

FROM THE Editor's Corner

Every year around graduation time newspapers feature stories of mothers and daughters graduating together or grandmothers earning college degrees.

Adults returning to school to graduate are grist for the human interest story every time.

For every adult that graduates the thought here is there are hundreds who would like to, but can't. Can't because there just isn't enough time to care for a home or earn a living and go to school.

For these persons a handful of smaller colleges are offering an external degree program. One of them is Aquinas College in Grand Rapids.

Under this program the student can earn a degree based completely on directed independent study at home.

It is the first change in the way a baccalaureate degree can be earned in 80 years. Dr. Robert J. Clarke, director of the program for Individually Designed Education for Adults (IDEA) at Aquinas, says that it is ironic that the institution that is supposed to prepare people for life is the one of all of society's institutions that has changed the least.

IDEA is a good idea even if it doesn't work. . . although I'm sure it will.

As an employer, I'd take a long second look at a person with guts enough to get a degree while earning a living.

But more than that, the significant thing about this program is that it breaks from tradition. . . it's something new, something never attempted before.

Besides offering a tailor-made plan for courses away from campus that lead to graduation, it places the university in the position of leading the way in breaking from established molds.

Maybe the concept of four-year courses for a BA degree no longer meet the needs of the country.

In Europe, for instance, students study at their own pace and there are no classes and assignments as we know them here.

Europe has one thing going for it with college students. The pupils not of college caliber are weeded out in high school.

Perhaps that wouldn't work for us. . . but machine tests at stated intervals may not measure learning as much as rote memory.

Machine tests are the primary method universities use to weed out supposedly non-college caliber students in the first year of college.

Regardless of which way is better, the point is there is more than one way to do it.

Inflexibility holds us back. We should be looking for new ways, new ideas, discarding the molds of yesteryear.

The only significant change in school now and 50 years ago is campus living styles forced by students.

Basically, the classroom procedure remains the same.

And that's why IDEA is beautiful. It's different. A new concept.

It's one of the few that our schools have even tried.

We should be looking for and trying others. In the word of the day. . . it's one way to make our colleges "relevant."

SHANNON LAURA, first baby born in Hills and Dales Hospital in 1972, made her appearance at 5:15 p. m. Jan. 5. She's the daughter of Loraine and Gordan Hartsell of 659 First Street, Bay Port. The baby weighed in at six pounds, 14 ounces, and was 19 1/2 inches long. The Hartsells have one other child, a daughter, Julie Ann, 5.

Looking on is nurse Rosmalee Thompson of Kingston, who works at the Bad Axe Memorial Hospital and just finished four weeks of obstetrics training with Hills and Dales.

The Hartsells received many gifts from local merchants.

Teachers, administrators mull curriculum additions

Cass City's teachers and administration heads will be presenting the results of an intensive curriculum study to the board of education in the near future.

This was the main decision reached at the Monday night meeting of the board of education, held at the high school.

Presently underway in all schools in the system is a survey of teachers to determine what they feel is the best way to enrich the curriculum.

In the high school and the elementary schools, teachers are presenting lists of ideas for improvement which the principals are compiling.

At Campbell Elementary and the high school these suggestions will be listed and the teachers asked to rank them.

The ones that rank the highest will be turned over to Supt. Donald Crouse and the board of education. The Intermediate School's suggestions will be handled by a committee of teachers.

There have been attempts at curriculum improvement in the past which were snagged as financial risks.

What may be added to the curriculum after all the various avenues are explored will depend again on the money available.

It could be that there will be changes in the basic offerings of the school with a wider individual subject choice by the student. . . or simply an enlargement of the course offerings at all levels.

Compounding the problem is the lack of certain knowledge of just how much money will be available. School funds, of course, come from State Aid, and local taxes.

The amount coming from the State is rarely known until well after commitments have been made for the next school year.

Cass City will also face a renewal of a special 2 1/2-mill operating tax this year.

Despite these variables it appears that the board is determined to see that there are changes in the curriculum by next year.

Spearheading the demand for more classes, different classes and new approaches are Dr. Ed Scollon and Mrs. Geraldine Prieskorn.

Scollon favors a general enrichment, but has expressed a special concern about the elementary curriculum. Mrs. Prieskorn is "for any change that adds to the variety and substance of what is offered the students."

The curriculum study drew comments from Principals Mrs. Bernard Freilburger, Bob Stickle and Russell Richards and was the key topic of the meeting. Besides the discussion the board passed a common goals of Michigan education booklet which gives broad definitions of curriculum policy.

ROUTINE BUSINESS

The remainder of the topics on the agenda were quickly handled. The board accepted a donation by Harry Little for 26 flowering trees commemorating the 100th anniversary of Arbor Day and okayed student participation in planting them.

Little will also donate a set of teacher curriculum guides for teaching conservation.

The board voted to buy two balance beams for gymnastics in the intermediate building at a cost of about $400 each. Similar equipment for Campbell

Elementary school was not authorized because the board felt that any added to Campbell should also be added to Deford and Evergreen, making the cost too great.

Several teacher changes were approved. Mrs. Erma Cardew was granted a leave of absence for the remainder of the year and will be replaced by Mrs. Nancy Hutchinson.

Mrs. Sue Opal resigned to join her husband in the service and the contract of Jo Ann Hassen, a winter Central Michigan University graduate, was approved.

Plans were finalized for a visit to a student lounge in Bay City or Flint within a week.

Quarter-mill needed

Special Ed in money bind, programs threatened

Look for the Tuscola County Intermediate School district to be coming to the taxpayers for more money to operate its program in the very near future.

That's the word from Mrs. Geraldine Prieskorn of Cass City, a member of a committee that is studying the problems of the District.

Presently the Intermediate District is operating on 3/4 of a mill and the projection is that another quarter of a mill will be needed or some of the present programs curtailed.

The estimated expenditures of the District in 1971-72 will be $312,492.53. Of this amount some $168,000 is raised through local taxes. Another quarter of a mill would net about $56,000 on the current Tuscola county valuation.

Just what does the Intermediate District do with its money?

This year the funds paid for: A director of the over-all program.

Six speech therapists who travel to the various schools and 2 1/2 diagnosticians.

A school social worker and a teacher-counselor for emotionally disturbed children. Supervision of 3 trainable classrooms and one Title VI, multiple handicapped.

In addition the department handles a day care center for severely mentally handicapped and helps fund 24 classrooms for handicapped students and two rooms in Caro for deaf and hard of hearing.

The special education phase of the Intermediate School District has grown steadily since it started in 1958 with two speech therapists.

The expenses have also grown steadily. The budget in 1964-65 was $154,502. Six years later expenditures will total some $312,319.

