nation and awarded the Heisman Trophy--but, in EVERY season since 1950 the team that had the Heisman Trophy winner was NOT able to win the national championship!...Last year, Southern Cal's O. J. Simpson won the Heisman but Ohio State won the national championship...In '67 UCLA's Gary Behan won the Heisman but Southern Cal was national champ...In '66, Florida's Steve Spurrier won the Heisman but Notre Dame was national champ, and so on, each and every year for the last 19 consecutive years. You'd think having the Heisman winner would help a team win the national championship, but, oddly enough, it hasn't

Here's a quote we saw recently that shows a reason why sports are so great...Homer Smith, coach at Davidson, said, "The poorest boy can earn stardom, but the richest boy can't buy it."

Did you know there are amazing similarities surrounding two of the New York Mets, Cleon Jones and Tommy Agee... Both were born in the same month of the same year...Both were born in Alabama, a few miles from each other...Both were on the same high school football team...And now both are regular outfielders for the Mets...Even their uniform numbers are close...Agee wears No. 20 and Jones 21.

HEAR 5 CASES IN TUSCOLA CIRCUIT COURT

In a non-jury trial Donald Eckles, Saginaw, was found not guilty of selling tobacco products with a value of $240.

He was arrested in front of a Reese grocery store and the cigarettes were found in his car.

The prosecution failed to prove that he was selling the tobacco.

William Davis Jr., Mayville, pleaded innocent of negligent homicide when arraigned Monday. The case stems from an automobile accident on Wireline Road in Indian fields township.

In the mishap, Rodney Lee Campbell was killed. The prosecution is claiming that Davis was driving too fast and in a negligent manner when the accident occurred.

BASIC VALUES never change, says William Kitchen.

fields of its all-encompassing roots.

He said his father owned one of the first Fordson tractors in the area. Still another joy of his boyhood where he had two brothers, was "getting up in the morning and finding those newborn lambs out in the barn."

William, who has never in his life voted Democrat is disenchanted with the dying Elm trees that line the edge of the roadsides and fields. A tree lover, he says "You never would have dreamed this could happen a few years ago." As they die he normally cuts them down. "I'd rather see them gone, than near dead," he said.

If William were to start life all over again, he says he would probably get a laborer job. He feels modern wages are sufficient to make a comfortable living.

Still, one of the benefits of having a farm is watching his grandchildren run and romp "at Grampa's". Mr. and Mrs. Kitchen have four grown daughters and sons, some with children. Their four children include Irvin, at home, Roy of Port Huron, Mrs. Ruth Bentley and Mrs. Donald Spencer.

William was impressed with the recent Apollo 11 moonshot. "That's out'a this world," he said with one of his many bits of wit he laces through his conversation. Yet he doesn't see any great need for going there. "I think God put it there for a purpose, and it's going to stay there as long as he wants it to."

The demands of the farm have not permitted William to do much travelling. Besides Canada, he reports he has been to two states: The State of Michigan and the State of Grace.

AGENT'S CORNER

Start sewing this fall

By Judy Marks Extension Agent

Do you ever say to yourself, I wish I could sew? Why not try sewing this fall. The beginner sewer should choose a pattern that is uncomplicated, simple in design, and has few pieces. A simple skirt or a shift with straight lines are a good first project. Some patterns on the market are designated for the beginning sewer. When shopping for a pattern, be sure and purchase the right size. Compare your measurements with those listed on the size charts shown in the pattern books and on the pattern envelope.

Look over your pattern before you cut into your fabric. Spend a few minutes to study the pattern guide to learn the general procedure of putting the garment together. A firmly woven fabric which doesn't ravel is a very good choice for your first sewing project. Your pattern should be cut on the grain of the fabric. The pattern guide will show the best pattern layout for your particular pattern size and width of fabric. The distance from the selvage to the grainline on the pattern piece should measure the same at all points.

After pinning the pattern piece at the grain line, smooth the pattern and place more pins within the seam allowance at right angles to the edge of the pattern. A good reminder to cut out the notches is to place a pin in each one on the pattern edge.

Cut your garment with a pair of plain shears. Do not use pinking shears.

After your garment is cut, transfer the pattern marks to the fabric. Two methods of marking your pattern are tailor tacks or with dressmaker's tracing paper. The method of marking depends on your fabric.

Follow the pattern guide for the step by step construction of the garment. Before you know it your garment is done and you're thinking about what you will make next!

St. Pancratius Women's Council meets Monday

Sister Alice Miller, of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, was guest speaker at the monthly meeting of St. Pancratius Women's Council Monday evening, Oct. 6. She is coordinator of religious education of the Thumb Deanery.

Sr. Alice Miller has taught 15 years and her topic was on "new trends" in religious thinking today. A question and answer period followed her talk.

Twenty-nine members and Mrs. Joseph Oleski of Wilmet, a guest, attended.

Fr. Leo Gengler presented his comments on the Liturgy of Mass to the group.

Christianity for adults classes will be held at Sacred Heart School in Caro on Thursdays for the next four weeks.

The Thumb Deanery fall meeting is Oct. 29 at St. Anthony's parish in Helena.

The dates for the annual bazaar in November were set.

Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Bill Bliss Jr., Mrs. Jean Quinn, Mrs. James Smithson and Mrs. Ken Zdrojewski.

ing at Denver to organize the western states. Dr. John will attend.

