Serious crime cases increase

Judging by the report of the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department to the Board of Supervisors, Tuscola County is becoming a more dangerous place

In his report, Sheriff Hugh Marr said that crime was spilling over into the county the surrounding urban from areas.

In a comparison of crimes committed in 1969 as compared more serious offenses is clearly discernible among the 9,453 calls handled in 1969.

There were two more rape cases, a jump in burglary cases from 124 to 156 and 50 per cent more assaults. The department also listed nine cases of narcotic investigations as compared to none listed in 1968 and there was a homicide last year and none in 1968, Drunkenness cases doubled from 30 to 62 and disorderly conduct cases soared from 33 to 84.

On the brighter side, cases of vandalism dropped from 371 to 300 and driving under the influence of alcohol dropped from 36 to 15.

Sheriff Marr also pointed out again the problems connected with fatal highway accidents and termed these accidents the most frustrating and seemingly insoluble problem facing his department and the county.

Because of a teen-age boy, a three-legged deer may be roaming the woods again this

The buck was discovered in corn field near the Steve Ziemba Jr. farm, 15 miles southeast of Cass City, by Leonard Ziemba, an uncle, as he was driving his snowmobile nearly three weeks ago.

At the time the deer was too weak to move and nearly dead of starvation. One of its hind legs had been broken, evidently by a car.

The Ziembas called the police to destroy the animal but young Mike Ziemba, 14, pleaded with his folks to keep it and he prevailed after permission to care for the animal was received from the conservation depart-

In another couple of days Doc (Ed) Scollon will be out to amputate the leg, Mike says, and then the buck should get better.

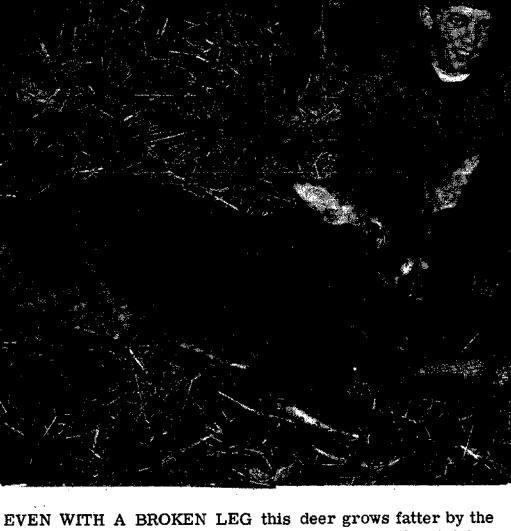

He is already a lot better than he was when he first came under Mike's tender loving care. The buck is housed in a corner of a barn and surrounded by bales of hay

He arrived Saturday, Jan. 10, and his ribs were sticking out his sides. Monday he looked fat and sassy. But the buck still cannot stand up for more than a few moments at a time. Mike andhis parents hope that the amputation will take care of this last obstacle to complete recovery. Threelegged deer can get along fine in the woods, the Ziembas say.

Just what will happen when the deer has recovered is uncertain. Dad wants to turn him loose "up north" because he is afraid that the dogs will get it around the family farm before it is fully recovered. Mike is in favor of turning it loose right around home. The deer probably won't want to leave at all.

day. Mike Ziemba, 14, hopes to be able to save the stricken animal after its leg is amputated.

Absenteeism high as flu strikes adults and children

A near epidemic of flu cases has struck Cass City and the area in the last 10 days causing absenteeism at schools and in industry, a survey revealed this week.

DISPLAYING THE EARLY records of Cass City School is Mrs. Harold Craig, secretary at the high school.

Dusty records show payless payday hit school in '33 1930's shines through the school were redeemed as Campbell

Two years ago at Christmas, Cass City High School moved lock, stock and barrel into its luxurious new headquarters on the hill. You wouldn't believe all of the things we found, said Mrs. Enid Craig, the school superintendent's secretary. Among the forgotten items uncovered in a forgotten corner of the Intermediate School were records of the school board, covering many of the early years of the district. Neatly typed or written in the best Spencerian handwriting, the minutes are succinct. If you took them at face value you'd feel that most of the time was spent authorizing the payment of bills or itemizing the money received.