Authorities at Cass City Schools told Mrs. Prieskorn that they felt the special education program has a good better serve if the emphasis switched back to working directly with the children.

The various specially trained teachers worked directly with the children in the early days of the program. Supt. Donald Crouse said, today they work more with the teachers of the handicapped children than with the pupils themselves.

A meeting of the committee is scheduled Thursday night and the thoughts of the local board will be presented by Mrs. Prieskorn at this time.

Amateur archeologist digs 'secret' Indian village site

By Kit McMillion

A self-taught amateur archeologist, Daniel Abbe has been collecting Indian relics for the past 30 years.

Eight glass cases containing about 500 pieces and several boxes of broken bits of pottery chips, arrow heads and axe heads, were collected by him and his family on various treks throughout the state, although most were found in an old village site in Huron county.

Abbe won't tell exactly where it is, but it has yielded an abundant supply of pottery chips, arrow heads and axe heads.

"Some are possibly 1000 years old," he explained. The litter at the site is about 4 feet deep, and he and his wife, Rose, and 12-year-old daughter Melody, have spent the past three summers digging there.

"Actually I found them faster digging than looking," the friendly man said, although many were also found in fields, including their farm in Huron county.

The 45-year-old man said he became interested in Indian relics when still a young boy. About 30 years ago, he said, he found a stone axe head while working on his dad's farm and his grandfather also collected arrowheads.

Most of the various weapons were found along either the Cass, Pigeon or Pinnebog rivers.

On one expedition to the Indian site the Abbes found a grave. Digging revealed a human skeleton with a ring of 32 hatchet heads placed around the skull, overlapping like the petals of a sunflower.

He found another skeleton on his dad's farm after plowing. This one had a coiled necklace of copper still around the neck, although the jewelry crumbled when moved because it was so old.

Bits of pottery comprise a large portion of the collection.

"I never found any pottery I could put together," chuckled Abbe.

Trade pipes have also been dug up at family excavations. The small-bowled white clay pipes probably came from England and were used to trade with the Indians. Some have writing and several of the pipe bowls are elaborately carved with faces.

The collection also included a sledge hammer head that Abbe bought at the old mining sites on the Upper Peninsula near Copper Harbor. The ancient pits there date from about 5000 B.C. He also has a 10-pound chunk of copper metal that he found on his dad's farm.

"It was probably carried there for trade," he suggested. Talking about the arrowheads and pointing out the identifying characteristics, Abbe explained that the shape and style of the base is the most important in classifying them by age.

"I never tried to identify them as tribes," he said, "because they wandered around so much."

"Some are almost professional in the way they're chipped out," he noted, adding that chert balls found in limestone are used.

One of the special arrowheads in his collection is an almost perfectly shaped, long white piece.

"I never found any as perfect as that," he said, adding he has never identified the arrowhead, which was probably used to hunt heavy game, and that he found it on his grandfather's farm.

Last year the collection was displayed at the Elkton School, and most recently at the Bad Axe schools in November.

They've also taken the collection to various churches in the area and for the historical society at Bad Axe.

"I wish I had more information on some of this," he said, explaining that he had read a lot of books brought home by one of his daughters when she was attending college. He also has several guide books.

He related that one of his dreams was to build a little museum after he retired. Presently he rents out the farm and works at Michigan Lumber in Elkton.

"I have to study up and get more information to answer questions, though," he mused.

Besides the Indian relics, the family has a variety of other old things saved over the years and kept at their modest farm home 13 miles north and 1 1/2 east of Cass City.

The old things include some magazines called "Leslie's Illustrated Weekly Newspaper," dating from the World War I period. They were found in the attic of an old house near their farm.

"I just happened to pick up a handful one time," Abbe said, "and the next year they tore it down and burned it."

His wife, Rose, collects handkerchiefs. One is a slightly frayed silk square with a picture of Czechoslovakia before it was split apart during World War II. It was sent to her by her mother, who belonged to a hanky circle. Her total collection contains about 200.

Asked why she likes old things, she said, "I don't know. I just like them."

"My mother says it's junk and we should throw it out," she chuckled.

"We're kind of old fashioned anyway," she explained, saying the family cuts the wood for their furnace, bakes their own bread, cans their food and butchers their own meat.

Hospital releases New Year's Day stab victims

Two youths seriously injured in a New Year's Day stabbing were released from a Saginaw hospital over the week end, where they were being treated.

Christopher Hoppe, 14, of Hadley Road, Decker, was discharged Saturday, and Ronald Spencer, 16, of Wilcox Road, Deford, was released Monday, hospital authorities said.

The two were injured in a fight outside the Club 24 Bar. Harold Adrian Gaudett, 18, is charged with two counts of assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than murder. His examination before District Court Judge Richard Kern is set for 4 p. m. Friday.

Flint man first to die on Tuscola county roads in 1972

A Flint man became Tuscola county's first 1972 traffic fatality when he failed to stop for a stop sign on Fairgrove Road early Saturday and drove into a ditch.

Albert Lee Walsh, 48, of E. Dayton St., Flint, suffered a broken neck when his car rammed through a barricade sign and into a 10 foot ditch, Tuscola county sheriff's reports stated. The accident occurred at the intersection with Unionville Road where the Fairgrove Road makes a jog, about 3 a. m.

Other accidents reported involved no injuries to area persons.

Joan Delores Merchant of N.

Cemetery Road, Cass City, backed into a car driven by Beverly Gertrude Parker of State St., Gagetown, Monday at the high school parking lot, according to Cass City police reports. The mishap occurred about 4 p. m.

Michael J. Mallory, 24, of Gilford Road, Deford, escaped injury when he lost control of his car, skidded off the road and struck a road sign. He was traveling north on M-24 when the accident occurred about 1:40 a. m. Saturday.

Police Chief Gene Wilson struck a parked car belonging to Frank Reid of 4637 Kennebec Drive at 3:55 p. m. Friday while chasing a vehicle around the curve, according to Tuscola county sheriff's reports. A parking light was broken on the squad car and a tail light on the Reid vehicle.

Wilson said he was chasing a vehicle for reckless driving that was chasing a snowmobile down the street.

A car driven by Connie Allen, 22, of Dodge Road, Cass City, was struck in the side by one driven by Charles Philip Palmer, 28, of Burlington. Sheriff's reports indicated the mishap took place on Cedar Run Road near Cass City Road about 4:45 p. m. Thursday as the Allen vehicle was backing into a drive way.

Two accidents involving cars and snow graders were reported.

