

FROM THE
Editor's Corner

Nostalgia is the in-thing these days. The disc jockeys are playing the top tunes of the 40's, 50's and 60's. "Gone with the Wind" is making the rounds again and "remember when" features are dotting the metro dailies with more and more frequency.

I was feeling nostalgic the other day when I read that dresses were on their way down and midi might just replace the mini. And that "puffs" are selling fast. That's the device that makes a woman look pregnant when she isn't. Ugh.

When I read this early in the year I was ready for a whole bunch of nostalgia about the mini and last year's conversation piece. . . hot pants. Those were styles, man.

I should have worried. Hot pants are out this year, true enough, and puffs are selling. But the designers have come up with a new twist for this spring that should satisfy the most discriminating of girl watchers.

They call it "The Sizzler". That's Sizzler with a capital "S". It's really a thigh-length dress with matching bikini pants, sort of like the cheerleaders wear in high school. Nothing too new, really.

The designers are hoping that it will be this spring's hot fashion. Chances are they are keeping fingers crossed hoping that a good percentage of the business firms hiring young, shapely girls will rebel and set standards that will bar the Sizzlers from the office. Sort of like banning a book in Boston.

What better guarantee for success? Can't you see it? The boss says dresses have to be no more than two millimeters above the knee and right away every photographer in town comes running, camera in hand, to get a picture of a girl in a short dress together with a guy with a yardstick.

What self-respecting editor could pass up a "cheesecake" picture like that?

On women's lib gets into the act and the headlines read, "She sizzles without a Sizzler". Or the girl who says regular clothing is too warm for the office in the spring and the writers report "Sizzlers' burning issue with hot young thing". The variations are endless.

A few stories like this and suddenly Sizzlers are the hottest thing on the fashion market.

At the Chronicle we aren't going to provide any fuel for the fashion manufacturers. Let them buy their advertising.

Any employee here can wear hot pants, micro minis or Sizzlers if they want to.

I would never be the one to start a rhubarb about it. Unless of course everyone suddenly decided that the full length maxi is the dress for proper office decorum.

I'd complain about that. A fellow has to draw the line somewhere.

Area schools plant trees for Arbor Day

One tree was planted by each grade in observance of the 100th anniversary of Arbor Day by classes at the Deford, Campbell and Evergreen elementary schools.

The 30 trees were donated by Harry Little of Cass City, and include a variety of flowering types.

The trees were planted Tuesday at Campbell and Friday at Deford and Evergreen. Each tree was tied to a support post painted with the year of the class's graduation from high school.

In Gagetown trees donated by the Gagetown Women's Study Club will be planted at 10 a. m. Saturday, April 29, in the Gagetown Recreational Park. Girl Scouts and 4-H members are invited to plant the trees.

Arbor Day was first observed in Nebraska April 10, 1872. The date observed varies with the state and is proclaimed by the governor. Michigan is celebrating Arbor Day April 29.

Between 80 and 100 Junior Girl Scouts and Cadettes will be at work in the village Saturday, April 29, from noon until 4:30 p. m. cleaning up debris. This is in keeping with National Ecology day. Following, they will go to the park for a wiener roast and picnic, made possible by contributions from various merchants.

BURYING THEIR TREE are Tom Martin and Shelly Terbush, two zealous members of the Class of '84. Only kindergartners now, they will watch the tree, planted in honor of Arbor Day, grow outside their class room at the Deford Elementary School.

Government costs up as council retains 13 mills

The recent sweeping boost in property tax valuation in the village will up the cost of government to local taxpayers in Cass City this year by 8.7 per cent. The decision was reached in the regular meeting of the village council Tuesday night at the Municipal Building.

The village council voted to continue the village millage rate at 13 mills, which will give them about 3 per cent more tax income than budgeted and about 8.7 per cent more than last year.

The final state equalized valuation figures for the village were presented. Real property is assessed at $6,566,000, an increase of about $700,000, and personal property is assessed at $2,544,200, an increase of about $462,000.

The increase in the valuation at 13 mills will result in about $18,440, while the budgeted amount at 13 mills was estimated to be $15,000.

This is an increase of about $14,772.30 over last year's property tax revenues.

In other business, the council adopted a new "Vice and Immorality" law responding to the March advisory vote of the public when residents voted overwhelmingly to not allow the sale of beer in the park.

The new law prohibits sale of alcoholic beverages in the park, as well as in other public places. It also provides for the minimum age of 18 years and includes the state proviso which allows a minor to carry alcoholic beverages during working hours if it is part of his job.

Amendments to the ordinance were changed last year to facilitate enforcement of the liquor portions by the police officials. This ordinance includes those changes. The ordinance becomes effective following publication.

The council also voted to construct permanent fences around the two little league baseball diamonds at the Cass City Recreational Park at a cost of about $1500. This amount also includes a temporary water facility for drinking and watering the mounds. The village intends to use state recreation bond money for the project, which will pay for 80 per cent. The village's share is $300.

The decision came after a request by Jim Johnson, Little League manager, who appeared before the council and reminded them that when he appeared last year they said the fencing would probably be done this year.

Tom Sutter of Konrad's Bakery also appealed to the council for help in solving the noise problem he has when kids run through the walk way next to his bakery late at night.

He told the council that as the warm weather begins, teenagers run through the walkway and throw bottles until the early morning hours.

"As soon as the weather turns nice, it's impossible to sleep," he said.

Sutter explained that it was difficult to catch them because lookouts are staked at each end of the passageway.

Sutter requested that gates

Table zone ordinance to study parking proposal

Village council tabled action on the Zoning Ordinance when some members stated they wanted to study further the proposed changes exempting the central business district from off-street parking requirements.

The Zoning Ordinance was considered at a public hearing held in conjunction with the regular council meeting Tuesday night.

The proposed change which caused the most controversy was the one exempting the B-1 Community Business District from providing parking space as required for each particular type of business at the time of erection or enlargement of any building or structure.

The B-1 district includes eight blocks along Main Street in which are concentrated most of the village stores.

"Essentially what this does is to allow improvements or new construction in the Central Business District without requiring individual property or store owners to provide his own parking," explained President Lambert Althaver.

The recommendation came from the Planning Commission, he noted.

Planning Commission President Warren Wood explained and defended the exception.

"In this particular area, the oldest section downtown, some (stores) can be enlarged some, but most are maximum size now," he said.

"By the change we made in the B-1 section, it would make it possible for the upgrading of buildings," he explained. The fear of the planning commission was that if required to provide off-street parking when businesses rebuild, the stores would go out of town. The change was meant to keep the stores on Main Street.

As the ordinance was originally written, the B-1 district was not excluded. The provision required that parking would be required for a new building or enlargements.

However, if a store owner merely remodeled the building he already had, no parking would be required.

The ordinance has been under consideration for about 1 1/2 years, updating and modernizing the last changes made in 1960.

Dr. D. E. Rawson, trustee, moved that adoption of the ordinance be tabled until the next meeting to allow time for further study of the proposed change.

Citing the Chamber of Commerce plans now underway to consider special assessment of the downtown merchants for parking, Rawson said there is more than one way to approach the problem.

Village Attorney Clinton House refuted Rawson by saying that if the village did not exempt the downtown merchants, it would penalize the man who rebuilt, while none of the present merchants had to provide parking.

Presently, off-street parking in the downtown area is furnished by the village.

At the hearing, the only resident to pose a question about the ordinance was "Bud" Clarence Schneeberger, who questioned how much parking he would be required to provide if he opened up a warehouse retail store at his present warehouse. He was told by the council that the area at the corner of Maple and the north Main Street alley did not fall under the B-1 district, and that he would have to provide some parking, just as he would under the old ordinance.

The question, summarized Althaver, was whether the merchants should pay for their parking or the village should make a special concession to them.

In regards to the off-street parking already provided, Jim Gross, representing the businessmen in his block, made a request before the council for work to be done on the public lot to the south of his store.

The lot "is perhaps the most neglected parking lot in Michigan," he told the council. He sought blacktopping and general cleaning of the lot, which is cluttered with bottles and old cars. He was assured the lot would be cleaned and further improvements looked into.

Resigns to enter business

Blades happy with results, working arrangements here

Cass City's first village superintendent has resigned after 15 months directing the affairs of Cass City. The announcement was made Tuesday night at the regular meeting of the village council.

