Detroit youth jailed for shoplifting here

A Detroit youth has been charged with shoplifting from Thelma's Grocery in Cass City early Thursday afternoon.

Cass City Police arrested Michael James Acquaviva, 17, and charged him with stealing a carton of cigarettes from the store.

According to police reports, Thelma Pratt, owner of the store, said that Acquaviva and a 16-year-old companion entered the store last Thursday and while Acquaviva detained Mrs. Pratt at the meat counter, the accomplice allegedly took the cigarettes and hid them under his coat.

After they left, Mrs. Pratt summoned police who found the youths sitting on the bank of the Cass River fishing. Cass City Police Chief Gene Wilson then placed Acquaviva under arrest.

Acquaviva was also implicated by earlier police reports in a shoplifting incident at Eria's Food Center the evening before. Also, that same evening, another report of shoplifting, this time at the Gamble Store in Cass City further implicated Acquaviva when a roll of fishing line, allegedly taken from the store was found on Acquaviva's person.

Acquaviva was arraigned in District Court Monday on the shoplifting charge at Thelma's Grocery. Bond was set at $250 and a hearing was set for May 7 in the case.

Tuscola county sheriff's officers have also placed charges against Acquaviva involving a breaking and entering case near Deford.

According to the Sheriff's Department, a house trailer owned by Mrs. Rosetta Price and located on Cemetery Road just south of Gifford Road, had been broken into sometime between Thursday and late Friday of last week.

According to the report, Mrs. Price, who had been in Detroit, returned home Friday to find three youths living in the trailer. She called sheriff's deputies and according to the report, identified Acquaviva as one of those involved.

Acquaviva later admitted to officers that he broke into the trailer with two friends. They allegedly took two portable heaters, a television set, softballs and some candles.

The investigation into the case continues.

Three larceny cases were reported to Cass City Police last week.

Saturday, a lawn mower was stolen from the Nazarene parsonage in Gagetown. Police have no suspects and the investigation continues.

Two larcenies occurred Monday. A tape deck was stolen from a car belonging to Leo Flannery, 6484 Main St., sometime between Sunday afternoon and Monday morning.

Flannery told police he parked the car behind Coach Light Pharmacy Sunday afternoon and, when he returned the next day, he found a back window had been pried out and thieves had stolen the tape deck, valued at $80.00.

This investigation continues.

Also on Monday, the Rev. Lloyd Streeter reported to police that someone had stolen his son's bicycle. The bike was later found about a block away with the back wheel missing. Police have no leads in the case.

$35,000 lawsuit filed Thursday

A $35,000 law suit has been filed in Tuscola County Circuit Court in connection with a traffic accident in the village of Reese last year.

A suit charging Mr. and Mrs. William Kaeckmeister of Reese with negligence when their car struck and injured James Minnick Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Minnick Sr. of Reese, was filed before Judge Norman Baguley, April 26.

The suit contends that on May 1, 1972, Mrs. Kaeckmeister was operating her car too fast for conditions, failed to stop in assured clear distance ahead and failed to sound her horn as she turned a corner onto Center Street in front of St. Elizabeth's school in Reese.

According to the suit, her car struck the Minnick boy as he attempted to cross the street, resulting in multiple lacerations which required hospitalization. It further stated that plastic surgery may be needed to correct the injuries.

Owen-Gage merger goes down to defeat by 3 to 1 margin

The proposal to merge the Owendale-Gagetown school district with Unionville-Schewaga school system went down to defeat by a three to one margin in balloting Monday.

Final returns show the proposal was rejected by Owen-Gage voters with 179 yes votes to 476 no votes. Voters in Unionville-Schewaga turned down the proposal with 393 yes to 1,127 no.

Owen-Gage Superintendent Glen Sanford viewed the defeat as a definite statement from voters as to what they did not want.

"It's obvious from this vote that the people in the two districts do not want to get together," Sanford commented after the defeat. "We now have to evaluate the numerical results and try to go from there."

Sanford said he was not surprised by the number of no votes, but was surprised at the small number of yes votes.

"I thought I could name at least 180 people in our district who would have voted yes," he said. "I miscalculated by one."

Sanford said the district will now adopt a wait-and-see attitude and by June, some other proposal should be ready. He did not speculate as to what form it might take, but did stress that two options presently remain open for Owen-Gage. It could attempt a building program or try to split the district again. He did not hold out much hope for the second idea.

