School seeks renewal of 2.5-mill operating tax

The Cass City Board of Education voted Monday night to ask district taxpayers for a renewal of the 2 1/2 mills special operating tax that was authorized for one year last June.

Meeting in the regular session at the school the board set April 26 as the date for the vote.

Although the amount the board seeks will be the same as it was last year, it is likely that the actual levy will be a half mill higher.

That's because district taxpayers authorized up to a maximum of 2 1/2 mills last year and when the State Aid formula was generously revised upwards only two mills were required to run the school.

A mill in the Cass City district raises about $25,000.

The 2 1/2 mills will bring the total operating tax to 16.5 mills and the total school tax millage to 20.1. A mill is equal to $1.00 for each $1,000 of assessed valuation.

DENY APPLICATIONS

A decision involving the applications of two teachers at the retirement age, Mrs. Vera Hoadley and Miss Caroline Garety, was brought to a final decision after a month-long hassle.

Prior to this year, the board had adopted a policy of allowing teachers to work after 65 on a year-to-year basis after they had been certified healthy by a doctor.

A month ago the board voted to change this policy and to allow over-age teachers to work only in a case of dire emergency.

At this same meeting the board also voted to delay implementation of the new guidelines for one year by a 3-2 margin.

After the meeting it was discovered that a majority of the total board is needed for a legal vote so the matter was thrown open again.

Meanwhile, the two teachers contacted the Michigan Education Association and the union furnished a representative which met in a board session closed to the press and the public. No decision was reached.

When the matter was first brought to the attention of the board Monday, Trustees Don Koepgen, Gerald Hicks and Art

Severance were in favor of hiring the two teachers this year and putting the new regulations in effect next year.

After a discussion that indicated hiring the teachers this year might establish a precedent with the union, Koepgen changed his mind and voted to bar the teachers this year as did Mrs. Geraldine Prieskorn, Elwyn Helwig, Dean Hong and Donald Reid.

The policy vote was followed by a formal vote to officially turn down the teachers' requests and it passed unanimously.

Mrs. Prieskorn said that she felt the teachers were both competent and the board then voted to hire these teachers first in case certified teachers proved to be unavailable.

BUSSES PURCHASED

The board voted to buy four busses. Two will be Dodges, one a Chevrolet and the fourth a Ford.

Prior to Monday's purchase the busses had been bought in strict rotation from the three local dealers. This practice was changed Monday because the Dodge bus was available with a special $500 discount on each unit. . . a practice that has been discontinued by both Chevrolet and Ford. One of the busses purchased was to replace a Dodge that was totaled in a wreck this winter. It will be replaced by a Dodge.

Prior to Monday, the school paid 10 per cent over cost. All three local dealers agreed to lower this mark-up to six per cent this year.

In other business, contracts for Sue Kelley, third grade, and Linda Gray, fourth grade, were approved and Russell Richards, principal, outlined a policy for suspension and expulsion.

According to State law this policy must be in writing and the board will study copies of the policy before approving it at the next meeting.

In a meeting closed to the press and the public following the regular meeting, school principals reviewed teachers who were not already on tenure after teaching for two years.

murder charge

Albert Emerson Holman, 40, formerly of the Kingston area, but recently from Akron, Ohio, and his brother, Kenneth James Holman, 38, of White Creek Road, Kingston, are being held in Tuscola county's jail charged with the Saturday morning murder of Robert Albertson, 25, of Brown City, Michigan.

The Holman brothers were placed on $50,000 bond for each of them upon arraignment Monday at noon and the bonds have not been received.

Albertson apparently came to Marlette from Brown City Saturday carrying a large amount of cash.

He was found shortly after 8 a. m. Saturday morning lying by the side of the Mayville Road, nine miles east of Mayville.

An autopsy was performed in the late morning and early afternoon disclosing seven broken ribs, a hemorrhage of the left lung, and a fractured skull.

According to Coroner J. Benson Collon, the skull fracture and the lung damage occurred in nearly the same time span and either may have been the actual cause of death. When found, Albertson had no money. It is believed that the Holman brothers had been companions with whom Albertson became associated either early Saturday morning or late Friday night. They were taken into custody Saturday and first degree murder charges issued about 12:30 Sunday morning.

They were brought before the Magistrate John Bowles in the early hours Sunday morning and ordered held with no bond until arraignment before Judge Richard Kern Monday. Albert Holman is apparently a stable hand working with horses out

ALL WORKERS AT WALBRO CORPORATION agreed to be on the picket line for the start of a strike at the plant Wednesday morning. After the first day initial surge the number of pickets will level off. Plans call for pickets to be on duty from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. daily. Strikers will receive $40 a week if they spend their share of the hours on the picket line. Management and Union negotiators spent Tuesday afternoon in a bargaining session and employees voted to walk out in a meeting held Tuesday night.

FROM THE Editor's Corner

It's easy to feel sorry for the guys who march through life to the beat of a different drummer than most of the rest of us.

Chances are you know several. The man obsessed with saving money. . . never goes anywhere or does anything. The guy that goes everywhere, does everything and saves nothing. The man married to his job. . . centers his life around business and making money. On vacation, he's uneasy, bored, can't wait to return.

The late J. C. Penney must have been cut from this cloth. According to the news, at the time of his death he had more money than he could spend, but still was in his office four days a week when over 90 years old.

Penney liked nothing better than to get behind the counter and wait on customers. In our "get ahead" society the Penneys of the world are admired, respected and applauded.

I admire and applaud him not for the loot that he amassed, but because he evidently spent his life doing what he really liked to do.

At the other end of the economic scale are guys like Earl Moon in Cass City. In 20 years in Cass City, I've never known Earl to hold a 9-5 job. . . or ever seen him when he wasn't smiling about something.

Now Earl's long past the standard retirement age of 65. . . when he reached that magic number there is justification for not believing that he was already experienced in the art of doing nothing much of the time.

And like Mr. Penney, Earl spent most of his life doing what he felt like doing. Who's to say he's wrong?

It's a different life approach, but because it's different doesn't make it bad.

I don't know just how old Earl is today, but he must be well into his 70's and the last time I saw him he looked and acted 15 years younger.

The point is that J. C. Penney lived to be 95 and Earl Moon is going strong today and both did it by wringing out of life what was best for each of them.

For most of us, either extreme is distasteful. We prefer to work because we need the money to do some of the things away from the job that we have always wanted to.

We're not married to our jobs, nor are we upset because we need to work to make a living.

It's natural, I guess, to look a little aslance at the guy who dares to deviate.

It's natural even though most of us at one time or another have thought about chucking whatever it is we are doing to do something else we've often longed to try.