Sherry Marie Burns, 21, of N. Seeger St., Cass City, hit a county grader of the Huron County Road Commission in the rear Wednesday, Jan. 5, when it was stopped on N. Cemetery Road, about 50 feet south of Huron Line Road. The Burns vehicle was traveling north and was unable to stop in time to avoid the accident, which occurred about 8:30 a. m. Kenneth Winter of Sebewaing was driving the grader.

Joseph Gruber of the Cass City village crew hit a parked car belonging to Donald Lorenzen of Pine St., Cass City, while plowing the alley Monday, Jan. 3.

THE AXE HEADS in this box were found at an Indian grave site somewhere in Huron county, but amateur archeologist and artifact collector Daniel Abbe won't tell where. They're part of a collection he's been working on over the past 30 years.

Love heavier than flu

BY JIM FITZGERALD

I never thought I'd feel sorry for a billionaire. But H. L. Hunt of Texas has moved me.

Everyone has heard of Hunt. He's the oilman who, if he spent $1 million every hour for the next 150 years, would have enough money left to pay your Christmas bills.

The newspapers quoted the 82-year-old billionaire as saying his fondest Christmas was spent in Eldorado, Ark. in 1923. With only a sandwich for his holiday dinner, he spent the day drilling an oil well — and it came in. "It was a constructive Christmas," said Hunt.

I'll remember the Christmas season of 1971 because I was so sick I wanted to repent for sins I haven't had time to commit yet. I had the Hong Kong flu so bad it should make you cry to read about it. I was forced to stay home from work, the first time that's happened since I was 2 years old and didn't have much of a job anyway.

I was hot and then I was cold. When I coughed it was like the H bomb going off in my chest. I lived on aspirins and you should know this about pain relievers — they don't always relieve. I'll swear my hair was sore.

I was a great patient. I staggered around the house with a blanket under my chin, a box of Kleenex under my arm, and a snarl under my beard. When anyone asked how I felt I told them to shut up or I'd kill them. When my wife was late delivering a drink to bedside, I accused her of plotting my murder. I was a real sweetie. Merry Christmas.

By Christmas morning I was feeling some better. But I had given the lousy disease to Chris, my hippie-haired, 15-year-old daughter. She was so sick she barely knew what day it was — but she knew. It was Christmas Day. And that was so sad.

Chris is one of those kids who starts Christmas preparations in July. She's singing carols by October and has the inside of closets decorated by November. She buys everyone too many gifts and enjoys giving almost, but not quite, as much as getting. Now the big day was finally here and she couldn't even pretend to enjoy it.

And a surprising thing occurred to me. I felt worse about Chris being sick than I did about me being sick. This is a remarkable thing for a selfish man to realize. In fact, if I could have made a deal with God and Blue Cross, I would have gladly taken over her illness. I couldn't stand not seeing that greedy kid count her loot on Christmas morning.

The point of all this is supposed to be that I feel sorry for billionaire Hunt because the best thing he can remember about a Christmas is striking oil. I think it's better to remember a Christmas for a love heavier than flu.

Of course, I've never struck oil. Or have I?

1972 state budget expected to exceed $2.2 billion

The news resulting from the 1972 legislative session will look somewhat familiar to those who followed the 1971 session.

The major perennial issue is how big the state budget is going to be. This year's tab finally totaled roughly $2.08 billion for state operations, and the latest figure for the coming fiscal year should exceed the $2.2 billion mark.

Gov. William G. Milliken says increases in revenues from current tax rates should be enough to cover the increased cost, and since it is an election year, the chances of another tax increase are nil.

The fact it's an election year also should prevent the lawmakers from haggling into the month of September over the budget, since House members have to go through a primary election in August. As a result, a recess by early July is expected.

Issues confronting the lawmakers are, aside from the budget, those they grappled with to some degree in 1971 and didn't resolve.

High on the list of priorities is Milliken's transportation package, which ran into unexpected trouble in the House despite the combined backing of Democratic Speaker William Ryan and Republican Leader Clifford Smart.

The Governor's plan would increase the gasoline tax from 7 to 9 cents a gallon. Of that total increase, six tenths of a cent per gallon would go to fund the planning of a mass transit system for the state's urban areas.

Opposition to the plan comes from elements of the highway lobby and oil companies, and from such surprising quarters as the House black caucus, which sees mass transit as another route for whites to escape to the suburbs and ignore inner city problems.

Ryan has been working hard to change the opinion of at least some black caucus members, who usually see eye to eye with him on major issues. And Detroit Mayor Roman Gribbs also has been pushing the program hard and Milliken says he'll veto any transportation package that doesn't include money for mass transit.

Another sticky issue confronting lawmakers is Congressional reapportionment. Neither party could cook up a plan the other would buy before the December adjournment, and both will make another try in January.

Democrats are trying to find a formula which would cut into the 12-7 majority Republicans now hold on the state's House delegation, while the GOP, naturally enough, wants to hold onto that margin.

Complicating the picture are the desires of several members of the Legislature to draw districts which would give them a shot at a seat in Congress. And while the partisan maneuvering is going on, the courts will be looking things over to see if they need to step in to secure an agreement.

Also pending in the House is a package of bills to implement the concept of no-fault auto insurance in Michigan.

The package has the full blessing of the man who administers the state's motoring

AROUND THE FARM

Using commercial fertilizers

By Don R. Kabler

With the large selection of commercial fertilizer carriers available today, it can be confusing which ones can meet the individual's needs the best.

My conversations with farmers tell me most confusion arises from questions regarding analysis, availability and leachability of nutrients, what to apply when, and formulations.

In regard to analysis there should be no problem if a soil test based recommendation is followed. Some recommendations tell the total amount of each plant food nutrient needed to produce a certain yield of a particular crop. Other recommendations tell the number of pounds per acre of each analysis fertilizer to use.

When fertilizer recommendations are given in total pound of nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium, I divide the pounds of phosphorus by the pounds of potassium. This tells me units of potassium I need to add to each full unit of phosphorus. If the answer is two, I must use twice the phosphorus as potassium, if the number is one, use equal amounts and if one-half I use half the phosphorus to potassium. After determining this I then look for an analysis with the same proportions as computed. I then divide the total pounds of phosphorus recommended by the analysis number of the phosphorus, add a zero and I know the pounds of that analysis to apply. If I want to find the number of pounds of each nutrient of an analysis, I multiply each by the number of pounds of the analysis recommended and move the decimal point 2 numbers to the left. Really the most important factor to remember is the number or percentage of any nutrient in an analysis is the number of pounds of that nutrient in each 100 pounds of the analysis or mixture.

Availability of each nutrient in brief is — The higher analysis phosphorus carriers are more water soluble and more available, potassium is entirely available and nitrogen is available for most purposes only in the nitrate nitrogen form when first incorporated in a soil.

