

FROM THE

Editor's Corner

I believe, I believe.
I believe Leonard Woodcock, UAW president, when he says that the wage price control is a political ploy and that cars are sure to rise in price after the election.
I believe that car manufacturers (the big 3) could get by without the price jumps requested.
I believe labor is crying wolf when really it never had it so good.
I believe that I'm getting more and more cynical as the years fleet by.
Now that may be age or it may be a realistic approach to the affairs of the day.

You don't have to be an Einstein to know that the rhetoric that comes floating over the communication media doesn't really mean what it says.
You can almost see the guiding hands of the public relations experts and the advertising people behind it.

Large corporations and politicians no longer tell it like they think it is.
With a stack of opinion polls on one side and a PR man on the other our leaders, business and political, today are telling it like the people want to hear it.

The only trouble: you can't fool all of the people all of the time and our credibility gap is widening.

It's not as sophisticated on the local level but it's the same ball game here in the minor leagues.

Our county and village representatives put their best foot forward and any reporter will tell you that forcing information uncomplimentary or detributional to a pet local project is an unpleasant, if not impossible, task.

I've often wondered what might happen if a disputed issue were fairly and reasonably presented what the reaction would be.

Probably not good. We've been propagandized so much and so often than any announcement is automatically suspect.

If Woodcock says labor is victimized only members of the UAW really believe. If management says profits are sagging and higher prices are essential only stockholders really believe.

Most of us shrug our shoulders, throw up our hands, turn on the television and watch "Gun-smoke".

Ah... Matt Dillon, now there's a guy that tells it like it is. I believe. I believe.

STATE SEN. ALVIN DEGROW, left, and Sen. Gordon Rockwell listen to testimony concerning a controversial soil erosion and sedimentation control bill at a senate hearing Thursday, Sept. 14, at Caro.

Who to make the rules major issue of soil erosion bill hearing

Who will write the rules and what those rules will be were the major issues brought before a senate hearing Thursday morning, Sept. 14, when testimony from area officials was heard concerning a controversial state soil erosion and sedimentation control bill affecting drainage and run-off problems.

The hearing was held at the Wilbur Memorial 4-B building at the Caro fairgrounds with approximately 35 persons attending. The fourth of five hearings on the bill was chaired by Sen. Gordon Rockwell (R-Mt. Morris), chairman of the Senate Committee on Conservation. Sen. Alvin Degrow (R-Pigeon) was also present. It was at his request that the hearing be held in this area. The other three hearings have been held on the western side of the state.

The majority of those testifying agreed with the bill in principle. The bill under consideration is revised House Bill No. 4709 which is designed to place state limitations on land use to control soil erosion and water pollution due to sedimentation.

The all inclusive bill seeks control over developments that cause erosion "including but not limited to a subdivision and other residential development, an industrial and commercial development, private and public highway and local road and street construction, logging operations, agricultural practices and mining."

This bill, a substitute bill that was passed narrowly by the house, provides that the Water Resources Commission, a division of the Department of Natural Resources (DNR), will prepare the rules and distribute them to local agencies for enforcement. Specific limitations are not written into the bill.

The feelings of many testifiers was summed up by Claude A. Stewart, Lapeer County Drain Commissioner.

"In principle I agree. It's the implementation I fear," he stated emphatically. He questioned how much control would be placed on landowners, what are the rules to be formulated and how would enforcement be implemented, and whether or not those dependent on soil for their livelihoods would be able to continue that pursuit.

He strongly opposed having the rules made solely by the Water Resources Commission and wanted the Department of Agriculture and the Soil Resource Commission to have a hand in it.

"The rules should be adopted by a majority of these agencies," Stewart said.

Robert M. Tusk, Huron County Highway Engineer and deputy drain commissioner for the Huron County Road Commission, reiterated Stewart's opinions. He added that drainage with no pollution can be accomplished by using techniques such as seeding of drain side slopes to insure a ground cover and no wash out into the drainage ditch.

In the upper Saginaw Valley, drainage goes hand and hand with agriculture, he said.

A third person to express fears of having the DNR write the rules was Walter Wood, commissioner of the Sanilac Conservation District. He told the hearing committee that the DNR is not concerned with the farmer's plight and wants the Department of Agriculture to have some control over the writing of the rules.

Others voicing concern on behalf of farmers were Gerald Elenbaum, representing the Huron County Farm Bureau, and Loren Armbruster, speaking for Sugar Beet growers.

"The only thing that we're concerned about in this bill is who's going to write the rules," said Elenbaum. "I think the agriculture department is the place for it."

Armbruster said he was against the DNR enacting controls over farmland. He added that sugar beets are grown primarily on lands that require drainage.

"We believe we should have some right to discharge our water," he stated, whether it be surface or tile drainage.

The original bill provided for major rolls by both the Department of Agriculture and the Water Resources Commission.

Robert Wellington, Tuscola County Highway Engineer, opposed passage of the bill as being impractical although he said he agreed in principle with erosion control.

He voiced the opinion that after the law is passed, the restrictions will be too strict and a permit will be needed for something as ordinary as cleaning culverts.

"I wonder if everyone concerned can really comprehend the volume of paper work," he stated, or the increase in cost to the state.

He opposed the bill but added that if it were enacted, he was in favor of having one agency, the Water Resources Commission, in control of the enforcement.

Protection costs rise

Double townships' fire stand-by fees

Contracts doubling the stand-by fee for fire protection are being signed by all townships served by the Elkland Township Fire Department.

A charge of $40 per section for 1 1/2 years starting July 1, 1972, and extending to Dec. 31, 1973, has been agreed to by the surrounding townships in order that the operating expenses of the fire department do not have to come from the general fund of Elkland township. The $20 yearly fee had been charged for 3 years.

Last year a total of $4400 was transferred from the general operating fund to the fire department fund to meet the total expense for the fiscal year March 1971 to March 1972 of $10,296.50.

An increased fee was assessed to try to make the fire department pay its own expenses and to have other townships share in the burden of operating the department.

The total fee that will be received from 162 sections served is $6,480, but this amount will not pay the total operating expenses, said Elkland township supervisor Maynard McConkey. Costs rise every year and will include new costs this year due to maintenance of the new fire hall.

The figure of $100 per section was discussed at the spring annual township meeting, but a meeting a little later with all the townships showed this to be too sharp an increase without any notice to include it in their budgets, explained McConkey.

Some townships are hit hard by the increase, such as Greenleaf township in Sanilac county, which will seek approval of one mill in the next election to pay for the fire protection costs. Other townships affected are Elmwood, Ellington, Novesta, Grant, Evergreen and parts of Lamotte, Sheridan, Kingston and Wells.

"It's a costly item and a great service to other townships," said McConkey. Even with the increase stand by fees, he said that in the near future, Elkland township residents may be asked to vote one mill solely for expenses of the fire department. Currently, Elkland residents are paying for the new fire hall.

The construction of the new fire hall was also a consideration in the rate raise. General operating expenses such as insurance and heating will increase, costs which the village paid previously when the department was in the old village-owned building.

Besides the current expenses, McConkey said, the township is trying to develop a sinking fund because new equipment will be needed in the future to replace the trucks the township now owns.

Pharmacist lives for today, not past

By Kit McMillion

Leaning back in an easy chair with his long legs propped up on a hassock, Lou Williams looks you in the eye and says he doesn't live in the past but looks for the future and lives for the present.

A copy of the Sunday edition of the Washington Post rests among other papers in the still slightly cluttered trailer house he calls his "in shack," the mark of a man who has come out of retirement twice because he's too interested in living to quit.

Williams arrived in Cass City about a month ago to take over duties as the hospital pharmacist in the mornings and work in one of the local drug stores afternoons.

No ordinary pharmacist, he's registered to practice in four states: Michigan, Alaska, Louisiana, and Nevada. "Just in case I want to practice there," he explained.

He opted for a job in Cass City over a big Detroit hospital and Norfolk, Va., because he wanted to do something different. "And the time to do it, is when you want to, I find," he stated.

Through circumstances not always under his control, Williams has spent a lifetime doing things differently, taking him all over the country, and doing it when he wanted to if he had a choice. His first of many jobs in a varied career began in the small Michigan town of Ewart where he did most of his growing up. He needed money, he said, and a boy looking for jobs couldn't be too picky, so he worked for the shoe store, the hardware store, the meat market and the undertaker.

That last job didn't last too long, chuckled the reminiscent Williams, "after seeing how nervous the undertaker got when he watched me put in seven pounds of plaster of Paris in a guy's head that got hit by a train."

In his next employment with the local drug store, he discovered why it was always so clean. He also developed an interest in medicine.

A career as a doctor was thwarted by the depression of the thirties, so he settled for pharmacy and began working his way through college.

As a student at Ferris College he worked in the Big Rapids city hospital, which at that time was small and not well staffed.

His education was broadened one night during a blizzard snow storm when the county farm burned to the ground and every one else was busy taking care of the injured, and he delivered his first baby, alone, at the age of 19.