The trouble is that we don't have the guts to do it.

Don't put the knock on any of those who did.

Estimate 60-day wait for liquor by glass here

There will be a delay of 60 days or more before the first liquor by the glass is served legally over a bar in Cass City, Jay Lee Smith of Jack's Bar said this week after voters approved the sale by a narrow 13-vote margin.

A total of 366 voters were at the polls Monday and 189 voted for liquor, 176 said no and one ballot was spoiled. Before the election, Smith promised an all-out campaign to get pro-liquor voters to the polls and he kept his word.

The wet forces had a check-off at the polls to see who voted and who didn't and transportation was available for anyone who needed it.

Under the present law it is likely that both bars in Cass City will be selling liquor as soon as it is possible to do so.

However, Smith said, getting clearance from the liquor control commission and unsnarl other red tape would probably take at least 60 days and perhaps more.

Meanwhile, in the only other contest in the village elections, Incumbent James England successfully resisted a challenge by Elery Sontag for the office of Gageton village president. The vote was 79 to 68. England's margin was improved over a year ago when the same two candidates vied for the office and England won by a single vote.

Others unopposed for election were: Trustees Don Wildman, Leroy Stapleton and William Stapleton, Clerk Mrs. William Ashmore, Treasurer William Ashmore and Assessor Don Wilson.

Elected in Cass City were: President Lambert Althaver,

Trustees Arthur Holmberg, Bernard Ross and Mrs. Gladys Albee, Clerk-treasurer Mrs. Celia House and Assessor Mac O'Dell.

Charge pair with dope possession

In Tuscola County Circuit Court before Judge James P. Churchill Monday, Lance Scott Agar, of Marlette and Donald Randolph Lyons, of Kingston, stood mute on charges of possession of narcotics.

Agar is charged with possession of marijuana, Lyons with possession of marijuana and LSD. No date has been set for the trial.

George Czekai tells of 17 years with trailer plant

George Czekai is through working at Guerdon Industries in Marlette.

The expected pink slip arrived last Wednesday and when it did, the 58-year-old Cass City resident saw 17 years with the company slide down the drain.

Yet, like most of the men who lost their jobs when management announced that the plant was closing a few weeks ago, Czekai isn't brooding much about it.

Talking to him you have the distinct impression that the voluble, friendly cabinet maker couldn't be downcast about anything for long.

Yet, it's impossible for anyone to work as long as Czekai has at one job and not feel regret when forced to leave.

"It was a good place to work," he said. "I really enjoyed it. . . a great bunch of guys and the work was fine. I was never late and I missed very little time all the while I worked," he recalled proudly.

Some years, when the company was selling all of the mobile homes it could produce, Czekai worked through part of his vacation. . . taking the money instead.

Czekai is one of several area persons working in the plant who were laid off. Another is John Mika. Like Czekai, Mika isn't worried too much about it for himself. . . but he does feel sorry for the rest of the workers.

I was going to retire in another year anyway, so it doesn't bother me too much, Mika said.

Still there is a hardship connected with the closing for workers like Mika. Guerdon had established a retirement program. Now that the plant is closed the money in the fund will be distributed in the form of a cash payment and the pension closed out.

Mika isn't concerned about losing his job because he was going to quit anyway. Czekai isn't concerned for another reason. He doesn't anticipate having any trouble finding work.

I'm too young to retire, he says, and I wouldn't go back to a city factory if I could. Anyway, they wouldn't hire me if I did because of these, Czekai said, as he waved his hand to show where he lost two fingers to a jointer in 1954 while working for Guerdon.

Czekai's job at the plant was making cabinets and he saw the job change from the simple trailers at the start to the 14-foot wide mobile homes produced at the end.

Through it all, his job remained essentially the same. Making the cabinets.

And during the times when he wasn't making cabinets for the company, Czekai worked at cabinet making at home. It was his job and his hobby.

I purchased plywood and other lumber at wholesale from the company, he confided, and made knickknacks, doll cradles and other similar stuff. I just enjoyed doing it, he said simply.

I remodeled my home completely and have a complete set of tools at my home to work with.

Because the announcement of the plant's closing was unexpected, Czekai isn't quite sure just what the future holds.

He leans towards trying to hook on with another of the trailer plants at Marlette. . . or, perhaps, doing some carpenter work around town.

His mind is not quite made up. . . after 21 years in trailer plants, 17 with the same company, it takes awhile to become adjusted to something new.

Commissioners in routine session Tuesday

Tuscola county commissioners held a generally routine meeting Tuesday taking care of bills and discussing county equipment much of the time. The commissioners spent part of the morning discussing the possible acquisition of a video tape recorder for use by law enforcement agencies in producing evidence of intoxicated driving.

They also authorized application for federal monies to provide the video tape recorder for the sheriff's office and for development of a probation department for district court.

The application that the commissioners approved will be made through the project coordinator of what is termed the law enforcement task force for region seven, headquartered at the University of Michigan Center.

If a government grant is allowed, the cost would be split

Waving solution can cause spots

Judy Marks - Extension Agent

Do you like solving mysteries?

Let's look at one -- Case of the invisible spots.

Home permanent solutions may give you a lush crop of curly locks, but they can also be pure murder on your clothes. Careless use of waving solution often leaves a large stain on the back of a blouse or dress.

Some women think their dry cleaner was responsible for the stain. . . because the stain wasn't there when they took the garment in, but was there when they picked it up.

It is quite likely that the waving solution which dripped down the back went unnoticed, or was forgotten. The spot remains invisible until it is heated in the cleaning and pressing process, then it causes a drastic color loss.

This problem can be avoided if you just remember to promptly rinse any spills and drips with water. The next best idea is to alert the dry cleaner that you were wearing the garment while using a permanent wave solution.

"If It Fitz. . ."A night with Aunt Ella

BY JIM FITZGERALD

The plan was to tunnel out of the country and go see Aunt Ella. Peace.

But first, reservations were necessary. I phoned in my name and a question came back: "Are you any relation?"

"Yassuh, Boss," I answered in my best Georgia accent. My goodness, an ethnic joke? Shoot me.

Ella Fitzgerald isn't really my aunt. I just like to say she is because it would be groovy to be related to the best jazz singer in the world. For several years, I think my kids believed me. Then they got older and noticed that Ella was black and I'm not. That's what happens when kids grow up. They learn Dad isn't Superman, he's a phony.

Anyway, Aunt Ella was singing at the Elmwood, that huge barn of a nightclub in Windsor, Canada, just a few minutes under the river from Detroit. My wife and I had to go. And if a "Yassuh, Boss" would get us a seat nearer the stage, it would be worth the bribe to my liberal dignity. Heck, if it meant getting nearer Ella Fitzgerald, I'd order watermelon and tap dance on the table.