Meanwhile, the oratory of the groups has been refined. Now the official line is that high taxes are not the problem, but simply the symptoms of the problem. Government spending will be attacked on all levels. Simple, concise and sensible...and meaningless.

Perhaps the protestors should slow down the organizing and outline a real cost-cutting program backed by a responsible study. In addition to killing school millage proposals they might well come up with a reasonable alternative for the education of our children.

When they talk of abandoning the property tax they should have an outline as to how they feel the money should be raised.

This type of dissent is needed and welcome. But, in truth, to protest without plans for progress are games that children play...whether they be 19 or 90.

AROUND THE FARM

Need for fall fertilizing varies

By Don Kebler

There are so many differing reasons for plowing or not plowing down fertilizer in the fall no wonder confusion occurs. Here is basically what the Michigan State University soils department recommends for the application of fertilizers. Whenever possible place the fertilizer in a band located to the side and below the seed placement level at planting time. They also deviate and say a pre-plant application can be made but, be sure to plant with some fertilizer also.

Nothing is said regarding fall plowdown fertilization prior to spring planting versus spring plowdown or incorporation prior to spring planting.

There is really no way to tell how much fertilizer loss occurs on any one soil in any one year from the time of soil incorporation to planting time except by making at least two soil tests. One test could be made in the fall before fertilizer is plowed under and another in the spring just before planting. However, the only useful knowledge this would tell us is what our soil nutrient level was at planting time.

Certainly there is going to be a change in the level of available nutrients from the time they are added to when the crop begins to feed on them. This available nutrient level is constantly changing due to soil chemical and bacterial action on fixed nutrients.

We also know that just as soon as fertilizer nutrients are dissolved in the soil moisture chemical and bacterial action plus fixation processes begin.

The real decision will be made on the farmers' labor load, time requirements, fertilizer costs, soil fertility levels, past crop yield performances plus other need demands of each operator. Which ever value is the highest will decide the answer.

IT TAKES LESS than two hours to fill this farm wagon with certified seed potatoes when harvest is in full swing on the Clare Comment farm.

help to enable him to finish in October.

When the potato picker is working in the field, drivers are needed for the tractors that pull both the picker and the farm wagon that takes the potatoes from the picker. In addition, 2 or 3 more persons work on the picker taking out rocks, weeds and dirt from the crop.

It's a lot of work, Comment said, as he wiped his brow while sacking his rush order last week...a very lot of work.

But the potato crop has turned light sandy soil into profitable farm land and for results most good businessmen are willing to put up with a little extra work and inconvenience.

And Comment, as we said before, is a good businessman. You are apt to see a potato crop on the Comment farm for many years to come.

Complete audit reports are available for further inspection at the Superintendent's office.

In presenting the financial report for the past school year we would like the residents of our school district to consider the following:

- Operating funds or cash in the bank decreased by over $30,000 during the past year.
- The school will be operating on a balanced budget during the current year but only at the expense of our educational program. Probably all residents are aware of the curtailed program that is being offered this year.
- The State Legislature is being called into special session this fall to develop a new program for support of education. Those who have been looking to the State for the solution of school support will find that if the State assumes total responsibility, the end result will be:
 - Higher taxes for our district both in property tax and personal income tax.
 - More State control with local boards of education having less and less to say about the local school program.

If a program is adopted such as Rep. Roy Spencer proposed last year there will still be some local responsibility with some local control.

We hope that you will watch the developments in Lansing with care and let your legislators know your wishes.

TUSCOLA COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS MEETING

AUGUST 26, 1969

Meeting of the Tuscola County Board of Supervisors held August 26, 1969. Clerk called the roll with all Supervisors present.

Meeting in Gagetown of the 7th District Association of Supervisors was discussed.

Mr. Alton Reavey came before the Board and introduced Mr. James Collison, Director of East Central Michigan Economic Development District to discuss comprehensive public planning and recommended that two members be appointed by this Board from this County on a steering committee. Little change seen after interest ceiling lifted

INTEREST UP

When the Legislature lifted the ceiling on interest rates before the regular session adjourned in July, observers were unsure what the effect would be on the rates themselves.

The ceiling had remained at 7 per cent for years and the prospect of suddenly removing it completely scared some who feared a skyrocketing of rates.

It appears now that fears of outlandish rates were unfounded, however, as the rate has climbed to between 8 and 8 1/2 per cent and stopped.

Money is still tight, to be sure, but the supply has loosened somewhat in the home loan field.

The removal of the ceiling is in effect until Dec. 31, 1970. Observers say it is doubtful, however, that any new ceilings will bring the rates back to the 7 per cent rate. They say a rate ceiling of around 9 per cent is more realistic and more logical.

The raising of the limit was more apparent than real in most instances anyway, since most persons were paying a higher rate than 7 per cent on home loans through various other charges.

In fields other than home loans, rates higher than 7 per cent have prevailed for years.

In some instances, such as loans granted to corporations, there never was a ceiling established, this being under a theory that corporations are smart enough in money matters to fend for themselves.

Charitable corporations also have been able all the time to waive the ceiling on loans of amounts larger than $250,000.

Small loan companies have been permitted by law to lend up to $1,000 with a maximum interest rate of 30 per cent per annum on the first $300 and 15 per cent on the rest of the loan. However, if such a company loaned more than $1,000, the entire loan had to be charged at 7 per cent.

Other exemptions come for persons such as pawnbrokers, who are permitted to charge 3 per cent per month computed on a monthly basis, though they may not compound loans or discount them.