But then, in the early days the meetings of the board were evidently highly informal. The minutes show the board met at both Cass City banks, in a dentist's office and at the homes of board members, apparently without any regularly scheduled meeting place.

The great depression of the records. Consider the school budget. It went along increasing every year, (much the same as it does today) skyrocketing from $5,716.11 in 1898 to about $63,000 in 1930-31 before hard times set in. After the big bust, expenditures were cut every year until 1932-33 when rock bottom was hit and the budget called for total spending of $36,803.25 (probably not as much as teachers' salaries alone will increase next year) and evidently there was no money around to meet even these modest figures. For in June of 1933 the district owed teachers several months' salary. They paid them off with notes bearing six per cent interest.

The minutes show, for instance, that Willis Campbell was given three $50 notes and that every teacher was affected. The school district owed $1,826,75 for 29 different teacher notes when the kids left for summer stayed with the district for about 30 years after this "payless payday." However, there is no record of the redemption in the minutes the following year. Back around the turn of the century, a nickel was worth five cents and the township assessor was responsible for every one of them the school collected. One of the revenue sources was laboratory fees, the minutes reveal. The students paid the fees and Hugh Seeds, township assessor, dutifully and laboriously wrote down the name of each student that contributed 50 cents to the school coffers. There are a few discrepan-cles in the books that must have slipped through, In 1898 tuition was paid by the month and the students paid $1.50 each. The school collected $278.51 for that year and there is no mention of how the odd penny was added to the total. Anyway tuition was not too big a part of the budget even it's sure that these notes in those early years when the school expense Seeds was equally as meticulous when it came to recording what the district spent. There couldn't have been a petty cash account in 1898. Every dime was recorded, F. E. Lee received 75 cents...... perhaps for a full day's work?

As might be expected, some of the pioneer names in the community appear in the book and are still familiar because their descendants still live in Names like Minnie Kinnaird, Orrin McArthur, Frank Striffler, Bertha Root, Edith Mar-shall, William Benkelman, Robert Agar and James Maharg dot the minutes near the turn of the century.

But some things evidently don't change too much. In 1923 when A. A. Ricker was secretary, he was instructed by the board to "settle with Mr. Campbell at the best possible advantage."

That's about what the board does today...even if it's never listed in the minutes.

FROM THE Lditor's Corner

Recently during adult night at Cass City High School, some former greats and near-greats on Cass City cage teams were huffing and puffing in a pick-up game for fun and exercise.

One of them was one of the best players produced here and as I watched, I thought about the best players I have seen in 20 years at Cass City.

The best five to wear the maroon and white among all the players suited for some very great teams over the last two decades.

So for your consideration I present the best since 1951... an arbitrary cut off year that eliminates some very good players from consideration. Players that the old timers still talk about...players that one year took Cass City to the State finals. But this team is limited to players on teams that I personally saw in action. The players that I would choose over all others if I had my

And the players named were. selected only on their play in high school. Several who reached their peak after graduation and in college may have been better later...but because their play was overshadowed by others in high school they failed to make this two-decade quintet.

The motherlode for cage diamonds on this dream team is Gagetown. Three of my players come from this community. Is it merely coincidence that Gagetown kids had unlimited access to a gym and basketball that they excelled? And is it another coincidence that Cass City's cage decline started when Gagetown pulled its students and went to Owendale?

prickly questions than why I selected Clare Comment for a guard post instead of Tom Sch-Fans of 20 years ago will remember Schwaderer's excellent play making and top defensive play and say any team without him is unthinkable. But the name of the game is still putting the ball through the hoop. Comment could play defense, was a playmaker and an eye of a needle at 20 feet. His shooting eye, in my book, gives him the edge.

These are probably more

Another Gagetown player would probably be a unanimous selection.....certainly a concensus pick. He's Tim Burdon, a top scorer, beautiful rebounder and tough defensive player, Watching him fake taller men for easy shots or outrebound kids several inches taller than his six feet, one inch was a thing of beauty for Cass City Flanking Burdon on my dream team, will be the player who flanked him in high school, Bob Wallace. Wallace, the six-foot driving forward with the accurate shot from the corner and the quick hands, helped make Cass City's offense go and helped anchor the team's defense.