Leachability occurs much more rapidly in sandy soils than clay loams with all nutrients with phosphorus least. Ammonia forms of nitrogen as urea, anhydrous ammonia are far less leachable in high clay content soils than nitrate nitrogen.

Fixation occurs most rapidly on phosphate compared to nitrogen and potassium carriers. High alkalinity or high acidity both fix phosphates. Fixation is slower when band applications are followed as compared to broadcast. This rule holds true also on leaching rates.

What fertilizer to apply, and when, depends on the operator's time and work load. Basically here are four rules of thumb to follow: (1) Always apply planting fertilizer in a band below and to the side of the seed. If this is impossible, broadcast and plow down the fertilizer. (2) The greater the length of time between fertilizer applications and planting time, the lower the water solubility of the fertilizer should be. Nitrate and potassium carriers basically have about the same range of solubility so little solubility range selection is possible. (3) All fertilizer nutrients leach more rapidly in sandy soils than clay or silt loam soils everything being equal. (4) Blend fertilizers perform the same as any other liquid or dry forms of the same analysis, when applied at the same rate, time, amount and method.

laws. Secretary of State Richard Austin.

The lower chamber also has a huge bill before it to revise and classify Michigan's entire criminal code. The bill is designed to eliminate outdated laws and to put all criminal laws under one comprehensive piece of legislation.

The two houses must get together to see if they can agree on a date for a state-wide vote on whether to allow governmental units and non-profit organizations such as churches to conduct lotteries and bingo games.

The House passed a version early last year setting the election for last November, and the Senate passed it in December with the election scheduled for the August primary. Backers must now decide whether they really want a vote on it during the August election or whether they want to wait for November.

Both chambers also have passed legislation to tighten Michigan's control over billboards, and now must agree on minor amendments before the bill can go to the Governor for signing. The bill is necessary if the state is to receive $16 million in earmarked federal highway funds.

SMV emblems

reduce accidents

Those SMV (slow moving vehicle) emblems really work. They've reduced rear end collisions by 40 per cent in Michigan since farmers started using them in 1967, says Bill Bortel, Tuscola county extension agent.

So now might be a good time to mount an emblem on a new piece of equipment, replace faded emblems or shine them up.

Mounting the SMV emblem is easy. The standard mounting bracket is factory installed on the rear of most balers, combines and other farm machinery. Or the brackets can be bought and fastened on the rear of wagons, tractors or other machinery not so equipped.

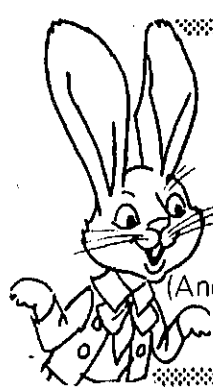

Some Michigan farmers buy two SMV brackets: one for behind the tractor seat and another for mounting on the tractor. This way, a farmer can put the SMV emblem on his fender, out of the way while he's working in the fields, then he can put it behind his seat again when he goes back on the road.

A few farmers use a hinge bracket so the SMV emblem can be swung out of the way when they step aboard the tractor. The disadvantage here is that the farmer might forget to swing the emblem in place before going out on the road.

The SMV emblem is required by law for any vehicle with a maximum speed of 25 miles an hour. And now, the new Occupational Safety and Health Act requires every farmer in the U. S. to equip his tractor and other slow moving vehicles with an SMV emblem when operated by an employee on public roads. Failure to comply could result in a stiff fine, especially if a hired man is involved in an accident with his equipment.

If an SMV emblem begins to fade, you can replace the emblem's orange fluorescent center with an easy to apply pressure sensitive triangle overlay . . . or replace the entire SMV emblem.

More information on SMV emblems is available from implement dealers, vocational agriculture instructors or your Tuscola County Cooperative Extension Service office in Caro.

My favorite advertising campaign is one staged by the U. S. Pencil & Stationery Co. of New York. They have a direct mail gimmick where they send an advertising blurb and stick a sample pen right in the envelope.

They did it for the first time in some months last week and I'm using their pens again.

A year or two ago the company's advertising kept me supplied with free pens. The reason was that I was on their mailing list twice and they advertised more. Every month or so I'd get two envelopes with sample pens.

After a bit I just slipped the pens from the envelopes and tossed away the literature.

I've never so much as thanked the company for its largesse. Maybe I should send them a copy of this free advertising plug?

Dick Shaw, a recent addition to the staff at the Pinney State Bank, was determined to arrive at work on time last Tuesday. The storm was a major problem. The night before his wife became stuck in the driveway and Shaw was up extra early to dig her car out.

He left home in plenty of time to make it to work, but on his way became stuck in one of the drifts.

As a result, despite good intentions, he was late.

He quickly and quietly went right to work to make up for lost time and was hard at it for half an hour before Bill Ruhl slid over and pointed out that he must have forgotten that Tuesday was his day off.

There was at least one casualty in the Judo course just completed at the school. Among the 22 of the original 64 who graduated was Rita Zimba who survived all of the various holds and falls only to suffer a broken toe just as the course was ending.

Cliff Ferguson was in town briefly over the holidays from his Florida home where he spends all winter at his golf course practicing to take advantage of his poor snow-bound friends when he comes back in the spring.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

Dear Mister Editor:

Ed Doobille wanted to know Saturday night at the country store why it is that everybody that leaves Government service has a sure third day worked in but they never come up with these ideas they're doing it. As a fact instant, Ed mentioned David Packard that quit in December as a Defense Department official.

Packard said on his last day on the job that his department could save a billion dollars a year just by closing down military bases the country didn't need, per Packard to say that on his way out the door made it sound like someone he had figured out and somebody else ought to do, Ed allowed, and that's the answer what Packard said is true, but nobody is going to try to do it.

Actual, declared Ed, Packard had a good chance to put his plan in use while he was

In the Defense Department, but he knew as good as anybody that the way our system works, them as can don't, and them as can't, gripes, he valued it. He couldn't say somebody ought to, per Ed, but he said, "I was Ed's son, and I don't mean the same thing to all jobs. A taxpayer's idea of saving is a far cry from a Congressman's, and his is a lot different than a soldier's. Government saving is one thing unless it's weighed again a vote. Ever time somebody says close a military base the district Congressman cancels the order for fear it'll cost somebody a job and him a vote.

Clem Webster was agreed that Government saving means all things to all men. Clem Webster said he had a son, a son who's a doctor, and he said, "I don't want to see the next morning seems to me we ought to do the same for Government."