Looking back on his comparatively short tenure, Jim Blades called his work at Cass City a wonderful, rewarding experience.

He pointed to the village council and the various village crews as outstanding and the key to making his job here rewarding.

The entire community was the best I have associated with, he added.

Blades is resigning effective Friday and will move to Baldwin where he will be a partner with his father in a small manufacturing plant.

Looking back at his 15 months, Blades feels that his most important contribution to the more effective running of the village was in the area of organization.

We have changed our accounting system and lines of organization to meet future growth clean-up week

The week of May 13 to May 20 has been proclaimed Clean-Up, Paint-Up, Fix-Up Week by the village council.

The week is traditionally set aside for beautification of the village by the residents.

and to comply with the much greater State supervision that appears almost daily, the retiring superintendent explained.

Blades also said that he found the system of hiring a superintendent instead of a village manager "most effective".

That's not to say, he added, that the village might not have to change in the future. Looking ahead, Blades pointed to the improvement of the sewer system as one of the more immediate problems.

He also sees the need for turning the village into a city in the not too distant future.

At that time, perhaps, the village can look at another system of government, he added.

While in Cass City, Blades was active in civic work. He established the Cass City Jaycees and was a member of the Cass City Rotary.

Council adopts building codes

Ordinances adopting the BOCA Basic Building and Plumbing codes were passed unanimously by the village council.

The national building codes become effective upon publication.

The adoption of the codes was completed although the village still does not have an inspector to enforce them.

The state law providing that a state building code be written is in conference committee in Lansing, President Lambert Althaver reminded the council members, and if and when it is signed into law, the village will lose its option to adopt its own code, although a state code would not be ready until 1 1/2 years later.

Contrary to the desires of some residents, the BOCA codes would not eliminate the so-called low-cost housing, although it would set some minimum standards.

The current building codes were adopted in 1947 and are not enforceable, stated Althaver.

Village attorney Clinton House told the council that the village can adopt the state code when it is adopted or portions of it if they so desire.

Both ordinances provide for a maximum fine of $100 and or 90 days in the county jail for violators.

Lions Club sight project 18 years old

By Kit McMillion

The Cass City Lions Club will be 18 years old April 27, and while the public has been aware of the many fund raising activities of the organization, exactly where that money goes is not generally known.

Much of the work the club does is not readily visible except for the numerous youngsters who have gotten glasses through the club and the blind persons who have been able to lead a normal life because they were able to have a leader dog courtesy of the Lions.

"The whole club is based around conservation of sight," said secretary Ron Keegan.

The number one project of the club, he explained, is contributing to the leader dog school located at Rochester. Last year they gave $600 to the clinic and also took down five dogs for training.

Treasurer Ed LaBelle said the dogs the club takes down are given to the Lions because they are no longer wanted as pets. The animals are taken to Rochester where they are trained as leader dogs if they prove suitable to the task.

Anyone over 16 years who is totally blind can apply for a dog. The cost of training the dog and housing the applicant during the four weeks of training with the animal is $2600, although the applicant pays nothing. The cost of maintaining the school is borne solely through voluntary contributions.

Currently Alger Freiburger of Cass City is training with a seeing eye dog at the school. He is just one of the more than 200 blind persons who attend the school yearly.

Persons who are blind and would like to apply for a leader dog should contact the Lions Club, said Keegan.

Other disbursements the club made in 1971 were $75 to the Welcome Home for the Blind in Grand Rapids, a home for aged blind persons, and $275 to the Michigan Eye Collection Center for corneal transplantations and eye research at the University of Michigan Medical Center.

Just as important as the aid to those already blind are the projects sponsored by the club to help those who can see but who have vision problems.

Every year each of the 44 members is levied $8 as his contribution to the Tuscola County Sight Screening, a mobile unit which travels around the county testing the sight of youngsters, particularly in the elementary grades. It is sponsored by all the Lions Clubs in the county.

"We always try to include one civic project," related Keegan. "The most recent were the sign at the high school, and we built the pavilion at the park."

This year, he said, the club will donate money and time for the Artrain which will be in Cass City late July.

The money for the various projects of the club is raised through what are probably the most visible aspect of the club.

Friday is the annual white cane sale, when the men of the club will stand under the street light and sell canes to raise money for their sight projects.

Other events are the annual donkey basketball game, and talent show and the 50-50 drawing. Another project is the sale of brooms made by blind persons. One of the newer clubs in the community, the Lions Club was chartered April 27, 1954, by 20 members under the leadership of Harry Little.

Since then one charter member has maintained a perfect attendance—Thomas Jackson.

"They go through the sight screening," said Keegan, "and if they have defective eyes. . . we buy the glasses for the kids who can't afford them." Last year this amounted to $508," said Keegan.

While eyes and sight conservation is the prime concern of the International group, they also use some of their talents and funds to improve the community.

Mester stands mute
to homicide charge

Charles E. Mester, 19, of Deford, demanded a preliminary examination when he appeared in Sanilac County District Court last week on a charge of negligent homicide. Mester is charged with running a stop sign on M-81 in the April 13 collision at the M-53 intersection that claimed the life of Roger Richmond, 26, an MSU medical student. The exam is scheduled for 1 p. m. May 2. Bond was set at $250. Mester stood mute and a plea of innocent was entered for him when he appeared before the judge Friday. He was arrested last week following a detailed investigation by the Sanilac county sheriff's department and the State Police Crime Lab at Lansing, who assisted in reconstructing the accident. Richmond was headed north on M-53 when the crash occurred.

Students writing fiction

Writing their own books and illustrating them has been an annual project of Mrs. Nanette Bauer's eighth grade students for several years.

In the past, the students have written about themselves, but this year they wrote short story fiction books.

The books were recently finished and the students have been reading them to other classes in the school system.

"The whole purpose of the project was that writing is to reach out and communicate," explained Mrs. Bauer. The book making is part of a unit on short stories and provides an opportunity for the students to learn the parts of a book and how to bind them, as well as use what they have learned about the short story form of fiction.

The classes were directed to write for a younger audience and studied children's books before they began.

Each book is bound inside a decorative cover made from wall paper samples. The students, who worked in groups of five, wrote the stories, proof read and illustrated them. This took about 2 weeks.

"We ruined a lot of paper just making the pictures," said Tim Guinther, one of three students who read stories Thursday morning to Mrs. Lewis Tibbitts' fifth graders.

The books will be given to the elementary school library. This is one of the reasons the stories were bound, said Mrs. Bauer, so that what the youngsters wrote would be read and not thrown into a waste basket or onto a shelf.

The stories include themes of adventure and fantasy or attempt to relate a realization, such as "All About Faces," in which a small boy draws the conclusion that he is glad he is different. "If they (faces) were all the same, I would not be able to tell my friends apart."

"If It Fitz..."

Read snake's back first

BY JIM FITZGERALD

Dear Ann Landers:

Last night, when I complained to my wife about a gap in my reading, she said it is a rule in our house to read what's on the back of snakes first. If I forget, that's my tough luck. What I want to know is, how come I can't have rules about cats?

What I mean is, my wife has this incredible fear of snakes. Before she'll read the daily paper, the kids must check it. Any pictures of snakes must be immediately torn out and burned, and the ashes must be buried 2 miles outside of town. This is the law, even if the snake is on the back of your column, Ann. Because of a 20 foot python, I still don't know what you advised that wife who complained that her sex life was only lukewarm because her husband insisted upon sleeping with his head in the oven and his feet in the refrigerator.

So OK, Ann. I know what you're going to say. I should appreciate the good things about my wife (she doesn't crack her knuckles at the movies) and I should accept the fact she will always be a screwball about snakes. I agree. I am willing to be understanding. But how come she can't be understanding about me and cats?

Honest - to - Dorothy Dix, you're not going to believe the current cat situation in our home, Ann. I hate cats. But we have owned 2 cats for years. One is the size of a St. Bernard and it is a real experience when it jumps onto your lap. You can't get up but it doesn't matter because you couldn't walk anyway. Your thighs are broken. The other cat is smaller and more subtle. It jumps into your ear and licks your brain. These cats are sisters but you'll notice I refer to them as "it." They were neutered long ago. But the town tomcats don't care. They line up outside our door and fight to get inside. I put a big sign on the porch: "Our Cats Are Fixed." But the tomcats keep coming. One of them wrote on the bottom of the sign: "Sex isn't everything."