Automobile dealers may charge from 6 per cent to 12 per cent per year on a loan, depending on the age of the vehicle sold.

Such loans, however, actually are at a true annual interest rate almost twice the amount specified. A car financed at a rate of $6 per $100 per year and paid off in installment payments actually involves an interest rate of nearly 12 per cent.

Credit unions also are permitted to charge a maximum of 1 per cent per month on the unpaid balance.

HEAT NOT HARMFUL

A researcher at Michigan State University says thermal pollution--the name used when an electric plant powered by nuclear energy uses water to cool machinery and as a result heats the lake on which it is located--isn't necessarily bad.

James Wooley, who works in the school's Department of Resource Development, says the location of a nuclear plant determines whether the heat it gives off has a bad effect on the environment around it.

He said a generator plant situated on one of the Great Lakes, should cause no adverse effect, so long as there is not an abundance of the plants, because of the amount of water in the lakes.

But, Wooley says, if the plant is located on a smaller lake it may heat the lake to a point where damage can be done.

INTERSTATE GROWS

The Interstate highway system, scheduled to be more than 25,000 miles of total highway when it is completed, is growing rapidly across the country and Michigan is one of the leaders.

The latest figures show 915 miles of interstate highways are open to traffic in Michigan, giving it one of the biggest amounts of mileage in the country.

The remaining mileage is expected to be completed by the mid 1970's.

No substitute for alfalfa for forage

There is no good forage substitute for alfalfa on well-drained, well-fertilized Michigan soils.

Research by Michigan State University crop scientists shows that alfalfa is the best forage for hay, haylage or silage.

To keep alfalfa profitable, (1) plant a high yield variety, (2) spray to control the alfalfa weevil (3) topdress annually and (4) cut three or four times to produce high yields of 5 to 7 tons or more per acre.

When you are getting yields in the 2- to 3-ton range, it doesn't pay to spray for alfalfa weevil control.

You can start planning for better yields next year by deciding to make that first cutting in late May or early June.

The next step is to increase the amount of topdressing, primarily of potassium. The early first cutting, before the alfalfa weevil problem is serious can eliminate the need for spraying until after the cutting is taken.

Best yields can be obtained by planting early maturing Flammende varieties such as Du Puits or the wilt-resistant Saranac. The third or fourth cutting can be made in September without reducing yields the following year--if you topdress adequately with potash and use the proper varieties.

The fall cutting practice is a new recommendation established by MSU crop scientists.

The Truth Generally Lies Under the Surface

The true facts about anything are seldom pure and never simple. Facts often are deeply hidden, like the seven-eighths of an iceberg which always lie under water.

When your newspaper reporter says to the mayor, or the school superintendent, or the chief of police, "May I ask you a question or two?" he is really "diving" for facts. He hopes to bring to the light of day other related names, figures, or relationships which will tell his readers a fuller story.

Good newspapers, good newspapermen constantly dive, dig, and probe beneath the appearances of things to their deeper, often hidden meanings and connections.

There are all kinds of newspapers and all kinds of newspapermen. Nobody ever claimed they were all perfect. But one thing is certain: No other agency, institution, or group of people of any kind is engaged in digging out and publishing important facts about our public life.

That's the job of a free and unlicensed press. This newspaper would like you to remember that during National Newspaper Week, October 5-11.

Members in "business" to raise building funds

It takes a good deal of dedication for a 56-member congregation to build a $125,000 church, but by mid-December if all goes as expected, the members of the Lamotte United Missionary Church hope to have completed a spanking new building on M-53, south of Hemans. Naturally, the project has strained the church budget to its maximum...and only a co-operative effort has made construction possible. The urgent need for church funds has resulted in two "church businesses" by members of the congregation.

The money raising schemes started after previous drives among members raised the $20,000 needed to get started.

While the need for a new church has been evident for many years, it was not until three years ago that an action program was started.

In the first two years $5,000 was raised. The third year a church-wide drive netted $14,000 and the new building became a practical reality.

With the money raised to get started the entire membership pitched in as construction started.

Progress was slow until this spring when Don King, a contractor and member of the church, agreed to take over construction.

"It's hard for me to estimate the many thousands of dollars that he has saved us," the Rev. Fred Becknell, the church's young, enthusiastic pastor for the last 5 1/2 years, said.

King is working on the project for less than his standard wages and is allowing volunteers to pitch in to cut labor costs. We've already had an estimated 1,000 hours of volunteer labor donated, Becknell noted, and it has really helped keep costs down.

The cost-cutting programs have been so successful that the current actual total cash outlay for the building is estimated at about $90,000.

But $90,000 is a lot of money. Everybody is helping to ease the load. The young people in the church are in the fireplace wood business. They already have some 40 cords stacked and ready to sell...all of the money going to the church.