"Being the only man there, you did everything," he said, "and pray that the doctor would come." The doctor finally arrived to congratulate him and

THOSE FEET may get tired after these two young men run the 10-mile Little Brothers Walk-a-thon Saturday. Al Romig, left, and Tim Stickle, are among approximately 50 young persons from Cass City who will participate in the Big Brother's fund raising event.

2 will run Walk for Little Brothers

Two local teens are going to run the 10 mile Walk for Little Brothers Saturday.

Tim Stickle and Al Romig, both high school seniors, are among an estimated 50 students from Cass City who will participate in the fund raising event for the Big Brothers of Tuscola County.

The event is sponsored by the Big Brothers, a non-profit organization whose purpose is to organize a group of mature men under professional leadership to interest themselves individually in the general good and welfare of boys between the ages of 8 and 17.

Stickle, who goes out for track, said he was asked to run by the JayCees. Romig said he was running with him to keep Stickle company.

The walk is hoped to raise $6000 for the Big Brothers, which will be matched by federal funds of $18,000.

A program to solicit walkers among young persons was made throughout school systems, although anyone can walk. Those under twelve must be accompanied by an adult and those under 18 must have written approval of parent or guardian.

Registration is from 8:30 to 12:30 p.m. Saturday at the Steel Shelter on Park Street at the Caro Fairgrounds, where the walkers will begin their hike.

Check points are at the 2, 5, 8 and 10 mile marks along the path in and near Caro. Sheriff patrols will also be stationed along the route in case help is needed.

Walkers have been soliciting sponsors who pledge to donate a certain amount of money for each mile walked. Details are available at the high school principal's office or by phoning 673-4141.

If the $6000 goal is met, a starting program of 40 boys as little brothers will be initiated this fall, with more added as the program grows, said Jim MacTavish, one of the local coordinators.

"If It Fitz . . ."The Munich murders

BY JIM FITZGERALD

I was in Munich in the wake of the terror. That is, I wasn't there when the Jews were murdered, but I arrived soon after. I walked around the business district. I can't speak German so I sought out other Americans. I wanted to know how they felt about the awful things that had happened. They were as stunned as I was about the killing of the Jews. The most common comment was: "I just can't believe it happened."

A friend of mine could speak some German. He asked a shopkeeper and one of his customers, a fat woman, about the killings. They also expressed shock and dismay. "I am surprised that such a thing could happen in a civilized world," the German woman said.

Throughout Munich's business district, it was much the same. There were a lot of people in the streets, but not much noise. Nobody was saying much, but somehow it was easy to see that everyone was thinking the same thing: This is bad, so bad . . .

A couple of us bumbled aside to 9 miles outside the city, where the worst of it had happened. We didn't expect to see much. Everything was still fenced off, with lots of guards and guns. The truth, I guess, is just that we wanted to be able to go home and say: "Yes, I was there. I saw where some of those poor Jews were killed."

That's human nature. People want to see where awful things happened. They walk around Civil War battlefields, and buy souvenirs. They go to Dallas and point at the Texas School Book Depository building.

"This place will become a tourist attraction overnight," my friend in Munich said.

We pressed closer to the fenced-off area and caught the attention of a guard. It's a grisly thing to admit, but we hoped maybe he'd been around for some of the killing. Maybe he'd seen something exciting, or maybe he'd even been involved.

But no. He said he didn't know anything about the killing of the Jews. He looked as dismayed and subdued as everyone else.

I didn't stay in Munich long but I'll never forget the day I was there, after the terror. I was a member of the 12th Armored Division, stationed not far away in a town called Hiedenheim. Some of us had hitchhiked over mostly to see a concentration camp in a Munich suburb called Dachau. It was a sunny day in May, 1945. 27 years before the 1972 Olympics in Munich.

Progress. Between Hitler's murders and the Olympic murders, we went to the moon. But we haven't gotten anywhere at all.

Still seek state corrections facility for women prisoners

One need remains dramatically unfulfilled despite all the building the state has done in recent years.

Michigan has no facility to house women prisoners. Instead, it pays the city of Detroit $9.50 a day per prisoner so the city can keep about 250 women convicts now in state custody in the Detroit House of Corrections, known as DeHoCo.

For years, state corrections officials have argued for a state owned facility for women prisoners.

Construction actually began on a facility for women back in the 1920's in Meridian township east of Lansing. Progress only reached the point that a foundation was built.

Then the legislature decided it didn't have the money to finish it and the foundation was all that was ever completed. One reason for the lack of a women's facility is the relatively small number of women convicts.

There are more than 9,500 men in the various state correctional institutions now, compared to the 250 or so women. This might result because women are more law abiding or because judges are more tender with what used to be known as the weaker sex.

One sparkplug for a suitable state institution for women is Mrs. Florence Crane, chairman of the Michigan Corrections Commission.

"The history of this state's plan to build a facility for women state prisoners has been one of indecision and expediency in spite of the long-demonstrated need for such an institution," she states.

Mrs. Crane says Michigan has "largely ignored the needs of female prisoners for more than a century."

"If there is any validity to the alarmed cries today for prison reform, then this project—which has been high on our priority list for many years—deserves immediate attention and adequate financing now," she continues.

"Our desire is not simply to build an attractive new facility in which we would just be able to house state women prisoners, but to begin to fulfill our long-ignored responsibility to such prisoners in terms of progress, rehabilitation, and providing the same kinds of correctional assistance which is now available to male inmates."

The Corrections Department already has a good idea what it needs if the money becomes available.

Few women prisoners need maximum security detention. As a result, the department recommends a fenced facility with single story cottages and room for counseling, dining and other daytime activities.

A general education program would be operated in conjunction with the local school district. Courses would involve both general education and business skills such as typing and shorthand. College courses might become available.

Such a facility would give the department a much better chance to serve as a corrections department, rather than a custodial department.

DRIVERS HELPED

One innovation established by Secretary of State Richard H. Austin since he took office in 1971 is the opening of several Driver Improvement Safety Centers.

The Centers are designed to work with problem drivers and try to improve their conduct on the roads. The first Centers were opened in Detroit and Pontiac last year. Two more were opened in August at Grand Rapids and Flint.

They offer complete counseling, testing, retraining and driver safety education services for the problem driver. Since many problem drivers are also problem drinkers, each staff includes an alcohol analyst and driver improvement workers.

The problem drivers include people who have 12 or more points for traffic violations and convictions; probationary drivers who continue to have violations; drivers with three negligent accidents within two years; drivers involved in fatal accidents; and people with physical problems.

Group conferences are held with problem drivers in some cases, and individual conferences are held in other instances.

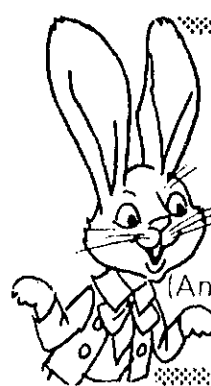

The Centers also provide follow-up examinations, road tests, vision screening and referrals when necessary, so that the driver can have other kinds of help.

It may not be glamorous work, but Secretary of State Richard H. Austin firmly believes it is an effective way to reduce death toll on our highways.

George Maleck receives M.A. from C.M.U.

George Maleck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Maleck, 6361 Fourth St., Cass City, was awarded a master of arts degree in history following the summer session at Central Michigan University, Mt. Pleasant.

He has been employed with the Vassar Public Schools since 1965, when he earned his bachelor of arts degree from Michigan State University, East Lansing.

By John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help)

It's been a normal week at the Chronicle. A letter arrived blasting me for editorializing the school news. Another arrived telling that I didn't give the Democratic grand opening enough publicity while another signed only "the Cass City Democratic Headquarters" thanked the Chronicle for the news coverage of the grand opening. Sadly, I can't print it because there is no other signature.

And it's not true that I spent all day Monday looking for someone to sign so I could.

Cass City won fairly easily over Unionville-Sebewaing in the Friday football game, but nobody beat the mosquitoes. They loomed as large at the USA tackles and raised welts among the spectators that made the game a "contact" sport for everyone attending.

Readers of the Chronicle five years or so ago will remember Dr. Marion Hostetter, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Cass City, first, and a writer for the Chronicle, second.

He's still writing (and I suppose preaching). He now is featured in the Leader-Enterprise of Montpelier, Ohio.

I know all this because he sent me a copy in which his regular column appeared together with the first of a feature series that he is authoring.

Dr. Hostetter didn't send it along because of his contributions but rather because he quoted a recent editorial on schools that I had written.

All of which is flattering because Dr. Hostetter is one of the more erudite persons I know.

I've been quoted before, of course, but not always in such a pleasant light.

Oh Hum! It must have been old stuff for Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Maleck of Cass City when their son, George, received his Master's degree in History from Central Michigan University this fall.

After all, receiving a college degree in the Maleck family this year is just par for the course.

George's degree was the fourth, count 'em, fourth in the family in 1972. Thomas received a masters in civil engineering. His wife, Ellen, earned a masters in education.