As it turned out, the headwaiter wouldn't have been impressed if I'd been Aunt Ella's long-lost father returned from 86 bleaching years in the desert. But he understood the dollar bills sticking from between my fingers. He grabbed I end of the bills and I didn't let go of my end until he had seated us close enough to reach out and touch Aunt Ella.

Oh my. Aunt Ella was only great. I couldn't describe that lady, whether she is skit-skating or ballading. You had to be there. One for instance: the finest song written in years is the Beatles' "Something." Until you've heard Aunt Ella sing it, you haven't heard it.

The warmest, most magic moment came at the end. Aunt Ella sang "Put a Little Love in Your Heart." She jazzed and souled that song so that your skin prickled and you couldn't catch your breath. And, as she sang it, she weaved along the edge of the big stage and reached out and touched hands with her fans. She reached out and touched white hands and black hands and she said put a little love in your heart.

Over 700 people stood up and reached out and seconded Aunt Ella's message: "Love is the answer; Brotherhood will conquer all if we'll just give it a chance."

Simplistic, right? A common trick of many entertainers. A lot of emotional malarky that sounds great to an integrated audience juiced up on jazz and booze. But when you wake up the next morning there's that lousy taste in your mouth. You know Aunt Ella is right on. But she's a sweet dreamer.

The next day, still humming "Put a little love. . .", it was back to my desk and this lovely note from a reader: "Government by law is trying to force whites to love, mix and mate with a lazy shiftless bunch of darkies that love to rape, knife, burn, kill and rob."

How would you like to pry a little love into the heart of the jerk who wrote that?

Nevertheless, I'll dream along with Aunt Ella. Please pass the Love.

Health Council Executive Vice-president John A. Doherty hopes the tide toward specialization can be tempered somewhat.

"With more than 170 Michigan communities seeking help from the Michigan Health Council in obtaining family doctors, the council strongly supports the efforts of the Michigan Academy of Family Practice to get legislative and special financial support for our medical schools so that they can establish departments of family medicine and implement other programs in medical schools and teaching hospitals so that more medical students will enter family practice," he said recently.

"Unless more and more programs related to family practice are established throughout Michigan without further delay, we could be without family doctors within the next 10 years," he said.

FOND GOODBYES

The two most unpopular jobs in government are probably tax

Medical trend: fewer family doctors, more specialists

If you've suspected it's harder to find a family doctor these days than it used to be, you're right.

The Michigan Health Council reports the number of family doctors in Michigan has dropped sharply since 1966 from 2,134 to approximately 1,600.

While family doctors are dwindling, however, the total number of doctors has increased, showing that more and more are becoming specialists.

At the end of 1966 there were 10,390 medical doctors in Michigan. Final figures for December, 1970, are expected to total just over 11,000.

collecting and law enforcement. Yet two of the most popular men in recent years have held those jobs.

One of these is Clarence W. Lock, who retired Feb. 26 after nearly 40 years in tax collecting, the last as Commissioner of the Michigan Department of Revenue.

About 300 government and business leaders, the latter group including many who Mr. Lock had taxed enthusiastically but fairly over the years, met to wish him well. The warmth of the wishes made it clear that it is possible for a man to handle a difficult job and hold the respect and friendship of those he must work with. To do so he must possess a special talent. It was obvious that Clarence W. Lock was that kind of person.

"The cop who had no enemies" was Joseph A. Childs. He retired in June of 1965 from the position he held for 14 years. Joe was another top government official who earned admiration from just about everyone who had to deal with him. He has the same kind of talent Lock possesses. In both cases, people were sorry to lose the services of these administrators. In both cases, their many friends wish them well.

REVENUE NEED SHOWN

Wonder why state governors across the nation are unanimous in their support of the idea of the federal government sharing some of its revenues with the states? Look no further than the federal budget this year.

President Nixon asked Congress to spend a total of $229.2 billion in fiscal 1972. The share Michigan taxpayers will pay to finance this will be $10.864 billion.

By contrast, the budget Gov. Milliken outlined for fiscal 1972 in Michigan calls for total tax revenues from all Michigan sources of $2,794 billion.

Thus, for every one dollar the Michigan resident pays to the state, he pays four dollars to the federal government.

One complaint of governors and other local officials is that the federal government "cornered all the good revenue-producing taxes."

They really mean the income tax. The federal income tax is so high that state and local officials can only levy a few percentage points of a tax rather than take another big chunk like the national government does.

Milliken and the other governors feel if the federal government collects four dollars in Michigan for every one dollar the state gets back from Washington, and if federal taxes are high enough that the state can't piggyback much, then it's only fair that the federal government give back some of the money it has taken.

If the president's proposed $5 billion revenue sharing plan passes, it would mean a little over $110 million for the state treasury and another $110 million for local governments.

That isn't a whole lot when compared to the total budgets involved, but it would make quite a difference in terms of new taxes.

For example, Milliken estimates his proposal to push the state income tax from 2.6 per cent to 3.6 per cent would raise $130 million. He also says any revenue shared by the federal government would mean a lesser tax increase.

If the $5 billion were adopted, it would mean almost no new taxes under Milliken's projection. And if the bill recently introduced in Congress by Sen. Jacob Javits, R-New York, to double the revenue sharing to $10 billion got through, Michigan would be in pretty solid shape financially without any new taxes at all.

The money came from local good Samaritans and civic organizations. . . over $800 of it. . . after Friske's trailer burned several weeks ago.

It's a little late for this year and sure to be forgotten next. But to answer a critic, the reason the Chronicle printed all the school basketball results except the 8th grade is that the 8th grade results weren't reported to us.

Once again, we cover the varsity and report the rest only if they are reported to us.

You Robin watchers had better bow to Ray Surbrook. He's talking about his first Robin of the year this week. I spotted him scolding away in a tree Saturday right in the midst of that snowstorm, he said.

Surbrook is better at finding birds than he is finding dogs. He lost his Beagle recently and he was gone four days before Surbrook got him back.

A farmer four miles down the road found him when the dog became lost chasing fox, took him in and cared for him while waiting for the owner to show up.

Ray, evidently, was at home watching the birds fly by.

Speaking of lost dogs, the saga of the misplaced puppy came to a joyous end last week. The pup in question belonged to Tom Gretz and was one of a litter. The rest of the pups were advertised free for the asking. By mistake the Gretz pup was picked up. The Chronicle featured the story and last Thursday two girls returned "Huskie" and took another pup home.

The Gretzes almost had two returned in place of the one pup that was taken. Mrs. Donald Wernetie called to tell about a puppy answering the description that was dropped off in front of their house.