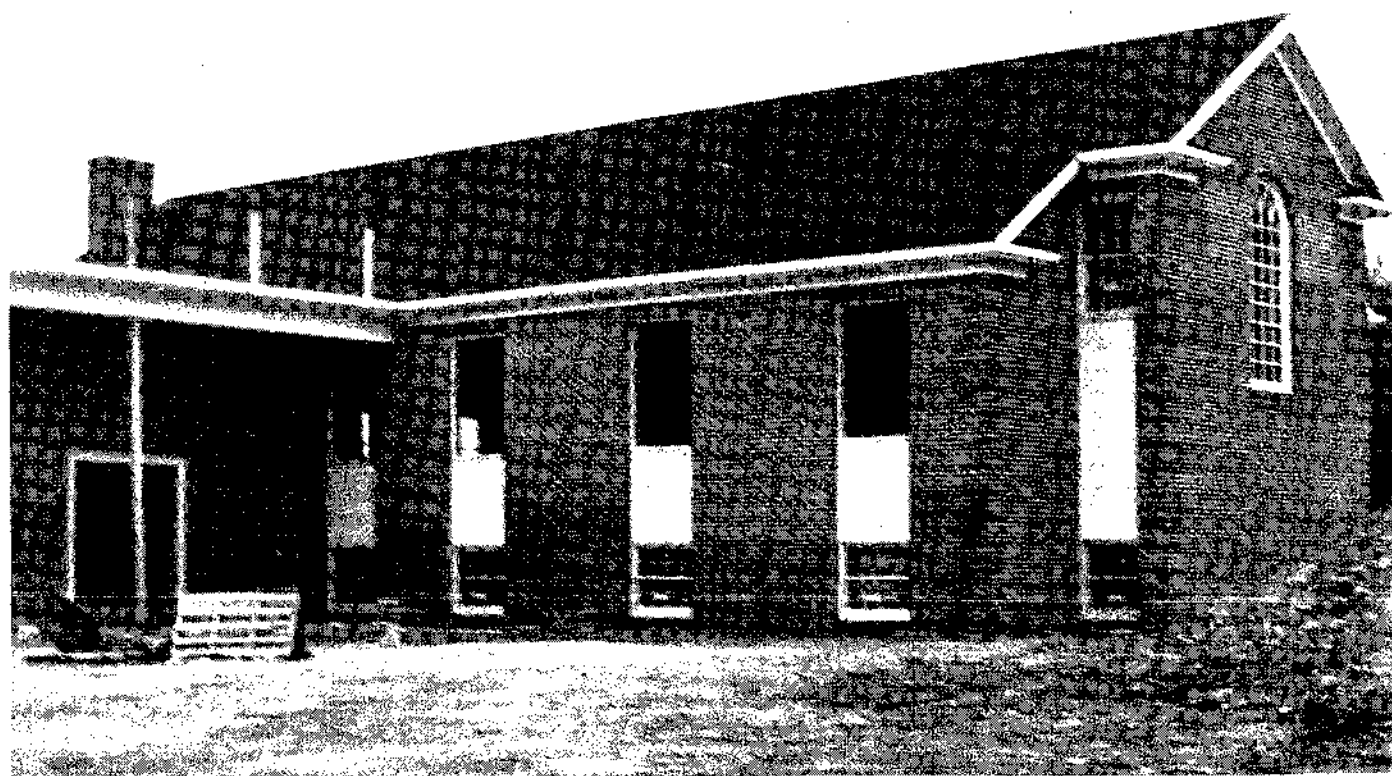

"We have a Detroit buyer for it," Becknell explained, "but would rather sell it locally." By mid-December the youngsters will have raised $1,000.

Becknell and another church member, Boyd King, have started a unique business in behalf of the church. They are tree trimmers. Armed with chain saws and other necessary equipment, they trim hedges and trees for a fee which goes directly to the building fund.

The new church will seat 200 in the main auditorium and 100 in the balcony and overflow areas. It includes a full basement that will be divided for rooms as needed.

While the church has 56 members, it has an average attendance of about 125.

The new building is brick and is made to last...hopefully as long as the building it replaces which has been serving the needs of the country congregation for over 60 years.

NEARING COMPLETION is the new $125,000 Lamotte United Missionary Church on M-53. The congregation hopes to move in by mid-December.

Milliken seeks oil drilling ban on fresh water lakes

The world first took note of the dangers presented by the spilling of huge amounts of oil on the oceans several years ago when the oil tanker, "Torrey Canyon," split in two off the coast of England.

The southern beaches of the island nation, normally great tourist attractions, were covered with the sticky, gooey crude oil which spilled from the ship and were made unusable. The beaches still have not returned to normal because the detergents used to disperse the oil killed off the plant life which the oil didn't.

Then, last winter, the problem came closer to home when an oil well off the coast of California sprung a leak and the portions of the coastline were covered with oil. They, too, were made unusable.

In both instances the oil eventually dispersed, and it is hoped the beaches will return to normal.

But what would happen if a similar accident occurred in a closed, fresh water body? The oil would have no place to disperse.

This question was raised publicly recently when an oil slick was discovered on Lake Erie. The slick dissipated quickly, but the question remained: what should be done about the problem?

To the state of Michigan, which is almost surrounded by water, the question is a vital one.

Gov. William G. Milliken thinks he has the answer to at least part of the problem, and he's going to ask for help from the National Governor's Conference at its September meeting in Denver.

Milliken's solution is simple: Just stop all drilling of oil and gas wells on fresh water bodies. "The threat, no matter how remote, of an accidental loss of oil from drilling operation in fresh water is such that authorization of new or continued drilling is without justification," says a resolution which has drawn up to present to the conference.

"The value of the nation's fresh waters are of a magnitude which makes mandatory their protection," the statement says. "It is not possible to devise a drilling system which will absolutely prevent accidents."

"In the best interests of the nation's natural resources, oil and gas drilling should not be permitted in fresh water."

