

FROM THE Editor's Corner

I always had a sneaky notion that I would have been happier in the Navy than in the Air Force when I was doing time for Uncle Sam, but recent years have convinced me that it must have been divine providence that kept me a land lubber instead of a seafarer.

I first began to realize how good I had it on land when I went Coho fishing three years ago.

My bait had no more than hit the water than I wanted to follow it over the side.

Anyone can be sick once, I reasoned as I took off for Manistee and Coho waters the next fall. The second time was worse than the first. I just made it out of the harbor and I was seasick again and I remained that way for the five long torturous hours that miserable boat was tossing around Lake Michigan.

Along about then the thought was that perhaps some stomachs just weren't equipped for the sea, but I wasn't sure. Now I'm sure.

The convincer was applied two weeks ago in Antigua in the British West Indies. Walking along the sea shore looking for seashells, I spotted a native in a small boat, a shade bigger than a common rowboat. He was untangling a fish net and with the brashness of any tourist I stopped to find out about it.

It wasn't a fish net, I quickly learned. It was used to haul in turtles. Turtles? Giant ones, the Antiguan said in the slurred English heard all over the island. Hard on the back, but good for the pocketbook.

But no turtles today, he said with the infectious grin that most of the islanders display at a moment's notice. Siesta? I inquired, crestfallen.

No, today was the day to lift the lobster pots. And, yes, he would be happy to take me out with him for $5.

We left the harbor and pounded over the reefs and the salt sprayed my face. I was Captain Kidd, the last of the buccaneers, the toughest of Old Salts.

It was just outside the surf that the seven lobster pots were strung. And it was just outside the surf that the ocean changed to deep rolling swells. Up and down. Up and down.

To lift the nets the motor was stopped and the boat turned sideways to the waves and bobbed and bobbed and bobbed. He lifted two pots without catching a lobster. A few small fish were snared and he promptly dispatched them with a pointed stick.

I was already feeling a little rocky and whatever chance I had of overcoming my queasy stomach went overboard when the blood started oozing out of the stabbed fish.

My fisherman guide quickly agreed to a non-stop flight back to shore for an extra $5 and I never did get to see a lobster caught although I learned later that he did catch a couple in one of the pots.

The $10 spent for the ride is worth $20 in island money and was undoubtedly the best day that my fisherman friend had in many a moon.

Still, I don't consider him a very good businessman. He could have asked for 10 times the $5 I paid to get back on shore.

He had a terrific seller's market, only he didn't know it. Those guys just don't know what it is to be seasick.

THE FIRST DAY on the job H. Byron Landholt talks about the way he sees his job as administrator at Hills and Dales General Hospital.

Hospital head aims for improved medical center

With an easy smile, H. Byron Landholt, 51, the new administrator at Hills and Dales General Hospital, leaned back in his chair Monday and ticked off what he felt were the basic problems and the opportunities of his new position.

There is a real opportunity to develop the facility as a medical center for the area, he stressed. We can do this with more training. More training for the staff and more training for the public. It will enable us to give better health service to the community and that is what we are here for.

I see by the records that the hospital is crowded at times, Landholt said, and we'll continue with the plans started by the board and Frank Haythorn (former administrator) to enlarge the facility.

If present plans materialize any addition will be made without going into debt or asking for more donations from area residents. We still have high hopes, Landholt said, of landing some Federal assistance for our program.

Landholt moved to Cass City from Fairbury, Nebraska, where he was the administrator of the Jefferson County Memorial Hospital, a facility of comparable size to Cass City's. But this is a step up for me, the new head man here explained, both in the amount of money paid and the opportunities to advance in my profession.

Fairbury, with a population of 5,000, is larger than Cass City, but the community served probably isn't. Nebraska is sparsely populated, Landholt explained. The nearest town was 35 miles away and there wasn't a town between Fairbury and Omaha, about 120 miles away.

The new administrator here started in the hospital business as a laboratory and X-ray technician after graduating from Illinois College in Jacksonville, Ill. He moved quickly into administration and has been managing hospitals since 1946 in Illinois, Oklahoma and Nebraska.

Landholt speaks with easy, midwestern frankness and is quietly assured while discussing hospitals and their problems. About average in height and weight, he looks and acts his job: head man of a million dollar plus facility.

Landholt and his family arrived in Cass City Monday. He lives on Hospital Drive with his wife and their daughter, Julie, 9. Two sons, David and James, live in Fairfield, Conn., and another son, William, lives in Marshalltown, Iowa.

Pair plead innocent of check charge

Two men stood mute Tuesday when arraigned on charges of uttering and publishing in Cass City and a plea of innocent was entered for them.

Jerry Bland, Caro, and Duane Polega, Bad Axe, were charged with cashing a bogus check at the Federated Store in Cass City. The check was made out to Mike Ward for $100 on the Hubbard State Bank.

Judge Norman Baguley continued the bonds of the two men. A trial date will be set.

County Clerk Archie Hicks succumbs to heart attack

Archie Hicks, Tuscola County Clerk for 12 years and one of the area's most popular residents, died unexpectedly Friday afternoon after suffering a heart attack.

The 68-year-old Deford area farmer had been suffering from the flu and it was probable that he was in a weakened condition when the fatal attack occurred.

He first experienced chest pains Thursday afternoon and was given an electrocardiogram at Hills and Dales General Hospital.

He returned to his home and was dressed and moving around when the fatal attack occurred Friday. The tests taken Thursday confirmed that he had suffered an attack the previous day.

He was dead on arrival at Hills and Dales General Hospital Friday at 4 p.m.

Mr. Hicks had been stricken with the flu for two weeks. He was absent from his office for a full week and last week had returned to the courthouse on a half day schedule.