My third Gagetown nominee played both center and forward for Cass City. At about six foot, three inches, he's the tal-lest player on the squad.

He is at forward on the 20year-team because he was a good outside shot. He's on the team because he was probably the best rebounder and backcourt defensive player at the school in the 20 years under discussion. He is, of course, John Meininger,

In Cass City's last fling at Flint in Class B regional competition, Meininger personally controlled the backboards against teams with two and three players tailer than he was, as Cass City went to the finals to lose by a couple of points. Our cnoice for the second guard position is Bob Holcomb. Holcomb had the moves and used them. His drives to the basket for buckets were classic examples of individual effort and top ability. And with his scoring, and ball handling he added a third factor not seen often in guards. Holcomb is over six feet tall and in high school had springs in his legs and he used them to help control the backboards.

All of these players have one thing in common: they played for winning Cass City teams.

They were winning players on winning teams: the best of the fifties and the sixties.

After four days on the island of Antigua in the British West Indies here is a minority vote of one for cold snowbound Michigan.

If basking in the sun and living the indolent life is to your taste, visit the Caribbean. But just lying around doing virtually nothing at all except the limited amount of sightseeing available on the island and filling in the days swimming and the evenings eating leisurely four-course meals in a formal atmosphere that demands a coat and tie is not very entertaining for me. I'd rather see a good high school basketball game.

The hotel at Antigua boasts a casino with the same gambling games played in Las Vegas. But the entire atmosphere is different and the "action" as genteel as the string band that played during the dinner hour.

There is nothing like New York, its people and customs. Another passenger and I shared a cab to change from Kennedy to LaGuardia airport on the flight home from Antigua. The fare was $4.35. We handed the cabble a $10 bill, planning to give him $5.

He gave us $4.00 change. Naturally we protested. He said it was the custom. A 25 per cent tip, we asked? Come off it. Come on, man, he said. It's Sunday. And it was apparent that he was ready to argue.

Anxious to get home and with little time to spare to make connections we cowardly paid. What we should have done, of course, was pay the $4.35 due on the meter and left no tip at all. But if we took this position we most certainly would have missed our plane. The cabble probably figured we wouldn't risk it for a buck when he started his petty blackmail.

Dig those forgotten, discarded eyeglasses out of the bureau drawer and deposit them in one of the collection boxes available at either Cass City drug store.

The glasses will be sent to help the underprivileged in South America. Locally the project is sponsored by the Cass City Lions Club.

Letter to Editor

Drug education needed in school

To the Editor:

I was very glad to read about the efforts Chief Palmateer has been making in awakening Cass City to its drug situation. I also agree with the former user that better communication between teens and the so-called "establishment." But I am particularly in favor of drug education in school.

To point out this need I am including an excerpt from the "Bobbs - Merrill Reprints in Social sciences" as found in American Journal of Sociology," November, 1953: One more step is necessary if the user who has now learned to get high is to continue use" (after learning the proper method of smoking marijuana, comments mine.) "He must learn to enjoy the effects he has just learned to experience. Marijuana-produced sensations are not automatically or necessarily pleasurable. The taste for such experience is a socially acquired one, not different in kind from acquired tastes for oysters or dry martinis. The user feels dizzy, thirsty; his scalp tingles; he misjudges time and distances; and so on. Are these things pleasurable? He isn't sure. If he is to continue marijuana use, he must decide that they are. Otherwise, getting high, while a real enough experience, will be an unpleasant one he would rather avoid ... In no case will use continue without such a redefinition of the effects as enjoyable.

This redefinition occurs, typically, in interaction with more experienced users who --- teach the novice to find pleasure in this experience which is at first so frightening."

The article is quite extensive (and I would recommend that many people read it) but I think that the above portion shows that marijuana-smoking is socially learned. The advocates of legalized marijuana have put this social learning to work to encourage others to adopt the practice. Why can't we, as concerned citizens, use this same social learning situation to further our point of view. We have a brand new high school, with a staff of teachers. and students. We put these together to form a social learning situation in order to teach math, and language and all the rest. Let's capitalize on this situation and have drug education. High school sociology classes offer an excellent structure for drug education. I had sociology in high school---it seemed wasted. Our class skirted about social problems, never touching on anything. So why waste it? How about a one semester study on drugs? It would seem much wiser to create a healthy social learning situation in school, instead of allowing a one-sided situation that exists at Pot parties.