After looking at her new arrival and checking the description in the paper she was SURE that she had the lost dog.

It turned out to be no more than wishful thinking.

Jack Kappen and Jay Lee Smith promised to beat the bushes for votes in their campaign for liquor by the glass in Cass City.

Judging by an incident observed while I was voting, I have to believe that they cajoled some voters to the polls who weren't there too often before.

As I was signing the registration slip, one guy hollered out from the privacy of the booth and said, "Hey, do I fold these so that corner is showing or do you?"

The week-end events were summed up beautifully by Dr. Graydon Blank's simple phrase "... everyone ought to have something live to take care of..."

4-H exploration days popular

A number of changes are being made in the statewide events to be called 4-H Exploration Days. This event will be held at Michigan State University June 29 to July 1, 1971.

Department chairmen and specialists involved in supporting 4-H - Youth programs on the Michigan State University Campus are very enthusiastic about their involvement in providing leadership for this event. Never before has the response been so great concerning a statewide youth event.

This event in the past has been held in August after most county fairs. This year it will be held in late June, so as to offer help to our youth in developing exhibits and activities for their county events.

Some people may not support this change because of change itself, but I feel most will once they understand the many advantages offered in this new approach to youth development.

On Tuesday and Wednesday of 4-H Exploration Days, specific educational programs utilizing classrooms, laboratories, research centers, and will include off campus tours. Delegates will have to register for one area only during these days and must be 12 years of age or older.

The Thursday program is "4-H in Action Day" at the Spartan Stadium Concourse and is open to the public. All 4-H members and leaders are encouraged to visit 4-H Exploration days on Thursday. There will be continuous "4-H in Action" programs on this day from 8:30 to 3:00 p. m.

There will be a brief printed program telling what will be offered and provided space for individual members to sign up. This will be available later this month.

He is also chairman of the committee of managers of the Provincial Literature Bureau in Bo.

THE HOPELESS FOUR

They were the best act at the annual amateur night of the Church Youth Group. The audience loved them—not only their parents and their friends' parents, but all the other folks, too.

More important is what it did for the boys themselves. Learning to work together, enjoying every minute of rehearsal, perfecting talents they hardly knew they had... and doing it all as part of the youth program of their church.

But don't miss the "dig" they gave the rest of us when they named their group. Too many youngsters today have the impression that we consider theirs a hopeless generation.

The truth of the matter is that most of American youth belongs to the finest generation our country has yet raised. While you and I are reading and hearing about the "wild" minority, our churches are working quietly and effectively to mold the faith and character of tomorrow's citizens.

Sanilac meeting to explore waste disposal

A leading problem facing dairy and livestock farmers in Sanilac county, is the growing concern over animal waste disposal. Magazine and newspaper articles point the finger more and more at animal waste as a prime source of runoff pollution in our lakes and streams. What does the future hold then, for a dairy farmer with an investment of $100,000 to 150,000 in a dairy business where manure is an everyday problem?

To look at this problem, the Sanilac County Cooperative Extension Service has scheduled a meeting on Animal Waste Management. The meeting will be held Wednesday, March 17, from 1:00 p. m. to 3:30 p. m. in the Farm Bureau Building in Sandusky.

Speakers on the program include John Cosens, of the Water Resource Division of the Department of Natural Resources; Lou Kennedy, of the Sanilac County Health Department; Dean Jagger, of the Michigan Department of Public Health; Jim Boyd, of the MSU Agriculture Engineering Department; Walt Messer, Sanilac County Soil Conservationist and Lorraine Hyde of the Sanilac County ASCS office.

Topics to be discussed include: Water pollution and livestock, air pollution and livestock, possible control solutions, local planning assistance and local cost sharing available in constructing these pollution controls.

The meeting is free and open

Speakers from various agencies outlined the function of their offices and "problems down the road" at a recent meeting in Caro, according to Ann Ross, Extension Home Economist.

Health, Sheriff, Road, Social Services, Education and Extension Departments discussed their services. Tuscola's plans for recreation bond money were described. The audience members represented various groups in the county including eleven Extension study groups, two 4-H clubs, eight American Association of University Women and one high school government class.

Those present represented over 200 people. A subsequent meeting will be held March 17 in the Civil Defense Center, Caro, beginning at 10 a. m. Problem solving groups will describe their efforts to lead Tuscola county into improved environmental quality.

Manure handling for pollution control

By William L. Bortel

The old adage, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure", is the basis for a program concerning Animal Waste Disposal for Environmental Pollution Control at Michigan State University Farmers' Week, Wednesday, March 24, 1971.

"By becoming acquainted with the functions and expectations of those agencies responsible for preventing pollution of public water and air, dairy, livestock and poultry farmers can avoid investing in manure handling systems that are unsatisfactory in capacity, economy or their efficiency for preventing pollution, according to Dr. Don Hillman, Extension Specialist in Dairy who is conducting the program.

Featured speakers on the morning program include Elton R. Smith, dairy farmer and President of the Michigan Farm Bureau; Hon. Frank J. Kelley, Attorney General of Michigan; F. B. Frost, Chief Engineer Division; Lee Jager and Paul Shutt, Michigan Department of Public Health, Air Pollution Division; Loren L. Oshel, State Conservation Engineer, U. S. Soil Conservation Service; Hon. Harry Demaso, Chairman of the Michigan Senate Taxation Committee, and Jeffrey D. Dnit, Chief Agricultural Pollution Control Section, Water Quality Office, Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, D. C.

The afternoon program will be devoted to systems that farmers can use for animal waste disposal to avoid pollution of water and air. Speakers include Dr. C. C. Shepard, Michigan State University Poultry Specialist; Arthur J. Muehling, Agricultural Engineer, University of Illinois, who will present manure disposal systems for swine producers; Dr. James S. Boyd, Michigan State University, Agricultural Engineer, who will discuss manure handling and pollution control practices for dairy farms and feedlots; and Patrick Ngoddy, Michigan State University Agricultural Engineer, will discuss innovative ideas for animal waste disposal.

A panel of farmers who have installed new waste disposal systems will present their reaction to the presentations and shortcomings of particular systems. They include Fredrick Halbert, dairyman from Battle Creek, who recently built a 400 cow operation; Sanford Yoe-man, a poultryman from Ionia; Cyrus Claffin, a cattle feeder from Marcellus, who installed a waste disposal system that was approved by the various state agencies; and Don McKenzie of Marcellus, a swine feeder who has had experience with a modern waste disposal system.