In tribute to his service to the county the courthouse was closed Monday afternoon, the day of the funeral held at the Deford United Methodist Church.

Before he became clerk, Hicks was a supervisor from Novesta Township. He was a member of the Michigan State Association of County Clerks and of the Tuscola County Farm Bureau.

He was formerly a member of the Cass City Rotary Club for several years and was a charter member of the Cass City Lions Club.

The vacancy caused by his death will be filled by an appointment made by Tuscola County's two circuit judges, Norman A. Baguley and James Churchill.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Gerald Hicks was appointed acting clerk to carry on the business of the department.

Son of the late William B. and Delina Hicks, he was born July 8, 1901, in Novesta Township, Tuscola County. He married Gladys Collier in January, 1920.

Surviving, besides his widow, are: two sons, Donald, of San Mateo, Calif., and Gerald, of Deford; a brother, Ben, of Greenbush, Mich.; two sisters, Mrs. Olive Kelley and Mrs. Burton Morrison, both of Caro, and five grandchildren.

The Rev. Verne Blankenburg, pastor of the Deford United Methodist Church, officiated at the final rites.

Burial was in Novesta cemetery.

The Bocks are claiming that the railroad was negligent because the railroad signals did not give adequate warning to drivers that a train was approaching.

The suit is asking for $250,000 each for Bock and his two children on each of two counts for a total of $1 1/2 million.

A hearing was held on a suit filed Thursday, Jan. 29. A group of property owners were seeking to halt the erection of a trailer court near their homes in Indianfields township.

Judge Norman A. Baguley denied a temporary injunction to halt the trailer court, but issued a show cause order to answer the complaint and show why a permanent injunction should not be granted.

Seeking the injunction are Ronald Emiling, Hugh and Inez Morrison, Lucian and Eileen Tiedgen, Wallace and Jannis Taylor and Arthur and Stella Schneider.

One minor accident involving a driver from the area was reported to the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department during the week.

Frances Pauline Atkins, was shaken up in an accident Friday at 8 a.m. on M-46, about a quarter of a mile from M-24.

A deer jumped in front of her car, she reported, and she lost control of the vehicle.

While the food is basic, several other factors have helped Martin make his restaurant here a success.

His wife, Myrtle, is a veteran of 40 years in the business. She understands how the public should be handled, Martin said. She turned down an offer from Stouffers Restaurant in Detroit to conduct a waitress training school. Her experience in the field was one reason that I started and have stuck with restaurants, he added.

Another big plus for our restaurant here is the help that Martin has been able to hire.

No restaurant can succeed without good help, he says. I've been successful and one of the principal reasons is the people that have worked here since I started nine years ago in 1961.

ARCHIE HICKS - succumbs unexpectedly Friday.

Girls pay stiff fines in county district court

Several cases involving area persons were heard in Tuscola County District Court before Judge Richard Kern this week.

John Hern, Cass City, pleaded guilty on a drunk and disorderly charge and was fined $50 and ordered to pay costs and judgement fee of $18.

He was arrested in the parking lot of a grocery store in Caro.

Gerald Howard of Cass City stood mute when arraigned on a charge of assault and battery. A plea of innocent was entered for him.

The charge stemmed from an altercation between Howard and Glen Groth that occurred in the early morning hours Saturday. Goldie Jean Langworthy, 18, Cass City, pleaded guilty as a minor in possession of alcohol. She was arrested on M-81, west of Cass City. She was fined $20 and ordered to pay costs and judgement fee of $18.

The driver of the car in which Miss Langworthy was a passenger, Miss DuRussell, appeared before Judge Kern on four charges.

She was found guilty on two counts of transporting minors with beer and paid a fine and costs of $47 on each count. She paid another $47 on a charge of a minor in possession of beer.

In addition she paid a $75 fine, $25 costs and $3 judgement fee on a charge of reckless driving.

Judge Kern placed her on a year's probation.

PAT MARTIN - an old pro at work in his kitchen.

Taste test: key to fine food for Chef Pat Martin

Cooking for a crowd is easy. In fact, it's easier to cook for 500 persons than it is to prepare a small family dinner. It's easier, that is, if you happen to be Pat Martin, 59, of Cass City and have spent a lifetime as a commercial chef.

What makes it easier, says Martin, the silver haired owner of Martin's Restaurant, is that when you prepare a dinner for two or three there is no room for mistakes.

But when I cook for a crowd I can make the meal to a high standard by altering the seasoning as I go along.

There is never a dish that is cooked here at the restaurant or any restaurant where I have been in charge that I don't taste before it is served.

When you have a quantity of food you can add or subtract without ruining the dish, Martin explained.

That's the old-fashioned way to do it and Martin will tell you in no uncertain terms that the old way is best. Don't ask me to serve frozen foods or pre-cooked items just because it's easy, the veteran chef says earnestly. I don't use anybooks and if you ask me for a recipe I couldn't give you one. I don't know how much of what goes into a boiled dinner, for instance, but when the taste is right I know it and then I serve it.

Martin has been in and out of kitchens in various locations since 1949 when he looked around for a new job after his legs were crushed in an accident.

He's been the head honcho at big-time supper clubs in Florida and the cook in hamburger joints. He's worked for a variety of chefs and learned from each.

A good cook doesn't ever have to worry about a good job, Martin reminisced. There is a demand. But you've got to know your business. A professional can tell if you know your business the minute you pick up a knife. I got a job once when the owner asked me to bone some chickens. I did and he never asked another question. I had the job.

Looking back on a 20-year career in restaurants, Martin has few regrets. It's a good business now and it will always be a good business for a young man looking for a way to get ahead.

Martin's advice to men eyeing the restaurant business is to work under five or six different experts and learn before leaping.

