Republicans were grinning slyly this week at the fledgling (in Cass City) Democratic party's effort for a rally.

They were pleased when Dave Bing failed to show and local Democrats were targets of friendly jibes all week.

Still, for veterans of the political scene here it must have been astounding that there could be a Democratic rally in a Democratic headquarters in the village.

The local party stalwarts said Leo Maki appeared before the that upwards of 200 showed at board to discuss the pressure the rally, coming and going created on the court system in

The county's share of the comprehensive plan study is $3500, Golding said. He added that he was not in favor of discontinuing the plan in the first vote. This plan will be completed in 2 years and is necessary for any local government unit to receive federal funding. The solid waste plan can be done by either county planners, Vilican-Leman, or by the East Central Michigan Economic Development District.

The decision is expected to be made at the next regular meeting.

The board also heard a request from the Department of Social Services for more room. With a total of 28 employees, Golding said, the new building which the county is purchasing is too small,

Crouse said that he felt it was the teacher's responsibility to discuss with the superintendent any job changes requested.

Communication was a big topic in an otherwise mundane meeting.

Supt. Crouse presented a copy of a news letter printed by Caro High School as a method of communicating with district members.

The discussion indicated that there may be a blanket broadcast of the four-page flyer to every home in the district. Crouse said that the postage cost to taxpayers would be 1.7 cents per copy.

In Caro a teacher has been removed from the classroom to handle this "letter" and related duties, Crouse said.

The board instructed the superintendent to investigate the Caro High School operation. All information for the letter would be prepared by school officials.

A resident of Evergreen township who refused to be identified appeared at the meeting and told President Arthur Severance that her complaints about buses operating with children standing had been satisfied.

She said that two Evergreen buses had been overloaded with as many as 11 students standing for at least four miles.

OTHER BUSINESS

Principal Russell Richards presented a tentative program for adult education that will offer auto mechanics, bridge, dancing, sewing, bookkeeping, gymnastics, macrame, judo, typing, slimnastics and humanities. Classes with enough members joining are slated to start Oct. 2.

The board okayed $50 for meat for the teachers' picnic and tabled a request for a cook for the football team meals on game nights after Athletic Director Robert Stickle said that he felt that Coach Roland Pakonen had solved the problem with a committee of mothers to do the work.

Supt. Crouse was told to get estimates from Williamson Brothers for repairing the road that runs north of the Intermediate School.

The repair contemplated would be from the west side of the Intermediate building past the Willis Campbell Elementary School.

Lynn Albee, a spectator, said that he felt that school playground areas between the Intermediate and Elementary Schools should be blacktopped

prices at school

The planned deficit in the school lunch program at Cass City Public Schools could be slightly larger than anticipated. The price of meals for fifth and sixth grade students in the Intermediate building has been reduced from 45 to 40 cents.

All Intermediate school students were charged the higher rate in previous years because it had been impossible to separate them in the lunch line, Supt. Donald Crouse told the beard.

Now that the Intermediate cafeteria is in operation the school is able to charge all elementary students at the same rate (40 cents).

200 at Dem open house

Democratic party workers were enthused this week by the estimated 200 persons who attended the grand opening of the party headquarters on Main Street in Cass City Sunday. The enthusiasm was only slightly dampened by the failure of celebrity guest Dave Bing, Detroit Piston basketball star, to make a scheduled appearance.

Dick Erla, chairman, said that Bing was unable to leave basketball training camp.

when they discovered that the the past month. feature attraction was missing.

That's more than they had in Saginaw, Fred Leeson said proudly this week.

Now a headquarters doesn't a viable party organization make. . .and most observers are a long ways from being convinced that any startling changes are in the wind this election year.

We just can't see, for instance, how a Democrat can be elected to any county-wide office in Tuscola county or carry the county on the state and national level.

On the other hand it appears certain that the Democrats are stronger here than ever before.

And that's not all bad. I've always thought that a strong 2-party system operates in favor of the average Joe more than one where the voting is strictly a formality.

The more removed from close contact with the people, the more important it becomes. In a village election chances are most of us will vote for the man regardless of the party affiliation. After all we know him.

But if he lives in Millington and runs for a county office the party label is apt to be decisive.

Results indicate that election Ξ to a county office is practically a sinecure in the Upper Thumb. Incumbents are rarely defeated and rarely have inter-party competition. It's the same situation in reverse that the electors have in Democratic Detroit.

In pivotal areas office holders must remember that come election day they probably will face strong competition. It's impossible to say that this results in better representative government.

There's no doubt that many excellent office holders lose out and many incompetents don't.