BETTER HEALTH

Frostbite warning signals

BY DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

Shoppers have doubtless suffered from aching and painful feet many an evening after a busy day of rushing from store to store. The American Podiatry Association has some suggestions for foot care. For example, holes in socks can cause friction or pressure that can lead to blisters. Also shoppers should be careful to have properly fitting socks; if they are too short, the toes will become bunched up and can then develop corns.

A woman should avoid dress shoes for shopping, and if she has to take her shoes off to get relief temporarily, she is wearing the wrong ones. Standing still for any length of time can tire muscles and hamper circulation. Interestingly, it is less tiring to walk than to stand in one spot.

A common cause of foot pain, especially in older persons, is the growth of thickened skin on the bottoms of the feet. It's a good idea to see a good podiatrist, who can quickly trim off these lumps.

FROSTBITE

At this time of the year, we hear a lot about the "wind chill factor", which means that even on a relatively warm winter day, the cooling effects of the wind can create the same results as a much lower temperature. For example, if it is 20 degrees F. outside, and the wind is blowing 20 miles per hour, the effect is the same as if it were 9 degrees below zero on a calm day.

This is especially important for snowmobilers and skiers to know because they must guard against frostbite. Even walking into a strong wind on a cold day can cause intense distress. I just came in out of a very cold winter day with my face red and burning severely. Luckily I had on a woolen cap with flaps to protect my ears, because years ago when I lived in Minnesota I got frostbitten, and I'm more susceptible to chill now. One of my ears is frostbitten with a small ulcer that will not heal. According to Dr. Hollis S. Ingraham, New York State health commissioner, frostbite can result any time a person has prolonged exposure to freezing temperatures. It occurs in three different degrees of severity.

FIRST DEGREE usually results in a whitening of the skin, often followed by redness, itching, tingling, and loss of feeling. I'll never forget the time in Minnesota after an ice storm, when I was out with my camera taking pictures of the beautiful ice formations on the trees. I was so absorbed in my work that I did not notice that my cheek had become frostbitten. I might have suffered permanent damage if a man had not called to me, "Mister, you'd better go in, because your cheek is white."

In SECOND DEGREE frostbite, the tissues turn a purplish color and blisters form on the skin.

THIRD DEGREE frostbite may result in gangrene (death of the tissues) and the affected part may have to be amputated. Fortunately, frostbite that severe is rare, and usually affects only mountain climbers, Arctic explorers, and others subjected to severe exposure.

Skiers and people in snowmobiles should dress warmly. They should cover their ears and wear fur-lined gloves, and if they become numb they should hurry to the club house to warm up. Dr. Ingraham cautions people not to rub the affected area, but rather to put warm water on the face and ears and hands, and drink warm liquids.

A REPORT OF A POLIO DEATH

I just read in the New England Journal of Medicine the story of an 8-week-old infant who died, and at autopsy was found to have the polio virus in her body. Two weeks later polio virus was found in her sister; and 11 members of the family had neutralizing antibodies for polio virus in their blood.

As Drs. Lamb and Feldman of Syracuse, New York, say, we just must continue to keep immunizing our children against polio. Clearly, the battle has not yet been completely won.

Why should a stout person make great efforts to reduce and stay reduced? What is the value of drugs in dieting? Freak diets? Exercise? What is the one scientific way to reduce? In his booklet "Weight Control" Dr. Alvarez answers these questions and tells you about the joys of having reduced. You may have his booklet by sending 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, Dept. CCC, Box 957, Des Moines, Iowa 50304.

Slate calf mortality meet

In an effort to reduce the number of dairy and beef calf deaths in Michigan, dairy cattle specialists from Michigan State University will conduct eleven state-wide meetings on calf mortality this winter. Tuscola county is fortunate to stage one of these meetings where five specialists will be present to present information on management and care of the calf.

Dr. Clinton Meadows

Among the specialists is Dr. Clinton Meadows, who is responsible for the management of the University's Kellogg Guernsey Farm. His long term interest in dairy operations has led to his involvement in the area of calf livability.

Dr. Louis Boyd

Dr. Louis Boyd, another speaker, is also a Dairy Extension Specialist with the university.

The meeting in Tuscola county will be held Tuesday, Jan. 18, at the 4-H Building at the Caro Fairgrounds. The meeting starts at 10 a. m. and will be completed by 3 p. m.

Discussion topics will include the importance of calf health, management of the dry cow and young calf, feeding of the young calf, disease control and housing.

Currently Michigan dairymen lose approximately 15% of their calves (3 out of 20) before they reach weaning age. In some herds we have heard of calf losses as high as 75% to 80%.

All dairymen, veterinarians, agribusinessmen and others are invited to this important calf management meeting to be held in Caro, states Bill Bortel, County Extension Director.

FROM THE LITTER BOX

Winter - Ick!

By Kit McMillion

I can't say I wasn't warned. Winter in Michigan is worse than winter in Illinois. Not that it isn't nice and not that I don't like all this snow (all 12 inches or so), but this is getting to be ridiculous.

Actually, I really love snow, but my troubles began when I had to learn to drive in it. Well, I really haven't learned how yet. That is, I don't know what I'm doing, to be quite honest.

Lately it hasn't made much difference because my little Cougar was buried under a heavy growth of snow. I haven't wielded a snow shovel in a long time, but I got lots of practice, believe me. I think the mound I made, with the help of a couple of very kind neighbors, rivals the village's, all due respect to the crew who helped bury my car while performing in the line of duty.

My troubles really began when I didn't take the advice of friends and acquaintances seriously--get snow tires.

I didn't. Consequently, the nice little car I bought about two months ago is still sitting in the driveway. Actually, it is potentially mobile, if I could get the engine to start. But the cold weather and my little vehicle don't like each other very well. In fact, they hate each other.

It could be that it misses the good life and the pampering of a nice warm garage, or maybe it just doesn't like me. Most machines and I don't seem to get along very well.

The boss's car doesn't like me either. I like the tank well enough and have a great deal of affection for it, but lately it has become the object of numerous curses since I can't get it to start all the time.

I think the loveable green monster is taking out its revenge on me because I inadvertently plunged its nose into a snowbank last week while coming back from an assignment.

It didn't even cry, but I guess it hurt when the man with the wrecker pinched it with that hook on the chain.

I am beginning to look with envy on those lucky people who are buzzing around town on their snowmobiles. And, since taking my first spin on one, I am turning a shade of green similar to my car.

Hmmmmmm. I wonder what I could get on a trade in.

Meow.

FROM THE FILES OF THE CHRONICLE

FIVE YEARS AGO

There will be an increase in water rates in Gagetown if the proposed $119,000 revenue bond issue, authorized Thursday by the Gagetown Village Council, is sold to the FHA, Elery Sontag, village president, reported.