You can't help wondering if Joan Maleck, the youngest in the family feels positively uneducated. . .she received her bachelor's degree this spring.

It all adds up to a rare and outstanding achievement.

Mrs. Zinnecker entertains WSC

Mrs. John Zinnecker was hostess for the first fall meeting of the Woman's Study Club Tuesday, Sept. 12. Mrs. Esther McCullough, new president, presided.

Secretary Mrs. Ella Croft read a letter from Mrs. Van Blaricom concerning the new home being built for Girlstown. Mrs. Irma Hicks, program chairman, explained the program for the coming year.

Mrs. Eleanor Eicher of Pigeon, state treasurer, spoke on State and General Federation work. She was presented with a gift.

The reception committee served refreshments at the end of the meeting.

Mrs. Bauer lauded for work at Teen Ranch

Nearly 400 attended the annual Teen Ranch Open House Saturday. Guests from across the state commented, "This is a nice place to help boys." Another commented, "It is far more than I expected."

Two guests were honored during the 4 p.m. musical program provided by a music group, "The Connection", currently traveling with Campus Life doing high school assemblies. Mrs. Bessie Johnson of Fremont, and Mrs. Lucile Bauer of Cass City were presented the coveted President's Certificate of Appreciation Award.

Mrs. Johnson provided the initial gift to start the 80' x 88' vocational career training building which houses the mechanics, work shop and recreational center.

The Cass City community, through efforts of Mrs. Bauer, provided nearly all the necessary tools that the boys work with in the career training center.

Deer Hunting format for '72

Michigan's 1972 take of antlerless deer will be held to 9,830 animals, about only one-half of last year's quota, during the Nov. 15-30 firearm deer season. In line with that, only about 43,000 antlerless deer hunting permits are available for the season, covering the 37 shaded areas shown here. Michigan's remaining 61 permanent deer management areas will be limited to bucks-only hunting during the firearm period. Hunters have until October 1 to mail their antlerless permit applications to the Department of Natural Resources. They may pick up application forms when they buy their 1972 firearm deer licenses from local dealers. At the same time, hunters may obtain free copies of Michigan's 1972 Deer and Bear Hunting Guide, which carry instructions for filling out the forms. The only antlerless area that applicants will find on the Upper Peninsula's map for this season is the southern part of Menominee County. Its antlerless quota stands conservatively at 640 animals, with 800 party permits available to groups of 4 hunters. Some 23,000 permits are offered for the northern Lower Peninsula, where the antlerless quota has been cut in half from last season, down to less than 5,000 animals. Sights are set upon taking about 4,200 antlerless deer in southern Michigan this firearm season to minimize that region's toll of car-deer accidents. Some 19,000 permits are being offered in hopes of reaching that harvest.

Space blanket

to campers

One of the most difficult decisions the outdoorsman has to make before setting out to enjoy his favorite pastime is what gear he needs to be adequately equipped without being over-burdened.

Now comes the Space® sportsman's blanket, made from superinsulation material for all-season use.

The same material is used on NASA space flights to protect astronauts and sensitive instruments against extreme temperatures.

It's from Thermos, world famous for vacuum bottles and a wide range of outdoor and camping gear.

Hunter-campers use the sportsman's blanket as a spare blanket, poncho, wind-breaker, ground cloth or duck blind, and its grommeted rustproof corners enable it to be hung up or tied down. Completely waterproof, the blanket has also found great favor among skiers, who stick one in a parka pocket for wind-buffed chair lifts. Snow-mobilists welcome it as a weather cover too.

Come spring, the blanket does not get stored with your skis either. Use it as a cockpit sunshade or rain cover for your boat, a picnic cloth or a beach blanket. Just as its insulating properties keep you warm, they can keep you cool as well.

The 56" x 84" blanket weighs 12 ounces and folds compactly into a convenient carrying pouch. Its versatility makes it indispensable indeed for every outdoorsman.

Outdoor

Lighting a

Very Bright Idea

A number of attractive outdoor lighting systems are on the market today ranging from the soft nostalgic glowing gas light for poolside and driveway to the high-watt crime-deterrent system for discouraging prowlers at night.

Flood lighted gardens and walkways provide "other rooms" for those families who entertain large groups. The brightly illuminated garden and walkway become usable and safe long after sundown.

Landscaping will take on an almost fairy-like beauty with imaginative flood lighting. Thermostats will automatically turn the lights on and off at the hour you dictate relieving you of all worries about wasting electricity or gas.

FROM THE LITTER BOX

Premiering—

By Kit McMillion

The premier showing of my first movie was a complete flop. When I was little I, like every other freckled kid with teeth missing, wanted to be a movie star.

But since no one ever sang 'You ought to be in pictures' to me and my screen tests on the family home flicks were pretty ghastly, I decided I'd rather make movies.

I've always wanted to make a movie. A college roommate and I even started writing a script for filming "our home town" and then we split up to do something more practical, like go to work.

Well, to make a short story long, I finally got a movie camera, projector and screen for a low bargain price during the sidewalk sales last summer. And, everything works.

Sort of. Knowing absolutely zero about movies, I started on the right track by buying the wrong kind of film. Then I tried to find out how to make the thing work. All literature about movies have those cryptic words, "consult your instruction manual."

I mean... bargain movie cameras just don't come with instruction manuals. This one looks like a prototype anyway. So, I experimented with ways to insert the film and figured that since it whirled properly, it must be okay. But as for exposure, back to the old-guessing game.

But wishing and applying a little logic resulted in 50 feet of MY FIRST MOVIE that actually turned out. I mean, it was even in focus.

Or it was after I found the focusing knob on the equally old and control-filled projector I bought. What a bargain, I said to myself when I bought it. Then I found out it didn't have a cord.

The premier was a disaster, however. It took me forever to figure out how to put film in the camera, but even longer to get that projector threaded.

Actually, putting film in is pretty easy. It's making it work the right way that is difficult.

Having never threaded a projector, I tried to remember how the teacher did it when I was in second grade. All I could remember was big loop on the bottom and small loop on the top, or was it the other way around?

So after some experimentation, I got the film moving, but no picture. I finally found the lamp switch, and was greeted by a minuscule picture -- it must have been all of 8x10 inches--out of focus.

The first half of the film was viewed like that while I frantically searched for the focusing knob, and just as I found where it was, part I separated from part II of the film and if you don't think trying to retread it was fun! I'd forgotten how I did it the first time and everything started all over.

Naturally, having seen only a small portion of MY FIRST FILM, I insisted on rerunning it. Except that I couldn't get the thing rewound. Six different attempts and film unrolling all over until I finally figured it out.

Even Andy Worhole and Cecil B. DeMille had to start somewhere.

For my next film I think I'll... Meow.

Don't find fault - until you first find a workable remedy.

Hold rites for M. Holik Sr.

Final services for Mitchell Holik Sr., 75, were scheduled for 1 p.m. Wednesday from the Mizpah Missionary Church with the Rev. Richard Culp, pastor, officiating. Burial was in Elkland cemetery.

Holik died Sunday, Sept. 17, at Hills and Dales Hospital where he had been a patient six weeks. He had been in ill health for the past two years.

BETTER HEALTH

Sex life of women

BY DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

Of all the many books on sex that have come to my desk lately, probably the finest one is "Free and Female: The Sex Life of the Contemporary Woman." The author, Barbara Seaman, is a fine and well-trained writer, who has carefully studied many aspects of the sexual life of women.

Mrs. Seaman tells not only what she has learned from much reading and research, but also what a number of women whom she has questioned have told her about their experiences and opinions on the subject. The result is not a book for the squeamish, and many men may be startled by some of her discoveries about women and sex, but if I had a young son and a young daughter, I would gladly put the book into their hands.

Mrs. Seaman has brought together the studies many students of sex and female psychology have made in recent years. For example, she tells of the studies made in 1957 and 1958, in which embryologists learned that all mammalian embryos are innately female, and that during the first six weeks of development, if the fetus is to develop into a male, certain hormonal changes must take place to transform the fetus.

She quotes Dr. John Money, the great John Hopkins researcher, who said, "Nature simply uses the rule, add androgen (a male hormone) and get a male; do nothing and get a female."

Mrs. Seaman tells us that it is a remarkable and sad fact that a woman rarely tells her husband or lover what caresses she would like, and where she would prefer to be caressed. And very rarely does a man have sense enough to ask his partner how she would like to be caressed, or to tell her what would please him. This would be such a simple way for many couples to have more pleasure, but unfortunately, many people are embarrassed to talk about such things.

Mrs. Seaman tells about the people in the remarkable Polynesian island of Mangala, who make a point of giving their boys an education in how to please a woman sexually, and only when they have learned to do this are they permitted to enter the tribe as men.