Well Ann, last week I of the Toms got inside. It is easy to understand how. Our 13-year-old son was home alone and he hasn't learned how to shut doors yet. He is still working on how to turn out lights and how to pick up anything, anything at all.

Tom crawled into a crawl space off our laundry room. Why do builders leave crawl spaces where only animals can crawl, Ann? It's so they'll have a place to hide, and to die, isn't it? Something like the elephants' burial grounds. ("Do you smell what I smell?")

Tom leaves the crawl space regularly and roams the house. We know because he leaves toppled lamps behind him. Several times the kids have chased him but Tom always escapes back to his burial ground.

It is a complicated problem, Ann. We can't lock Tom in the laundry room because this would deny the other 2 cats access to the litter box. We can't leave an outside door open, hoping Tom will leave, because 56 more cats would come in.

I hate cats, Ann, but I am now feeding 3 of them. When I gripe, my wife says cats are cute and I am unreasonable. When I take a kick at a passing cat, she calls the humane society.

I'm "unreasonable" but she threatened divorce when I subscribed to Life magazine because Life "always has pictures of snakes."

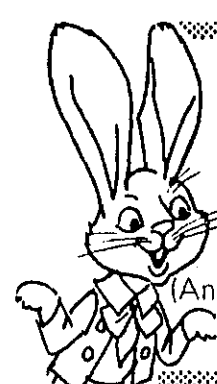

Don't tell me to see my minister, Ann. My wife has sung in his choir for 30 years and I drop in every Easter. He isn't going to listen to me.

If you can't rush some decent advice by return mail, please send 3 snakes.

HOLDING THE HAROLD FERGUSON memorial award is Becky Loomis, who was named to the honor Friday at a Band Boosters Award Banquet. The award was presented by director George Bushong. Becky's name will be engraved on the plaque, which hangs in the band room at the high school.

Rabbit tracks

By John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help)

It's not certain that everyone who attended the musical benefit Saturday night presented by Gerald Hicks and Mrs. Harold Kilbourn were music lovers.

It is certain that all were friends of stricken Gene Chaplin and that there are a good many of them.

The Deford Methodist Church was full and $760 was donated to help the Chaplin family with expenses stemming from the long illness.

The Cass City High School and the school's MEA union will begin negotiations soon. The school picture hasn't changed much across the state. In the first three months of this year 35 Michigan districts asked voters for extra operating money. The score: 27 districts said no, while just 8 said yes.

Cass City district will not face this problem this year as the millage renewal okayed by the voters earlier this month is expected to be enough to pay school expenses in 1972-73.

Vic Guernsey and I visited the big city last week. On the way home Vic toiled the pair of us to Plymouth to see Artrain. It's impressive, of course. Educational, outstanding, remarkable. You can use all the adjectives. Equally impressive was the work on the local level.

Artrain stays in Plymouth 18 days, the longest of any stop on the tour.

The local depot has been converted to a gallery for local artists and craft (leather, pottery, etc.) demonstrations run continuously.

There are films, theater, lectures, symphony, band and choral concerts and on-site entertainment.

In conjunction an architectural tour of Plymouth was arranged together with a map to guide visitors.

All-in-all it equals a pile of work and I suspect that the same will be true for Mrs. Holly Althaver and committee in Cass City.

James Blades has resigned and Cass City's first experiment with a village manager is over.

The reaction of the community is mixed. You'll find supporters and detractors up and down the main stem.

The personal opinion here is that in some ways Blades was ahead of his time for tiny Cass City. Too much delegation of authority, perhaps, for a town used to virtually none in village operations.

On the other hand, the man who follows Blades will find the going easier. . . and it's certain that sooner or later he will be replaced because village government is just too time consuming these days to be handled by a part-time unpaid community booster.

Lions name

All four prizes were given to Cass City talent Saturday night at the Intermediate School when the Lions Club held their 6th annual talent show.

Mary Wagner, singing before a crowd of about 250, took first prize with two solos. She won $75.

Second place went to the Discovery Singers, a three girl group consisting of Mary Wagner, Becky Loomis and Lynn Rayl. They received $50.

Kay Loomis captured third place and $25 with a song, and Paul Kerbyson received fourth place honors for his piano playing.

Dick Erla was master of ceremonies for the event.

Band memorial to Becky Loomis

The 13th annual Harold Ferguson Memorial Award was presented to Becky Loomis Friday night by band director George Bushong. The presentation was made at the Band Boosters Award Banquet held at the high school cafeteria, with about 250 attending.

Miss Loomis is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Loomis of Cedar Run Road, Cass City. She plays piano and is first trumpet in the high school band. Her name will be engraved on a plaque that hangs in the band room.

The award is given in honor of Harold Ferguson who was an active director of high school and college bands and an outstanding musician and teacher who helped Cass City students by raising the standards of music in the village and provided incentive and encouragement to the pupils. Ferguson was a professor at the University of Michigan at one time and founded the Saginaw Music Company and sold instruments to Cass City students.

Winners for the Band Boosters candy sale were also announced. Bunny Hill won the first prize, a television set; second place went to Jim Gilliam, who received a cassette tape player, and third prize, a typewriter, was given to Ken Kerbyson.

Three $5 certificates were given to the students who sold the most candy from each school: Diane Sefton, high school; Mark Meeker, Intermediate school, and Janice Wentworth, Evergreen, Deford.

New officers for the band boosters were announced: President Iris Tuckey, Vice-President Marlene Sieradzki, Secretary Judy Palmer and Treasurer Shirley Wagg.

FROM THE FILES OF THE CHRONICLE

FIVE YEARS AGO

Lambert Althaver, village president, speaking at a Rotary luncheon, said that Cass City should give careful consideration to changing Cass City from a village to a city.

"The Sound," a rock and roll band featuring four Cass City youths, walked off with the top prize in the 2nd annual Lions Club Talent Show.

Production began last week at the new Klein fertilizer installation.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Merchant announced they were celebrating the operation of the bakery under their management with a grand opening.

Sheldon L. Peck of Cass City, a graduate of Cass City High School and Grand Rapids Baptist Bible College and Seminary and a member of the First Baptist Church of Cass City, was publicly ordained in the local Baptist church.

TEN YEARS AGO

Red Hawk speech students copped two firsts and a second place in the Region J Speech Contests, giving Cass City the honor of being the only school to take more than one place in the contests. Cass City winners were: Bill Dobbs, first in original oration; Wayne Dillon, first in humorous reading; and Sharon Profit, second in declamation.

Fritz Neitzel told the Cass City Rotarians that the original Elkland fire department was started on October 29, 1884, and was called the Artic No. 1.

Mrs. Marie Krueger, wife of Cass City industrialist Al Krueger, was installed as president of the Cass City Zonta Club.

Month-long negotiations by a Detroit couple for the purchase of the New Gordon Hotel will culminate when Mrs. A. B. Fleming takes over as manager of the hotel.

After narrowly missing appointment at two other Class A schools, Coach Mike Yednak was signed as head football coach at Alpena High School.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

The board of education of the Cass City Public School in a special session resolved that a consolidation of the local district be made with eight rural schools now transporting their pupils to Cass City. These rural districts included the Heron, Dickhour, Winton, Wright, Bird, Paul, Quick and Browns schools.

Those who enjoy amateur boxing exhibitions saw plenty of action in the one conducted at the school gym sponsored by the Rotary Club and Gavel Club for the benefit of the Cass City Community Hospital and the Cass City Recreational Park.

The H. H. Koffman Co. have expanded their wholesale business at Cass City by the purchase of the stock and business of the Hoover Tobacco Co. of Uby.

"I think I must have lost it around here where I shot my deer last fall," Ed Golding remarked to his wife when they visited Curran. He scraped around some leaves and was delighted when he spied his Masonic ring lost about five months ago.

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Mrs. Alfred J. Knapp of Cass City was elected president of the Flint Presbytery for 1937-1938.

Harley Holmes, superintendent of Marshall schools and an 8-year superintendent in Cass City, was named president of the Michigan Educational Association.

Miss Bess Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Green of Kingston and sister of Miss Twila Green of this place, has been elected president of the home economics club of Central State Teachers' College, and is official delegate to the state home economics convention.

For the third time in the past three years, two students in the senior class in the Cass City High School have tied for high honors. Valedictorian honors go to Jean Kerbyson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Kerbyson, and Shirley Ann Lenzner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Lenzner.