Earney Seeley announced that he has purchased the interest of his partner, Bud Peasley, in the ST&H Service Station in Cass City.

There wasn't an appreciable difference in the number of fire calls answered by the Elkland Township Fire Department in 1966 from the previous year, but there was a great difference in the fire loss, $63,625 in 1966 and $229,000 in 1967.

Newly-elected officers of Hills and Dales Hospital were installed: president, Mrs. Frederick B. Auten, president-elect, Mrs. H. T. Donahue, vice-president, Mrs. James Champlin.

An expenditure of $38 was approved for eye exams and glasses for local youngsters at the regular meeting of the Cass City Lions Club.

TEN YEARS AGO

Tuscola county finished the year in the black again in 1961 but did so by biting into reserves established in previous years, the Tuscola County Board of Supervisors learned this week in the opening days of the January session.

There is nothing wrong with Michigan except its reputation, at least in the Cass City area, was the consensus of local industrialists when queried by a House-Senate committee trying to find what Michigan economy needs.

Julius Goslin, Gagetown village president, announced he was not going to seek reelection in the coming spring election.

Dr. D. E. Rawson this week announced that he will move into his new clinic at the corner of Seeger and Church Streets.

Mail processing records for the Christmas holidays were broken one after another last month at the Cass City Post Office, according to a report from Postmaster Lewis Bishop.

A case of rabies in a local dairy herd has prompted a Cass City veterinarian to issue a warning to pet owners, especially dog owners, to have their pets properly vaccinated.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

The village council adopted a zoning ordinance providing for the establishment of districts within which the use of land and structures, the area, the size and location of buildings may be regulated.

The first quonset hut building in Cass City is being erected at the plant of the Nestle's Milk Products, Inc., on Church Street.

One day last week Ralph Hartwig, corner of M-81 and M-53, had the misfortune of having his car catch fire while backing heavy snow. Considerable damage resulted before it could be extinguished.

Last Sunday afternoon Roy Anthies wanted to find out if he had forgotten how to ice skate. He says he was doing fairly well, so offered to pull one of the neighborhood children on her sleigh. Before calling it a day, his skate caught in some rough ice, the sleigh coasted up striking his right ankle. Result--a small ankle bone broken.

According to word received by Harold W. Waldie, owner of the local GambleStore, 200,000 pairs of pile-lined Army air force flight pants have been purchased from the Army Air Corps Supply Depot at Topeka, Kansas, by Gamble-Skogmo, Inc., for distribution through Gamble stores. This is one of the largest purchases of war surplus clothing to date.

Auxiliary meet

Seventeen attended the monthly meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary Monday evening at the Legion Hall.

During the business meeting, members heard a report of the Seventh District Association meeting held Sunday at Lapeer, by Elgene Keller.

Six servicemen and five Gold Star mothers received gifts at Christmas from the Auxiliary. Plans are underway for a bakeless bake sale and for a white elephant sale, the latter to be held in April.

At the close of the business meeting prizes and refreshments were provided by the hostess, Mrs. Garrison Stine.

AGENT'S CORNER

Scrutinizing floor plans

Mrs. Margaret Ross - Extension Agent

If you've been searching through floor plans trying to find the ideal house to build, (or how to remodel), take an imaginary walk through the house.

Where do the pathways lead you? Do you always have to get across the living room to get from the front door to the rest of the rooms? Or will the family have to trudge through the working area of your kitchen everytime they come in the back door?

Being able to judge a floor plan before the house is built can save you many disappointments later on. And being able to foresee family traffic patterns is one of the first ways to start judging.

Sizing up the activity areas is another. Will the noisy work area of a house interfere with living room company? Or will the living room company possibly interfere with peaceful sleeping?

Then the relationship of one room to another deserves careful scrutiny. How does the food get from the kitchen to the dining area? Or to the patio? Or to the porch? How about accessibility of the bathroom to the bedrooms? And how private is it from the rest of the house.

If the plan has checked out A-OK, so far, then it's worth taking a detailed look at each individual room. And for a guide for this job, I suggest ordering one of the Family Housing Handbooks at your County Extension Office. Just off the press of the Midwest Plan Service, this booklet gives 75 pages of some of the latest ideas in efficient family housing. So pick up a copy today to help you be a more effective house-plan judge.

ONE FOR THE ROAD

Those office parties...

By Dan Marlowe

Post-holiday reflections:

One of the unlamented passages of the holiday season seems to be the old-fashioned free-swinging Christmas Eve office party.

No one who has ever attended such a big-city or big-business office party can forget the explosive qualities of same. Incredible things happened at Christmas Eve office parties. The very least of these was the common desire to tell off the boss—or one's immediate supervisor—while alcoholically glazed. The boss was supposed to grin and bear it, and in the spirit of Xmas cheer, he invariably did. But did he forget it? Hardly.

Nowadays Christmas Eve office parties, if they take place at all, are quite decorous affairs. A nip or two among small groups, a round of Merry Christmases and Happy New Years, and all are homeward bound.

It didn't use to be that way. The Christmas party was planned for months in advance. There was a set time, usually 3:00 p. m., but this was never adhered to. Feminine employees brought elaborate cakes, cookies, and other edibles. A large table was set up and decorated in Xmas high-style and the goodies were spread upon it. This was invariably accomplished by 10:00 a. m., and with a bottle in each desk, the party started for the harder souls just about that time. Few went out to lunch. Groups gathered around the festive board, and toasts and libations were handed out freely. No work was done after lunch, and even the most sterminded employees drifted to the by-now wide open party at 2:00 p. m. The boss, if he was wise, made a one-drink appearance at 2:15 p. m., and went home. By the time the late arrivals made their presence felt the fast starters were in many cases already irretrievably over the dam.

The amount of libido loosed in these circumstances was fantastic. Mousy little Miss Fanny Waggit, from the stenographic pool, could easily be induced to remove a surprising amount of clothing, climb up on the table, and emulate both parts of her name.

The cross-connections and inter-connections between males and females who never looked at each other 364 days a year had to be seen to be believed. Twice on Christmas mornings a good many years apart I answered frantic appeals by husbands and wives who didn't happen to be married to each other and needed restoring to the family manse with suitable alibis.

No, the old-fashioned, free-swinging Christmas Eve office party will be missed only by diehards. It's no exaggeration to say that there are men—and women—who are struggling up corporate ladders today who might be several rungs higher if it hadn't been for untoward events at a Christmas Eve office party.

The boss may laugh it off, but he never forgets. And what he isn't there to see, there are always a few dozen spoilsports available to tell him.