None of the district's problems were solved by Monday's vote. It still faces the question of what to do with the high school building constructed in 1913 and in need of rerair.

Sanford said after the results are evaluated, the district might consider a new building, but that it had to keep going for now.

"We have to keep going until we can go no longer," he said.

adding that the vote results dictated that the district must continue to go it alone.

Sanford said no one factor could be pinpointed that played a major role in the defeat of the proposition, other than reasoning that the people simply did not want the districts merged.

He said the next task of the school system is to attempt to find some proposal that people in the district do want, because some action will have to be taken in the not too distant future. He stressed the tremendous costs of building and operating a new school and questioned voter readiness to finance such a move.

CASS CITY CHRONICLE-THURSDAY, MAY 3, 1973

FROM THE Editor's Corner

You can sell a half million dollar gym to Thumb taxpayers but you can't sell a swimming pool for about the same price.

There's more to it than the money it costs. It's a matter of pre-conditioning.

A pool is synonymous with luxury. The movie star mansion, the Grosse Pointe estates, the home with servants, the filthy rich. It's an extravagance that's what it is.

It's not logical to look at it this way but that's the way the cookie crumbles and, I suspect, the hopes of pool advocates will crumble, too. Dashed on the rocks of died-in-the-wool-down-to-earth economy... the rural Michigan kind.

I'm not knocking it. The higher percentage of us pay our bills, make do with what we have and avoid the bankruptcy courts like the plague.

But I wonder how many have been turned off just because a swimming pool is a luxury, is a luxury, is a luxury.

Turned off before we look at the need and the potential of a pool as compared to its cost.

If you judge it by the pools in use in other communities, a pool here would be used more than any single facility that, not only the school, but the community has to offer.

It's used all day, every school day. It's used at night, it's used on week ends. It's used in the summer time.

You can't make a case for a swimming pool (or a gym) if you compare it to reading, writing and arithmetic. The basics come first, naturally.

But if you spend $30 for fishing equipment, 100 bucks for a gun or buy a new set of golf clubs, a pool stacks up well.

Chances are that the family will spend more hours in a community pool than it does at any of these other sports. It's certain that it will if there are a few kids roaming around the place with time on their hands.

One thing that the pool question has going for it right now is that the economy is pretty good. Despite inflation, there is more money around in this area than there has been in

Townships cannot charge for individual fire calls, attorney-general rules

If a fire breaks out at your home, feel free to call the Elkland Township Fire Department. They will be happy to come and extinguish the blaze free of charge.

This is not part of a bargain basement special the fire department is running—it's the law of the state.

According to an opinion handed down by Attorney General Frank Kelley April 20, townships cannot charge residents for fire calls under any circumstances.

Kelley's ruling came at the request of Rep. Roy Spencer of Africa. He asked for it after a fire in the State Game Area near the Lapeer county community last May.

In that instance, the state was called by Deerfield township for a fire call. When it refused to pay, the bill was sent to Mrs. Robert Farnham, who reported the fire. She lives next to the game area.

In the ruling, Kelley said state law does not give townships authority to charge for a fire protection call. The opinion carries the weight of law unless it is challenged in court.

In the meantime, anyone receiving a bill for a fire call can safely ignore it.

The ruling took Elkland township officials by surprise. Clerk Ferris Ware expressed shock at the ruling, saying that it could prove very bad for the township fire department.

"We get on the average of 50 fire calls per year," he said, "and at $100 per call, it mounts up pretty quick."

Ware met with other township clerks in Caro Thursday night to discuss what action might be taken. Legislation was suggested, but nothing was formalized.

"The law says we can bill residents for fire runs but that we do not have the power to collect," Ware explained.

Other townships which have contracted the services of Elkland Township Fire Department will still have to pay for protection, according to Ware, because contracts for this protection have been signed. The ruling affects only individual residents.

Currently, the fire department charges $100 for the run, which covers the first hour. An additional charge of $50 is made for services going into a second hour.

Elkland Township Supervisor Edwin Karr said he has heard only fragmented reports of the ruling, and had no idea what action the township board might take.

Hospital raises fuel shortage spectre

Administrators at Hills and Dales General Hospital expressed concern last week about the availability of fuel supplies to the facility, in the wake of increasing reports of fuel shortages.