"Do You Want to be a Practical Farmer?" is the subject of an address which Carl Reagh, representing the Cass City High School, will deliver in a state preliminary speaking contest sponsored by the Future Farmers of America.

AWANA holdOlympics

An unofficial AWANA Olympic contest was held Saturday at the Cass City High School gym, with clubs from West Branch, Bay City and Cass City competing.

Forty team members from each club competed and those participating were selected by qualifying at try-outs the previous week. The events included a variety of relays, sprints, rope pulls, etc.

The Bay City club won the contest with a total of 86 points. Cass City had 75 points and West Branch, 59. Individual winners received ribbons and the winning club was awarded a trophy.

In the regular local AWANA meeting last Wednesday, 86 club members attended, with 24 leaders. Sandy Gunther and Mark Meeker took high point honors.

A good-natured neighbor and his garden tools are soon parted.

Sgt. Schuette transferred to Philippines

Sgt. Sandy Schuette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Schuette of Gagetown, has received orders for Clark Air Base in the Philippine Islands.

FROM THE LITTER BOX

Walpurgis Night

By Kit McMillon

Next Sunday night is a very special one, if you're a witch, that is. It's Walpurgis night, a witches' Sabbath.

Tradition tells us that the night before May 1 is the time when the power of witches is at its height. In other words, stay at home!

If you don't, you may stumble upon a group of the nefarious ladies assembled at a crossroads on a mountaintop (around here?) who have arrived on broomsticks or with demons, who are spending the evening planning the next year's deeds and indulging themselves in wild dances, and evilrites, initiating new members (I told you to watch out) and affirming their allegiance to the devil, who usually appears in the form of a goat.

The authorities believe this festival is a surviving remnant of a pagan fertility cult because May 1 was marked as the beginning of the growing season.

Fires were lit the night before to scare away the witches, and the magic of the German Saint Walburga, whose feast day is May 1, was invoked to banish powers of evil.

We still celebrate another witches' sabbath in a different sort of way--Halloween. But most of the observers don't really believe in assembly of the original celebrants.

Nevertheless, the popularity of the return to witchcraft, black magic and the occult has risen sharply in the past few years.

And naturally, as human action seems to frequently confirm the drive to make a buck, there are several companies who specialize in the items that a good or would be witch might need to carry on his duties.

For the novice occultist, there are a variety of how-to-do-it books advertised, such as "Book of Legendary Spells," proclaiming to hold the step-by-step rituals of white and black magic, voodoo, witchcraft, ceremonial magic, etc.; "Master Book of Candleburning," relating the directions for how to burn candles for every purpose; or for someone who is a little more down to earth, titles are offered in the "Realms of Practical Mind Reading," "Book of Dreams and Fortune Telling," and "Stalking the Healthful Herbs."

When paging through the catalog, I was amused by the number of curio items that were interspersed with what might actually be used in a satanic ritual, such as a porcelain Buddha incense burner, a horrible or witch cauldron, which also comes in a silverplated deluxe model, crystal ball, and numerous ancient formulas for incense and artificial tinctures.

Somehow, I wouldn't expect anyone but an amateur sorcerer to order from this catalog. The mystic impact is lost when the elements are commercialized, or are made from a modern synthetic process. Such as hooded robes advertised as ideal garb for rituals, styled in ancient tradition with full hood, long flowing sleeves, complete with a deluxe cord for securing at the waist, made in the traditional velvet and also in an economy blend of cotton and dacron, which I don't think would be appreciated by the local spirits.

Apparently, the catalog company isn't sure whether it's offending any spirits either. On almost every page is a statement of company policy.

They make no claims of any supernatural powers for any items listed. The items are sold solely for what they might be worth to the purchaser.

But since a catalog usually doesn't offer things it doesn't think it can sell, it makes me wonder just how big their market is, or who their customers are, or what use they have for these items: genuine human skull, available on special order; skeletons; preserved bats, bat and cat skulls; rattlesnake bone or fang.

Meow.

Slate interagency migrant affairs conference

A regional Interagency Conference on Migrant Affairs will be held May 3 at the Holiday Inn in Bay City, located on the east bank of the Saginaw River at the US-10 and M-13 junction, according to Bill Bortel, Tuscola County Extension Director.

The aim of the conference is to disseminate information concerning the services, policies and procedures of state, federal and local agencies as they relate to migrant workers.

The sponsors hope, through this conference, to insure more effective local implementation of agency programs to migrants and to promote better inter-agency cooperation at the local level.

The conference is designed for agency personnel, volunteers, members of benevolent groups (churches, etc.) and others who are involved with the problems of migrants.

Speakers will be agency people representing the Civil Rights Commission, United Migrants for Opportunities, Inc., Cooperative Extension Service, Office of Economic Opportunity, Michigan Employment Security Commission and the state Departments of Public Health, Education, Social Services and Labor.

Each speaker will outline the ways in which his agency functions in relation to migrants. Topics to be covered will include such items as food stamps, emergency aid to migrants, worker registration and migrant education. There will be opportunities for small group discussion.

The program is scheduled to begin at 9 a. m. and run until approximately 3:30 p. m. Additional information can be obtained by contacting your local County Extension Office at Caro.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

Dear Mister Editor:

Ed Doolittle's daughter that works in the city wrote home last week about going to a wedding. She told her folks that the couple getting married wrote their own ceremony, and that it was beautiful. Ed told her fellers during the session at the country store Saturday night he can't wait for his girl to come home so he can get more details on the wedding.

The way things is going, Ed allowed, they probably wrote up someun like a lease for a year or so. Fer shore, Ed went on, they wasn't much plighting of eternal troths like in the old days. Course, nobody knowed what that meant, except that they was agreeing to stay together thru thick and thin. That sticking together has gone out of style, allowed Ed.

Bug Hookum, that says he never knowed what happiness was until after he got married and it was to late, was agreed with Ed that marriage and everybody else has got what them economists call planned obsolescence. That means they are built to be replaced ever so often. What puts the stopper in the planned obsolescence jug, allowed Bug, was the piece he saw where the Japs has come up with a $400 car that you drive a year and throw away. The junks from this plan would do fer the country what planned obsolescence in marriage is doing fer the family, was Bug's words.

Keeping up with changes in the way folks live in this country is like the schoolteacher said when she was ask about her class, Clem Webster said. She said teaching was like trying to keep 35 corks underwater at the same time. Ever time you look at someun, declared Clem, another angle pops up in it. He had saw where this woman that was getting a divorce said that ain't what it was. She said she and her husband had just decided not to renew their contract.

Actual, put in Zeke Grubb, we are coming around to seeing that we can't keep this throwaway life going forever. Zeke pointed out where recycling is the thing right now, and he was full in favor of it. He said soda pop now is coming out in "money back" bottles, and paper and beer cans is being made into new paper and beer cans. Zeke said if he could get his old lady recycled it might put new spark in their marriage, cause both of em is looking like their planned obsolescence time is up.

Furthermore, went on Zeke, what we can't recycle we can redecorate. He had read this piece where "cosmetic surgery" is as big as recycling. This is where doctors tighten up skin, build up sagging places and in general try to overhaul the cover on the carcass. Zeke said he wasn't in favor of overhauls jest fer looks, but if it made a person feel better about his hole outlook, more power to it.

Personal, Mister Editor, I don't want to be young skin deep and old all the way to the bone.

Yours truly,
Uncle Tim

AGENT'S CORNER

Know your insurance

Sherry Lowell, Area Extension Home Economist

"Most people consider a homeowner's policy a real advantage in property insurance," says Lucile Ketchum, extension home management specialist at Michigan State University. "It combines many kinds of coverage in one policy, and usually at less cost than separate policies."

"A homeowner's policy may pay for your loss if a storm-felled tree ruins expensive outdoor paneling or it may pay medical costs if your neighbor takes a header on your ice-glazed pavement."

"These kinds of coverage are common, but check your policy to be sure you have the right amount of coverage -- no more and no less than you need," she says.

In these days of soaring construction costs, high crime and liberal awards in liability costs, you may not have as much coverage as you think, Miss Ketchum advises.

If you haven't increased your homeowner's policy coverage in the last few years, for example, you may be insured for less than 80 per cent of the value of your house. This means you'll be in for a substantial loss if your home is destroyed by fire.