In answering the question whether a woman has an orgasm due to stimulation of the clitoris, as well as one due to stimulation of the vagina (a question often debated in sex books), Mrs. Seaman tells of the work of Dr. Michael Daly, a Philadelphia gynecologist. Dr. Daly reported his study of two women in whom the whole clitoris had been surgically removed because of cancer. Both of these women said that they had continued to have orgasms, and just as strong ones as they had had before their operation. Obviously, then, clitoral stimulation is not essential in the production of an orgasm.

Mrs. Seaman went on to say that there are established cases of women in whom an artificial vagina had to be made by a surgeon, because the women were born without any. Some of these women say that they are capable of reaching orgasm. She says also that some women say some of their orgasms are felt deep in the vagina, while others seem to be felt out in the clitoris.

Mrs. Seaman has a very interesting chapter entitled "Liberate Yourself From Your Gynecologist," in which she gives much information about the medical care of women. She says that she has read that in the United States today, 516 hysterectomies are performed each year for every 100,000 women, while in England and Wales, the figure is 213 hysterectomies.

In the New England Journal of Medicine (Jan. 15, 1970), Dr. John P. Bunker, of Stanford, said that in the case of breast operations, there are 278 per 100,000 performed in the United States to 171 per 100,000 in Britain. Mrs. Seaman feels that many such operations on American women are unnecessary -- a point that I have also been making for a number of years.

Mrs. Seaman quotes a remarkable story by Edward M. Brecher, one of the country's best science writers. He told of the great distress that he and his wife experienced when she developed an incurable cancer. The several doctors consulted distressed the Brechers because they would not say the same thing. Some would not mention cancer, which is a bad custom we doctors have.

Finally, Mr. Brecher got an internist to take charge of his wife's case, to coordinate the work of the several specialists and to see to it that the patient was made comfortable, emotionally and physically. Mr. Brecher was grateful to the internist because he would discuss cancer, and also because he treated Mrs. Brecher like the very able and sensible adult that she was. Sometimes the doctor let her talk while he listened. Also he was courteous enough to answer her questions. If he didn't know the answer to a question she asked, he confessed his ignorance, and either looked for the answer in books or consulted a specialist about the question. I much admire that type of doctor.

As Mrs. Seaman says, "A good argument against having a gynecologist as your main doctor is that he may be too busy to give you adequate attention." Unfortunately, there is much truth to her statement. This remarkable book is one that young people would find very helpful and informative. It was published by Coward, McCann, and Geoghegan, 200 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y. 10016. It costs $6.95.

Menopause and hysterectomy are subjects your daughter may have questions about. Dr. Alvarez' booklet "Menopause and Hysterectomy" will provide informative, easy-to-understand answers. For your copy send 25 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request to him at Dept. CCC, Box 957, Des Moines, Iowa 50304.

The first fall meeting of the Gagetown Junior Women's Club was held Monday evening, Sept. 11, at the home of Mrs. Clare Comment.

A new slate of officers was elected to assume office in November. President is Nancy Burrows. The vice-president is Barbara Burdon; secretary, Agnes Meltinger, and treasurer, Donna LaFave.

Plans of activities for the coming year were discussed, including a masquerade and scavenger hunt for the October meeting.

During the summer, the Junior Women's Club purchased and installed two pieces of playground equipment for the Gagetown Community Park.

The club welcomes new members. Anyone interested should contact one of the officers.

It's 1973, and Chevrolet roofs are opening, seats are swiveling, bumpers are retracting, hatches are flipping up.

Did you ever have so much to talk about that you didn't know what to say first?

We're happy to report that's us for 1973. But since everything must begin somewhere...

Isn't it romantic?

You see that rectangle beaming at you from above? That's a moonroof. Not to be confused with a sunroof. (Although many people will undoubtedly be caught using it like one.) A power roof is available on Chevelle and Monte Carlo; a manual one on Nova.

Bumpers are exciting?

This year's are something to get stirred up about. One of our new bumpers, for example, is built around twin hydraulic cylinders. So on minor impact, the whole system retracts to cushion the shock.

It's standard on all big Chevrolet, Chevelle and Monte Carlo

New Nova Hatchback Coupe.

Look what we hatched

You know us for our little Vega Hatchback. Now dependable Nova has one. Which literally makes it half trunk with the backseat down. It's a feature as practical as Nova itself.

We've been thinking about your legs

One of the few things people asked us to improve in our popular Chevelle was leg room in the backseat. Well, your knees will be pleased with the '73s. There's almost 3 1/2 more inches in the sedans.

So what else is new

Naturally this is only a taste of what's new for '73.

Among other things, we're introducing larger gas tanks for longer cruising range, a new Exhaust Gas Recirculation system, a hatchback for wagons, and a highly refined flow-through power ventilation system.

Plus a reading light for front seat passengers, improved suspension systems, engines that give you performance combined with gas economy, reclining seats and scores of dramatic styling changes.

We invite you to see it all at your Chevrolet dealer's.

(above) Caprice Coupe. Our new uppermost Chevrolet. Its luxury, comfort and quiet ride rival the most expensive cars you can buy.

(below) Monte Carlo S Coupe, America's newest road car. With the handling of the finest European cars, and the looks and comfort of an American car.

Permanent wiltling point

By Don Kebler

Poor soil structure, drainage and compaction are well known terms causing poor crop production but permanent wiltling point is not. What is permanent wiltling point, its effects on crop growth and relationship with soil compaction?

A permanent wiltling point of any soil is the amount of moisture in a soil that is unavailable to plant uptake. At this point a plant will wilt and die. This moisture is fixed in a soil and can only be released by evaporation as plant roots can't remove it. Every soil has its individual permanent wiltling point different from any other soil.

Sandy soils have a lower permanent wiltling point than clay but the clay soil contains more moisture at the same wiltling point than sandy soils. In brief, the heavier textured and more compact a soil, the more water it will hold before it releases moisture to a growing plant.

In periods of dry weather and low soil moisture, we see crops on some fields looking more wilted than on other fields. If these plants don't recover and die, the soil has reached its permanent wiltling point.

This physical property of a soil should not be confused with soil water percolation or capillary moisture movement rate and their effects on plant growth. All are different properties which can cause subnormal and adverse effects on plant growth.

While at the permanent wiltling point a plant cannot take water from the soil, capillary moisture movement and percolation rate determines the movement of soil moisture downward and upward in a soil. A slow percolation rate restricts surface and subsurface drainage. Capillary moisture movement rate is determined by the amount of subsurface soil moisture that moves upward from below ground reserves to plant root during a given time.

Poor soil structure, density and compaction cause retard percolation and capillary moisture movements and increase the permanent wiltling point of our soils. These conditions are bad and result in detrimental plant growth properties caused by soils.

To improve percolation and capillary water movement and lower the permanent wiltling point we must reduce soil compaction. We know how to reduce soil compaction by increasing organic matter and humus levels, minimize tillage, land leveling and to some measure by tilling.

So regardless whether crops suffer in dry weather due to a high permanent wiltling point or slow capillary moisture movement rate, or in wet years by poor percolation, soil compaction is the culprit.

As a final remark, I can quote one of my past soil instructors as saying, "be good to your soils and they will be good to you".

Legislators to try again to allow mid-term job changes

Some people just don't know when to take no for an answer. For example, there's the Michigan Legislature. At present members of the legislature are prohibited from running for or being appointed to a state or local office in the middle of their term in the legislature. This means a legislator cannot run for an office such as mayor or be appointed to head a state department.

The prohibition was written into the constitution in an attempt to make sure lawmakers pay attention to their jobs and not use their lawmaking job to create a cushy job for themselves somewhere in state government.

Some legislators, understandably, don't think much of the prohibition. In 1968 they put on the ballot a proposal to repeal it. The proposal lost.

They followed again this year, putting a repealer on the ballot in the May 16 primary. It lost again.

Well, you might say, it's pretty clear the people don't want to give up that particular control on the legislature. The lawmakers will probably wait at least a few more years before trying to do anything about it any more, right? Wrong.

The ballots were scarcely counted when members of the legislature started working on another ballot proposal to wipe out the restriction.

Awaiting action when the lawmakers come back for their fall session is a proposed constitutional amendment which would allow them to run for all other offices in the middle of a term, but would not let them be appointed to a job. If it is approved, it will go on the November ballot.

A prime backer of the new version is Senate Republican Leader Robert Vander Laan of Grand Rapids. He believes voters knocked the proposal down in May because of the appointive provision in it.

"I think a lot of them thought this means some legislators would be involved in political payoff jobs," he said recently. Vander Laan contends the current law is "just plain discriminatory" against legislators.

One of Vander Laan's fellow Republicans, William Ballenger of Ovid, sees the matter differently, however.

"If anything turns off the voters, turns them against us, it is the arrogance we display when we come right back with this after they turned it down," he said. "We reveal a kind of selfish interest when we do this type of thing. It ought to be a long, long time before we go to the voters with this again."

A Democrat who backed the idea of putting the proposal on the ballot again didn't think the appointive part of the amendment had anything to do with its defeat.