Investments in manure disposal systems frequently amount to $75 or more per head on livestock farms. These farmers must be sure that the system they choose will avoid public conflict as well as meet their own needs for manure handling. The speakers will point out some simple management practices that small and moderate size dairy and livestock farmers can employ with their present manure handling system to avoid pollution without making substantial investments.

SHARP MEMORY

Never judge a man's future by his past - experience may have taught him a lesson.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

Dear Mister Editor:

I don't know nothing and I git that mixed up, so I wish somebody would set me straight on this new postal service that President Nixon says is going to put delivering the mail on a sound foot. For a short spell there, I had some hope that things might git better, but now I think its jest another case of paying more and more fer less and less.

Mister Editor, I've studied up one side and down the other what I've seen in the papers about this hole new set of mail rate hikes, and the best I can figger it all means rates is going up and service is going down. I recall when they first come up with this private corporation the idea was to run the mails like big business. It looks like the Postal Service now is trying to show business how to go bankrupt in one lesson.

Furthermore, it looks like the Government is going backwards from its usual way when it is trying to set the mails up as a private outfit. When we have trouble with railroads, they is talk of nationalizing them as a cure fer all that ail em. When steel making is the big problem, they is talk of putting the mills under Government control. But the way to fix the mails, Mister Editor, is to take it out of Government control. Like I said, they shore is a heap I don't understand.

General, I allus thought the mails was a public service that people provided themselves. I figgered we had ought to run as good a mail service as we can, but I never felt it had to be a money-making deal. Off hand, I can't think of a single Government service that shows a profit. When you take a public service out of public control, they ain't no telling what's going to come of it.

The newspapers jest got through with a three-step mail rate hike, and now another whopper is coming. This new outfit says newspaper rates will go up 142 per cent this spring. Actual, ever single class of mail is going up except parcel post, I hear, and that's the one where the Government has some competition. I saw by the papers where a regular mail outfit was trying to start, but it got in trouble cause the Government said it couldn't use regular mailboxes. Looks like what the mail needs is healthy competition to keep the rates down.

Practical speaking, I think the mail cure is going to be worst than the disease. Business gets ahead by giving good service at reasonable rates. The mails is trying to keep a corner on the market, charge as much as it wants to, and give as little service as it can.

The truth is, Mister Editor, if private business tried that, the Government would close em down.

Yours truly,
Uncle Tim

BETTER HEALTH

Women worry more than men

BY DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

Every physician probably would say that he sees more women with nervous troubles than he sees men with nervous troubles. Certainly, that has been my strong impression during 65 years of practice. I was interested to see in Science News recently, an abstract of an article reporting answers to 12 questions given to a sample group of 7,710 persons in a health examination survey. It indicated that women do worry more and have more nervous problems than do men.

Among people who felt an impending nervous breakdown, there were 7.7 men to 17.8 women. Nervousness was complained of by 30.2 men and 65.6 women; insomnia by 24.1 men and 40.9 women, and nightmares by 6.9 men and 12.3 women.

Since worry is one of the greatest causes of illness and fatigue, every person with a tendency to this bad habit should make a big effort to break himself of it. Unfortunately, there are many persons with chronic illness or a loved one ill or at war, or with an unhappy love life, who can hardly be expected to stop worrying. We physicians who are inclined to say, "Stop worrying and forget it," might worry frantically if placed in a similar position. For persons who must worry I have only sympathy.

There are many persons who keep worrying all the time, usually in a foolish or needless way, and who make themselves sick because of this. Many a woman may be worrying about something every day of her life; and many may admit that when they haven't anything real to worry about, they make something up. For instance, a wealthy woman of 55 with an affectionate family, a beautiful home, and perfect health, worried herself sick, feeling that since all her life fortune had so smiled upon her, it was about time that something terrible happened to her or her husband or one of her children. As a result, every time the telephone rang, she went to pieces and was unable to answer because she was so sure that it would be the police telling of some terrible accident that had happened to one of her loved ones.

I have seen hundreds of very unhappy women who were constantly worrying over the possibility that by a failure in judgment or devotion they had contributed much to the illness or death of a parent, husband, or child. They kept saying over and over again, "If I had only called another physician or taken my loved one to another hospital, or refused to permit an operation, the disaster would not have happened." I have constantly to keep telling these people that the Good Lord does not expect of us an ability to see into the future. I imagine all He asks is that we do the very best we can at the time of decision.

Thousands of women worry themselves sick over petty conscientious scruples and perhaps fear of punishment if they don't go to church often enough, or don't live up to rituals that they have set up for themselves. For instance, one woman had to wash her hands six times before leaving the house -- so that her father wouldn't get another heart attack. Other women feel they have to protect their family from accident and illness by doing penances, like going without some food they love.

Many women are constantly fussing at their loved ones to do something which will presumably make them healthier and lengthen their lives. As a man once said so aptly, he suffered daily "from that form of persecution known as love." Certainly, all sensible women should avoid this constant tormenting of a husband for his supposed good.

The best advice ever given to worriers was that of the great Austen Riggs. He said that the first thing a would-be worrier should do is to ask himself if the problem that is bothering him so much is his to solve. If it isn't and he cannot do anything about it, then obviously, he shouldn't spend three minutes on it.

The next question for the worrier is: If it is your problem, can you tackle it and solve it now? If it can or should be tackled now, the thing to do is to get busy immediately. If you cannot figure out what the solution is, then find some expert who does know and can advise wisely. Many a woman has worried herself sick over a problem that any wise lawyer or banker or physician could have solved for her in a few minutes. And when advice is obtained from an expert, it is better to follow it than to go on worrying -- better a poor decision than illness due to lack of one.

Finally, when a decision is made, the subject should be closed, unless perhaps some new information is obtained which requires that the docket be reopened.

One comfort I can offer women is that though they tend to worry more, on the average they outlive men by several years, and so in some ways, they are stronger than men. They are almost immune to some diseases which affect men, like gout or a "poker" or stiff spine; they get fewer ulcers, and especially before the menopause, fewer heart attacks than do men.

If you would like a copy of Dr. Alvarez' booklet, "Triumph Over Nervousness," simply send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope along with your request for it to Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, Dept. CCC, Box 957, Des Moines, Iowa 50304.

We have a letter from a bank asking: "What do you do with your spare money?" It's a problem, a real one, since the nickel cup of coffee has vanished along with the nickel pop drink and the five-cent candy bar.

Consumers shop more carefully today. Here's why they buy Fords.

Ford LTD, quiet and strong, is the luxury car without the luxury car price.

Ford LTD is the car that can match the luxury of cars costing hundreds of dollars more. And LTD's quiet ride is the standard that those same more expensive cars have to match themselves. That quiet strength is one reason for consumers choosing LTD over all other luxury cars in its class.

Torino is sized and priced right in the middle. Room for six, small car handling.