One way to be sure your coverage never dips below the value you want is "inflation guard endorsement" which automatically hikes both your premium and coverage. The premium and coverage would increase about five per cent in an area where home prices rise four to eight per cent per year.

When you review your coverage, remember to check the contents of your home, too. If you've added furnishings or other property, make a record and keep the details in a safe deposit box.

Jewels and furs may need to be covered separately under "scheduled articles endorsements". The premiums on these vary by location and by the kind of article--costs are higher for goods that are more likely to be lost or stolen.

ONE FOR THE ROAD
Street naming no simple task
By Dan Marlowe

Eric Felter has never appeared on What's My Line, but if he ever did he would be a good bet to stump the panel as to his occupation.

Well, at least his part-time occupation.

Felter's real job is chief draftsman for Levitt and Sons, the eastern land developer and builder which has been creating instant cities since 1954. Levittown on Long Island was just the first of the complete communities they built starting from scratch.

But Felter's part-time job is the one which would stump the panel. Felter names streets in the Levitt communities, which isn't as easy as it sounds.

Street names in most communities develop with the area -- the widest street becomes Broadway or Main Street, and as the area develops street names are added by the local residents. There must be a Garden Street and a School Street in two-thirds of the cities in the United States.

During the past 15 years Eric Felter has named more than 3000 streets in the various Levitt residential communities. He does most of his street-naming nights and week ends. He finds it much too busy in the office with telephones ringing constantly and other interruptions to concentrate on street-naming.

Naming begins when Felter receives the preliminary street layout of a Levitt community. First he isolates the neighborhoods into sections divided by major roads. Sections are named, whenever possible, for local landmarks or historical events.

Then come the individual street names. The usual process is to have each street in a section begin with the same letter. This helps mailmen, for instance, and delivery trucks. Felter must keep the size of each section in mind, because there are letter's like

"S" with many more possibilities than letters like "Z".

Felter wants street names that are easy to pronounce. He wants names that offer a minimum of alternate spellings to confuse residents. And he has to check to be sure a street name he wants to use hasn't already been designated elsewhere in the county, or in another Levitt community, which might confuse billing charges.

Street naming means a lot of extra work for Eric Felter but it has its compensations. For one thing, there is a street somewhere in a Levitt community named after each of his five daughters.

And of course somewhere among the Levitt constructions there is a Felter Lane.

Professor says increased divorce rate not related to family stability

The U. S. divorce rate, which has reached an all-time high in the 1970's, does not necessarily reflect a breakdown in family life.

Prof. Paul H. Glasser of The University of Michigan School of Social Work takes issue with fellow social scientists who would package the two together and predict disaster upon both the individuals and society.

"There is no reason to believe the American family is less stable--or more stable---than it ever was," he speculates.

A record 175,000 divorces were granted during the first three months of 1970, projecting to a total of 700,000 for that year, according to Glasser. The previous peak occurred in 1945-46, an aftermath of countless impulse marriages at the brink of World War II. The divorce rate subsided in the early 1950's, leveled off until the late 1960's and resumed its climb.

Glasser co-editor with his wife of "Families In Crisis," sees more evidence that a changing society has encouraged the divorce rise than that the divorce rise is changing society. He cites these factors: Moral values: "The stigma of divorce has diminished. There is less social pressure to remain in a marriage that is not mutually satisfying and fulfilling."

The children's sake: "There appears to be a reverse in the tendency to keep an unhappy marriage together 'for the children's sake'. An increasing percentage of divorces involve children. Researchers can show no evidence that postponing divorce does the youngsters either harm or good; too many other factors enter into it."

Legal aid: "Because of the establishment of legal aid and similar agencies in the inner cities, an entire new segment of the population has been entered into the divorce statistics. Unable to afford legal services in the past, the lower classes have traditionally experienced the highest degree of desertion. A major part of legal aid business involves divorce settlements, some merely finalizing a separation that occurred years before."

The recession: "The divorce rate always increases when the economy falls. If a couple are having serious troubles, a crisis such as a job layoff can push them over the edge. A woman will put up with a lot from her husband as long as he is bringing home the paycheck."

"In my opinion, the American male image is more closely associated with the ability to make money than with sex. Particularly among the middle class but across the board: when a man's income is gone, his ego is busted."

Women's liberation: "Nearly half the American women with children under the age of 18 are working, and they are proving to themselves and to non-working women that a wife needn't stay married out of financial dependence."

The high rate of marriage: "The divorce rate is high in America because, concurrently, this is the most marrying society in the Western world. The divorced woman stands a better chance of remarrying than a single woman at most age levels. An estimated two-thirds of all second marriages, as first marriages, remain stable."

Life span: "People marry earlier today and live longer. There is time for more than one marriage today in the space of one life time."

Institutional pressures: "The family must not only withstand internal pressures but increasing burdens of the social system. For example, community mental health agencies are aiming to treat more and more of the retarded, the delinquent and the emotionally disturbed within the community instead of in institutions. This is an excellent goal. But the programs focus heavily on the individual and offer inadequate support to his family."

"Also at fault is the company which transfers an employee every few years but offers his family no assistance in adjusting to a new community, home, church, school system, etc."

Marriages are most vulnerable at two stages, Glasser notes: during the first two years and during the middle years, when the spouses are in their late 40's and 50's. "Many crises occur then. The husband reaches a point in his career when it is clear whether or not he'll make it to the top. The children leave home, perhaps not turning out as the parents hoped. Physiological changes in both sexes compound the stresses," the U-M professor says, noting that this age group is also more susceptible to alcoholism and mental breakdown.

One can interpret the high divorce rate as a good omen, Glasser concludes. People no longer feel compelled to settle for a union which is unhappy, empty or destructive. Divorce frees them to find a better alternative.

Are prospects bleak for the family of the future? On the contrary, Glasser predicts that it will emerge a somewhat different but closer unit in the face of high pressured social change. Advances in communication and transportation are already rebuilding the extended family relationship. Visiting patterns are strongly family oriented, he says, and it is a little-known but well-documented fact that one out of every three persons over 65 is living with their children.

"The family of the future will tend to choose to have two or fewer children both for environmental and economic reasons. If the population is divided into five income levels, one can see that the proportion of money earned by each group has changed little in the past 15 years. Therefore reducing the family size may be the only way of increasing its standard of living."

"But the family will not return to the patriarchal stereotype of the past," Glasser concludes. "It will be an egalitarian unit with increasingly less differentiation of sex roles. With more women in the labor market, more men will have to take up the slack with family tasks, engendering more shared responsibilities and experiences."

"The family of the future will look and act different from the family of today but will continue to serve its members and society in the way only a small, flexible and adaptable social institution can."

Minor mishaps investigated

Cass City Police investigated two minor accidents.

Fran Szychulski of Hartzell Road, Owendale, received minor injuries when the car she was a passenger in struck a vehicle driven by Albert Joseph Bennett, 6253 Main St., Cass City, backing out of a parking place on Seeger Street. Neither Bennett, nor Simon Chester Szychulski, the driver of the other vehicle, was injured. Police reports state neither saw the other, when the accident occurred at 9:30 a. m. Saturday.

In another mishap, cars driven by Wanalee Marie Hartel, 2092 W. Huron Line Road, Ulysses, and Herman Krause of South Seeger St., Cass City, backed into each other in the alley behind Coach Light Pharmacy. There were no injuries in the 1:25 p. m. accident Wednesday, April 19.

Hills and Dales receives federal disaster supplies

Hills and Dales Hospital received $2000 worth of disaster supplies recently under a federal program.

The supplies are free from the federal government and are given to the hospital for emergency disaster use.

Administrator Byron Landholt explained that the hospital occasionally receives a delivery. This shipment consisted mostly of drugs and dressings which are to be used with the normal inventory on a daily basis.

The program is designed to increase the reserve of medical supplies needed for a disaster in a community over and above those that would be normally maintained.

Results are what you expect--consequences are what you get.

Rust of caution destroys more men than the attrition of action.

DADDY! look at the pencil!