For like any business today, operating a restaurant takes a lot more capital than it once did. You'd need about $15,000 to take over an operation about this size and the total investment could run $40,000 or more, he claims.

Equally as important as the money is desire. Martin is very positive about this. If you want an eight-hour day, he says, don't expect to succeed in restaurants. My normal days still 10 to 14 hours.

Besides working long hours, a new man would do well to buy only choice meats. The meat makes the meal, according to this chef, and you must have the quality to start with.

You know, he stresses, that there has been very little change in customers' eating habits since I first went into the business. It varies in different areas, but not from year to year.

Cass City is a plain food town. Steaks, chops, hamburgers and roasts are the staples that sell. Some areas want more exotic foods, but Cass City wants a medium priced restaurant with good old-fashioned quality, Martin feels.

While the food is basic, several other factors have helped Martin make his restaurant here a success.

His wife, Myrtle, is a veteran of 40 years in the business. She understands how the public should be handled, Martin said. She turned down an offer from Stouffers Restaurant in Detroit to conduct a waitress training school. Her experience in the field was one reason that I started and have stuck with restaurants, he added.

Another big plus for our restaurant here is the help that Martin has been able to hire.

BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

Did you know that if it wasn't for a janitor, basketball might well be called "boxball" today?.. Originally, James Naismith wanted to use square boxes--and not round baskets--as the goals when he invented the game and he asked the janitor to nail square boxes at each end of the gym...But the janitor couldn't find square boxes, so he selected two round half-bushel peach baskets by chance and the players started calling the game "basketball" instead of perhaps calling it "boxball".

Here's one that may surprise you...How important is a good quarterback in pro football?.. Well, the teams that had the top three quarterbacks in the National Football League this past season ALL FAILED to reach the championship playoffs...Top three quarterbacks in the final official statistics were Sonny Jurgensen of Washington, Bart Starr of Green Bay, and Fran Tarkenton of New York...And the team that had the top ranked quarterback in the American Football League also failed to reach the championship playoffs...Top AFL quarterback was Greg Cook of Cincinnati.

Here's an oddity that shows how TV can take over a sport... In the 1968 Winter Olympics, there were more people working for ABC-TV than there were U.S. athletes competing... U. S. athletes numbered about 150 while ABC had about 250 people on the scene working on the telecasts.

(And anyone else he can get to help)

When Arthur Holmberg took off for the winter shortly before Christmas he said that he didn't mind the cold, crisp days of Michigan winter. What bugged him were the grey, sunless, dreary, dirty winter days full of slush, sleet and snow. In short, what he went away to avoid were days just like the one we had Monday. Who could blame him?

There will undoubtedly be a lot of words said about Archie Hicks who died unexpectedly Friday. After all Archie was one of the best known persons in Tuscola county and a political figure here for more than two decades.

The best, most accurate accolade may have been one heard at the coffee table Monday morning when one businessman said the thing about Archie was that he knew everyone and everyone knew him. And of all the people he knew, I never heard one say that they didn't like him. And when you consider that he was in the public eye nearly constantly and forced by his job to sometimes refuse a request or disappoint a resident, the record is outstanding. He will be missed for the way he did his job for the county, but he will be missed more for the way he was.

Carl Palmateer resigned for personal reasons as Cass City Police Chief Friday after serving for nearly eight years in the village.

During his tenure here we've disagreed with Carl and his handling of the law in relation to the people's right to know. But I agree with President Lambert Althaver who said that he felt that he did a very good job for the village. The resignation was his idea, not ours, said Althaver.

No man is indispensable and Carl will be replaced. His successor will be hard pressed to retain relations as cordial with the young as Palmateer did.

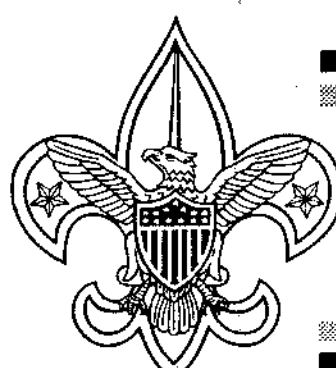

In some respects a policeman's job in a small town is more difficult than it is in a large town. The trouble is that everyone knows the lawman personally and everything the officer does is taken the same way...personally.

Given these circumstances it is hard to see anyone handling the often disagreeable chore of the village policeman better than Palmateer.

Antionette VanDePutte, a junior playing bass clarinet, and Dave Seibel, a sophomore playing tuba, were the two students of the Owen-Gage Band who participated in the Tri-County Honors Band, under the direction of Thomas Tyra.

The Honors Band, which is held annually, is a selection of outstanding students in the three county area of Huron, Tuscola and Sanilac. Students were given a prepared selection and must be chosen according to their ability to play it on recording tape. Tyra directs the Eastern Michigan Band and has directed the Honors Band for two consecutive years. The Honors Band presented a concert Sunday, Jan. 25, at Mayville High School Auditorium.

Ruth Rayl in campus life queen contest

Miss Ruth Rayl is attempting to become Tuscola County's Campus Life Sweetheart Queen and win a scholarship to the school of her choice at a rally slated Feb. 21 at Vassar High School.

It is a unique contest in that the queen is selected from county schools by a vote in which pennies are collected and used to help the Thumb Youth For Christ program.

The candidate from the school that has the most pennies collected receives 70 points. Each runner-up receives five points less than the candidate that finishes ahead of her in the final tabulations.

A top of 15 points will be awarded to the candidate with the most students at the Vassar rally and a total of 15 points can be earned for personal appearance, clarity of thought and creativeness.

Besides the scholarship, the prizes will include a tiara and a dozen roses.