By all means, parents, teachers, civic leaders, read. Study the problem. These articles are readily available. And think!

Let's use our facilities to treat the situation instead of forgetting about what we can do.

ONE FOR THE ROAD Do introverts rise early?

By Dan Marlowe

Samuel Johnson said it in 1773: "I have, all my life long, been lying abed till noon; yet I tell all young men, and tell them with great sincerity, that nobody who does not rise early will ever do any good."

Reflections culled from TIME on the same subject:

People who spring from bed clear-eyed and cheerful tend to think that the early bird really does catch the worm. Slugabeds grumble that the sunny risers are worms themselves. For Ben Franklin and puritanical believers in his maxims, to be earlier than thou is virtually to be holier.

But early-morning surly birds dispute them. After all, no less an American culture hero than Robert Frost milked his cows at midnight because he couldn't be bothered to get up and do it at sumrise.

Many feel that rising at the crack of dawn condemns modern man to the life of peasants.

Sommers completes lithography course

John Sommers, former resident and baker in Cass City, and his family are now living in Albuquerque, New Mexico. He is an associate in the Art Department of the University of New Mexico and will be manager and economics teacher in the Tamarind Lithography Studio to be opened soon in Albuquerque.

Mr. Sommers just completed the lithography course at Tamarind Studio in Los Angeles. He is now a Tamarind Master Printer, one of 15 to complete the course at the studio, which was mentioned in Life Magazine issue of Jan. 23.

The object of the studio is encourage and promote to open lithography

The Sommers are now residing at 1800 Kentucky, N. E., Albuquerque, New Mexico Hungarian author Ferenc Molnar was so unaccustomed to daylight that once, when he was dragooned into jury duty early in the morning, he stared incredulously at the thronged streets of Budapest. "Are they all jurors?" he asked finally. The relatively new science of sleep research may - eventually come to vindicate the groggy "owls" and deflate the superior pretensions of the "larks". Humans run on stillmysterious physiological time clocks, their body temperatures dipping as much as 2 degrees in the middle of the night and rising toward morning.

Late risers, one explanation goes, simply may not be warm enough to get up easily. Introverts function best in the mornings, according to British Psychologist Donald Eric Broadbent, but some other psychologists say that the early risers are egotistical -- they get up with the idea that the world is waiting for them. And some psychologists agree that late risers simply do not like the activity that awaits them and subconsciously would rather remain in the refuge of sleep.

As a life-long early riser, I know that I function better early in the morning than at any other time of the day. I can get more done, and more easily. The early cycle is best for me, but I'm aware that it isn't for everyone.

Help is on the way for wives of iron-willed sleep-veterans who pull the covers over their heads mornings at the sound of the alarm clock. For $384 a New Jersey store called "The Sleep Center" sells an ejecting bed. At the proper ungodly hour, it catapults its victim upright. Ads for the device say nothing about the next step to be taken if the ejected individual collapses upon the bed again without ever having been truly wakened even by this drastic

Two non-injury property damage accidents involving area persons were investigated this week by deputies of the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department.

Miss Hornback was attempting a U-turn on Mertz Road, a quarter mile from Riley Road in Indianfields township Saturday night, when the crash occurred. Miss Hornback was ticketed for failure to yield right of way.

Cars were damaged when Leon Leonard Flis, 49, Kingston, pulled from a driveway the path of a car driven by Kenneth Harold Bean, 20, of Cass City Sunday afternoon,

Sanilac property valuation up 7%

The Equalization Department has completed a study of agricultural and residential property in Sanilac County, This is the first year such a study has been conducted by the county.

New health start Monday

New costs will be tacked onto businesses and home owners Monday for services conducted by the Thumb District Health Department, it was revealed this week by Raphael D. Gaynier, director for Tuscola and Lapeer counties.

A $10 fee will be charged for any FHA or VA evaluations of water supply and sewage disposal systems. Sewage disposal contractor's permits will be $10 for each renewal and $40 will be charged by the department for a site inspection of a plat of 20 acres or less. Over 20 acres a charge of $2 an the increase of the various acre will be made. It will cost $10 for a tentative evaluation of an area to be platted.

ceived. The bids for the Oldsmobiles were higher than ones submitted for Chevrolet and Ford cars.