Consumers know the mid-size Torino gives them the roominess of a big car plus the easy handling of a small car. For a price that's right in the middle. As a result, Torino has become the most popular 4-door in its class. Your Ford Dealer has thirteen other models to choose from.

Maverick, the simple compact car, offers 2 doors or 4; 6 or V-8 power.

Take Maverick. Consumers know that the simple machine is simple to own and simple to run. And they learned recently that a leading independent survey found Maverick has the best frequency of repair record of any American car. That might explain why it's America's best-selling compact.

Fabric design go native

The use of geometric patterns has increased in upholstered fabrics as well as carpets.

The geometric designs include just about everything done in the Western Hemisphere before it became fashionable to leave

Europe and settle here. But now the geometries are going native, and are being taken direct from the art produced by the North American Indians.

What were considered symbols for good luck, rain, stars, mountain ranges, lightning, moon, home and water by the earliest Americans are among the most fashionable designs in today's sophisticated homes.

Planners set to talk at meeting

How do county, district, state and national agencies plan together to help meet needs of Tuscola citizens? Where do you go to find out about future plans for the county?

If you're wondering, come to a special meeting entitled "Citizenship in Your Community" to be held Wednesday, March 17 from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. in the Civil Defense Center, Caro.

The program includes a resume of the planning and implementation functions of the Tuscola Planning Commission, the County Board of Commissioners, the professional planning consultants, the East Central Development District plus the Cooperative Extension Service's educational role.

State government roles will be described by Congressman Robert Young.

Ralph Hartman will outline the work of the County Planning Commission. Shuford Kirk and Floyd Ducker will discuss the many duties of the Board of Commissioners - including its Department of Public Works.

Bill Walker and Ed Hustoles, planning consultants from Villan Lemay & Associates, will tell how they are working with the county leaders. James Collison, who heads the fourteen County Economic Development districts, will show how planning is done across county lines. And MSU development agent, Jim Neal will outline how local citizens can be involved in the area's development.

The speakers represent groups which function to solve problems and to plan for this area. Understanding the interrelationships of these groups will assist citizens in understanding how our present system operates.

The meeting is for all interested persons and is open to all adults without charge. Selected high school representatives are also invited. Persons attending may bring a sack lunch if desired.

A reflection panel will give to the speakers their views and questions. Panel members will be Mrs. Keith Green, Caro; Mrs. Leonard Russell, Akron; and Mrs. Walter Schrader, Reese.

THE ONLY SILVER lining in a cloud of week-end snow for villagers was that it came Saturday night and the village crew was able to go to work immediately not hampered by parked cars. It was the season's worst snowstorm and closed schools for two days.

Tax group warns boards of review in lawyer's letter

The Boards of Review have been meeting this week with a warning before them from the "Voice of The People, Tuscola County," a group that has been working for a new tax structure... particularly to ease property taxes. In a letter under the heading of a well-known Saginaw law firm, the boards in each township were scheduled to receive this:

Dear Sirs:

Please be advised that the undersigned represents the Voice of the People, Tuscola County, an organization formed for the purpose of promoting a fair method of taxation of the people of the State of Michigan. There are several taxpayers in your area who are members of the aforesaid organization, which taxpayers feel that their property has been greatly over-assessed. They will be appealing their assessment to the Board of Review in March.

The first meeting of the Board of Review in March will be to determine whether the Board, on its own motion, wishes to adjust the assessments of property owners in the township in question. The next meeting is the time wherein individual taxpayers may appear to object to the assessment made on their property. The law provides that any such taxpayers are to be granted an opportunity to fully explain to the members of the Board of Review the basis of their appeal, which right is not limited to simply signing a form that they do not accept their assessment. It is the sworn duty of each respective member of the Board of Review to exercise independent judgment and determine (by a majority vote) the fair market value of the property in question. Thereafter, it is the duty of the members of the Board to adjust that value in accordance with the factor that has been assigned to your township. In short, the law requires that as a member of the Board of Review, you take an active part in determining the merits of each taxpayer's appeal. The supervisor will also attend the hearing, but I would like to emphasize that it is up to you (not the supervisor) to determine the value of the property of the appellants at that stage of the proceedings.

After certifying your findings to the County Board of Commissioners, it will be their duty to equalize the assessments within Tuscola county. If the equalization factor allocated to your township, is not proper, then the Township Supervisor may and should appeal the same to the State Tax Commission.

I am writing this letter to impress upon you the fact that the Board of Review hearing is of extreme importance to the taxpayers appearing before the same, and the function to be performed by each respective member is of great significance. If you have any questions whatsoever concerning the content of this letter, please do not hesitate to contact the undersigned.

Thank you,
Very truly yours,
John W. Wolf

SIGNS TELL STORY

The basic shapes and colors of traffic signs are safeguards along our roadways. Know what they mean:

Rectangular signs give regulations as well as directions. Round yellow and crossbuck signs indicate railroad crossings.

A yellow diamond is a warning sign. A yellow triangle means yield the right-of-way.

An eight-sided red sign ALWAYS means a complete stop.

The Highway Traffic Safety Center of Michigan State University reminds the reader that the shape of a traffic sign tells the "story" of the roadway ahead.

memo to advertisers

With two seemingly equal advertising opportunities available, how would you decide which was to carry your sales messages?

We have a suggestion—take a few minutes to find out just how seemingly equal they really are.

Ask questions—how big is their circulation audience? Where do readers live? How much do they pay? And others.

Then ask for proof!

Ask to see a copy of their latest report from the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Equal opportunities? Be ABC-sure!

THE CASS CITY CHRONICLE

The Audit Bureau of Circulations is a self-regulatory association of over 4,000 advertisers, advertising agencies, and publishers, and is recognized as a bureau of standards for the print media industry.

Beautiful World Begins at Home

DINING IN

The trend toward in-home entertaining is making the dining room as important as any other in today's homes. Whether it's dinner for two or a supper for seven, there is never too much space for resting platters and plates. This French buffet from Hlibiten's Anniversary Paris Collection is a boon for the hostess who does her own serving. It spreads out to an ample nine square feet of surface for side dishes, coffee and cordials. Gently sealed, the design will move comfortably into almost any size dining room or alcove. A buffet is a practical addition to today's small apartment, and it can move gracefully into the dining room of a future home.

Interior Space is Essential Part of Environmental Battle

Whether in housing or places of work, unplanned interior space is as detrimental to our mental and social behavior as water and air pollution is to our health.

Since over 200 million Americans spend 80 per cent of their time in enclosed spaces, these spaces must be considered an integral part of total environmental rehabilitation.