Count your blessings that the old-time whoop-dee-doo is almost extinct.

My Comm. Exp. June 23, 1975

The Elkland Township Cultural Center is undergoing another face lift with the change over of its operation from the Cultural Center Corporation to joint management by the village of Cass City and Elkland township.

The two governmental units will split the costs 50-50 for the maintenance and management of the building, setting up fees and a reservation system to be handled by the village office.

The Elkland township board considered fees Monday night at a regular meeting establishing rental rates from zero dollars for agencies related to either village, school or township to $40 for private uses. No action was taken. The village council must also approve the rates.

Reservations can be made anytime by calling the village office. A deposit is also going to be required and will be returned less the cost to repair any damage done to the building.

Village Superintendent James Blades said the cost of maintaining the building would run somewhere between $500 and $1000, but that it would be difficult to estimate it until one year had elapsed.

The repair work now underway is basically a thorough housecleaning job with minor repairs including washing walls, repainting some surfaces, plaster work, dusting, and sweeping out the upstairs which hasn't been used in many years.

When funds become available, the second floor will be renovated to include locked storage areas in addition to the centralized meeting room, said Village President Lambert Althaver.

The upstairs is still in the original rough wood condition and needs painting and rewiring, and heat. Eventually, a second stairway may also be constructed to provide a fire escape from the second floor, as well as other remodeling.

The cost of the work, about $1000-$1500, will be borne by private contributions. The labor is also cost-free to the village and is being done by workers under federal and county work programs.

Althaver said service clubs and private individuals were being asked for funds.

The 10-year lease of the building to the Cultural Center Corporation, created in August 1964, was cancelled, although the corporation will still remain as a sponsoring group to organize cultural activities while the two government units handle the daily operations.

The Cultural Center used to be the Elkland Township Town Hall. Considered to be one of the oldest buildings in town, it was constructed following a special township meeting held Nov. 16, 1880, to vote on the proposition to issue bonds worth $2600. The vote was 61 for, 34 against.

Mrs. Bauer said she hoped the corporation would expand to include persons with interests in different cultural areas, hopefully to serve as an advisory board to the center and line up talent.

The first brick building in Cass City, it was built the following year at a site offered by J. L. Hitchcock and constructed from the first bricks to come from Depew's Brick Kiln located on the Cass River, south of the village.

The hall was used for elections, caucuses and town meetings, as well as social events. Recalls Meredith Auten, long-time resident, "Elections were held by casting ballots personally. At one election for the township highway commissioner, a little group was definitely for this one guy, and I saw one man put in about 10 ballots."

The result, he chuckled, was twice as many ballots as there were persons in the hall. Cass City High School basketball games were also played in the hall from 1908-1926, Auten related. The boys played around the stove in one corner and the poles supporting the ceiling.

The only way a basket could be made was from the side, the front being blocked by a beam, Auten said.

The second floor was first used by organizations such as the Macabees, Gleaners, Odd Fellows and the Rebekahs. At one time, the Cass City Enterprise newspaper operated out of the second floor.

The town hall was the center of town until the Opera House was put into the third floor of the Hitchcock building, Auten said.

The town hall was rarely used for the 30 years prior to 1964. A village eyesore became a Main Street attraction when it was renovated at a cost of about $8000.

Mrs. James Bauer, president of the Cultural Center Corporation, said when they began work on the building 18 truckloads of debris were hauled out as well as 4 or 5 stoves and several old pianos.

The ceiling was buckling and the floor boards were rotten. The building was restored, painted inside and out, a new heating system and new lights were installed and new cornices were added.

A hand gun range was made in the basement that previously housed the town jail. The small township office was also dedicated.

The building was dedicated as the Elkland Township Cultural Center by Gov. George Romney July 25, 1965. Following the festivities of the 1965 centennial celebration, an approximate $2500 profit was given to the corporation for the cultural center. Since then, the building has been used for lecture series and club meetings. The first art show was held there April 14, 1966.

"It's been used a great deal but not as much as I'd like it to be used," said Mrs. Bauer. With the new management, the cleaning chores are no longer the responsibility of the corporation.

Mrs. Bauer said she hoped the corporation would expand to include persons with interests in different cultural areas, hopefully to serve as an advisory board to the center and line up talent.

GETTING THE second floor of the Elkland Township Cultural Center ready for public use requires a lot of broom pushing and hammering. It's part of the renovation of the building since the village and township agreed to take over the maintenance and split the cost. Wielding the instruments are Sam Trisch, left, and Fred Boyce, both kneeling. Standing are Mel Thompson, left, and Jack Lake.

Snowfall spurs parking tickets

The writing of parking tickets occupied the Cass City police during an otherwise uneventful week.

Thirty tickets were issued for violations of the night time parking ordinance, spurred by the heavy snowfall. Residents are reminded not to park on streets or alleys between 2 and 5 a. m.

Livestock wanders into Yost yard

Three lost shetland ponies and a sheep were reported to the Tuscola county sheriff's office Tuesday by Mrs. Anthony Yost.

She told authorities a bay gelding, a young white mare and a grey mare, accompanied by a large white sheep with black face and legs, wandered into the Yost yard at 6940 Deckerville Road, Deford, about 3:30 p. m. Monday.

The family has taken the animals in awaiting claim by their owners.

Ronald R. Hulbert of Hurley Road, Cass City, reported to authorities Friday that while traveling on M-24 about three miles south of Caro a huge chunk of ice and snow fell from a truck passing him in the opposite direction, breaking the windshield and a CB antenna. Hulbert was uninjured. Damage to the vehicle amounted to about $100.

Cleo Spaulding of Elmwood Road, Cass City, reported to the sheriff's office someone had shot a hole in the radiator of his tractor with a shotgun.

The incident occurred sometime within the past two weeks when the tractor was parked on his property in a field,

Auslander reports equipment theft

Police are still investigating the theft of about $1000 of logging equipment reported stolen Sunday afternoon by Clair Auslander of Decker.

The equipment, including three chain saws, four logging chains and a load binder, were taken from a house trailer sometime between Friday night and Sunday from a camp one mile north of Gotts Corner, north of Elkland.

Auslander told State Police at the Bad Axe post that entrance was gained to the trailer by removing the back window.

Windows were smashed on two logging trucks, a brand new battery taken and 30 gallons of gasoline siphoned off, also.

WSCS studies

change in 1972

Living Through Change was the topic presented at the WSCS meeting Monday evening, Jan. 3, at Trinity United Methodist Church.

Program Chairman Mrs. Gary Christner launched the 1972 study of Change as it effects the individual, the church and the world.