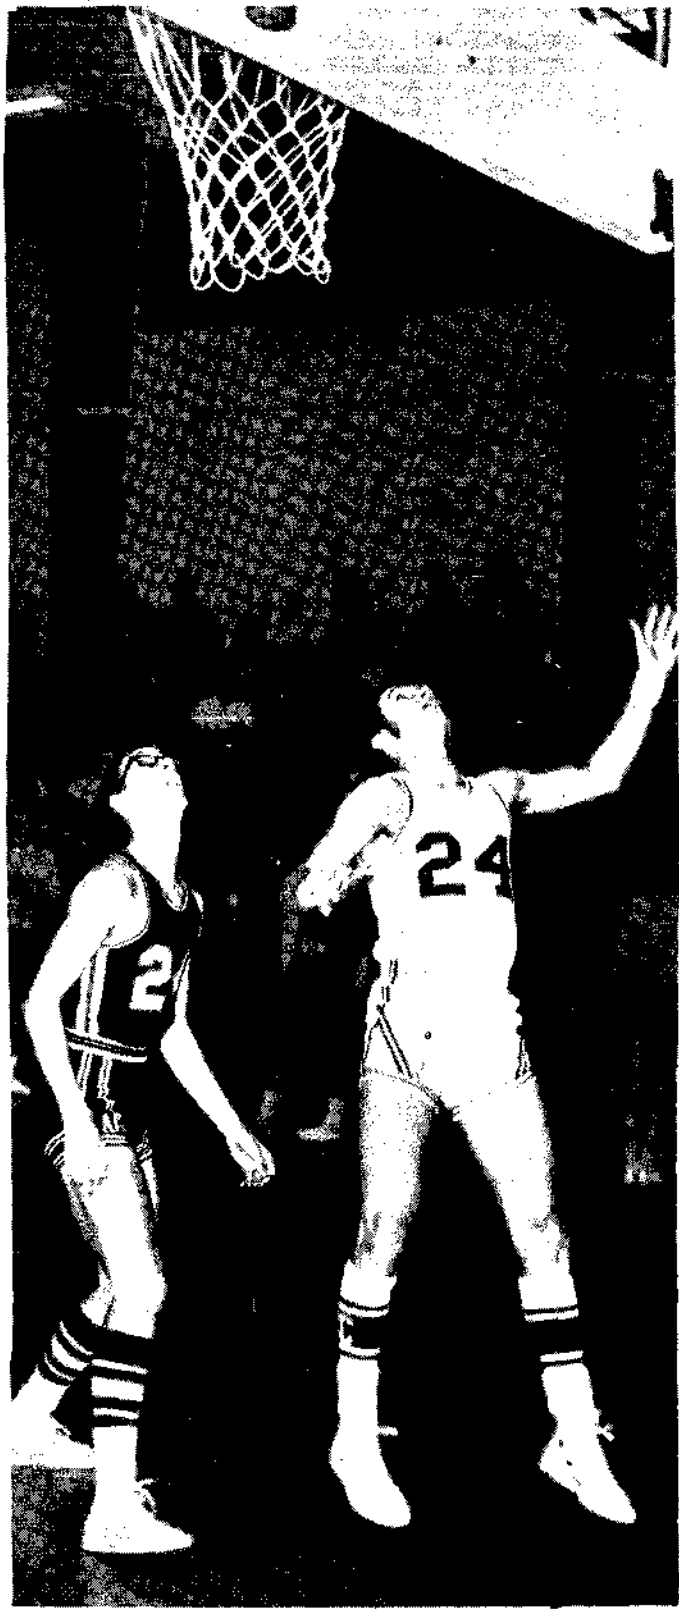

Miss Rayl hopes to help her candidacy by selling a pony given her by her uncle and turning the money over to Youth For Christ via the contest.

A junior at Cass City High School, Miss Rayl is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rayl of Deford.

Vassar loses to Hawks, 63-50

Cass City in season's peak effort in narrow loss to Bad Axe

The good teams in the league appear to bring out the best in the Cass City Red Hawks and the club was at its best Tuesday night at Bad Axe while coming within four minutes and seven points of registering the upset of the season before losing to the potent Hatchets, 66-59.

The game was even closer than the final score indicated. With just two minutes left the Hatchets were ahead by a single point, 56-55, and it was still anybody's ball game.

But the pressing defense that the Hatchets had been using off and on all night without success paid off in the final minutes. The next three times Cass City brought the ball down the floor they turned it over without firing a shot. The Hatchets quickly turned the errors into points and with one minute, 16 seconds left salted away the victory, 60-55.

Although disappointed with the final outcome most Cass City fans were pleased with the play of the team and so was Coach Fred Hurlburt. "I'm proud of the way the boys played, he said; they gave it every thing they had.

When compared with the results of the first game when the visiting Hatchets tore Cass City apart 79-62 with the Bad Axe bench seeing lots of action it was a top performance.

The Hatchets like to run and shoot and have a devastating fast break when big Bruce Bublitz can sweep the ball from the boards.

Cass City countered with its slowdown offense and patterned play. In the first half they played with very few turnovers. It was nip and tuck during the first quarter.

During the first five minutes the lead changed hands several times before the Hawks went ahead to stay for the best part of the next two and a half quarters.

By the end of the first period it was 18-17 Cass City. In the second stanza the Hawks played some of their best basketball. With Rob Alexander and Joe Hillaker scoring freely and controlling the backboards Cass City shot into a lead that ranged to eight points at its peak. At the intermission the stunned Hatchets were behind 31-25.

The margin stayed about the same through most of the third quarter. When the final period opened the Hawks were in front 46-42.

But the Hatchets were coming alive as the third quarter ended. They chipped away at Cass City's margin until with six minutes left they tied the score at 48-48, the first time they had been even since early in the first period.

It was a see-saw battle until the final Hatchet rally already described.