"I think there's just an attitude about state legislators that pervades," he said. "Voters just have a bad feeling about us."

NICE PEOPLE

Where can you get the most courteous, prompt, efficient service in state government? The question may be open to argument, but a great case can be built for one particular group: secretaries and staff people for legislators.

For the most part, these are well groomed—often very pretty—bright women of all ages, size, color (and presumably creeds), whose job depends on the job of the boss: a Senator or Representative. And an important aspect of their job is to make the person they work for look as effective as possible.

Legislators are very busy people. But they must be available to their constituents or run the risk of incurring wrath with subsequent loss of votes. The legislator's staff must fill in when the legislator cannot meet these people and this is most of the time.

So the secretary meets you with a smile, explains why the legislator is not available and does her best to help. This might be as simple as taking a message. Often it is not. If information is required, she will

Right contractor key to building

Anyone contemplating a significant outlay of funds for remodeling purposes is understandably apprehensive about the selection of the right contractor.

How do you insure that he is not only capable, but reliable, as well?

Naturally, you will respect the recommendations of your friends who have had similar work done. But in the event that you are unfamiliar with any contractor there are other reliable sources for professional contractors.

For example, the home improvement loan officer at your bank can help. Also, a local building materials dealer is an excellent source.

Perhaps the most reliable sources are local chapters in your city of the National Home Improvement Council, the National Association of Home Builders and the National Remodelers Association. These organizations' recommendations can protect you from the dishonest or unreliable contractor. This is preventative medicine and just good sense.

Once the remodeling project is underway or completed should you be dissatisfied with the work of an unscrupulous contractor, arbitration or litigation could extend for months and even years.

Never was the old adage "Look before you leap" truer than in its reference to the remodeling of your home.

Be prepared when opportunity knocks — remember, the key to success is never hidden under the front door welcome mat.

Mullin appointed sales manager of Walbro Autotherm division

Walbro Corporation has announced the appointment of Roy E. Mullin as Sales Manager of Walbro's new Autotherm Division.

Autotherm is a unique, new catalytic engine heater. Cordless, flameless, it makes electric tank heaters obsolete. This easily installed, precision-engineered heater assures summertime starting in the coldest weather.

Mullin came to Walbro from Eden Industries, Inc. Prior to that association, he was vice-president-marketing with the D. W. Onan Company.

An innovator in his field, Mullin, while at Onan, was instrumental in establishing a Distributor Advisory Council, a new advertising agency, and a fly-in Engineering Seminar for Architects and Engineers. Coupled with his market research program, these accomplishments greatly enhanced company volume and profit.

During his tenure at Onan, Mullin worked personally with key O.E.M. accounts throughout the U.S. and in almost every foreign country. While marketing is his specialty, Mullin also has been involved with engineering, production, personnel, and finance.

Mullin joined Onan after eight years of experience with Napco Industries as vice-president of Sales.

Unlike most state employees, these are not covered by civil service. Logically enough, this results from the knowledge that each legislator should have the prerogative of selecting his own staff people. And since some legislators are not around for many years, the way must be left open for those who hold office.

When one compares the efficiencies and courtesies the public receives from this group, it is easy to wonder if all state government might be improved a great deal if there were much less civil service; or if civil service regulations left much more room for less efficient, less courteous, less considerate government employees to be replaced more easily than at present.

Lutheran youth elect officers

Officers for the Good Shepherd Lutheran Church youth group were elected Sunday evening at the first meeting of the school year.

They are: Molli Butler, president; Steve Selby, vice-president; Deb Selby, secretary; Kris Ridenour, treasurer; and Mari Butler and Sandy Sheldon, Christian growth chairmen.

Following a pizza party in the parsonage basement, the movie, "A Pal for Joey," was shown to encourage members of the youth group to participate in the Walk for Little Brothers Saturday. Nine members of the youth group have signed up to take part in the walk-a-thon.

An October hayride was also planned.

Ministerial group names officers

Ten ministers from Cass City area churches, which includes pastors from Gagetown and Deford, were present Monday morning at a breakfast meeting at Veronica's Restaurant.

Officers elected for the coming year of the Cass City Area Ministerial Association are: president, Rev. James VanDellen; vice-president, Rev. Dale Sherry, and secretary-treasurer, Rev. James Kidney. Emphasis is being placed on the Evangelistic effort of 1973, now being planned.

The next meeting will be a breakfast meeting at the same place Oct. 16.

AGENT'S CORNER

Packing perfect lunches

The carried lunch -- the meal-away-from-home for the working man or woman and the school child -- can give a boost to energy and morale if it is packed to perfection. Flavorful, fresh foods carefully wrapped to protect freshness require a combination of planning and ideas.

A balanced lunch menu would include: a main protein dish, vegetable, fruit, bread, butter and milk drink. How much each person needs of each of these foods will depend upon each person's taste and energy requirements. Also, remember to refrigerate cold foods several hours or the night before your work day. Pre-chilled items are less apt to spoil or lose freshness during at-work storage.

Perhaps barbecues would be a treat. Pack sauce in a wide-mouth vacuum bottle to keep it hot. Wrap buns separately. Then be sure to add a spoon to help spread the sauce on buns at lunchtime.

For school children, spread a generous amount of the filling to the edges of buttered bread to prevent children from readily removing the crust. Cut the sandwich into small sections for easier eating, as well as, to stimulate young appetites.

A calorie-wise lunch might include thin sliced bread, allowing you to add calories and nutrients from other foods. Also, whipped butter or margarine reduces the calorie total 30 per cent yet tastes satisfying. Open faced sandwiches use only one slice of bread cutting bread calories in half. Use lettuce leaves in place of the second slice of bread over the filling. You may find that carrying the filling separately makes your sandwich fresher at lunchtime. Or if you have a broiler available, toast the outside of the sandwich to spark flavor.

FROM THE FILES OF THE CHRONICLE

FIVE YEARS AGO

Cass City Schools will be in the red at the end of the year, according to the budget submitted at the annual meeting at the school.

A practically new $45,000 milk truck crashed through a Sanilac county bridge on Hadley Road. The giant truck was loaded with 28,000 pounds of milk.

Jack McDaniel, 23, is the new office manager at Anrod Screen Cylinder Co., Cass City.

Father Arnold Messing was feted at a farewell open house in the social hall at St. Pancratius Church. He was pastor of the church for seven years.

L. James Bishop, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bishop of Cass City, has accepted a post as Albion College's director of the physical plant.

TEN YEARS AGO

Keith O'Dell has been selected as one of 120 qualified young Americans from all parts of the United States who will serve as teachers in Kenya, Tanganyika, Uganda and Zanzibar in East Africa in a project directed by Teacher's College, Columbia University.

Dean and Dennis Rienstra, twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Rienstra, Cass City, may be the only set of identical twins in the state of Michigan to ever hold the top posts of a DeMolay chapter.

Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Hundley, former pastors of the Assembly of God Church, were week end guests in the Earl Whitaker and Walter Thompson homes.

Fred Walmsley, 23, of Cassville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Walmsley, formerly of Cass City, was graduated from police recruit training in Detroit and is now a member of the Detroit police department.

Three Cass City Explorer Scouts and their advisors were among 90 Michigan Explorer Scouts who spent a three-day encampment at Wurtsmith Air Force Base, Oscoda. Attending from Cass City were Garry Randall, John McIntosh and Allen Milligan and Charles Reed and Carl Reed Jr., both advisors.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Lester Battel had the misfortune to have a foot badly crushed when it was caught between a tractor and attached corn loader. The injury is very painful.

C. U. Brown of Cass City was one of 57 Michigan water works personnel who were awarded the Edward Dunbar Rich Service Award for 25 or more years of service at the annual meeting of the Michigan Section, American Water Works Association.

On Oct. 11, the new state law on drivers' licenses goes into effect. Under it no one under the age of 16 may obtain a driver's license.

Ernest Reagh escaped serious injury when a corn binder which was being loaded, rolled back onto him. He sustained injuries to a hand and a foot.

Mrs. E. B. Schwaderer entertained twelve ladies at luncheon at her home in Cass City for the purpose of reorganizing the Tuscola County Women's Republican Club.

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

The laying of the sewer system in Cass City was completed last week from Cass River to Main Street, a distance of over a mile.

Frank Rennels has a more valid realization of what it means to be buried alive than he did. Employed on the sewer system project, he was held a prisoner when a trench caved in and buried him up to his waistline. Then a large piece of earth tumbled down and hit him on the head.

Sgt. Wiles

returns to U. S.

Staff Sgt. Hazen Wiles, 26, left Tuesday for Altus AFB, Okla., following a brief vacation after returning to the States from Germany.

Nazarene growth counter to trends

Nazarene Information service -- Running strongly counter to trends, the Church of the Nazarene in 1970 had its best year in history in stewardship and church income. Dr. Norman O. Miller, general treasurer, stated.

Of funds handled through his office, Dr. Miller reported 1970 income was a record $11,975,908 -- an increase of $1,143,712 over 1969.