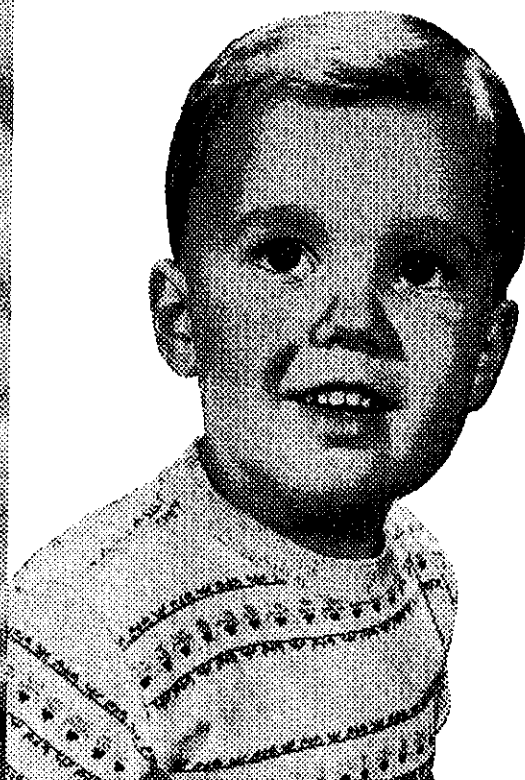

It was his first trip to Washington. He was only six. Everything had to be analyzed by the standards of a first-grader!

Tell him it's the Washington Monument... he still thinks of it as "The Pencil." Time for his parents to learn a lesson:

Suppose he had never seen a pencil. What would it have meant to him then? Probably nothing!

A child needs standards by which to measure all he encounters. The standards may be simple—but he uses them. With them he associates the things he wants to remember.

The Church provides your child with simple religious standards. He still needs your help to grasp the truth he must master. But the standards you and he learn at Church are the foundation of his character... the inspiration of your own. In his terms: the pencil with which tomorrow is written.

Net income for the quarter ended March 31 increased from $1.37 per share in 1971 to $1.53 this year, a gain of 16¢ per share, resulting from a net return for the period of slightly over $100,000. Total deposits rose over $6 million for the period, up over 19%, and enabling the bank to achieve a new high of nearly $38 million in deposits and advancing total assets to nearly $43 million. Deposit growth was spread over all offices of the bank, with increases ranging from 14% to 24.5%, the largest gain was in the Cassville office. Bad Axe rose 18.4%, Elkhart 23.5%, and Kilde 20.1%. BETTER HEALTH

Help for varicose veins

BY DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

Many persons, probably more women than men, have varicose (dilated) veins in their legs. In many persons this does little, if any, harm. But in other cases the inner lining of the dilated veins can become so inflamed that the person will suffer pain in the big veins. Also, in some cases the blood will clot in a vein. Then the person is likely to have a swollen ankle for the rest of her (or his) days.

In many cases, my impression has been strong that a particular woman's dilated and tortuous veins were inherited from her mother. I have a letter from a woman who says, "My daughter of 19 already has the family's big leg veins."

In many a case, a woman with big dilated veins will say, "Those enlarged when I was pregnant, and my mother said I had a 'milk leg,' which is a layman's term for phlebitis (PHLEB meaning vein, and -ITIS meaning inflammation). This happens when the growing womb of the pregnant woman presses on the vein in the pelvis, causing the thigh and leg veins to enlarge and perhaps get infected."

Often, the so-called superficial veins will enlarge because the valves in the veins -- which help the blood run up the leg against the force of gravity -- have become dilated and inefficient.

What is the treatment? Wearing a strong elastic stocking can help; also sleeping with the foot of the bed raised six inches or more. I sleep each night with a sofa pillow placed under the foot of my bed. My ankle, which by the end of the day is often swollen from a phlebitis, is almost back to normal size in the morning.

Some expert vein surgeons advise operating early to take out the dilated and inflamed and perhaps partially plugged-up veins. That causes the blood to go up through the veins that run deep down between the muscles of the legs and thigh. However, thousands of people live comfortably with the big veins.

Some surgeons do the "stripping operation," in which small cuts are made here and there in the skin of the affected leg. Through these cuts, a tiny metal loop on the end of a long, strong wire, is passed over the distended vein, either downward or upward, until it becomes separated from its branches and the tissues around it. When the vein has been freed, it is tied off and removed through a little cut in the skin. Also, the big saphenous vein in the groin is dissected out and tied off. This is essential if the result is to be good.

After a stripping operation, the large veins may come back. Some veins not much enlarged at the time may later become enlarged. Also, because the person is lying down on the table during the operation, his dilated veins may empty out so much that they cannot be recognized. Therefore, the surgeon has the person stand, and then marks all of the poorly functioning veins with a skin dye.

Diarrheas can be due to a number of causes. Many people get diarrhea because of an allergic sensitivity to some food. By keeping a diary of unusual foods eaten before a spell of diarrhea, they may find the food that is at fault.

First, one must find out exactly what the patient means by diarrhea. Nervous diarrhea often runs in families. Characteristic of nervous diarrhea is the story that occasionally, when the patient goes into a panic, he has to rush to the toilet. In some cases, the panic is due to the person's fear that he is going insane. In other cases, in which diarrhea comes in spells lasting only a day or two, an allergic cause should be looked for. Diarrhea that wakes the person at night is more likely to be due to an organic than to a psychic cause. If the diarrhea has been present for years without pulling the patient down, it is likely to be functional in type.

In some countries in which the water supply is not well supervised, there are epidemics of cholera and dysentery. The main symptom of these diseases is diarrhea. In some countries many diarrheas are due to amebas, microscopic single-celled animals. They can easily be killed with medicine. There is a violent form of "travelers' diarrhea," or "turista," which usually lasts for only one night and is due to a virus. There are epidemics of brief diarrhea which often seem to be due to an influenza virus. I remember when a third of the nurses in a big hospital had a day of severe diarrhea.

I once had a female patient with an "incurable diarrhea." It was cured overnight when I found that it had started the day she adopted the fad of drinking eight glasses of water a day. It stopped when I got her to give up her habit.

In many cases of diarrhea, it is hard to find any disease in the bowel.

Dr. Alvarez gives you more information on varicose veins in his detailed booklet. If you would like to learn more about the causes of this common condition and also about surgical treatment send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for "Varicose Veins." Arrest 3 for Deford break-in

Philip Thayer of Caro entered a plea of guilty to a reduced charge of attempted malicious destruction of property over $100 Tuesday after the defense presented two witnesses at his trial for malicious destruction over $100.

Sentencing is scheduled for May 30.

Thayer was arrested for the Dec. 24, 1971, damage done to a Caro home when it was hit by a car.

No exam date has been set for Gares Sanchez, 17, of Bay Port who appeared before District Court Judge Richard Kern Monday on charges of breaking and entering the Deford Grocery Store located on Deckerville Road.

Sanchez and two Pigeon area juveniles were taken into custody early Sunday morning after they were halted by Kendall Miracle, owner of the store.

According to Tuscola county deputies, Miracle called the sheriff's office at 2:55 a. m. to report a break-in in progress. The youths fled while he was calling, but armed with a pistol, the store owner called for them to halt and fired a warning shot into the floor.

Two of the boys stopped, but a third kept running. He later returned to an apparent get away car, where Miracle held them at gun point until deputies arrived.

Entry was gained by kicking the door in, deputies said. Miracle told them $87.45 worth of cigarettes and foods was missing.

The juveniles will be cited into Huron County Juvenile Court. Sanchez was released on $750 bond.

The arraignment of Glen M. Miracle, 21, of 6458 Garfield St., Cass City, was adjourned two weeks when he appeared on a charge of possession of marijuana. Miracle was arrested Friday in Cass City.

Randy Edward Dohring, 25, of Gagetown, pleaded guilty to a charge of driving with his license suspended following arrest Friday. He was given fine and costs of $50 and three days in jail.

INSTRUCTIONS in planting are given by Harry Little who donated the fruit trees to the schools in the Cass City system. (See story page 1)

REHEARSING THE first death scene in the Cass City High School Play are the cast of "Ten Little Indians," a suspense-filled murder mystery by Agatha Christie, which will be performed at the High School Cafetorium Friday and Saturday evening.

Ex-deputy seeks $5000 back pay

No action was taken by the Tuscola County Board of Commissioners regarding a letter from the state labor board requesting they pay a former deputy sheriff back pay and attorney fees totaling $5000.

The letter, dated April 20, requested action within ten days.

"Our action was no action," said Ed Golding, district 2 representative.

The request was made by Hyman Parker, director of the Employment Relations Commission, on behalf of Hilton Saries, a deputy who was discharged from the county sheriff's department Oct. 16, 1967, for failing to perform his duty.