After this first year into what is termed the Environment Decade, scientists and academic communities are now hopeful our natural environment will be rescued, not because of any sweeping changes, but they are hopeful because of the growing public awareness. This has been cited, again and again, by ecologists as the most significant factor.

According to The Designer, a national trade publication, thousands of interior design specialists are joining ecologists and specialists of other disciplines to stimulate awareness of the need for a better quality of life in man-made as well as natural environments.

As the nation faces population explosion and the resulting density of urban centers, our citizens will find themselves increasingly within structured, man-made surroundings. Some specialists believe the ultimate question is: will this structured environment serve the needs of human habitation?

Some of the interior environment pollutants in which millions of Americans now live are listed by The Designer as: poor ventilation, lack of natural light, lack of noise level control, ineffective traffic patterns, crowded claustrophobic conditions, disregard for color and its effects on individual perception of space, awkward and uncomfortable furnishings.

Scientists and behavioral psychologists have pointed to the fact that environment greatly influences people in a variety of ways. They know that crowding in slum areas often means an earlier death rate and a higher susceptibility to certain diseases.

It is being learned that how we experience interior space daily—at home or at work—becomes more and more relevant to our mental and physical health; to our levels of motivation and productivity; to our maximum human effectiveness.

Recognizing that environmental conditions have a cause and effect relationship to human behavior and development, interior space planning could be contributing countless positive benefits to many more citizens than it now does. In fact, it has been found that an interior that is not pleasing exerts a negative influence on behavior patterns and attributes of people.

The last battle of the American Revolution was probably fought at Blue Licks, Ky.

COMMISSIONERS

75% to 25% with the federal government paying the larger share and the county's share to be paid by furnishing office space, equipment and other "in-kind" items.

The cost to the county in dollar expenditures would be small, somewhere near $1,000.

The commissioners also accepted a bid from the Motorola Company for the purchase of a new, two-way, solid state, radio for a new patrol car. The Sheriff's Department is buying three new cars, will trade in 2, and the radio is for the extra car to be used by the detective department.

CMU students

According to statistics released from Central Michigan University, Tuscola county has 205 students enrolled and ranks 15th in the State in the number of students from various counties at the school.

Huron county sends 212 and ranks 12th, but Sanilac county is not listed among the top 20.

Even your friends have little time to worry on your account.

Huron county records 2nd fatal crash

No Cass City area accidents were reported this week to the Sheriff's office but Huron county recorded its second fatality of the year Saturday afternoon with the death of Joseph Bielat, 73, of Kinde, who died from injuries sustained in a two car accident on M-53 north of Bad Axe Thursday afternoon at 2:55 p. m. According to Bad Axe State Police Joseph Bielat had been driving west on the Kinde Road when he stopped for highway M-53. He apparently moved too slowly crossing the highway and drove into the path of a southbound car driven by Dennis James Andrezejewski, 17, of Sterling Heights. Joseph Bielat died of his injuries at Huron Memorial Hospital. The driver and passengers in the southbound car were not seriously hurt.

Kevin Paul Barrons, 17, of Kingston and his passenger Francis John Wolak, 17, of Kingston were treated for injuries at Caro Community Hospital early Saturday morning when their car went out of control and off the west side of the Phillips Road north of M-46. According to Sheriff's Deputies, the Barrons vehicle was attempting to pass another car at the time and it flipped end for end.

Chamber

voting for

directors

Members of the Cass City Chamber of Commerce will select four new members of the board of directors from among eight candidates listed on a letter ballot sent to members last week.

The candidates are: Tom Sutter, Roger Little, Ed Bergman, Bob Buttery, Jack McDaniel, James Ware, Lynn Albee and Al Milligan.

The new members will be introduced at the annual Chamber meeting slated for April 29 this year.

The U. S. uses the wine gallon as standard measurement.

About 900,000 tons of chrome are imported yearly, mostly from Russia.

RICHARD ROLSTON of rural Cass City found this dahlia plant attempting to bloom in the basement so he brought it upstairs and started nurturing it. The result: a plant boasting flowers eight inches in diameter that has been blooming since Christmas. A dahlia is normally a summer flower.

Hospital addition will relieve pharmacy's critical space shortage

THAT'S NOT one corner of the pharmacy lab at Hills and Dales General Hospital you are seeing, that's all there is. Lab space is critical now, says Tom Proctor, one of three pharmacists using the lab.

One of the most critical space shortages at Hills and Dales General Hospital is in the hospital pharmacy.

According to Byron Landholt, the reason for this is twofold. One is the greater patient load today over that of 10 years ago when the hospital was first opened and the second is the greatly expanded use of drugs for medication.

The space shortage today is so acute that we are breaking State Health Department regulations, Tom Proctor, pharmacist, said, as he discussed the old and the proposed new hospital pharmacy.

The law requires that all IV solutions and the additives be prepared by the pharmacist. However, there just isn't enough room to comply with this regulation today. Consequently the IV solutions are stored outside the area and nurses are making the preparations for the patients.

When the remodeling of the facility begins this spring, plans call for this problem to be solved for the present and for the foreseeable future.

It will be solved because the new pharmacy will be over four times as large as the present one.

The present pharmacy is crowded into a room about 10 x 12 feet. The new pharmacy will be across the hall in the basement and will occupy 24 x 38 feet. Much of the pharmacy will be in the portion of the building presently occupied by the cafeteria. The cafeteria will be moved to the west as one of the rooms in the new addition.

The work load has steadily increased in the pharmacy. Proctor said that when the hospital was founded, Warren Wood could handle the job in less than an hour. "When I started, it was about 1 1/2 hours and today a full half day, six days a week, is spent in the pharmacy."

When the hospital started, the two druggists handled the work. Today Proctor and Mike Weaver have formed a corporation to service the hospital for a flat fee.

The corporation hires Craig Bennett to do this work and there is a pharmacist on call 24 hours a day.

Proctor said that the present arrangement was started when the work load became too great for either himself or Weaver. . . yet too small for a full time pharmacist on the hospital staff.

The corporation is mutually advantageous, Proctor and Landholt agreed. It allows the hospital to have a man when needed and also lets the local drug stores have a relief man available on a shared cost basis.

The lack of space presently is especially noticeable when two men are working in a peak load situation. There is only five feet of counter space and efficient production is impossible, Proctor feels.

Another space handicap that will be cured is for narcotics. The space today is inadequate and it is impossible to stock as many of these beneficial drugs, that must be kept locked securely and accounted for, as the hospital needs.

Landholt said that 60 per cent of the drugs in use today weren't on the market when the hospital was opened and the variety of drugs called for by physicians has also increased by 60 per cent or more.

Both Landholt and Proctor expect this trend to continue.