Administrator H. Byron Landholt indicated the situation had reached a crisis point and raised the possibility that fuel oil to the hospital might be cut off.

"Our supplier can't seem to help us," Landholt explained. They seem more interested in making gasoline than in making fuel oil.

The hospital burns number six oil and uses it exclusively for heating the building. This oil is not available in the immediate area and must be trucked in from as far away as Detroit.

Landholt said the price charged the hospital for the oil has jumped about three cents since the beginning of the year. He said he hoped the hospital could ride out this series of price hikes until federal action could be taken to free more supplies.

"It seems to me that major oil companies just don't want to have the oil," he stated. "They make more money by refining it into gasoline and they don't care about us."

Landholt said the hospital board of trustees currently does not have a contingency plan in the event of a fuel supply interruption. He said a commercial gas hook-up is not available presently.

The hospital is supplied by Cass City Oil and Gas Company and Landholt said no other firm would handle the contract.

A check with the company indicated that, while price could not be guaranteed, supplies would be available.

Duane Chippi, manager of Cass City Oil and Gas, said a check with his supplier firm confirmed that an adequate amount of number six oil would be available for the next heating season.

In addition, his supplier also indicated that quantities of home heating oil and gasoline would be more than adequate to meet customer demand.

"As long as my supply of number six oil is available to me, it'll be available to the hospital," Chippi said.

Chippi said he had no way of controlling price of the product, but could guarantee that the oil would be there.

MRS. MARION GRAY, teacher in the Cass City School system, who will retire at the end of this school year after more than 25 years of teaching.

Retiring teacher recalls early area school days

When she began her teaching career in 1931, Mrs. Marion Gray was paid $75 per month. Out of that, she had to pay $5 to have someone come in and clean the schoolhouse and build the fire in the stove each morning. Or she could do it herself.

Times have changed and the pay is considerably better. So are the buildings and the heating systems. And she hasn't had to clean a schoolhouse in years.

But still, Mrs. Gray says she wouldn't have done things much differently, given a second chance.

"I might have tried to do them better, but not really any different," she commented as she sat in the living room of her new home last week. The Grays sold their farm last year and kept two acres on which they have built a new three-bedroom home. It will take a good portion of Mrs. Gray's time when she retires to it at the end of this school year. She has taught in the Cass City area for 25 years.

"I want to have some time to garden and to do some sewing and maybe even some painting," she said with a smile. "I want to get at some of those things that you keep telling yourself you'll do when you get time. Now I'll have the time."

Mrs. Gray calculated that she has had between 850 and 900 students in her career which began before her marriage to Arlington Gray in 1936.

"Back in the beginning, the Cass City system made you quit as a teacher if you got married," she recalled. "Times were difficult and single girls had trouble finding work. So the school only employed unmarried women as teachers."

She said this policy was not abandoned for a great many years, and she did not return to the classroom until 1949, when teachers became scarce.

"When I enrolled my girl in school in the Sandusky system, they asked me then if I was interested in teaching," she said. "I said I hadn't given it much thought, but I would consider it."

Mrs. Gray resumed her career at that time and attended summer classes at Central Michigan University, where she received her bachelor's degree in 1936. She explained that prior to this, teachers could instruct without a degree if they kept their state teaching certificate renewed and attended summer sessions.

She taught in the Evergreen township unit school system until it consolidated with Cass City seven years ago. She worked for the Cass City system since that time, teaching fifth and sixth grades.

Seventeen of her years in teaching were spent in Shabbona.

Mrs. Gray is a graduate of Cass City High School and the old Tuscola County Normal School.

She said that times change and people must change with them.

"Children have many more experiences to call upon now than they did in earlier years," she said, "and it is more and more of a challenge to challenge them." She added that television has contributed to the expansion of the child's world.

"You have to teach a lot more subject matter now than before," Mrs. Gray commented. "Children are wiser and know more of the world these days."

She said children of today aren't really much different from children in years past and teachers must adapt with changing times and attitudes. She added that she has liked all her students over the years.

"Occasionally I see one of my former students doing well and it makes me feel good that I contributed just a little toward that," she said.