The Governor expects to have some opposition to his attempt. Some of it will come from the state of New York, he says, since that state now allows drilling in fresh water.

But he says he'll continue working in an attempt to get the drilling stopped.

Milliken says "the report of the oil slick on Lake Erie is another indication of the dangers of pollution."

"We'd just better be on top of that and take the steps now before it's too late," he warns. It remains to be seen how many of his fellow governors will agree with him.

TRAFFIC INCREASES
While many factors are responsible for the rising number of traffic deaths in the state and country, the most apparent cause seems to be the increase in the number of miles traveled in motor vehicles.

While the total number of highway deaths in Michigan rose 73 per cent over the past 11 years, the deaths per 100 million vehicle miles rose only 6 per cent.

State Police records show 1,382 persons died in 1958 on Michigan streets and highways and that the total had risen to 2,388 per year by last year. But the number of deaths per 100 million miles driven had risen only .27 over the 11 year period, from 4.70 per 100 million miles in 1958 to 4.92 last year.

The rate of deaths per mile actually dropped in comparison to some years. The worst year was 1965, when 5.49 deaths were recorded for every 100 million miles driven.

SOME BEES HARMLESS
The Michigan Department of Natural Resources released some information which included the statement that queen bees are harmless.

The release said it is safe to hold a queen bee in your hand since they only use their stings on other queen bees.

Now, if they'd furnish us with information on how the layman can immediately distinguish between a queen bee and a regular one without waiting to see whether it stings...

EVERYONE AT Lamotte Church does what they can to raise money. Boyd King, right, and Pastor Fred Becknell have an unusual way of raising church funds. They trim trees and donate the proceeds to the church. The donation can be made directly to the church if the customer wants it this way, Becknell said.

Destroy 3 herds in "cholera-free" Mich

Hog cholera is a disease which is probably unknown to most urban residents.

Yet the dangers presented by it are so great that both the federal government and state governments across the country, including Michigan, are spending money to try to eradicate it once and for all.

The disease has no effect itself on humans. Neither does it bother any animals other than hogs. But it is highly fatal to pigs and also is highly contagious. There is no cure for it.

The danger it presents to both the rural economy and, in the long run, to the nation's pork supply, has prompted the joint state-federal effort to get rid of it.

In Michigan, the state veterinarian's office had succeeded in securing a "hog cholera free" rating for the state. It appeared the state's swine industry might never have to worry about the disease again. Then a case of cholera was reported on the James Rentfrow farm near Jones July 12. Rentfrow had a total herd of 1,800 hogs worth $61,000.

Since there is no cure for hog cholera and since it is so highly contagious, state law requires that all pigs on a farm on which it is discovered be slaughtered and buried on the farm. The law also provides that the state and federal government each will pay the farmer half of what the hogs killed are worth.

Several days later, a farmer who was a good friend of Rentfrow discovered hog cholera in his swine herd and his 503 hogs were killed, too. Officials had expected the cholera to show up on the second farm.

They did not, however, expect it to hit a third farm in the area. This happened a month after the first farm was hit. The state veterinarian's office said the virus apparently was carried to the third farm by a vehicle which drove past the two farms but never entered either one. That's how contagious the disease is.

The outbreak was traced to an area near West Plains, Mo., a state which has not advanced as far as Michigan in its cholera eradication program.

It remains to be seen, and it will be at least late in September before officials can be sure, whether the outbreak has been stemmed in Michigan. And though they may not be aware of the fact, urban dwellers, in both the roles of the taxpayer and of consumer, have a stake in stopping it.

SMOKING UP

Those frightening facts being uncovered about the dangers involved in smoking cigarettes apparently have little effect on Michigan smokers.

The state treasurer's office says cigarette taxes in Michigan brought in a record $81 million in tax revenues last year. That's nearly $10 per resident. And that averages about 150 packs per resident for the year.

The increase was only a 1.19 per cent increase over the previous year, however, while the state's population was estimated to have risen 1.9 per cent last year. So it's possible there was a slight decline in the frequency of smoking.

If the legislature follows the lead of other states around the nation, it may become more expensive to smoke in Michigan.

Of seven states which recently raised taxes, six raised the cigarette tax. Connecticut now has the highest tax in the country: a whopping 16 cents per pack. Michigan smokers pay the state 7 cents currently for each pack of cigarettes they smoke. Though the tax figures in the various states change rapidly, there are at least 33 states which tax cigarettes more heavily.

And at least 20 states charge 10 cents a pack or more. After Connecticut's record high levy, Florida charges 15 cents and New Jersey charges 14 cents per pack.

Hawks show improvement despite third grid loss Friday

Cass City did its best to ruin Vassar's home-coming last Friday but the Vulcans staged a last half rally to keep the Hawks from scoring an upset victory in ideal football weather. The score was 15-6.

It was the third loss in four starts for Cass City and the Hawks now move into what is generally considered to be the roughest part of the 1969 schedule.

The first of these tests will be against the Lakers.

After that it's Caro, Oct. 17, and the big home-coming game with Bad Axe, Oct. 24, followed by powerhouse Frankenmuth in the season's final.

Although it isn't apparent in the won-loss standings, most observers feel that the team has shown improvement throughout the season.

Since the Sandusky game when the Hawks' play was at its low ebb, the team has played interesting football.

It was almost as if two different games were played Friday. In the first half, Cass City dominated the action and in the second Vassar clearly outplayed the Hawks.