The thought here is that the advantages of party competition outweigh the disadvantages.

But don't look for it in the immediate future in the Thumb.

This is still GOP country, podner.

Judge Kern explained that his court is now backlogged with trial cases until the second week in November. The reasons are the increased number of drunk driving arrests and the elimination by the prosecuting attorney of reducing charges to obtain a guilty plea, the judge said. Neither Maki nor Assistant Prosecutor George Holmes was available for comment. This has resulted in a large number of innocent pleas. "The only statistic I've got," the judge said, "is that up to Aug. 1, there were 61 arrests for driving under the influence." In the month of August there were 33 arrests.

Only one day a week is assigned for criminal trials, and usually two cases are scheduled for each day. Judge Kern said that he is going to expand trial days to Friday, which has been set aside for preliminary examinations in felony criminal matters. The preliminary exams will be held after the trials are held as long as the court personnel can hold up under that pressure, he stated. In the magistrate's office, the number of tickets has increased greatly, too. District 2 Commissioner Edward Golding Sr., to be before the age of 45.

Cass City, said the board was told that in June 130 tickets were processed. In August the number was 665. Kern said that each week there are enough innocent pleas entered to make up another month of trials. He added that the backlog is only in criminal cases, not ordinance or civil matters.

This backlog affects all criminal matters, however, including felony cases. "If the people of this county want an up to date court, they're either going to have to have another judge, another court or bargain pleas," Kern said. Golding related that Prosecuting Attorney Maki told the

"The Army almost rescued me and gave me orders to Korea," joked Anker, but the couple were married six weeks before he left. The Korean conflict had officially been finished since 1953, but two years later when Anker was there, he still carried a loaded .45 handgun whenever he went outside the perimeter.

A "true Army brat" and well steeped in the nomadic tradition of moving wherever duty called, Mrs. Anker joined her husband in Japan where he was next stationed. Their oldest son, Dean, now 15, was born there. Anker was also promoted to Captain.

BACK TO WEST POINT

The next major stopping point in his Army career was in 1958 when he was recalled to teach engineering surveying, map reading and geography at West Point. He taught for three years and said that just when he was leaving, a major curriculum revision was begun. The changes in the military academy were to up date the college with civilian standards and strictly military professional subjects were taken out of the academic schedule and put into tactical training. "It was rough," said Anker when he was there, and things hadn't changed. Now as the military has become "today's Army", even the West Point cadets get a vacation at Christmas. When Anker attended he said he didn't get a leave until one year of classes were over.

Anker. He said he received a call just after one young man left the base that his father was critically ill. They looked all over for him, but when the serviceman returned Monday to report for duty, his father had already died.

Another restriction was the 300-mile limit on passes. Now they get calls from recruits like one who said he'd been stranded in Chicago in a snow storm. "They always come back," Anker said, "But not in a timely manner."

As far as dress styles go, he said, the Army has always tried to keep in step with current trends. Now longer hair is permitted, too.

Red tape has been shortened, he commented. When he was at Fort Bliss during the days of "white sidewalls" meaning no sideburns, one recruit insisted on painting his in with shoe polish.

This particular young man never did anything particularly bad, he just wasn't Army material, said Anker, and he tried to have the young soldier discharged.

The straw that broke the camel's back was when the is.' soldier decided to get rid of an ant hill in a lawn he was tending by pouring gasoline on it and igniting it. It took about 8 months to get rid of the guy, while now it would take only two weeks, said Anker.

TOURS WESTERN EUROPE

His daughter Norma, 13, and another son, Charles, 12, were born while he was teaching. The two following years were spent in Germany where he was promoted to the rank of major and his third son, George, was born.

His job was to know the strength of all combat units stationed in Germany, but the European assignment also offered his family an opportunity

"I think we saw every zoo in Europe," laughed Mrs. Anker. They traveled all over, always taking the children with them.

While in Italy they didn't get an audience with the Pope because he was in India, but they did see Nikita Khrushchev, then premier of the U.S.S.R., in Copenhagen, Denmark.

While they were stationed there, the standard joke was how terrible the German drivers were.

"The only place we almost had an accident was in Sweden, and it was a German driver." they both chuckled. As a top military officer, Anker was often called away from his family on business. "And nothing ever happened until the men walked out of the house," stated his wife. The kids had measles while he was in Paris, and the house they were staying in was painted while he was in England.

VIETNAM COMBAT

The nearest Anker came to actual combat was while he was stationed in the central highlands of Vietnam in 1968. As inspector general of the Fourth Infantry, Lt. Col. Anker was "close enough to know what it Occasionally the base was bombarded by rockets and several instances of infiltration by the North Vietnamese Army into the base occurred resulting in blown up artillery pieces, he said.