Mrs. Gray commented that the textbooks used in elementary education are greatly improved over earlier publications and hold the child's interest better. She especially enjoys working with math and science, and stresses the natural sciences in her classroom.

She worked in 4-H for 20 years, teaching handicrafts, home improvement and related skills.

Mrs. Gray said she has gotten a great deal of satisfaction from her teaching experiences and said the thought of retiring will take some adjustment.

"You never realize you're getting old until you do," she chuckled. "I expect I'll miss it for awhile, especially next fall."

She said that next winter, she hopes to travel with her husband in the southwest, along with continuing to add finishing touches to their new home.

(And anyone else he can get to help)

I've tried bug lights, sprays, foams and insecticides, but the mosquitoes always prevail.

That's why I don't believe that Mrs. Lisa Alger's, Kingston, cure will turn the trick. But it would be beautiful if it worked. She says plant Marigolds and your problem is solved.

That ad you'll find in this issue showing how the village will spend its money from revenue sharing isn't any big deal, doesn't represent any drastic changes. It's simply that the law requires that the village tell how the money will be spent.

A malfunctioning press required the services of George Martin, an expert from Cleveland, at the Chronicle over the week end.

He worked Saturday and Sunday and stayed at Frankenmuth, mainly to enjoy the chicken with his wife.

What impresses me (besides the size of the bill) is the almost casual way these men go to work. They seem to almost be loafing and suddenly the job is done and it seemed so easy. . . like you should have figured it out for yourself.

All of which goes to show that a pro, is a pro, is a pro.

Veteran track observers will recall that prior to last year nearly every Gavel Club Invitational was plagued by cold, windy, miserable weather. Last year promoters decided to do something about it. . . they moved it to a date one week later in the spring.

Sure enough, the usual date turned up miserable again while the week later date was blessed with beautiful sunshine.

I thought of this last Saturday when it was cold, cold, cold again. I just have to believe that by the Invitational time this Saturday the weather will again turn just right for the thinclads.

When the sun comes out this week end, remember that you read it here first.

Why is it that more often than not Academy Award winning movies leave me cold after I've paid to see them? A couple of weeks ago I saw the widely acclaimed "Sluth".

It wasn't bad, but it wasn't all that good either. Maybe the reason was that I'm a traditional "who done it?" fan and whatever you want to say about "Sluth" one thing it's not is traditional.

One thing that it must be was cheap to produce. How many movies have you seen with one stage setting and just two actors?

It's unusual is your bag you might even feel that it's an outstanding film.

Good Shepherd Lutheran Church

Special services Sunday

Lutherans mark 25 years in Cass City

The congregation of the Cass City Good Shepherd Lutheran Church will commemorate 25 years in the village Sunday with special services at 3 p.m. followed by a church dinner for members and their guests.

The guest speaker for the anniversary will be the Rev. Otto Nuechterlein, the pastor who founded the church as a mission while serving the Lutheran Church in Caro.

Pastor Nuechterlein will be coming to Cass City from Iowa for the event.

Services will be held in the modern church building on East Cass City Road. It is a far cry from the worship sites used when the 27 charter members worshiped together.

At this time members met in the town hall. Later locations included a restaurant and several other locations as needed.

In 1948 the congregation moved to a small church building on Maple Street. When continued growth made the building inadequate, a larger basement was constructed on the site in preparation for a future church building.

Services were held in the basement for several years until it was decided to abandon the site and build on Main Street.

A drive spearheaded by Fred Iseler resulted in the new church building which was dedicated Dec. 3, 1967.

Cass City Good Shepherd has been serviced by three resident pastors and several vacancy pastors during its 25 years.

Pastor Paul Heitmann was the first full-time pastor of the church and served for five years until Nov. 29, 1964.

The Rev. Richard Eyer was the second resident pastor, serving from July 1965 through August 1969.

The present pastor, the Rev. James Van Dellen, was installed July 12, 1970.

The congregation will be celebrating a steady increase in the church's membership.

From the meager beginning with 27 members, the church membership has grown to 235 communicants and the average attendance for Sunday services is now 131 persons.

AGENT'S CORNER

Nuts add protein, fat to diet

ANN ROSS - EXTENSION AGENT

When you add nuts to your salads or casseroles, you're adding something besides flavor or crunch. You're adding food value, too.

Nuts contribute primarily two things: fat and protein. And you could say that's both good and not so good - especially if you're trying to fight off extra pounds.