Interest on investments was $1,103,223, he stated, an increase of 42.9 per cent over 1969. This was the first time this source of income exceeded the $1-million mark.

On January 20, the 1970 Thanksgiving offering for world evangelism reached a total of $2,598,779. This was an all-time record for a single offering in the church. It exceeded the previous high in 1969 by $173,297. The goal for the offering was $2,600,000.

In the entire denomination during 1970, giving for all purposes totaled $87,737,626 -- an increase of $5,533,980 over 1969. This boosted per capita giving to a record $221.35 -- an increase of $8.09 over a year ago.

The Church of the Nazarene was organized in 1908 and from its inception has encouraged members to practice tithing, or returning the scriptural tenth of all income to the work of the church. Members also are asked to give offerings above the tithe.

Old Fashioned Fountains Flow With New Decorative Effects

Not so long ago the only people who could boast of a beautiful fountain in their garden were Italian noblemen or wealthy Americans. And today with an awakened interest in conserving water and other resources of nature the old-fashioned fountain would probably be outlawed.

However, a technological breakthrough has provided us with the recirculating water system which makes the concept of a fountain both acceptable from an ecological standpoint and economical, as well.

There are several spots on your property which recommend themselves for fountain placement. The traditional focal point in a formal garden comes immediately to mind. But there are other spots equally suitable. Some people, especially those who entertain frequently, have installed a fountain in the center of their swimming pool. Attractively illuminated at night the fountain creates a dramatic effect.

Those with more moderate acreage have installed fountains in enclosed solariums and exposed patios. The gentle flow of water from a fountain creates a priceless mood which will enhance your living and delight your family and friends.

Enhance Yard Beauty With Colorful Roses

A rose by any other name is still a rose. One of the special joys of springtime is watching flowers bloom in your own backyard.

Of all the flowers, roses furnish a wide variety of hues for pleasant effects. Roses are colorful. They span the spectrum from pure white to deep red velvet.

Many durable hybrids have been developed so even the novice "green thumb" can keep roses blooming from spring through fall.

Pharmacist lives for today

the mother. For a man who lives for the moment, the 63-year-old Williams paused occasionally remembering those early years, starting a little vacantly, with a whimsical smile crossing his face. Relating some of the more romantic-sounding but less appealing jobs he had to keep himself fed when he wasn't in school, Williams reiterated by experience what he voiced verbally:

"When you live in areas, you have to go out and live with the people."

Sometime during the twenties, he related as he skipped over the date, he was an able seaman on the John A. Donalds and Harry R. Jones on the Great Lakes. He worked his way up from deckman to watchman and in the winters went below with the black gang shoveling coal because it was warmer. Even so, he once stood on deck 54 hours as watchman during a sleet storm on Lake Superior.

Another year somewhere between his high schooling and the completion of his pharmacist's training, he spent a year in Canada as a licensed guide. He took people on canoe trips, and lost an eye when he got caught by a fish hook.

During his college years, he couldn't find work during the summer, so he bummed, learning how to relish a hobo sandwich-rye bread with a stick of bologna in it that is easily thrown into a sleeve when a train blasts-and ride the rails.

A man of experience, he explained that the trick in catching a box car was to make a grab for the front ladder. That way, if the force of the moving train flung you off, you were thrown clear and not under the wheels of the car behind.

After he became a registered pharmacist, he worked for a variety of chain and independent drug stores, became sales manager for a wholesale concern and lectured at both Wayne State and University of Michigan in the late thirties and early forties on business management, drug store management and salesmanship.

Then came World War II, and Williams was drafted and rejected as a port captain with the Marines in Africa and was assigned to the Office of Price Administration instead, "which everybody hates," he added.

That took him to Puerto Rico, and when the war was almost over and he was back in Washington, D. C., he became partner in a brokerage business.

"But after sometime in that, I decided I was tired of pushing people in and out of subways." So he went back into the drug store business, working mostly in Michigan, most recently in Lansing.

Without elaborating on his family, Williams said he found time to marry and raise a son and daughter "in between times." His children live on the East Coast now, and his wife died while he was still in Lansing, so he lives alone in the Huntsville Trailer Park where he painted his address sign in day-glo orange to make it look different than the rest of the neighborhood and to please the garbage man who couldn't find where he lived.

Talking about Cass City and small towns in general, and the queries he gets about adjusting to a small town, the well-traveled Williams said:

"My answer to that is there are no small towns. The women read the same magazines. The minis are just as mini and the maxis are just as awful."

He said he likes Cass City because it's friendly and because he can take his time worrying.

"There's just as much to worry about," he commented. "Here you don't have a lot of people pushing you. You can take your own time doing it." "I'm happy because there's only one stoplight," he slyly said.

WORRY WARTS

Some people carry three kinds of trouble—all they have had, all they have now, and all they ever expect to have.

People who live within their income sometimes get used to it.

THREE UNTIMELY BLOSSOMS on this Easter Lily plant were reported by Mrs. Ada Hutchinson Monday. The plant was transplanted into her garden at 6375 Third St., Cass City, and left to grow by itself when it produced this surprise.

Appoint Bortel to study program

William Bortel, Tuscola county extension director, is one of 31 Michigan cooperative extension service employees chosen to participate in the agency's "Quest For Quality" professional improvement program.

The two-year program combines study with travel. Participants will attend three, week-long seminars at Michigan State University during each of the two years. Seminar material will be drawn from political science, economics, sociology, communications, philosophy, history and education. In addition, an in-state study tour will be conducted during the first year.

The Quest For Quality program is funded in part by a grant from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation to Michigan State University's Center for Rural Manpower and Public Affairs. The goals of the program are three-fold:

- 1) To build the understanding of man -- himself, his fellow man, his environment, and his personal and group aspirations.
- 2) To build understanding of the social, economic and political systems in which man functions.
- 3) To build for Extension programs flowing from increased understanding.

Seminars for this year will be held at MSU Oct. 9-13, 1972; March 5-9, 1973; and May 21-25, 1973. A Michigan study tour is scheduled for July.

State police investigate

antiques theft

The theft of nearly $700 worth of antiques from a vacant farm house located at Bad Axe and Holbrook Roads in Greenleaf township, Sanilac county, is still under investigation since it was reported Sunday.

Russell Sils, Port Huron, owner of the building, told state police from the Bad Axe Post, that the theft occurred sometime in the past five weeks. Entry to the building was gained by taking the hinges off one of the doors.

Missing are a 500-piece set of dishes, an antique wheel chair, cherrywood table, table radio, an electric fan, deep fryer and gas range.

Fete new teachers at annual meet

for 92-year-old Mrs. Hrabec

New teachers in the Cass City school system and their families were welcomed at a potluck ham dinner, served at the high school, Tuesday evening.

The annual affair, scheduled for shortly after the opening of school, is sponsored by the teachers' club.

Attending were administrators, teachers, school board members, secretaries, bus drivers and all other employees in the school and their families.

Mrs. Linda Gray, vice-president of the teachers' club was in charge of arrangements.

Folks do most of their worrying over what they suspect, rather than over what they know.

Bureau announces new procedure

License bureau officials at the Tuscola county Sheriff's office this week announced that persons bringing in pre-typed license renewal application forms received through the mail from the secretary of state should not sign their name to the application before coming to the Caro office.

By doing so, the application is voided. An applicant must sign the form in the presence of license bureau personnel.

Persons with birthdays in October are the first to be affected by the recent state procedure.

Sheriff probes Deford home burglary

The breaking and entering of the William Knowlton home at 2095 Phillips Road, Deford, is still under investigation by Tuscola county sheriff's deputies.

Knowlton reported that when he returned home Saturday morning, he found his home ransacked. He had left the building the morning before.

Entry to the building was gained by knocking out the glass in a front window, sher-

Suspect arson in cottage blaze

A fire believed to be arson is under investigation by the state fire marshal from Bay City, who was to investigate the scene Wednesday.

A late Saturday afternoon blaze destroyed a week-end cottage in Sanilac county, four miles east, seven south and 1/2 west of Cass City.

Elkland township firemen, with assistance from Caro, fought three hours in an attempt to control the blaze. The building and contents, valued at $2000, were a total loss, said Fire Chief Dick Root.

The cottage contained plat books and papers and is believed to belong to William Gordon of Detroit.

Last rites today

for 92-year-old Mrs. Hrabec

Mrs. Katherine Hrabec, 92, succumbed Monday, Sept. 18, at the Sherwood Hall Convalescent Home in Oakland county where she had been a patient six weeks.

Mrs. Hrabec was born Nov. 25, 1879, in Czechoslovakia, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Rebeck. She came to the United States 70 years ago.

She was married to Steve Hrabec in Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1912. They moved to the Cass City area 55 years ago.

Surviving are: her husband; three daughters, Mrs. Henry Moser of Berkeley, Mrs. Benjamin Kociel of Madison Hts. and Mrs. Frank Laux of California; three sons, Joe, John and Frank, all of Cass City; 14 grandchildren, and 10 great-grandchildren. Also surviving are a brother and a sister in Czechoslovakia.