Commenting on the much talked about drug problem, Anker said marijuana was used by some of the men, and if they were caught it was an automatic court martial.

He said he has no objection to the now acceptable conscientious objector status but does not condone soldiers going AWOL or draft dodging. If it would work, he'd like an all volunteer Army. His last post assignment was at Fort Sill, Okla., the same post Concluded on page 3.

Pat went to the restroom, thus giving me a chance to explain her conduct to the children. It had been quite a dinner. . . 6 courses: appetizers, soup, salad, stuffed pancakes, the main course, sherbert and coffee. Notice that salad was number 3: The idea is to eat one course at a time, with the waiter removing the remains of the previous course before bringing the next one.

Pat's problem is that she wants to keep her salad throughout the entire dinner and she is afraid the hired help doesn't understand this. At some point in her early childhood she was badly scarred by a graspy waitress. Little Pat's chopped garden with French dressing disappeared half eaten, and then the prime rib never materialized. She went to bed hungry that night and had nightmares about sneaky waiters, stolen Roquefort and starving children in China. She awoke shook but determined. She vowed to never again part with her salad until after At the Steering Wheel that night, every time a restaurant employee neared out table, Pat's arm encircled her salad and she automatically said those now familiar words: "I'd like to keep my salad, please." Before that long meal was over, everyone in the restaurant knew Pat wanted to keep her salad. When the piano player asked for requests, Pat requested that she be allowed to keep her salad. And he sang it for her.

The doorman went into the middle of the boulevard and warned traffic to keep moving and stay away from Pat's salad. The bartender became so concerned he tried to call a policeman to stand guard. But you can never find a policeman when you need one in Detroit... Anyway, that's how it went. And I was glad when Pat went to the ladies room, so I could explain her phobia to the kids.

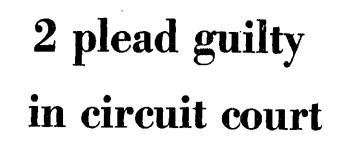

They looked at her with more understanding when she returned to the table and took her salad out of her purse and resumed eating it.

The facility will be open Saturday, Sept. 16, but could be closed indefinitely after Saturday depending on tests now under study by the State. Borings of the ground have been taken to test the drainage. What the State insists upon is that waste will not drain through the soil into the water table.

If the tests prove satisfactory the dump will be able to operate as a sanitary landfill but there will undoubtedly be an added cost for township residents.

It appears that taxpayers will be willing to pay to keep the facility operating, Dorland said.

Needed will be a large trench and a person with a bulldozer to cover the refuse.

Evergreen's problem is not unique. Nearly all other townships are facing it and it is likely that townships will combine facilities to meet the State's requirements and keep costs within reach.

Fashion isn't the exclusive province of the young. Attractive clothes can add dignity, self-confidence and social enjoyment for the elderly. As men and women grow older, their clothing needs change. Sheriff deputies probe 3 thefts

John Popa, 1706 Montague Road, Wilmot, reported Saturday that his car had been stripped sometime during the night. A 12-volt battery, a carburetor and generator were taken from his 1959 Pontiac, he told Tuscola county sheriff's deputies.

Mrs. Jeanette Dawson, 4845 Kingston Road, Kingston, reported the theft of $80. The money was taken from her kitchen table sometime during the day of Aug. 28 while the family was away.

The theft of a stereo with speakers, a portable television. a spring board and a quantity of candy was reported taken from the Center for Relanded Chil unearth a minuscule portion of the mammoth skeleton that was excavated near here. The director said anybody could help because he needed volunteers, even after I warned him I was terribly clumsy and demonstrated my abilities by leaping (I slipped) into the test pit and almost landed on a portion of skull bone I was to help dig out.

I arrived on a Saturday morning full of energy and took my place with several other women. We used paring knives, ice picks and paint brushes to chip away at the bone, which was very fragile and looked more like a piece of wood than any bone I've ever seen. I guess that's a product of old age, which may be why my bones The weather has been against the whole project and like it did during most of the dig, it started to rain. Not only was it wet, it was cold. But we diligent workers, sacrificing our sinuses, bundled in sweaters and sitting in the drizzle, gossiped and likened ourselves to pigs wallowing in 20,000 year sold clay. There's something about helping unearth a real honest antique animal that makes one lose your senses.