The Vulcans made the first sustained drive down the field in the first quarter, but were unable to score. They moved some 40 yards for a first down on Cass City's 12. But the Hawks stiffened and held for downs.

Later in the first period, Cass City started what turned out to be their only pay-off drive of the night.

They started on their own 12 and punched across the last white marker in the second period. Two key plays that picked up valuable yardage were screen passes. The first netted 15 yards and kept the drive going.

The second came on third down and 11 and picked up 20 yards. Craig Guernsey finally punched over on a drive play from the three yard line. The Vulcans never came close to scoring again in the first half, but in the final two quarters it was a different story.

They started a drive from their own 35 and moved into the end zone without giving up the ball. A key play came deep in Hawk territory. Vassar had a first on the Hawk 12 and were having trouble moving.

But a pass to end Mike Buchman made it first and goal from the two from where Dan Hebert slammed over for the touchdown. A moment later the Vulcans kicked the extra point and went in front 7-6.

Cass City was never to lead again. In the fourth quarter, Vassar added an insurance marker in a 50-yard drive. Roger MacGillivray, sophomore tailback, and Hebert teamed up to lead the march. MacGillivray was an especially hard runner in the series, breaking tackle after tackle as he picked up valuable yardage.

MacGillivray scored the TD on an 11-yard burst off tackle. Skip Baldwin ran for the extra point.

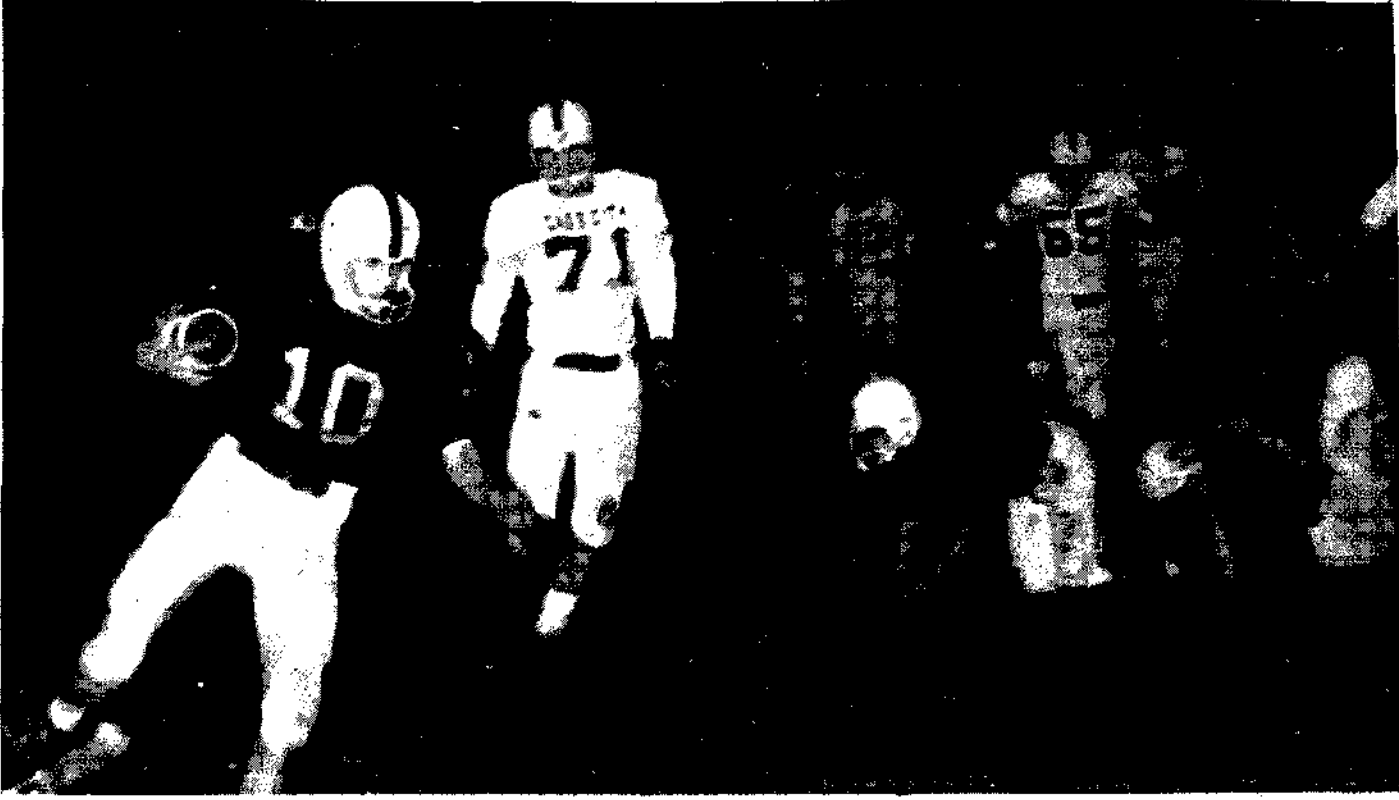

Cass City staged its only sustained march of the second half late in the final period. They moved for a first and goal on the seven after a pass to Tony Davis clicked and then hit the line four times only to fall a foot short of the end zone.

SKIP BALDWIN of Vassar carried around end in the first half for a sizeable gain in a drive that moved to Cass City's 12 before it was stopped. Vassar rallied in the last half for a 15-6 decision.