Wake services were to be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday at Little's Funeral Home. Requiem mass was scheduled at St. Pancratius church at 11 a.m. Thursday, with Rev. Leo Gengler officiating. Burial will be in Elkland cemetery.

iff's reports stated.

A camera, two shotguns, shells, a tape player, 40 tapes, jewelry and $2000 in cash were taken. Total loss amounts to more than $2600.

Deputies also investigated the Sunday night larceny of approximately $35 in parts taken from a car parked behind the D and M Market on the corner of Colwood Road and M-81.

Mrs. Stanley Hutchinson said a chain fall, two head lights and two tail light kits were stolen from inside the locked car, and a battery was removed from under the hood. Entry was gained through a vent window that was unlocked.

Bring your laundry out in the open

If your laundry appliances are hidden away in the basement or some other inconvenient spot, now is the time to think about bringing them out into the open.

Modern appliances are so nice to look at, it doesn't take much to create an attractive laundry area that will be a decorative asset to your home, according to laundry experts at Sears, Roebuck and Co. All you need are an automatic washer and dryer, five feet of wall space and a few shelves for storing detergent and other additives.

If you can put the appliances near the kitchen, you will save two ways. Installation costs will be lower because plumbing facilities are already available. And, since you spend so much time in the kitchen, you'll save steps every time you wash.

When you're shopping for new laundry appliances, look for the quiet ones. Most American homes are filled with sound, much of it "unwanted" — which is one definition of noise. And a lot of this noise emanates from all those lovely labor-saving devices in the kitchen.

This constant clatter is causing cries for quiet from the homemakers who have to live with it. As a result, engineers are trying to tone down their appliances.

The development of a "quiet pack" on several models of Kenmore automatic washers is an example of this effort. Within the past few years, new methods of measuring sound have been developed. This has enabled engineers to determine exactly where the objectionable noises originated, and to do something about them.

Noise from an automatic washer, most noticeable during high-speed agitation and spin, is caused by vibrations and metal rubbing against metal. By mounting the motor and pulley in rubber and using a belt without cogs, these noises have been reduced by one-third. As a result, the "quiet pack" Kenmore washer is one of the most noise free power-driven appliances in the home.

So, while you're remodeling that laundry area, why not reduce the "noise pollution" in your home, too.

Cass City vied expands student horizons—Dillon

September 13, 1972

Dear John:

I am writing in reference to your editorial involving the new concern for career education. I fully understand that students need exposure to the ideas contained in a study of the fine arts and that such exposure may be a personally enriching experience; I also feel the participation in an overseas exchange program such as you describe may be a valuable educational experience for any student; however, as guidance counselor and co-op director, I feel that exposure to the skills learned in a co-op program may be just as enriching an experience for a large proportion of our students. In Cass City approximately half of our students go on and further their education. This is considerably above the county average of 30 per cent, but this still leaves 50 per cent of the students who will enter the job market. Upon graduation these students usually do not have job entry skills, and many times they find it difficult to obtain jobs.

You mentioned in your editorial that "Little old Cass City High School" has developed a program where students work and go to school. I feel it is much more than your description of our co-op program is to help students expand their horizons by exposing them to as wide a variety of vocational experiences as possible. Participation in the program may challenge students to do their best in mastering such necessary work skills as interviewing for jobs, learning to work with others, and meeting the needs of their employers. In addition, students may be stimulated to think of their future career plans.

I feel that this co-op program is a tremendous opportunity for many students, and already we have over twenty-five taking advantage of it. The businessmen in the area have given excellent cooperation and have willingly accepted the challenge of taking students under the co-op program. Their cooperation has been a big reason for the program's initial success.

If you have an opportunity, I hope you ask both students and sponsors for their reactions to the co-op program.

Sincerely,

Wayne Dillon

Editorialized MacTavish's public service, says reader

September 17, 1972

Dear Mr. Haire:

After reading your news(?) article concerning the Cass City School Board meeting, I have some comments on the reporting. I was in attendance at the meeting, along with at least 12 others.

In regards to your choice of adjectives used to describe the school board meeting, the word, mundane, sent me to the dictionary. World Book Encyclopedia Dictionary defines mundane as "of this world; not of heaven; earthly". I agree with your choice of words. It is nice to know that our school board does not try to overextend its powers during its meetings. Since your article gave such prominence to Mr. MacTavish's claims and editorialized his personal interests (such as, "long record of service in non-paying jobs" and "uniforms he purchased with his own funds"), why did you not also give the school board's position?

According to my notes, the school's lawyer was contacted and it was his opinion that Mr. MacTavish did not have a good case. Also noted was the fact that the 7th grade basketball team had uniforms to use; that Mr. MacTavish purchased these other uniforms, not because there was a need, but because he wanted them.

Another point I question is your paragraph in regards to Trustee Bob Hirm. My notes state that he suggested in the future to try to communicate; not "that the contract squabble could have been averted with better communications between the superintendent and the teacher." Superintendent Crouse has suggested a newsletter to improve communications between the schools and the community. All of us who attended the school board meeting for the past couple of months wholeheartedly support him.

Perhaps it is the only way we can get both sides of the story. The editorialized version of The Chronicle's and the school's version through such a newsletter.

Janet A. Harrison

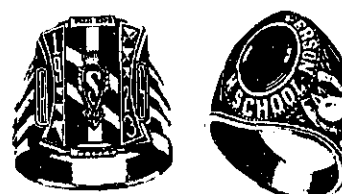

Editor's note: That MacTavish has a long record of public service is a matter of record, not personal opinion. When the uniforms were purchased the school was in the midst of an economy wave, MacTavish says, and there were not enough hand-me-downs for the youngsters to use. The Chronicle suggests that you check your notes with Mr. Hirm to find out what he felt as recorded in the paper.

Incidentally, no place in this article does it say that MacTavish had a winnable legal case... which is probably not the issue anyway, is it?

Certainly, your interest in school affairs is commendable and the Chronicle will be happy to hear your version anytime.

There are three summer seasons - savings, vacation, broke.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

Dear Mister Editor:

Zeke Grubb told the fellers at the country store Saturday night he has studied the situation up one side and down the other, and that this country reminds him of the feller that had been hit by a car and was laying in the street drawing his last breaths. A preacher was called to comfort the dying man, and the preacher bent over him and ask if the pore feller "renounced the devil and all his works." The feller thought it over and said, "at this stage of the game I don't want to make no enemies."

Zeke said it looks to him like this country is having as hard a time as that feller making up her mind which way to go. Furthermore, we can't even tell which way is which, went on Zeke. He said he was of the opinion that holding elections was about like wearing a asseffite bag around yore neck or carrying a four leaf clover in the back of yore watch. We don't know they'll do any good, but we don't know they won't, either.

What got Zeke looking on the dark side of everything was this piece he had saw where we're bringing in pore younguns from other countries to show em our high standard of living, and we're taking younguns in this country on tours of Europe and Africa at taxpayers' expense. Zeke said all that does is git more pore money into the airlines that already is operating with more Government help than we can afford. Zeke said he saw where a antipoverty office in New Jersey spent $60,000 this summer to send pore younguns overseas fer the "valuable experience," and it turned out the average income of the families of them kids was between $10,000 and $15,000 a year.

Actual, declared Zeke, the hole system is feeding off itself, and its bound to eat itself up. If them pore kids from other countries like what they see here, Zeke said, we're supposed to give it to em. Zeke said experience ought to be a good teacher, but we ain't learned a thing from giving money away. All our foreign friends turn on us when the money stops, and it allus winds up Uncle Sam agin everbody. Zeke said its jest as easy to keep that match up without foreign aid as with it.

Ed Doolittle was agreed with Zeke. Ed said he saw where the Department of Health, Education and Welfare had paid $23,000 fer a study on why kids fall off tricycles. All that research done, allowed Ed, was give a good income to some feller with to much education to hold down a job. They ain't no end to the things that can be researched. Ed went on, and the need to research em allus increases according to the money assigned to do it.

Personal, Mister Editor, I ain't surprised at anything that goes on in Washington, but any country that builds sandboxes and fake fireplugs fer pets at interstate highway rest stops can't be all bad.

Yours truly,
Uncle Tim

Are you ready? Friday it's Caro vs. Cass City—need we say more?

CASS CITY'S ground game was sparked by the running of Gene Salas who cracked Unionville-Sebewaing defenses for 107 yards. He picked up 12 of the yards on this play.

The preliminaries are over and the main event begins Friday at Cass City Recreational Park.

It starts when the whistle blows and the Cass City Red Hawks meet head-on with the Caro Tigers in a game that may be decisive in the Thumb B Conference title chase.

The defending champion Tigers proved in the season's opener against Essexville Garber that they are a team to be reckoned with despite the departure of many of last year's outstanding players.