What impressed me most about this dig was that everybody was so friendly and helpful. We just kept chipping away. Meanwhile, the men were digging in a new test pit and everytime they'd grunt, we'd run over to see if they found anything. They'd tell us to keep sitting, which was just a gentle way of telling us to stay out of the way, I think, Just about everything is done now at the site. The tusk has been removed from the pit, and the site will be leveled. Even though it was a little disappointing that more of the skeleton wasn't unearthed, the excavation was rewarding in

I also talked with the director of the project, Don Weston, and he told me that of the evidence of 175 mastodons and 35 mammoths uncovered in Michigan, this is one of five controlled digs to unearth their remains.

And judging from how he described the other digs, it's been one of the most controlled, meaning that much evidence has been extracted from those cold, slimy pits.

Controlled means that samples of bone have been properly prepared for carbon-14 dating which will determine how old it is; samples of the wood fragments have been collected for specific identification; soil samples have been collected from six different levels, which when identified by a soil expert shows the time sequences of the earth's action.

Pollen samples were also collected from somewhere down there, which will enable an archaeologist to date back the environment of the area, and Weston said that he found some suspicious looking rocks in the area of the bones that might relate some human activity to the animal.

That is still speculative, but if an authority confirms the find. it's another important relationship to try to rebuild the past of this area.

To some interested only in finding old pieces of bone, this probably isn't really exciting, but this is the sort of work that is the important stuff.

The amateur archaeologists that dig randomly for things just to make a collection of artifacts are the bane of a true archaeologist's existence. And it's simply because they don't keep accurate records of where their treasures are found.

These are called "potter" by the pros, and they're not very well liked.

That's my way of trying to tell anyone who finds something of historical value to call help using the word archaeologist. More people are happy that way and much more can be learned about our past. Meow.

Who pays for living expenses (elsewhere) while they repair your home?

Most policies provide the coverages you expect - fire, lightning, storms, riots, vandalism and the like. They cover the cost of repairs due to these losses. But have you thought about the cost of living elsewhere if your home has to be repaired or rebuilt? It could run into hundreds of dollars. Or, it could be covered in black and white in our Homeowners Policy, so we would pay those extra living expenses! Give us a call. We'll put your home insurance all together in one policy for convenience and saving's sake.

The only thing that can be done well in a hurry is nothing.

A new publication has been released to describe the current situation and trends in U.S. Agriculture. Individual chapters discuss the factors that will influence its future organization of production and sketch some of the alternatives and conse-

Many farm operators are expressing increasing concern over the possible future direction of agriculture. Their concerns are primarily related to what might be classed as (1) the rapidly increasing size of farms and (2) the pressure for coordination of agricultural production by forces outside of farming. Naturally technological developments have influenced both these developments.

Farm operators are undoubtedly concerned with just the trend toward increased farm size even if there were no pressures for increased coordination from outside agriculture. Similarly, they would be concerned with the pressure for increased coordination of production with other steps in the food chain even if there were no increases in farm size. However, producers are faced with a combination of these two tem. developments.

While the labor force per farm has remained essentially the same, productivity per worker has increased substantially. This has come about through the use of larger machines, higher-yielding crop varieties and increased efficiencies in animal production. Unless present policies are substantially altered, very few logical reasons can be advanced to predict that the forces now in motion in agriculture will subside in the near future. In fact, some scientists believe that new technology in farming will be adopted at an even faster rate in the next two decades. Most of these new developments, like many in the past, will require increased size, more capital and more sophisticated management. As all of these forces converge, it becomes more difficult for an individual to become established and compete successfully in commercial farming. Some family-owned partnerships and corporations and a number of sole proprietorships will be able to control the resources needed to organize an efficient farm business operation for some time to come. However, the problems of settling estates where large amounts of capital and high estate taxes are involved and the inability of some families to work together in solving the intergeneration transfer of farm units will gradually work to the advantage of largerscale, less family-oriented, entrepreneurial control of agricultural output. The forces imposed from the processing, marketing and distribution section will also further this trend, particularly for those farm commodities that are important components of an integrated food production-market-service system In the final analysis, the public at large also has an interest in who will control U.S. agriculture. The public interest may focus more on philosophic and social values rather than on economic ones because abun-

women convene

The United Methodist Women convened their fall session of monthly meetings Tuesday evening, Sept. 5, at Trinity United Methodist Church. Mrs. Edwin Fritz and Mrs. Howard Bacon, with members of group II, served a 6:30 supper.

An impressive memorial service built around the beauty of a red rose was conducted by Mrs. Ed Baker for Mrs. Margaret Haire.