Because of the difference in price of the automobiles, the commissioners felt that the Oldsmobiles were the best buy for the county.

conducted by the State Tax Commission at intervals of from five to ten years. The county is now required to survey sales and assessments every year.

The selling price of property is the basis of determining the cash value of property for tax purposes. The influx of people department fees buying land for recreational purposes has had a great inbuying land for recreational fluence on land prices. Also, the increase of labor and material of construction has not only increased the cost of new construction but has had an inflationary effect on all existing buildings.

As might be expected the greatest increase in value has been in those areas that have realized the greatest amount of activity of agricultural property being purchased for recreationat use and consequently more building activity.

The results of the study showed an increase in equalized value of the county of approximately nine million dollars or about 7% over a two year period.

COLLEGE RANK

Michigan Mirror

Michigan has three of its colleges ranking in the top 30 in the nation in size, according to a national survey of college enroll ments.

Michigan State leads the state's institutions and ranks 11th in the nation both in terms of full-time students and total enrollment.

Michigan ranks 16th in the number of full-time students with Wayne State ranking 23rd.

These figures are included in the 50th annual survey of college enrollments prepared

Mrs. C. Carpenter attends state meet

Mrs. Clare Carpenter spent Tuesday in East Lansing attending a meeting of the Mich-Comprehensive State Health Planning Advisory Council, held at the Union Building.

Speaking to the members were Dr. Albert E. Heustis. coordinator of Regional Medical Programs; Dr. Ralph Lind. berg, executive director of Detroit Osteopathic Hospital, and Robert Kinsinger, Director of Education and Public Affairs of Kellogg Foundation.

Dr. Andrew D. Hunt, Dean of Human Medicine at Michigan State University, presides as chairman of the Governor appointed council.

Plan meetings to discuss control of insect pests

A series of four informational meetings on the Alfalfa Weevil and the Cereal Leaf Beetle will be held in 4 different locations of the county during February. The meetings, sponsored by the Sanilac County Cooperative Extension Service will provide information on insect life cycles, control measures including recommended chemicals and rates, and ideas of when it is necessary to spray. Slide pictures of the insects and damages will be shown at the meetings. Both these pests made their entrance into the County last year and it is almost a certainty that control mea-sures will be required this year for alfalfa and maybe oats.

The first meeting will be Friday, February 6 - 10:00-12:00 noon at Decker Masonic Hall in Decker.

After three sub-par performances Cass City bounced back with one of its best games of the year, rivaling the squad's effort against the winning Lakers earlier in the year.

Key to the victory was the lack of mistakes by the entire The game statistics team. showed that the Hawks were guilty of just nine turnovers during the game.

In many previous games, the team was charged with 25 turnovers or more, Coach Fred Hurlburt termed as "excellent" the 25 offensive rebounds that Cass City hauled down while limiting the Red Raiders to 11. Cass City also had a slight edge on the defensive boards, 28 to 24.

The Hawks will have to retain their sharpness if they expect to post as good a record in the final half as they did in the first round.

Vassar will host the Hawks Friday and the Vulcans will be the underdogs...but an underdog capable of rising up and biting off a victory if the Hawks turn in one of their poor performances.

After Vassar, Cass City faces Bad Axe next Tuesday and then must cope with the Lakers and Caro the next two weeks.

Against the Red Raiders, the Hawks moved out in front in the first quarter and were never seriously threatened. By the end of the first quarter, Cass City

Backache Backache is now one of America's most common physical complaints and "the membership of the Aching Back Club runs into the millions, according to the Journal of American Insurance. They suggest four major reasons for back pain:

Injury—About 400,000 workers suffer disabling back injury each year, and this number is increasing. A large number occur while objects are being lifted or handled improperly. Any part of the back the spine, the muscles or ligaments-may be hurt and treatment depends on the area and nature of the injury.