The Rev. E. K. Isaacs spoke of individual change in the future when by 1980 20 million people will be added to the population, totaling 280 million.

Change means that which is familiar is replaced by something different, she said, and change is met in various ways. To be feared, a challenge but always with a hope for betterment. She listed faith as the main ingredient for a successful move to accept and deal with change.

Bad Axe easily dominates Cass City in Thumb B Conference tilt

One stormy night our lights went out. The blackness was total. Little Mary screamed and grabbed me. The boys, trying to be brave, banged across the room. I comforted them, trying to hold all against the terrors of the dark. Then the back door banged, and there was Bob standing in the door holding a lighted candle. "Daddy, Daddy," cried the children, their fears forgotten, as the room resumed its safe proportions in the light. Gaily they helped to light the candles and build a roaring fire. How like that candle is my church. The spiritual resources it offers light my life with a sense of proportion and confidence, no matter how dark things seem. Your church can brighten your life, if you give it a chance.

The Cass City Red Hawk basketball team must do an about face this Friday at Sandusky if they expect to move past the Redskins in the Thumb B Conference.

For last week against the Bad Axe Hatchets the Hawks were dismal... even more inept than the final 83-52 indicated.

The Hawks did just about everything wrong that's possible in a basketball game. They shot poorly, were weak defensively and were guilty of numerous turnovers.

The game was close for only the first four minutes. After that Bad Axe was in complete control.

If the key to stopping Bad Axe is stopping Lloyd Schinnerer, the Hawks failed to find it. The Hatchet ace dominated the game.

Before he retired to the bench after the end of three quarters, he scored 25 points, directed the offense and defense and was his team's leading rebounder.

The one-sided game did give Coach Fred Hurlburt an opportunity to use his bench more extensively than at any other time this year.

The reserves for both clubs played the entire last quarter as the outcome of the game was decided.

The Hawks started with a new offensive pattern for the game, moving Paul Bliss to forward and Dave Hillaker out-court. Kip Hopper handled the ball.

While the move wasn't successful last week, it is probable that nothing that Cass City did would have been effective.

It was one of those nights when nothing was going to work for Cass City.

Meanwhile, the Hatchets played sparkling ball. While Schinnerer led the way, his teammates were hitting him with the good pass and shooting well enough to balance the attack.

At the end of the first period, the Hatchets were in front 22-13. At the half the score was 39-28.

It was in the third quarter that Cass City fell apart. Bad Axe posted a 23-9 margin and was in front at the end of the quarter, 62-37.

Cass City shot 36 per cent from the field while the Hatchets hit 50 per cent.

Hopper, Scott Hartel and Randy Wright led Cass City's scoring with 10 points each. Aiding Schinnerer for Bad Axe was Doug Gay with 17 and Bruce Ward with 12.

JV GAME

For Cass City fans the only bright spot of the evening was the JV contest, won by the Hawks, 77-70.

The JV squad is now 4-2 for the season. Mike Frederick scored 29 for Cass City. All other starters were in double figures.

Dan Mellendorf scored 15, Jerry Toner, 12; Dave Brooks, 11, and Chester Sieradzki, 10.

Kirk again heads commissioners

Shuford Kirk was elected to a third term as chairman at the organizational meeting of the Tuscola County Board of Commissioners Tuesday.

Charles Woodcock was elected as president pro tem, and all committees were re-appointed.

Commissioner Ed Golding of Cass City said the board discussed reapportionment of the county, but he related that none of the seven districts would change.

He noted an increase of population in the southwest corner in Arbela township, but said most of the county was the same.

"The only way we could do it differently would be to split townships and we don't want to do that," he said. The population of the county according to the 1970 census is 48,603, an increase over 48,285.

Golding explained that the districts, which were originally set up four years ago, must be as square and as compact as possible. The board must have all the work done within 30 days.

State Rep. Robert Young of the 8th District spoke to the board about happenings in Lansing and said the reapportionment work there was to be completed by Jan. 31 for representative and senatorial districts. How Tuscola county will be reapportioned is not known yet.

In other business the board moved to let bids for gasoline and four new cars to be used by the sheriff's department.

Meetings with the sheriff's deputies and the mediation board will begin Jan. 17, Golding said. The salary dispute has been going on since October with no settlement yet.

O'Dell awarded hangar contract

William O'Dell, Cass City, has been awarded a contract to build a hangar at St. Clair County Airport.

The Blue Water Aviation Association is the owner and the 60 by 120-foot building will house small commercial planes.

The hangar will have a 60-foot clear span arch with 14-foot insulated sidewalls.

The steel building will feature 12x30 bi-fold power doors at each end and will cost some $36,000 when completed.

The foundation is poured.

Sentence 3 in Tuscola circuit court

Three sentencings were handed down Monday by Judge James Churchill in Tuscola County Circuit Court.

Michael Johnson of Sheridan Road, Vassar, was sentenced to two weeks in the county jail with credit for two days, for simple assault. He pleaded guilty to the charge Dec. 14, 1971. Arrested May 29, he stood mute to the original charge of assaulting an officer in the performance of his duties at an Aug. 10 arraignment.

Allen Popp of E. Caro Road, Caro, was sentenced to one year probation with two weeks in the county jail, three days credit, and given a fine of $100 and costs of $100 on a charge of use of marijuana. He was arrested July 24 in Almer township for possession and stood mute at a Nov. 8 arraignment, but entered a no contest plea to the lesser charge at a Dec. 13 pre-trial conference.

Roger Edsel Ford of Clifford was given a $50 fine and costs of $50 for disorderly conduct. He was arrested Jan. 2, 1971, in Kingston township and charged with possession of marijuana. He stood mute at a Mar. 10 arraignment but pleaded guilty to the lesser charge Dec. 7 at a pre-trial conference.

A motion to remand Roy Lokatys of Reese back to district court for a preliminary examination was accepted by the court. Lokatys is charged with the Nov. 20 breaking and entering of a construction shed belonging to Otto Taylor Co. of Saginaw in Reese.

Slaughter law in effect Monday

New federal regulations affecting the market of slaughter cattle and sheep went into effect Monday, Jan. 10. These new regulations require the producer to certify that the cattle or sheep have not been fed DES (stilbestrol) or that it has been fed in accordance with FDA regulations and withdrawn at least 7 days prior to shipment. The law includes all sheep, lambs, cows, bulls, steers and heifers sold for slaughter.

It is important that all livestock producers comply with the 7-day withdrawal requirement because livestock arriving at the market without a certificate cannot be slaughtered for 7 days. It is evident that such animals would be severely discounted by packers.

A supply of certificates is available at all markets, states Bill Bortel, Tuscola County Extension Director.