Hillaker led all scorers with 24 points and picked off 10 rebounds. Alexander hit for 19 points and gathered in 12 rebounds. Bublitz snagged 21 rebounds and plunked in 19 points for the winners.

Cass City hit 20 of 44 shots for 45.4 per cent and Bad Axe converted 23 of 38 for just under 40 per cent.

The Junior Varsity game was nearly a carbon copy of the varsity contest. It was nip and tuck all the way as the Hatchets won 59-56.

The score was tied at the half, 33-33, and several times throughout the final two periods. Karl Zawilinski led the Hawk JV's with 16 points and a fine floor game.

Friday the Hawks will play Sandusky, a club that defeated them in double overtime when they played at Sandusky.

After Friday's game the schedule calls for four more contests before the districts, to be held at Cass City.

VASSAR GAME

The Cass City Red Hawks basketball team spotted the Vassar Vulcans a first quarter lead and then came charging back last Friday to whip the Vulcans for the second time this season. The score was 63-50.

Although the Hawks won with comparative ease, the team was not the smooth functioning quintet it was in the victory over Marlette the previous week.

The Hawks were charged 23 turnovers, just one less than the Vulcans committed.

Cass City used muscle on the boards and a good shooting eye to register the win. The club picked off 41 rebounds as compared to 25 for the host team. The Hawks shot a very satisfactory 47 per cent from the field and 55 per cent from the charity circle.

The Vulcans with 61 field goal attempts had six more shots from the field than Cass City could muster. The difference was that the Hawks hit 26 of their tries while the Vulcans were able to can just 20 of 61 attempts.

It looked for awhile as if Vassar was going to turn the tables on Cass City. In the first meeting between the two clubs, the Hawks charged to an easy victory, 79-40.

But Friday the Vulcans charged to an opening period 18-11 margin and the Hawks spent most of the first half playing catch-up.

Paced by Rob Alexander who picked up eight of his 18 points in the second quarter, Cass City rolled to a 20-13 second quarter advantage and were in front by two points at the half, 31-29.

In a low scoring third quarter, Cass City stretched its margin to four points to set the stage for a last quarter spurge that tucked the game safely into the win column.

Joe Hillaker dominated the boards for Cass City, picking off 15 rebounds and scoring 21 points on 7 of 10 free throws and 7 of 12 field goals.

Richard "Zike" Miller pitched in with 12 points and Scott Guernsey added six.

The Cass City Junior Varsity lost a heart breaker to the Vulcans in the preliminary, 59-58.

Watching are Joe Hillaker, 50, of Cass City and Doug Gay, Jim Apley and Lloyd Schinnerer of Bad Axe. The Hawks' valiant bid for an upset fell short before a last quarter rally by the Hatchets.

Pollution: the critical issue of the seventies

Pollution of our environment, something hardly anyone thought about at the start of the sixties, is fast becoming THE PROBLEM of the seventies. Gov. William G. Milliken exemplified the growing concern over the fact the planet is slowly becoming uninhabitable in a special message he delivered to the Legislature on pollution. He said the matter of pollution control is the "critical issue of the seventies."

It is not only our privilege to preserve and protect the earth we have inherited," he said, "It is our solemn duty."

"Unless we move without delay to halt the destruction of our land, our water and our air, our own children may see the last traces of earth's beauty crushed beneath the weight of man's waste and ruin," he said.

"It is difficult to exaggerate the situation. The speed with which we destroy our surroundings accelerates daily, so that with every passing day it becomes more and more difficult to undo the damage we have done."

Pollution, Milliken suggested, may prove to be more of an "ultimate weapon" in terms of destructiveness than the nuclear bomb.

These were strong words painting a bleak picture.

To combat this bleak picture, the Governor has proposed to the Legislature a "20-point action agenda" designed to stem the ever-rising tide of pollution.

The program attacks all areas of pollution. It includes proposals ranging from establishment by state government of environmental standards for air, water and land resources to the requiring of a litter bag in every motor vehicle using the highways.

Milliken said the establishment of environmental standards should be the first order of business for the state. These standards are expected to be established by the end of 1970, he said.

In addition to setting up standards by which to measure performance, he said, existing laws should be both enforced more stringently and strengthened.

For example, he asked the lawmakers to pass a bill giving the Water Resources Commission the power to force industries and municipalities to agree to timetables for building pollution control facilities if these entities are moving too slowly.

Lawmakers also were asked to voice support for a project favored by Milliken to ban all off-shore drilling of oil and gas wells from the Great Lakes.

Another place the Governor said the pollution battle should be fought is schools.

Milliken said courses on pollution and its control should be included in the curriculum of all primary and secondary schools as well as in all colleges and universities.

"Teachers at all levels must have an appreciation and understanding of environmental problems so the school can supplement the home in this very important formulation of environmental attitudes," Milliken said.

One specific program he will back in this area, he said, is inclusion of a biological water treatment research project in the higher education budget for this year.

Also high on the list of things which must be coped with soon are solid waste disposal and litter.

The average American throws away five pounds of garbage, rubbish and junk every day. Each month Americans dump an average of 1,300 cans, bottles, paper items and plastic containers on every mile of primary highway in the country.

Stricter supervision of solid waste landfills is needed to insure that they are properly filled, he said.

He also proposed a bill to require litter containers in every vehicle which uses the highways, in hopes of cutting down on the amount of litter dumped out of cars.

In addition to encouraging legislative action, Milliken pledged to attempt to get more citizens interested in the pollution problem.

He said he envisions a citizens' anti-pollution committee similar to the New Detroit committee at work in Detroit.

In April, Milliken said, he will participate in the national teach-in being scheduled on pollution.

NEW '70 MICHIGAN MAPS AVAILABLE

The 1970 Official Michigan Highway Map is ready for free distribution, the State Highway Commission said today.