HUGH BRENNEMAN

Real originality needed on campus

What kind of education are our young college folk getting that blinds them to the true nature of originality, the true spirit of the enterpriser?

How is it they are all being original in exactly the same way? Why can't they see the phoniness of such false originality?

Take a look at the under-graduates on the campus of any of our supermarket universities. One hard-boiled, middle-aged newspaper reporter said all the boys look like out-of-work gas station attendants, and all the girls look like waitresses. Is this a fair description of the beneficiaries of democratized education? No. But there is just enough truth in the hard-boiled reporter's estimate for it to carry a sting.

Why the blind spot? How is it that the young men and women who in the sanctity of their own studies have such minds as those of Plato, Schiller, and Thomas Aquinas, have not enough sense of the logical to see that they are not being original at all, but are dupes of the banal, the cheap, the phony?

There is a difference between original and merely being different. Yet at many universities we see the long haired, the prematurely bearded, the dirty-looking, holding themselves out as the noble, the daring, the intellectual when they are really only aping their fellow collegians.

What is needed right now is real originality--the true originality of American idealism--and the ability to spot the phony.

The American system can only function well when it is nourished with ideas and strength of spirit. Democracy is being intellectually and spiritually starved today because there is timidity and blind conformity on the part of those who comprise its ranks. This is true in big business and particularly in big government. The bureaucracy that our government has become does not enroll persons for a period of challenging employment; it enters them for the period necessary to qualify for a pension.

Man is supposed to be a unique individual but he is being packed into the mold of men. He is being inexorably reduced as a person to a mere cypher, a telephone number, a social security number, a bank number, an employment number, a credit card number.

There really is a phenomenal revolution going on at the present time. It's a revolution which has the computer as its symbol. It is the rapidly growing tendency to seek utter conformity. This conformity, sometimes called bureaucracy, means the rigid and formal attitudes which pervade the levels of both big government and big business. Government now employs one of every ten active workers and big business employs another. For the first time in our history self-development has taken a back seat to security, and security has come to be synonymous with the existence of employment in a corporation or government agency.

There is need for innovation by the students of today, need for enterprising thinking, need for expression of the thoughts that come from the well-spring of individual deliberation and action.

That is the function of free speech under our system of government. It best serves its high purpose when it invites dispute, when it induces a condition of unrest, when it creates dissatisfaction with conditions as they are, or even stirs people to anger. Freedom of speech must be protected against censorship or punishment--unless it is shown that the speech is likely to produce a clear and present danger that rises far above public inconvenience, annoyance or unrest.

But let's recognize only those people who talk about that which they know. The speaker should be speaking from his experience or from thorough perusal of authenticated materials. The decision rests with the listener. If the listener evaluates the background of the speaker as qualifying him, the listener should listen; otherwise he should walk out.

Originality of thought and individuality is paramount. But authority and factual information is essential also.

Evil lurks in classrooms

BY JIM FITZGERALD

My mother used to send me off to school with warnings to be careful crossing streets and to study hard or I'd grow up to be a street cleaner.

As my kids returned to school recently, I warned them to beware of sex education, boys with long hair, and girls in short skirts.

A parent can't be too careful these days.

Every sensible person knows sex is dirty, except between husband and wife if not too often. Certainly our school kids shouldn't be learning where they came from. They're liable to grow hair on their palms, or something.

Besides, my son watches TV so he already knows why shapely girls in bikinis climb all over a guy. It's because the guy drives a new Dodge.

Some kids try to give us adults a hard time on this long-hair and short-skirt business. They say Jesus Christ and George Washington had long hair. And mini-skirts, are where it's at, the same as Mother's phony chest, and what's so deadly about skin above the knees, anyway.

One nifty young man even had the guts to claim it's unconstitutional for a school to deny him an education unless he gets a haircut. "As long as I pass inspection at home," he said, "no stuffy teacher has the right to tell me how to dress or wear my hair. As long as I'm clean, I'm not hurting anyone."

That's not how it works, of course. A teacher in a nearby school explained the long-hair danger this way: "Shaggy hair is a distraction to all students. The youngsters can't learn with long-haired boys in the classroom, and I can't teach."

"You mean you all keep looking at the long hair, the same as you'd keep looking at a little lamb if it followed Mary to school?" I asked.

"Exactly," said this teacher who is bald and cross-eyed and has a nervous tic which causes him to pull on both his ears every 2 minutes. "We simply can't have any distractions."

Any sensible adult would certainly go along with that. Except I do know one teacher who said a strange thing. He said:

"Teachers are not barbers or policemen or fashion experts. We are in the classroom to teach, and the kids are there to learn. The amount of hair in a classroom has absolutely no relationship to how much can be learned in that classroom. Remember how Albert Einstein wore his hair? I'm fed up with all this nonsense. If the adults would quit making such an unholy fuss about how the kids look, there'd be no problem and dammit, you newspaper reporters might have time to notice that most kids look a lot more decent than their elders. Did you ever go in a supermarket and eye the fat old dames in curlers and bursting slacks? Or the pot-bellied, skinny-legged old men in crew cuts and shorts?"

Of course, this teacher is obviously a commie, or at least a pervert. I figured that out before he opened his mouth. He has a beard.

My mother didn't raise any street cleaners.

"It's a great gasoline!"