• Abnormal spines—Some people are born with spinal defects so minor as to escape detection, but which can cause trouble when the body is ex-posed to extra strain. Studies suggest one American in four has a spine that is abnormal in some way. Poor posture—The continuous strain of standing or sitting improperly can damage the back by stretching the ligaments and tiring the muscles. Overweight, pregnancy and high heels can cause poor posture, and so can standing for long in one position. • Aging—As we grow older, our joints and ligaments aren't as resilient as they once were, and our muscles can be weakened by too little use. The problem may be helped by more frequent rest in a firm bed, the use of belts or other back supports (though you don't want to become dependent on these), massage and

Since there are so many varieties and causes of back pain, it's something that demands careful diagnosis by your doctor and your careful following of his instructions.

After the astronauts landed on the moon, the American public began asking, "Why do we spend so much money for space programs when people are starving, and we have so many problems at home?" The recent White House Conference on Food, Nutrition and Health reflects this growing concern. The Conference drew representatives of the food industry, nutritional experts, and interested consumers.

"We can expect to see many new foods that are highly nutritious as a result of this Conference. A new foods panel suggested alleviating suffering from malnutrition by upgrading traditional and accepted foods such as flour, corn meal, beans, rice, beverages, and even candy

Seaweed could cure acne

Some of the break-throughs in the knowledge of the kidney have come about by studies made on fish. Some of the studies on nerve physiology have utilized the giant spines that occur in the squid.

Although many of our antibiotics are derived from various types of land fungi, bacteria have a wonderful facility for mutating themselves so that they become resistant to these antibiotics, so the drug researchers are constantly searching for new antibiotics. The sea has not been exploited, and seems to be a logical place to look for new and exciting drugs. Researchers have obtained some leads from the habits of natives who live on the Pacific Islands. These natives have used seaweeds (pretty much like our ancestors used the land herbs) in making concoctions for various types of skin diseases, stomach disorders, and so on. Some of these seaweed extractives are now on the market for treating certain types of intestinal worms. They are also used to stabilize various types of drugs. Remember years ago when you bought a drug in a drug store, there was a red sign on the bottle saying, "Shake well before using"? Now, when the seaweed extractives are used, this is no longer necessary, because the solution stays in constant suspension. Also, many cosmetics are using various types of seaweed extrac-Marine biologists are study-

Sponges are animals that sit on the bottom of the ocean, obtain all their nutrients by filtering them from the sea water. They are extremely long lived. One would think that if you have an organism that doesn't move about and is subjected to everything that passes through it, it wouldn't have a very long life. Yet, for all practical purposes, sponges are immortal. Found in many of these sponges are antibiotics that are extremely powerful and that will kill a broad spectrum of bacteria.

Sponges are not simple animals to work with, They have all sorts of creatures living among them. Algae grow in them and bacteria, which are a part of their flora, and little crabs. etc., so that when extracts are made, the biologists have to be extremely careful that they are actually working with the sponge material and not some other organism that may have been living in it.

The shape and configuration of sponges may be quite different even though they belong to the same family. For example, some long finger-like sponges and branch-like sponges are of the same family as the huge round sponges that grow to a diameter of six feet.

Once sponges have been examined, natural product chemistry is done--finding out the chemistry of these natural products or natural substances. then trying to obtain the pure substance. If its chemical configuration can be determined. it can then be synthesized (that is, made in a laboratory). In some cases, if this can't be done, it is possible to grow the sponge itself so that there is a convenient and good source of the natural product.

Another creature of the sea currently being studied is the pesky barnacle that attaches itself to the bottom of ships. Investigators have been intrigued by the cement that forms this strong bond to the hull and have found that the glands of the barnacle manufacture and secrete it. If chemists can synthesize this cement, it will be possible to find an inhibitor to keep the barnacles from sticking to the shtps. Perhaps even more important, it could prove to be a valuable adhesive particularly for dentists. If it works underwater for the barnacle, it should work in the wetness of the mouth for the dentist who now has to use an aspirator to keep the mouth dry.

They had a catalog with all the aid listed, he said, but new services keeps it outdated, With all this aid, Ed allowed, we still got money fer such as a $21,200 grant to study the mating call of Central American frogs.

Farthermore, said Ed, it has got to the place we spend more time keeping records that we do doing what we keep records on. One happy note recent was where the Joint House Committee on Disposition of Executive Papers ask to be done away with cause it ain't done a lick of work since it started in 1944.