There are many changes, some a result of freeways opened during the year. Michigan has more than 1,400 miles of freeway.

Another change is the experimental identification of two county roads in Allegan, Chippewa and Mackinac counties. If proved to be beneficial to motorists, it is expected that other county roads will be similarly identified in the future.

On the reverse side, the guide to state parks includes the number of campsites in each park. Also, several cartoon characters give friendly tips on how to make your trip safer and more enjoyable.

Another important change is the quantity of maps. Two million are being printed, up from 1.3 million last year, in an effort to meet growing public demand for maps.

When the Department of State Highways got into the map making business 56 years ago, the public had to pay a quarter for each copy. Today's maps are printed for slightly less than a nickel each, and they are distributed free of charge, on request.

Copies are available by writing--on a postcard, please--to: MAPS, State Highway Commission, Lansing, Michigan, 48904.

Letters to Editor

Ex-coach okays all-star team

Dear John:

It was certainly very interesting to read your comments in your "From the Editor's Corner" last week when you picked your Cass City High School "Dream Team". I should have to agree with you. Those five guys could certainly play ball, and I know they all played a big part in my success as a Coach in Cass City.

But, there were many fine ball players at Cass City all during the '50's, and I personally enjoyed being their coach.

The one outstanding thing I liked about all of the boys then was their attitude. They all seemed to really enjoy playing ball. They were all very "coachable," and they had a lot of pride in their team, school, and in the town they represented.

I could ask them to come up with an almost impossible task, and they would respond beautifully. To me it was a genuine pleasure to be associated with them, and to be their Coach. I treasure the memories of that era.

Let's have more high school kids like those you mentioned as well as the rest of the boys who played during the '50's.

Sincerely,
Irv Claseman

No school striking in '30, says teacher

I was most interested in reading the article from the "Dusty Records." I remember those years - for I was one of those teachers - hired in the spring of '30 for that fall at the good starting salary of $1400! I remember clearly the day the Banks closed and our salaries were cut right in half - mine to $75 a month. I kept on paying on my Model A convertible! - but we all stopped eating Mrs. Warner's wonderful dinners - it was cheaper on a 2-burner plate.

There was no thought of Striking- or Protesting-everyone was in the same boat. I was teaching Home Economics, Girls' Physical Ed - and had the Hot Lunch during the winter months. Those who filed through the Home Ec. room and into the gym to eat will remember the bowls of chili, Spanish rice or goulash when we were lucky enough to afford the hamburger to stretch as far as it would go. The Home Ec. girls will remember that daily job as I do. In clothing many who could buy cloth, couldn't afford the patterns so they brought pictures of the dress they wanted and I cut a pattern from newspapers for them. Others just brought things to make over or make do. Many times I washed and patched the basketball and football uniforms for Bill Kelley--and made a blanket for Harry Crandell's sheep to wear to Detroit--and win.

There was good spirit at Cass City High - we were as well off or better than many. We had winning teams and followed them. Girls used to ask weeks ahead to ride in the Ford Rumble seat to away games, yell for Kosanhe, Ward, Quick, Doerr, Ballagh, Kelly and many more.

I do not remember that we missed a pay day. The amount that was owed perhaps was for the higher paid teachers. I'm sure the other teachers would join me in thanking the school board and the mothers and fathers of that time for doing all they did to help carry C.C.H.S. through that difficult period.

"If It Fitz. . ."

Mother was a chopper

BY JIM FITZGERALD

There's one story I tell about my mother that my kids never believe. "Grandma would never do that," they always say. But she did, honest.

When I was a small boy I had a big sister. I mean big. She was only 18 months older but she was 4 feet taller and a lot tougher. I've written before about how she used to beat me up for lunch everyday and I'd rather not go into it again. Just thinking about it raises welts on my nose which is where she used to knee me if I was standing up straight.

But Jean's size is important to this unbelievable story about Mother. These days it is fashionable for girls to be tall.

They can earn $100 an hour being live clothes hangers for Harper's Bazaar. But this was not the case in the 1930's. A tall girl was pitied because it was figured she'd never find a tall boy. She'd never get married and her parents would have to feed her forever.

Mother figured she had to stop Jean from growing. People usually grow at night, while sleeping. So Mother would get up several times every night and go into Jean's bedroom and give her karate chops behind the knees.

"Curl up," Mother would hiss. "Bend your knees or you'll never get married." Chop, chop.

When Jean got up in the morning, she was already sitting down for breakfast. We just had to slip a chair under her.

(In case you're taking notes, Mother's treatment didn't work. Jean became a high-rise, but she found a man even taller. They were married in an old fashioned church with a steeple.)

Anyway, it is ironic that her grandchildren don't believe what Mother did long ago. Her middle-aged children can't believe what she does today.

My 4 sisters and I grew up knowing one thing for sure: Mother was a lady. She had to comb her hair and paint her nails before she'd answer the phone. She'd change from a housedress to a frilly frock before letting the grocery boy in the kitchen. She didn't just dress for dinner, she went formal to midnight snacks. She wouldn't wear low heels because they were too masculine. Her favorite outdoor sport was closing the window. She was Mary Pickford, frills and lace, the most feminine woman in town.

But last week the family threw a birthday party for Mother and there she was, dancing the frug in a pair of purple slacks. It was like seeing Queen Elizabeth on a motorcycle, wearing a black leather jacket with "The Killers" printed on the back.

Mother has gone mad. If pressed, she will admit she is a great grandmother. But the guy who presses her will get one of her icy stares, the type that my dear father used to feel from across a crowded city. She has apparently decided not to grow old, and that's that.

All of Mother's relatives know she was born Jan. 6, 1900. Even my slowest brother-in-law can perform enough arithmetic to learn her age. But after Mother's birthday party this January, she sent us a thank-you note.