The labor board said then he had to be reinstated, but the deputy was taken off the road and made turn-key, which he wouldn't accept.

In other action, District Court Judge Richard Kern introduced Duane Harder of Sebawaing to the board, who has been working in the county one day a week with alcoholic cases that come before the court.

His services are gratis to the county, said Golding, explaining that the man worked out of the probation department.

All three county judges have expressed concern over the number of drinking cases that come before them.

County Sheriff Hugh Marr reported to the commissioners that applications for a county-wide radio system are prepared and ready to be sent to the Office of Criminal Justice in Lansing.

The three-channel radios will cost the county $10,000 and the combined cost to the villages is $35,127. This is only one-fourth of the total cost. The state funds the rest.

Cass City is participating in the project at a cost to the village of $6863.

A representative of a Toledo, Ohio, firm informed the board that they were equipped to do the work for the county to meet the July 1, 1973, deadline for a solid waste disposal system. Golding said a 1971 act requires a county-wide program, but that the individual landfills already in operation by various villages would be included. No cost estimate was given.

Another visitor to the board was Hilton Tibbitts, a Lapeer county commissioner, who reported his county's experience with a study to re-evaluate position classifications and salaries of county workers. Golding indicated that Tuscola county is considering this move, which may cost several thousand dollars. Nothing definite was decided.

The commissioners voted to raise the salary of Equalization Director Mac O'Dell from $8,085 per year to $10,500 effective immediately in a special meeting held April 12. The commissioners also agreed to allocate $12,000 for his salary in next year's budget. The original request was $12,000.

A certified assessor to assist O'Dell in the equalization department was also approved, to be hired as soon as possible.

Deering wins

tractor contest

David Deering, a senior at Cass City High School, will represent the Cass City FFA Chapter at the state tractor operator contest Saturday to be held at Michigan State University.

Deering won first place in the farm equipment safety unit at the high school. All local vocational agriculture students participated. Each class, after completing 3-4 hours of classroom instruction, was given an opportunity to test skills as a tractor operator.

A course was staked out and the students matched skills as they backed a two-wheel trailer through an obstacle course. Points were deducted for errors, including course stakes knocked out of line, turning too short and fouling equipment, inches off center for trailer placement in a stated area and driving safety.

A very close second to Deering was Carl Russell. Third place went to Jesse Zimba and fourth to Tom Meliendorf.

Tractors for the contest were furnished by Darrin Implement, Marshall Implement and Rabi-deau Motors.

TRACTOR DRIVING WINNER Dave Deering backed his way to victory at the high school vocational agriculture tractor operating contest to win first place.

COUNCIL MEET

be put on each end of the walkway so it could be locked at night, but the council thought this might be an invitation to more trouble and directed the police department to concentrate on the area for the next several weeks to see if they could curb the situation.

In a report by Dr. D. E. Rawson the park committee updated the council on the progress of purchasing the Orr East Addition. The application for $16,500 of land and water conservation funds has been sent to the federal government. A decision is expected by mid-May. A 90-day purchase extension until July 11 was granted to the village by the heirs of Morton Orr, Rawson noted.

In other action, the council passed a resolution directing the village assessor to establish an assessment district for West Street from Pine to Garfield so that steps can begin for installation of curb and gutter. The residents will pay 100 per cent of the cost.

The past procedure has been to seek a petition from residents involved, village president Lambert Althaver explained. The law requires the special district and provides that the assessor should spread the assessment over the roll. The date for construction to begin is still not settled.

The council also moved to spend up to $4000 for a study of removal of phosphates and waste-water treatment plant expansion to determine the ability of the present system to meet the standards necessary in a few years.

Also approved was $1500 to dig a second sanitary landfill trench.

A bid of $10.20 per ton for 720 tons of asphalt for the paving of Garfield Street was accepted from Frank Strausberg and Son, Saginaw. The total for the paving will be $7344. Last year the per ton cost was $9.85. This was the sole bid.

A bid for $100 was accepted from Ed Bergman Jr. for the removal of the Michigan Bean Coal Building which is near the railroad track at what will be the Atrain site.

PROPOSAL CLEAR

Members of the State Board of Canvassers are hoping the public won't feel any confusion over the issue of daylight savings time this November. They think the wording they have adopted for the ballot proposal should keep it clear.

The board came in for some flack in 1968 after DST lost by less than 500 votes. Backers of DST claimed the board had confused the people with the way they worded the proposal.

It is the board's responsibility to devise the description of every ballot proposal and put that description on the ballot rather than the actual proposal. When voters look at the DST portion of their ballot in November, this is what they will see:

PROPOSAL A

PROPOSAL TO CHANGE MICHIGAN TODAYLIGHT SAVINGS TIME

The proposed law would change Michigan to Daylight Savings Time from the last Sunday in April until the last Sunday in October of each year. Should this proposed law be approved?

Yes _____

No _____

DELAY NOTED

Even the simplest things can get bogged down when they get into the Legislature.

For instance, there is the resolution passed by the House recently declaring the week of March 26 - April 1 as "Week of Concern for Prisoners of War and Missing in Action." The House approved it April 12.

RAIN quickly boosted the Cass River to the flood stage recently as the river overflowed its banks at several locations. Where the river runs next to Elmwood Road was one of the spots where the river rose over its normal banks. As quickly as it rose, the river receded and was well within its banks the next day.

Michigan Mirror

Income tax payers spent $1.5 million obtaining forms

Government seems capable of devising ever new ways to bug the average citizen.

One of the latest examples of this is the decision by the state treasurer's office the past two years not to mail state income tax returns to individual income taxpayers. In both 1971 and this year, it was decided to "save" $100,000 and make the 3.3 million people who pay income taxes walk or drive to a local bank or state office to pick up a return form. To force him to do this is a little like sending a child for a stick to be used for a whipping. Since tax forms are not readily available, several trips were sometimes required. If we compute the extra trouble in time, parking meter money and inconvenience at 50 cents each, the collective cost exceeds a million and a half dollars.

Surely taxpayers would rather be charged an extra 25 cents and have the forms sent to their homes.

It's ironic, though, that while the state was "saving" postage on tax forms last year, members of the Legislature had just finished spending several times that much on postage during 1970.

Even more ironically, more than half of the legislators' postage bills came in the months before elections.

It does seem the state could afford a few postage stamps to make the paying of taxes a little easier, or at least arrange to enclose political campaign material with the tax notices, thus economizing for the taxpayer's convenience.

TAXES JUMP

While on the subject of taxes, state and local tax collections jumped over the $100 billion mark in this country for the first time last year.

When Dec. 31 arrived, tabulations now show, the 50 states and their cities, counties, school districts and other subdivisions had collected a total of $100.7 billion from their residents. It marked a $9.1 billion leap over calendar 1970. Of this total, states collected $54.1 billion, a rise of $4.9 billion from 1970. Local taxes were up $4.2 billion to $46.6 billion.

A breakdown shows property taxes are still by far the biggest revenue producers for local units. Last year they raised $41.3 billion dollars, or 10.1 per cent more.

Sales taxes remain the second biggest revenue raiser at the state and local level as they raised $19 billion in 1971, a rise of $2 billion from the previous year.

The biggest percentage-wise gain was posted by state income taxes on individuals, which produced 14 per cent more revenue than in the previous year, a total of $12.7 billion.

Seek 2 extension agents for Huron, Tuscola, Sanilac

A proposal for two Multi-County Agriculture Extension Agents has been submitted to the Tuscola, Sanilac and Huron County Board of Commissioners. Michigan State University stands ready to pay the salaries of the two new positions with the counties to finance the office and travel expenses.

No three adjoining counties in Michigan produce the dollar-volume of farm products that Huron, Tuscola and Sanilac do. Together they account for more than 10% of the State's total agricultural output. Fewer than 5% of the Michigan Extension Agents working in the agricultural sector are presently headquartered in Bad Axe, Caro or Sandusky.

According to the 1969 Census of Agriculture, farmers of Huron, Tuscola and Sanilac counties sold nearly $100,000,000 worth of products produced on their farms.

It is proposed that the two new Multi-County Agent positions for the three-county area be specialized in the following program:

1. A specialized Ag Agent to work with the bean growers of the three counties on production and marketing problems. It is essential that such a man have training and experience in the production field, but he should also be familiar enough with marketing principles to be able to properly integrate the production-marketing function. He would probably be housed in the Tuscola County Extension Office.