The protein is good. Everyone needs protein to grow and stay healthy. And nuts, just like meat and eggs and dried beans, have been listed as fairly good protein foods. Peanuts top the nut list with about twenty five per cent protein. And walnuts (15 per cent), pecans and almonds don't fall too far behind.

But the fat picture of nuts is something else to consider. Of course, it's the fat that gives nuts their appealing flavor. But it also gives them a highly concentrated number of calories. Just a half cup of pecans or walnuts, for instance, will add more than three hundred calories to a cake or cookies.

So if you're a weight watcher, use nuts sparingly. The protein may be good for you, but the fat content will push up the calorie count. You'll need extra activity to burn off any extra calories.

If you'd like a helpful leaflet to show you how to "Balance Appetite and Activity" single copies are available without charge from your County Cooperative Service Office, in Caro, Sandusky or Bad Axe.

"If It Fitz . . ."

Why not 'husband swapping'?

BY JIM FITZGERALD

The year's biggest baseball story prompts me to wonder why Women's Lib has never complained about the unfair news stories which always result when married couples switch partners.

The transaction is invariably called "wife swapping." I have never heard it called "husband swapping."

This implies, of course, that the husbands are always the proprietors and the wives are always the merchandise.

Which simply isn't true. Wives are as capable as husbands of initiating action which could result in a swap of spouses. I know. . .

There was that morning in New Orleans when my wife and I got housed. When that experience ended, Pat went out into the streets and propositioned women she'd never seen before. She'd never seen their husbands before, either.

She simply wanted to deal me away and she didn't much care what she got in return, just so long as the replacement knew how to hang a sign on a doorknob.

We were staying in a quaint motel in the French Quarter. Our 2nd floor unit had a private porch that looked out over a court. Lovely. We got in late the first night and Pat reminded me to hang out the "Do Not Disturb" sign so we could sleep in. Which I did.

Came the morning. Slosh, sprinkle and drip. Not outside. In the room. Honest.

"Wake up," my wife screamed, "someone is spraying water at us through the door."

"You must be having a nightmare," I said, getting a mouthful of water and adding: "Bluh."

It was true. Outside there was a motel employee, happily hosing down our front porch. This was not a new motel and plenty of air showed between the door and the jamb. Also, the transom was partly open. Our bed was getting soggy.

"I have heard of wild animals, locked together in passion, who had to be separated with fire hoses," I said, "but I really don't think it's necessary in this case."

"Stop making dumb jokes and tell that fool to stop," my wife answered passionately.

I hollered but the guy outside couldn't hear me. The water was making too much noise as it slammed against the door. I would have opened the door and told the hoser off, except I might have been washed away.

Pat had left her best dress draped over a chair by the door. The dress was dripping and she was steaming.

"He must be a new . . . plug . . . employee," I said. "I think they are supposed to close those quaint storm doors before hosing."

"But what about our do-not-disturb sign?" Pat screamed.

When the water man finally moved on, she quickly found out about the sign. I had hung it wrong side out, thus announcing that no one was home, so the maid could come cleaning. . . or hosing.

It was then that I went on the trading block. No deal has been closed yet but I've noticed several strange women coming in the office and giving me the eye. I keep expecting them to kick my tires and slam my doors.

When the transaction is finally completed, the newspaper are hereby warned to describe it as a husband swapping. I don't want any responsibility for a deal which will probably make me to something with a running board.

Onward and Upward.

Be an early bird—make it a point to get to the fool and his money before they part.

Arraign 3, sentence 2 in Circuit Court Monday

Three arraignments and two sentences were handed down in Tuscola County Circuit Court Monday.

Roger Stevens, 211 Arch St., Vassar, pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of insufficient funds in connection with a bad check for $106 written to Fred's Mens Shop December 8.

Judge James Churchill set May 29 as the date for sentencing.

Douglas Ross Jr. of Fostoria was arraigned on a charge of breaking and entering a semi-trailer in Watertown township Oct. 24, 1972. He pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of attempted breaking and entering.

Judge Churchill set May 29 for sentencing and ordered a pre-sentencing investigation of the case. This is the first time in the history of the county that such a plea to a lesser charge has been entered at an arraignment.