"It was a wonderful party," she said. "If I live to be 70, I'll never forget it."

COMING EVENTS.

That far-away look in many folks' eyes these days is just a case of income tax daze.

THE PRESENT Ben Franklin Store in Cass City looked like this in 1910. (Top Photo) It was a hat store and also a school. Learning how to create millinery were these belles of the town shortly after the turn of the century. The pictures were submitted by Martin Moore who could not identify the women. Both the ladies and the store were on picture post-cards.

CELIA HOUSE

VILLAGE CLERK

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

Dear Mister Editor:

I was thinking the other day how I have been sending you these reports on our meetings at the country store for quite a spell, and I was thinking how the fellers has mullied over just about ever subject under the sun in our Saturday night sessions.

Well, like usual Saturday night them multi-experts was ready to give advice on any matter at the drop of one of Ed Doolittle's newspaper clippings. And Ed pulled the fellers up short when he allowed they is a big change come over newspaper editors in the past 20 year. It's seldom you see a editor exposing his ignorance on a matter than ain't first been hashed out by Government at some level, was Ed's words.

Fer instant, Ed said, it use to be the editor told farmers and ranchers how to take care of the land, what to plant and what kind of weather was coming. Now the U. S. Department of Agriculture gives all the farming advice, and the editors uses $10 words "analyzing" USDA policy. Furthermore, Ed went on, the farther away from home the issue is, the more of a multi-expert the editor is.

Clem Webster was disagreed with Ed. Clem allowed newspaper was like a mirror reflecting things that goes on around em. And it's a fact, he said, that folks got big issues on their mind. We have got to where we are like the feller that let his old lady handle little problems like groceries, rent and raising the younguns, while he took care of big problems like DeGall, hog prices and foreign aid.

Zeke Grubb recollected he had saw onct where this youngin in school was ask what newspapers is fer and he said they was good fer putting on shelves, to go under the baby's plate and to wrap potato peellings in. Zeke said that was about as close as a big city newspaper comes these days in dealing with the average feller's problems.

Practical speaking, allowed Clem, the bigger the paper the more they got to deal with things like isolationism, non periferation, conglomerates and Agnew. You can tell from looking at letters folks writes to big city editors that everybody is working on the big problems, Clem said.

Personal, Mister Editor, I know all the fellers read yore paper up one side and down the other. I allus heard it said that a editor that was suiting everybody was laying down on the job, with flowers all around him. They is three things everybody figgers he can do better than anybody else, raise the neighbor's younguns, manage a baseball team and edit the newspaper. And I reckon you figger the fellers had ought to stick to the first two cause you got more advice that you can use on the third.

Yours truly,
Uncle Tim

Missionary services at Deford church

The Rev. and Mrs. William Cox, missionaries to Burundi, Africa, will speak at the Deford United Methodist Church Sunday, Feb. 8, at both the 9:30 a.m. and 8:00 p.m. services.

BEHIND THE COUNTER

Tooth Decay

The National Institute of Dental Research recently reported new evidence that tartar (or "calculus") can be transmitted from one laboratory animal to another, apparently by bacteria. Then other NIDR researchers came up with the news that an enzyme called dextranase helps to block tartar formation.

These findings can be important because calculus is such an important factor in tooth decay and diseases of the gum.

Two strains of laboratory rats were tested: one known to form lots of calculus and one which formed little. Newborn litters were then nursed either by mothers of their own breed, or by mothers of the other strain.

They found that either strain of rat followed the calculus-forming tendency of the mother that nursed it. This supports the argument that the transmission factor is a bacteria.

Then the other research team reported that dextranase attacks dextran — the sticky, gummy coating which forms around the bacteria and clings to the tooth. This substance, which is manufactured by the body when sugar is consumed, appears to be an essential part of tartar formation.

Hamsters were injected with the bacteria believed to cause tartar and then fed dextranase. It appears that the enzyme not only breaks down the dextran already present, but prevents more dextran from forming—at least in the animals tested up to now.

William Cox

The Coxes serve with World Gospel Mission, an interdenominational missionary organization serving in 16 areas of the world.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Cox are graduates of Chicago Evangelistic Institute, now Vennard College. They served in the pastorate before leaving for the mission field.

Since 1944 the Coxes have served four terms in Burundi.

While on furlough, the Coxes present the challenge of the African mission field and often illustrate their message with vivid pictures. Mr. Cox, a vocal soloist, often sings special numbers.

Learn to live with Middle Age

Middle age cannot be cured in the sense that a broken arm can.

There are certain manifestations of middle age that are quite clear. One symptom is a decreasing appetite for parties, for driving fast cars, and other things commonly associated with youth. A middle-aged man usually worries more about money, and he has money to worry about. He worries about his health and his family's health. He has long and painful sessions with the dentist, and wonders if it's really worth the money. He worries about his worrying.

A great portion of the middle-aged man's conversation is directed toward diet, and he tries to hold his stomach in when he meets an old classmate.

The accumulative effect of this worrying is often very discouraging to the middle-aged man—it can make him old before his time. The main thing that his doctor can tell him is to slow down a bit, stop worrying, and remember that middle age is something he has to learn to live with. One thing he might acquire is dignity and in doing so, may find that it holds him in good stead as he becomes more elderly.

Dignity is a nice thing. It is pleasant to grow old with. Those who are younger should let grandfathers, and grandmothers, and great aunts, and great uncles grow old with dignity and not torture them with efforts to deceive themselves that they are really growing younger. The passing of time is an absolute. You can't turn back the universe and bring back yesterday.