The Hawks proved that pre-season predictions placing them in the thick of the Conference battle were not pie-in-the-sky dreams with a 24-0 decision over the Unionville-Sebewaing Area Schools (USA).

There will be no need to get either of the squads up for this week's game and one of the larger crowds in recent years is predicted.

Certainly Cass City fans are delighted to watch a team with a chance to win it all after a decade and a half of also-ran status.

The unanswered question: is Cass City as good as they looked or was USA weak?

No one really knows the answer now. After Friday everyone will know if the Hawks are for real or not.

Coach Roland Pakonen praised the entire defense for an excellent job against USA. Anytime your defense keeps the other team from scoring you have to be happy with it, he said this week.

Chester Sieradzki, from whom big things were predicted, came through as expected as he was credited with six solo tackles and nine assists.

The offense did its share during the evening piling up 168 yards on the ground and 224 via the airways for a total of 392 yards.

It was the air arm that put the game beyond reach. The Hawks started with a screen pass good for long yardage and scored on a pass from Curt Strickland to Kip Hopper good for 30 yards. It was a picture play as Hopper running full blast took Strickland's heave over his shoulder, to score without being touched.

Cass City dominated the offense and moved up and down the field during most of the first half, but failed to put any points on the board.

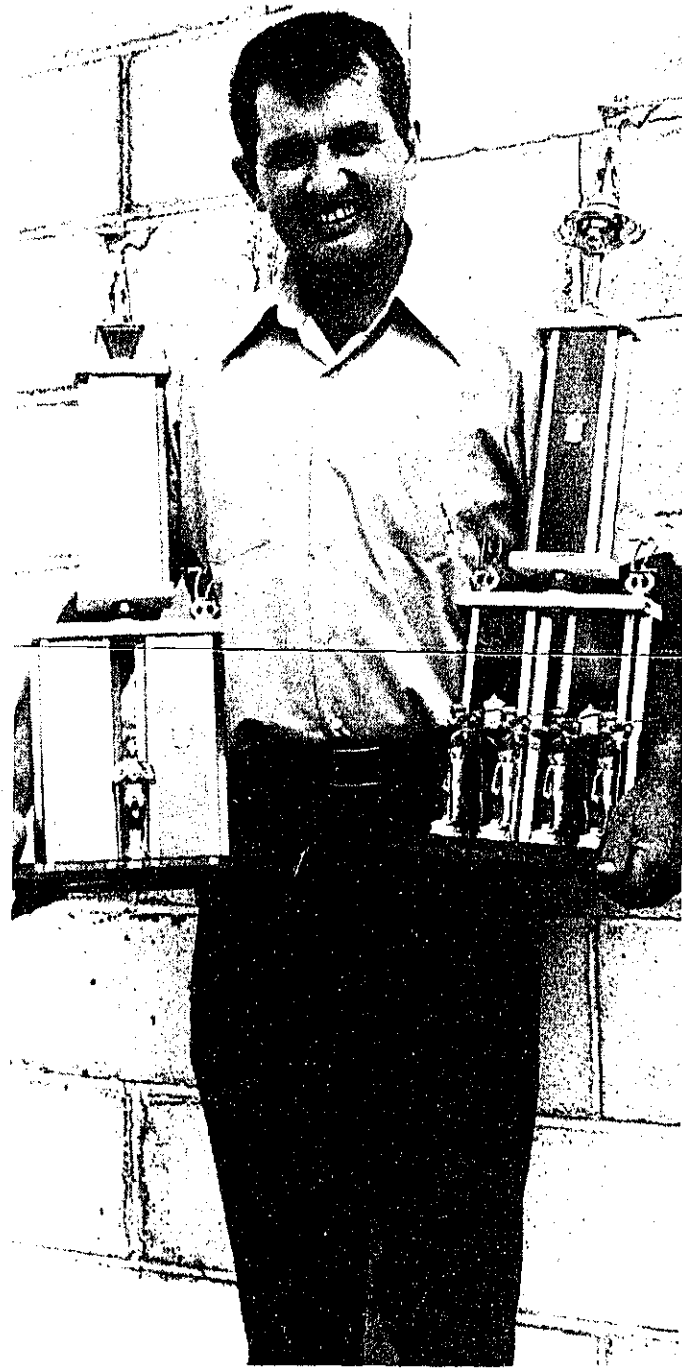

With just moments left in the half, Strickland found Paul Bliss behind the Patriot secondary and Bliss took his pass and outran the defenders to score again.

In the second half, Cass City used its ground game more and punched across two more markers to end the scoring.

It was Gene Salas who picked up the majority of the yardage with 107 yards in 17 tries including two touchdowns.

USA boasted a big defensive line and Cass City appeared to have trouble running up the middle for most of the game.

In the last half Coach Pakonen was able to look over some of his promising reserves and underclassmen waiting in the wings for next year or to fill in should a regular falter.

THE TROPHY on the left Dick McCollum won for a perfect record in individual trap competition. The trophy on the right was won by the Tuscola county team which finished third.

McCollum cops

state trap

shooting laurels

Dick McCollum of Unionville, a service mechanic who works in Cass City, is the State champion individual trap shooter.

Saturday McCollum scored a perfect 50 out of 50 "birds" in the Michigan United Conservation Club competition to walk off with individual honors.

McCollum said that the strong winds made shooting more than usually difficult.

Besides his winning individual effort, McCollum helped the Tuscola County Conservation Club to a third place finish in the match. The five-man team broke 235 out of 250 birds. Shooting were: Jim Champion, Cass City; Elmer Cross, Caro; Terry Trudeau, Caro; Warren Wilson, Caro, and McCollum.

Becoming a champion shooter evidently requires long practice sessions.

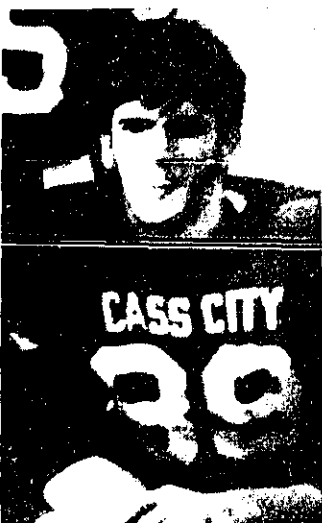

McCollum estimated this week that he shoots about 200 rounds a week the year around to prepare for competition.

Besides winning in Michigan the sharpshooter made a strong bid for national honors at a recent Ohio meet. Shooting against the nation's best he was on the "big board" after the opening round.

Listing on the board means that the shooter is qualified to continue. In the next round, McCollum reported, he missed by just one bird of entering the shooting finals.

Besides winning the trap shooting honors, McCollum was near the top in skeet shooting competition.

Red Hawk award earned by Paul Bliss

Paul Bliss has been awarded the first weekly Red Hawk award for outstanding grid play after his outstanding performance in the opening game against Unionville-Sebewaing Friday.

Bliss, stationed at end for the first time in his career, caught four passes good for 125 yards and a touchdown.

He returned 3 punts for 60 yards, intercepted two passes and returned the lone Patriot kick-off. Bliss plays safety on defense for Cass City.

Gavel Club sponsored

New press box is cooperative effort

The Cass City Gavel Club made short work of a major project this week with volunteer help and the cooperation of a local builder and various suppliers.

I can't tell you how much it will cost the club, Chairman Bill Wallace said Tuesday as the finishing touches were being added to the new press box at Cass City Recreational Field. Replacement value would be over $2,000.

However, Croft-Clara Lumber and Tom Herron, builder, and other suppliers have gone along with this in the public interest and it may well be that total costs will be half of this when finished.

The project started last week when Eldon Stoutenburg took the village loader and ripped the super structure from the cement foundation.

With the pressure of the first home football game Friday facing them, club members and professionals went to work and in two short days the new press box was created.

It has about twice the space of the old quarters and is designed with a top for picture taking and the bottom floor for others working the game.

Tuscola road death toll rises to 24

Tuscola county's traffic fatality toll rose to 24 when Matthew D. Gasper, 24, Arbela Road, Millington, died Sunday morning at St. Joseph's Hospital, Flint, from injuries received when his car ran off the road and into a tree Aug. 17.

Gasper has been hospitalized since the accident on Willard Road five miles south of Millington when he lost control of his car.

Golf team upset by Bad Axe

Cass City's golf team began the season with a very deflating loss to Bad Axe 187-170. Not a single member of the Hawks fared well in the woods at Verona Hills, but in the next match on Frankenmuth's course, which is much like Cass City's Rolling Hills, they played much better, winning 165 to the Eagles' 173.

For practice, the team hosted non-conference Mayville Saturday for an 18-hole match, which Cass City won by 11 strokes.

Monday afternoon, the very weak Sandusky team came to Cass City and was soundly defeated 155 to 205. The Hawks missed their school record of 153 and the league record of 152.

Wednesday the team travels to Marlette to test a tight little course.

Preaching would produce more practice if fewer people didn't look upon it as a performance.