LEONARD

The young man in the rallye jacket is Doug Innes, rallying enthusiast and member of the Detroit Region Sports Car Club of America. The last big rallye Doug drove in was really brutal—for the gasoline. He drove in low temperatures with high humidity, perfect conditions for throttle icing in cars. He used Leonard Premium 500 gasoline and reports, "I didn't have a bit of trouble. It's a great gasoline!" Try a tankful—and you'll agree.

Portrait of a MIXED BLESSING

Here is the River — to some an avenue on their trek westward — to others an obstacle to be crossed.

Today it brings shiploads of needed supplies to the towns along its banks, carries their products to warehouse and factory.

Tomorrow it can escape those banks, leaving death and destruction in its wake. For the River must be ruled by man!

Yesterday it brought pure water from mountain streams to thirsty lips. Then somebody made it his gutter.

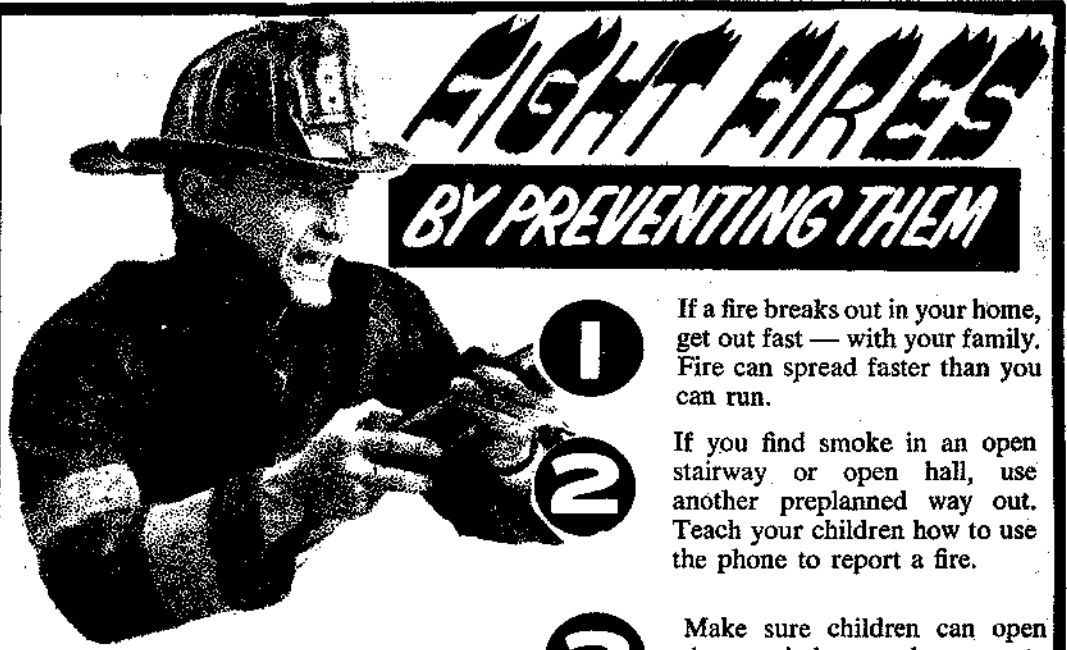

Like all our mixed blessings the River can help or hurt. It is just one of those gifts of God whose value will always depend on our good sense and initiative, our respect for God's intent and our concern for the needs of others.

Call it a by-product if you please — but one of the results of faithful religious worship and service is that so many mixed blessings become real blessings!

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

Dear Mister Editor:

About this time last year, Mister Editor, they was a heap of talk about law and order. Personal, I allus figured politicians meant their law and everybody else's order. All they was saying was they want everybody to think like they do, and that's really what everybody wants.

Since the big vote, we ain't saw much in the papers about law and order, but the fellers at the country store got the subject lived up agin Saturday night. The discussion come up after Bug Hookum told the feller that runs the store he won't be none surprised if next Saturday night we find a big mean police dog garding the cheese and crackers. Bug said he had saw by the papers where sale of watchdogs is strong all over the country.

Clem Webster told Bug them watchdogs is in the spirit of the country. Too many folks think they got a right to steal whatever somebody is too dumb to gard, Clem allowed, and that ain't a new idee. Clem said a heap of folks in this world past and present was kept from being thieves by finding everthing locked up. That's why pens in banks is chained to desks, and why outdoor stoves in parks is locked to concrete poles. The only difference now is that thieves is more brazen.

The real trouble with calling for law and order, Clem allowed, is that everbody has a different idee what it means. For instant, the FBI says the crime wave is gitting to be a flood, and they is right. But the FBI don't say that a heap of crimes today wouldn't be been crimes a few years back.

Bug was agreed with Clem. Ever time Congress or a state legislature meets they make crimes out of new things. Bug had in mind special this law that makes it a crime for a bank not to tell a feller how much interest he's paying. If a clerk in a store fertigs to fill out forms that tells a customer about charges on monthly payments he can wind up in the pen for five year.

Traffic crimes is the biggest wave of all, Bug said, and it ain't cause more crooks is driving cars. They is so many cars on the road and so many laws like "falling to see intended move made in safety" until the wonder is any of us stays out of jail, was Bug's words. Bug said he hears tell it's a crime to build a back porch on your own house in town without a permit. He knows it's a crime to let yore dog run loose in town. A feller can go to jail for fishing without a license, but he can dump sewage and chemics in the water and kill the fish.

Personal, Mister Editor, I see where a Labor Department study shows ex-convicts has talents needed in business. I'm working on what kind of law and order they'd be for.

Yours truly,
Uncle Tim