Even so, Landholt stressed, we will be ready with this enlargement to care for pharmaceutical needs at the hospital anytime within the foreseeable future.

"Go now—pay later" says a travel advertisement but the credit manager says don't go too far.

We sometimes wonder if the communication gap we hear so much about wasn't programmed through computers.

ONE FOR THE ROAD Space center still a tourist attraction

By Dan Marlowe

George Caesar, an ex-private airplane pilot with many hundreds of hours flying time to his credit before he hung up his propeller recently, is touring Florida by automobile this winter.

Herewith George reports on a visit to the NASA Space Center some 7 miles from Titusville near US 1, as follows:

"The national space program was initiated in 1958 to acquire knowledge of the universe and to make use of new technology for national interest and leadership of the free world.

"In 1966, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), in cooperation with the Air Force Eastern Test Range, opened the Space Center to daily guided bus tours. That public interest in the space program is by no means as slack as recent television and press coverage would seem inclined to suggest is proven by the fact that on a Wednesday, with no Apollo launching scheduled until mid-summer, I found it as difficult to find a parking place in the huge area as upon a tardy arrival at a big football game.

"Packed busses were leaving every 15 minutes for two-hour-and-fifteen-minute tours. The fare for an adult is $2.50. One may tour the Center in private autos on Sundays from 9:00 a. m. to 3:00 p. m. only, but it is a waste of time; the area is so vast, the buildings so spread out, the launch complexes so far apart—for safety's sake—that without a guide it's easy to become confused and get lost.

"Inclusive of the Air Force Test Range, the Center covers 105,000 acres of primitive southern Atlantic flora speckled with large white buildings and towering launch pads, masked by the low brush of the coast. Wherever possible this brush is left to absorb shock waves. The still-primitive aspect of this thrusting maze of islands between salt rivers and the Atlantic is very striking; gulls still soar above it, and ducks swim in its sloughs.

"In sequence we saw the Apollo Astronauts Training Building, Mission Control Center, Air Force Space Museum, Military Launch Pad Complexes, Apollo Launch Complexes, Apollo Lunar Launch Pad Complex 39 (the latest), and the Crawler-Transporter which at one mile an hour hauls 18,000,000 pounds up a slight ramp from the Apollo-Saturn V Assembly Building where the Apollo rockets are assembled; they are built, of course, all over the U. S. by the most skillful workmen and engineers in our country.

"Our tour ended inside this Assembly Building, the largest in the world. As we drove around it, some hundreds of yards away, I struggled to get some conception of its scale. The workmen's cars, parked at its base, looked like children's toys. Over 520 feet high, it has the cubic capacity of 3 1/2 Empire State buildings. It was only that sunny evening as I saw it from seven miles away, across the water in the glow of the setting sun, that its true scale became apparent: a great mountain built by man. And I swelled with a patriotic pride of country I shall never forget.

"I met an Air Force pilot during the tour and asked him why the Russians are specializing in the less costly unmanned flights. He said 'They're making a virtue of a necessity. They lack our rocket power, techniques, and control centers to put men on the moon and get them back successfully even when overcoming problems as with Apollo 13. They couldn't bear the loss of face.'

"I was impressed by the obvious fact (to me at least) that the military end of this space exploration still looms large, in spite of the soft-pedaling to fools who know not—as Theodore Roosevelt said—'the world they live in'. It could well be our country's salvation. For if one thing be certain, it is that the Communists are not in space for 'mankind's benefit.'

"This is all too little, but I'd need to be at the Center for a month, even to begin to do it justice."

Underclassmen sparkle as Hawks bow to Bad Axe in tourney

The Cass City Red Hawks ended the 1970-71 basketball season Thursday when they lost a heartbreaker to the Bad Axe Hatchets, 66-60, in overtime in the district tournament at Laker High School. With the win, the Hatchets won the right to be clobbered last Saturday by the champion

Lakers.

The game was a nip and tuck affair all the way. Cass City played some of its best defensive ball of the season and on offense passed the ball for close-in shots.

Coach Fred Hurlburt gave Sophomore Kip Hopper, up from the reserves, his first starting assignment and the youth responded with a fine defensive game for the Hawks.

Hopper was one of three underclassmen to start, and all played significant roles in the game. Sophomore Paul Bliss continued his fine floor play that has marked his efforts in the last half of the season and Freshman Scott Hartel continued the improvement that he has exhibited since moving to the varsity in mid-season.

The problem facing the team, next year will be similar to the one that caused much of the trouble this year when Cass City finished with a 5-13 record: where to find rebounders. Losing any overtime game is hard to swallow, but most Cass City fans were not overly dismayed by the loss. The reason, of course, was that the Hawks were expected to lose because they had dropped one-sided decisions to the Hatchets in two previous games.

Cass City did play one of its better games against the Hatchets.

In the first period, Richard "Zike" Miller kept Cass City in the game as he found the range from the corner to crack the Bad Axe zone.

When the Hatchets adjusted, Hartel and Rob Alexander took over the scoring chores.

Cass City jumped off to a 17-14 lead only to wilt in the second quarter when Alexander was on the bench to trail 29-24 at intermission.

Cass City bounced back in the third period to tie the game at 40-all and the lead changed several times in the final period.

With a little over a minute remaining in the game the surging Hawks tied the score with a full court press and forced a turnover by the Hatchets.

Cambling everything on a last shot, Cass City held the ball until 12 seconds remained in the game and then worked for a final shot. Alexander's try fell short and the game went into overtime.

Both Alexander and Bliss fouled out in the overtime and when they did, the Hatchets quickly spirited to place the game out of reach.

Miller picked up 15 points for Cass City while Hartel and Alexander each netted 12. Scott Guernsey had 5 points and Hopper, 12.

The difference in the game was provided by Lloyd Schinnerer. The Hatchets' all-anything controlled the ball, was the top rebounder, scored 22 points and made six of them in the crucial overtime period. It was the final game for Scott Guernsey, Miller and Alexander.

IT WAS a shot about like this one that missed in the dying seconds of the game Thursday and sent the Cass City-Bad Axe game into overtime. That's Rob Alexander shooting over the Hatchets' Lloyd Schinnerer.

BPW Club plans for spring outing

The Cass City Business and Professional Women's Club met Wednesday, March 3, at the Cass City Hotel. Corsages were presented to new members.

Plans for the spring outing were announced, including a bus trip to the Fisher Theatre in Detroit, the theatre show,

"1776", and dinner at Al Green's.

Waunita Ryland reported that she has a few community calendars still available. Mrs. Irma Hicks transferred from the Caro BPW to the Cass City branch.

A board meeting is scheduled March 29.