2. A specialized Livestock Agent to work with beef, swine and sheep producers of the three counties on production and marketing problems. He would probably be headquartered in the Huron County Extension Office.

Beans are Tuscola county's number one crop and bean growers are experiencing a yield decline during the last few years. There has never been a State Bean Specialist to work with beans and many farmers believe help is needed in cultural practices and marketing of dry beans, states Bill Bortel, Tuscola County Extension Director.

A plea of innocent was entered Monday for Dan Anger, 28, of Caro when he was arraigned on three counts of conspiracy in connection with the March 11 theft of a $15,000 farm tractor from Gettel Implement Co., Pigeon.

Anger stood mute to the charges when he appeared before Tuscola County Circuit Court Judge Norman Baguley. Anger is charged with furnishing the truck and trailer for transporting the tractor.

Caro man pleads innocent to conspiracy charge

Conrad Mosack, 33, of Gagetown, is also wanted for conspiracy in the theft, but is still at large.

The tractor theft was discovered when the truck and trailer were involved in an accident which claimed the lives of an elderly Unionville couple.

A pre-trial conference is scheduled for May 8. Bond was reduced to $750.

The arraignment of Charles E. Gladden Jr. of Munger, was continued two weeks when he appeared for arraignment of larceny over $100. Gladden is charged with the April 9 theft of a tandem-type 4-place Ski Kart owned by Bader Brothers Implement Co. of Reese. He is free on a personal recognizance bond.

The trial of Amandress Williams and Alfred Murphy, both of Vassar, ended after one day Wednesday, April 19, when both were proclaimed not guilty of the charge of attempted larceny from a person.

The trial was held before Judge James Churchill. Both were charged with the attempted theft of a billfold containing $420 from Clifford Vaughn Dec. 7, 1971, as he was walking to work.

MEA post for Millington prof

Richard Ross of Millington was elected last week end to a position on the Michigan Education Association Local Affiliates Commission by delegates to the MEA Representative Assembly.

Ross is a social studies teacher at the Millington Community High School. He has served as President of the Millington Education Association and as Spokesman for the Association's Negotiation Committee. Last year he was President of the Tuscola County District of the MEA, and he has recently served on an ad hoc committee of the MEA studying possible uses of the MEA Conference Center located at St. Marys Lake. He has been active for a number of years in the affairs of the Education Association at the local, county, and regional levels.

Carelessness and accidents, motorists, are identical twins.

AROUND THE FARM

Farm legislation

by William Bortel

Have we taken time to read and understand the bills affecting agriculture in our state legislature? Do we know what's in the Governor's special report on "Land Use"? These bills are rather critical to agriculture and with the farmer numbers declining, this leaves it up to the remaining few to stand up to be heard.

There is a House Bill 4948 which would place all drain activities by individuals and drainage districts into the hands of the Department of Natural Resources. What would the farmer do if the bill is passed? Mr. Farmer would have to receive a permit and a fee to clean out, tile into and other changes in ditches and any water body with water movement. Also, farm ponds with an inlet or outlet would be affected. This could have a tremendous effect on the good Tuscola county farms as we tile the soils for better drainage.

An expanding population has put pressure and demand for increased residential, industrial and commercial land. The realization that this land is often provided at the expense of good agricultural, recreational and other open-space land has focused increased attention on our land use. There is only so much land and we must put it to the best use. The governor appointed a Special Commission on Land Use to look at the role of land use policies in determining the quality of life passed on to future generations. What's in the report for agriculture? 1. The Commission recommends that the state develop and implement a comprehensive land management program. 2. It is recommended that our present property tax law be modified to reflect use-value assessment rather than potential value assessment. 3. It is recommended that there be a shift from local property taxes as the major source of local government revenue.

These issues are important to agriculture and we should continue to stay abreast of all bills, issues, reports, etc., affecting agriculture in Tuscola county.

Hawks open Thumb B title chase with 7-6 decision over Caro

For at least a week the Cass City Red Hawks have shared the top rung in the embryo Thumb B Conference baseball race.

The Hawks mounted their lofty perch with a narrow 7-6 victory over Caro Thursday at Cass City Recreational Park. The Hawks' next Conference tilt is at Frankenmuth Thursday.

In their only league game of the season, Cass City exploded at the plate and then hung on for the victory in the final frames.

Gene Salas and Henry Cooklin blasted out two hits apiece and knocked in two runs each with timely blows while Scott Hartel chipped in with a single that drove across another pair.

Meanwhile, the best Caro could do off the slants of Fred Harbec was a run in the first and a run in the fourth inning and Cass City had what seemed to be a comfortable lead, 7-2.

But the roof caved in on Harbec as he tired in the fifth and the Tigers scored three times to move into contention. Pete Frederick took over on the mound and was able to stem the tide although he was touched for a run in the sixth and had some anxious moments in the final inning.

It would appear as if Cass City will need to score runs this season if they are to be a factor in the League race.

In the past three seasons, Cass City depended on strong pitching to pull through.

This year, hitting and defense will be required. The pitching should be adequate, but not awesome as it was last season.

WIN EXHIBITION

The Cass City Red Hawks spotted tough Akron-Fairgrove four runs in the second inning and then clawed their way back for an uphill victory in a non-conference exhibition played Tuesday at Cass City Recreational Park.

Coach Fred Hurlburt took a look at various hurlers and may have come up with part of the answer to his pitching problem.

Freshman Jerry Toner pitched in his first varsity game Tuesday and to say he was effective understates the case. The rookie hurler came on in the third inning after Fred Harbec left with a sore arm and his replacements were touched for a couple of more runs, and didn't allow another run the rest of the game.

Meanwhile, his teammates found the range to chip away at the lead. They missed golden opportunities in the second and third innings when the bases were loaded with one out, but were able to push just one run across.

The margin was closed to one run when Don Galbraith, in a season long slump, broke out of it with a long distance home run with a mate on base. The ball landed on the track in back of the ball diamond.

With this impetus, the Hawks combined hits and bunts for three more runs in the following innings to salt away the victory, 6-4.

Hawk thinclads bow to Vassar

Vassar broke out of the pack in the 10th event in a triangular track meet last Wednesday to defeat Cass City and Bad Axe at Cass City Recreational Park. The Vulcans won six straight events to win. The scores were Vassar, 77 1/2; Cass City, 39 1/3, and Bad Axe, 39 1/3. Cass City took first places in the mile as Curt Strickland posted a 4:48.8 and in the 100-yard dash as Luma ran the distance in 16.7.

ST. LOUIS RELAYS

Cass City's track team won points in one event in the St. Louis Relays Saturday. The distance medley team finished third. Running were Kip Hopper, Curt Strickland, Steve Selby and Tim Stickle.

Junior High tops Vassar

While Vassar was winning a high school meet last week the Hawk Junior High showed the varsity how it should have been done by posting a lopsided decision over Vassar Tuesday, 92-35.

Cass City won every event except the mile and swept the long jump, and 100-yard dash events.

The Hawks had four double winners in the meet. Englehart won the long jump and 60-yard dash. Pena captured the shot put and 60-yard high hurdles and Schweikart won the high jump and the 440-yard run. Posluszny won the 100-yard low hurdles and 220-yard dash.

Other winners for Cass City were Windy, tied for first in the pole vault; Hillaker, 75-yard dash; Diaz, 880-yard run; Sherman copped the 100-yard dash and Cass City won the 880 relay with Hillaker, Englehart, Pena and Sherman running.

Little League Sign-up Friday

The annual sign-up for Little League, Minor League and T-Ball has been scheduled for Friday at 7 p. m. at the Cass City Intermediate School, J. D. Alexander, president, announced this week.

All boys who will be 7 to 12 years old on Aug. 1 who live in the Cass City School District are eligible to sign.

Boys should be accompanied by an adult and there is a $2 fee per boy for insurance. A maximum of $5 per family can be charged if there are more than 2 boys from a family in the program.

At the organizational meeting held recently, J. D. Alexander was elected to replace retiring president Jim Johnson. Mark Tuckey was named Minor League commissioner. Tuckey said that managers and coaches for the Minors are needed and asks that volunteers contact him or sign up at Friday's meeting.

An over-all manager for the T-ball league is also needed.