The procedure is an innovation of Prosecuting Attorney George Holmes, in an attempt to speed up the judicial process. Clifford Bently, 20, Clio, was arraigned on a charge of breaking and entering of a house in Arabela township belonging to Ray Torpy. He stood mute and a plea of not guilty was entered in his behalf.

Pre-trial examination was set for May 29.

Lester Chambers, 644 W. Sherman, Caro, was sentenced to one to four years in Jackson prison after pleading guilty to simple assault with a .32 caliber rifle against his wife. He had originally been charged with assault with intent to commit murder against his wife Dec. 6, 1972.

Chambers was given credit for 153 days already served in the Tuscola County Jail. Sentencing was delayed until December in a case involving Daniel J. Torrez, 212 W. Gamble St., Caro. Torrez pleaded guilty to assaulting David Thane with a razor-blade type carton opener Jan. 28.

Judge Churchill delayed sentencing so that Torrez could finish high school and begin college. He has been employed at the IGA grocery store in Caro for the last three years.

In other court action, Winifred Cross, 5820 E. Severance Rd., Deford, was ruled competent to stand trial on charges of attempting to obtain a controlled substance under false pretenses.

It is charged that Ms. Cross forged a prescription for the drug eskatrol Oct. 4, 1972 in Caro.

Her attorney moved to amend the information before the court and the case was continued until May 14.

In another case, the court dismissed charges against Jerry T. Johnson, Jackson, who had been charged with a parole violation.

Judge Churchill ruled that Johnson had, in fact, not violated his parole when he was charged with threatening his wife with a knife in 1962.

He had originally been convicted on a forged check charge and sent to Jackson prison in 1961.

In 1963, presiding Judge Timothy Quinn ruled Johnson guilty of parole violation and sentenced him to prison once more. Johnson won a re-hearing of the original parole violation charge.

Correction

In last week's Chronicle, an error was made concerning prize money for the tractor pull event at this summer's Western Round-up.

The $500 guaranteed purse is total prize money, not first prize money as originally reported.

Ten classes of tractors were eliminated for the event.

County residents collect $82,600 in lottery

Tuscola county residents have so far collected more than $82,600 in lottery prizes and one. Cheryl O'Kelly of Caro, has a chance at the top lottery prize of $1 million in the May 10 drawing at Muskegon.

She is one of the 120 semi-finalists for the event determined in last week's elimination drawing. Each semi-finalist is guaranteed at least $1,000 and could win even more. Seven will win $5,000, one will win $50,000, one will win $100,000 and one will win the big one, the top lottery prize, $1 million.

Two Tuscola county residents have advanced to previous millionaire drawings, collecting $1,000 each. One county resident won $50,000 in a weekly super drawing. In addition, there have been 1,224 weekly winners of $25 from the county who have collected a total of $30,600. That brings the county's lottery "take" so far to $82,600.

Kay Loomis wins Lions talent contest

Kay Loomis, 8, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Loomis of Cass City, is $100 richer this week as the result of her singing performance at the seventh annual Cass City Lions Club Talent show held Saturday evening.

Kay sang an arrangement of Three Little Kittens and God Bless America to win her award.

Second prize winners were Paul Kerbyson and Peter Kesler, both of Cass City, who performed a piano duet. They will split a $50 prize.

Cheryl O'Harris and Clyde Litterman, both of Cass City, tied for third prize. Ms. O'Harris played a piano solo and Litterman performed a musical variety act. Each received $20.

Fifth place went to guitarist Jeff Eastham of Vassar, who received $10.

The remaining performers each received a check for $5 on Clyde Wells served as master of ceremonies for the show which took place at the Cass City Intermediate School.

The club raised approximately $1,000, according to secretary Ron Keegan. This money will go toward the leader dog school in Rochester and for sight screening operations in area schools.

A third beneficiary of the money raised will be the Welcome Home for the blind in Grand Rapids.

About 125 people attended the show.

KETCHUM'S KNAPSACK

A second look at Harry Truman

By Jim Ketchum

Harry Truman once said that a politician becomes a statesman after he's dead. No doubt this is true. Herbert Hoover eventually outgrew the stigma of the depression and became revered far and wide for his efforts to make the world a better place in which to live.

General Eisenhower's stock is currently on the rise, after years of criticism that his was a do-nothing administration.