Mrs. Clare Carpenter presented the devotion-program using the topic, Developing Human Relations by showing concern for others:

A pledge service was led by Mrs. William Profit, using The Bread of God as her theme. Breaking a loaf of bread into sections, she explained how each represented the proportionate share of expenses in the national division to which the local society contributes. Members were reminded of the Port Huron District Fall Conference scheduled for Oct.

The Rev. Elizabeth Isaacs announced plans for the Lay Witness Mission which will be held at Trinity United Methodist church Oct. 13-15. A team of 20-30 people, from all walks of life, will share concerning ex-

School attendance shows little change

Unofficial school attendance figures show a decrease in the number of students attending schools in the Cass City School System by 3.

Official census figures are not taken until the last Friday of September, which are used for state aid purposes, but unofficial figures put the total number of students at 2008. A comparison of this year's unofficial figures with last year's official figures are:

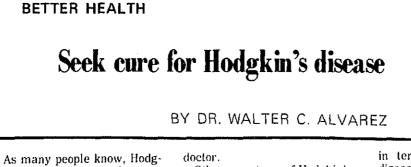

Evergreen, 152, down 2; Deford, 152, down 2; Campbell, 553, down 23; Intermediate 571. down 3, and high school, 580, up collision with a car driven by Sharon Anne Evans, 33, 4292 West St., Cass City. Neither she nor a passenger in her car, Mrs. Harold Evans, 66, Clawson, was injured.

The accident occurred at 4 p.m. at the intersection of Main and West Streets. According to Cass City police reports, the Evans vehicle was northbound on West Street, stopped at the intersection, but didn't see the cyclist headed east on Main Street as she started across. Police are still investigating the accident.

Gary Franklin Kivel, 24, 4312 Oak St., Cass City, was dis-charged from Hills and Dales Hospital Monday where he was treated for injuries received in a motorcycle accident Sunday at 1:50 p.m.

According to Tuscola county sheriff's reports, Kivel was going down a trail in a gravel pit off Kelly Road, when he came upon a large drop off, left the bike in mid-air and landed under the cycle. No injuries were received in a two car mishap Sunday when cars driven by Wilma Hazel Dillon, 64, 2010 E. Dickerson Road, Unionville, and John Clifford Brewton, 18, 6305 W. Main St., Cass City, collided. According to Cass City police reports, Mrs. Dillon was going north towards Hill Street and crossing Church when her car collided with Brewton, who was westbound on Church Street. Brewton told police he thought the other car had stopped. Mrs. Dillon was ticketed for failing to yield the right of way. In another accident Friday at 8 p.m., a car driven by Frank John Stema, 72, Rossman Road, Kingston, hit the left rear wheel

Cass City and eight other exchanges served by the Cass City business office became a part of the Imlay City district when the company's former 29-district state operation was consolidated into 12 larger districts to provide more efficient customer service. The consolidated districts, which range in size from 25,000 to 70,000 telephones, are headed by a district manager who is responsible for all phases of telephone service in the district, but also include management personnel at present district, business office, or service office sites with the specific responsibility for customer service in

service office supervisor, will be responsible for all customer contacts made through the Imlay City service office and for supervision of the work force assigned to that office. Included is the responsibility for processing service orders, clearing trouble, maintaining customer records and implementing the company's role as a corporate citizen in the exchange communities of Almont, Brown City, Capac, Dryden, Imlay City and Metamora. Buttery was active in the Cass City community, serving as a member of Rotary, the Cass City Hospital Board and the Chamber of Commerce. He was also treasurer of the Elkland

TAX-PAYING parents want High School Principals to be administrative educators, not purchasing agents.

You do not go to school to buy jewelry. Schools should not sell jewelry!

SHOP AND COMPARE Local high school vs. local tax-paying jewelry merchants

Shop your local jewelers and you will better understand why your best value is with your local jeweler.

Term Contract Purchase Agreements are worthless.

It is the contention of the government attorneys that the use of "Term Contract" in connection with the sale of high school rings constitute an unfair method of competition in violation of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission.

Hawks first to test Patriots in grid opener at Unionville Friday

The Cass City Red Hawks open the 1972 grid season Friday at Unionville in a game that will mark the first time in history that Unionville-Sebewaing have played together. Although the schools have been merged for several seasons they have played separate schedules. Because of this the Patriots will be a question mark team. According to Coach Eric Wild the 44-man squad has good size but may lack quickness. Several 200-plus pounders are on the squad. Linemen Brad Haist, Tom Betson, Dan Diehl and Ted Balzer have been impressive and Roger Vermeersch has been a pleasant surprise, Coach Wild said. Coach Roland Pakonen said that a scrimmage Friday with