The human body, though a marvelously durable machine, wears out like everything else. At fifty, a man cannot run around the reservoir unless he has been doing it all through the years. To him, the chief hazard of a blizzard is not being marooned in a car in the snow, but of shoveling the snow off the sidewalk. A shovelful of dry and fluffy snow weighs about four pounds. If the snow is wet, it weighs more. A minute of shoveling wet snow puts as much strain on the heart as if one dashed up seven flights of stairs in 60 seconds.

What has dignity to do with this? Simply that the possession of dignity seems to have something to do with freedom to change one's tempo, one's pace, as desired.

This isn't to say that dignity should be associated with idleness, with doing nothing. Sloth is one of the seven deadly sins. In the Middle Ages, the clergy called it, in Latin, "inertia," and the word has come right over into English. Today we use the word inertia to describe that force that causes something to go straight ahead in an unchanging way, looking, as it were, neither to the right nor to the left, and neither accelerating or decelerating.

But dignity doesn't include an addiction to sitting in the same chair, in the same place, in the same room, day after day. One should remain active to retain one's dignity. The elderly should choose their routines, the daily walk, the visit with an old crony who can reminisce of early love affairs or who remembers the bicycle built for two.

Some of the elderly get their kicks from keeping their hair dyed, from participating in shuffleboard and square dancing. If they like that kind of thing, that's what they should do. The young dancing teacher should come in and teach them the latest steps, providing the new dance craze doesn't prove too physically overtaxing.

But, on the other hand, those who prefer a good book and the fireside, should be permitted to enjoy their own way of growing old.

Oliver Wendell Holmes said it all when he remarked, "To be seventy years young is sometimes more cheerful and hopeful than to be forty years old."

It's only when you interfere with what grandpa wants in the natural process of growing old that you cause him to lose dignity.

A poet said:

"While much of youth I found enraging No less, in truth, is wrong with aging."

It's not wise to live in a spurious dream world: you can't bring back the past. But the elderly can find in person-to-person reminiscing, an eleventh hour spice of life and if they can avoid the fault of laziness, they have it made.

Some surveys have been made on the whole subject and here is the conclusion: "In general, the senior citizen is a proud and independent person; he has carried his own weight for almost half a century, and is not enthusiastic about asking for help. His personal dignity is far more important to him than any personal discomfort that could be alleviated by somebody else."

ONE FOR THE ROAD

Need law to aid all

By Dan Marlowe

The House and Senate are in session in Lansing again, and there's a law I'd like to see them pass which would aid us all.

I'd like to see them pass a law which would make the various departments, agencies and commissions which administer the laws passed by the Legislature more responsive to the people and to the Legislature itself.

It's a little known fact that when a law is passed and funds are voted for the law's operation, what is known as "enabling legislation" is also passed. In this manner the Legislature designates which administrative body (such as the Commerce Department, the Department of Natural Resources, ex-Conservation, or the Waterways Commission) shall oversee the administration of the new law. A set of ground rules for its administration is included in the enabling legislation, but it is at this point that the trouble arises.

All too often the administrative agency broadens the intent of the Legislature by its own interpretation of the intent of the Legislature. They promulgate their own requirements, demands and regulations. Occasionally these are so completely at variance with the intent of the Legislature that that body must pass another law undoing what it never intended having done.

But the Legislature doesn't have time to closely supervise the performance of the administrative agencies, and it is upon this fact that the agencies depend. Arbitrary in the extreme, difficult to communicate with, and almost impossible to pin down, they are a source of constant frustration to city, village and township units seeking to comply with what they feel is the intent of the Legislature. All too often the attitude of the bureaucrats in Lansing seems designed to hinder and not to help.

Nor is the situation substantially different in those areas of Federal government turned over to State agencies for administration. A case in point is the handling of the East Central Michigan Economic Development District by the Michigan Department of Commerce.

The District—one of 90 in the country resulting from legislation passed by Congress in 1965—consists of the counties of Arenac, Gladwin, Iosco, Ogemaw, Bay, Clare, Isabella, Roscommon, Gratiot, Huron, Sanilac, Midland, Saginaw and Tuscola. It was intended that these counties set up Planning Commissions which—under the umbrella of the ECMEDD—would coordinate responsible activity in the District in the areas of zoning, unemployment, land use, recreation, and housing, to name just a few.

County Boards of Supervisors—now Commissioners—were encouraged to vote partial matching funds for the promised Federal funds to implement the program. The carrot dangled before the donkey was the statement that since no application for Federal funding by a local governmental unit could be considered unless an overall economic development plan existed, the 14 counties in the District HAD to plan—and in detail—to become eligible.

Right from the start in the case of the smaller counties the promised Federal money was a trickle rather than a flood. Various excuses were offered why counties in the third year of their planning programs were still forced to operate on funds that had been cut back in the first and second years. Vietnam...the money just wasn't available. Yet all too often the Department of Commerce funded new and larger counties at the expense of smaller counties which already had viable programs.

At the beginning of this year word trickled back to the struggling County Planning Commissions—but never directly—that funding for 1970 was to take into consideration no units of government smaller than 50,000 people. This would eliminate two-thirds of the counties in the East Central Michigan Economic Development District, and if it becomes a fact will cut their planning programs off in various unfinished stages of development.

And if it comes to pass it can be stated without fear of successful contradiction that it will be a generation before County Boards of Commissioners will again vote to participate in a program which has let them down so badly, and this despite the fact that every one concerned will acknowledge that county planning is a MUST for economic development.

Another example of bureaucratic boondoggling in local affairs will follow next week.

Our high adventure takes us to the strange, isolated Galapagos Islands, Pitcairn Island of Bounty Mutiny fame, the Society Islands, the Cooks, Tokelous, Solomons and many others. Arriving in Australia, we travel 14,000 miles by Land Rover into the interior to visit the Aborigine, and many other unusual sights and experiences. "Windjammer to Australia" is great entertainment.