Lyndon Johnson, who until his untimely death last January, was reviled as the man who sent 50,000 American boys to their graves, now seems to be making the beginnings of a comeback. Historians are now looking at more than just the war in evaluating his years in office.

And even old Harry, who left the presidency under General Hugh Johnson's "hail of dead cats," rose dramatically above the criticisms and into probably one of the most important world statesmen since the end of World War II.

I watched a program the other evening which looked at the presidency through the impressions of the last five holders of that office, beginning with Truman. The more I saw of all of them, the more old Harry struck me as a pretty nifty character.

I can remember growing up and knowing full well that the name Harry Truman was a dirty word around our house. He was accused of practically every mistake ever made in government before, during and after his years at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.

He'd given Eastern Europe to the communists, started the Korean war singlehandedly and wouldn't let General MacArthur finish it. He'd spent future generations into bankruptcy and darn near caused the White House itself to collapse when he brought in Margaret's grand piano that nearly fell through the floor.

You name it and old Harry did it or tried it.

Then I grew up and began studying history. The more I read and heard and saw of the man, the more I began to like his style. He hadn't been such a madman after all. He'd merely tried to handle the madman job of the Presidency the best way his conscience and Missouri determination would let him.

I remember last December when he lay at the brink of death, he rallied, time and again, confounding doctors and journalists alike who had gathered at the hospital at Independence, just itching to flash the word that the old man had finally given in and died.

I couldn't help but smile at the time I began to think they were going to have to take a club and beat him to death. He roared once from his coma and the doctors asked him how he felt. "Fine," he murmured as oxygen, blood and intravenous fluids were pumped into his sinking body.

Who else would have said "Fine"?

You had to give him credit. I remember hearing people talk about the 1960 campaign. Butting Harry, the necktie salesman, they called him. He's got more guts than a fiddle string factory. Game little scrapper. Too bad he hasn't got a chance.

Everybody except Truman believed he was going to lose that election. A lot of them still couldn't believe it when they watched him take the oath of office a little over two months later.

Harry Truman changed a lot of things in this country. Those have been chronicled in history and cannot really be discussed in this short a space.

It's Harry Truman the man that really impressed me. In that filmed interview with Edward R. Murrow, made in 1957, he came across as a sincere individual who had the fortitude to make a decision, stick by it and never quaver in the face of criticism.

I liked his style. "You can't let any outfit of any kind tell you what you ought to do," he said. "A man hasn't got any business being president if he's got a thin skin."

Two Trumanisms are "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen", and "The buck stops here."

Truman had more confidence in Truman than I ever saw in any other president of the post-war generation. He stated it simply. He said he tried to do the best job he could do, while maintaining intellectual honesty and the welfare of the people as a whole.

Without intellectual honesty, you were nothing, he believed. That sense of honesty transcended every act of his administration.

Truman into the office on the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt, he knew full well he could not function as the caretaker many hoped he would. Such constraints could not be tolerated. Truman never denied that he made mistakes. He made many and readily admitted them. He said that when he made a wrong decision, he corrected it with another decision and went on from there. Bold action was his hallmark.

Harry Truman's style of action is gone, replaced by a type of decision making that leaves a convenient loophole for the chief executive and his people to slip through if the decision proves incorrect.

I don't know if they granted him his one wish. He once said he wanted the following inscription carved on his tombstone: "Here lies Harry Truman. He done his damndest."

I hope so, because he did.

Farmers especially are looking at rosy markets and if the weatherman cooperates should have another good year.

What all this means is that the vast majority can find ways of working the estimated $1 per $1,000 valuation of taxes into their budget if convinced that the proposal merits the cost.

To do any real convincing we have to wipe away the image of the sultan's courtyard when we think about a swimming pool.

BETTER HEALTH

Cancer patients want frank answers

BY DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

In the American Journal of Nursing, Dr. Samuel C. Klagsbrun had an article that I wish all doctors could see. He said that doctors should not lose contact with their cancer patients, and should never be non-communicative when a patient wishes to know what his condition is, and what chances he has of recovery.

Often, a patient is so worried that he tries to get this information from a technician who is drawing some blood, or is making an X-ray film -- but these persons have orders about not giving information to patients.

So often in a hospital a patient can never get a word out of his nurse or doctor as to what is being done to him, or what is being found, or how severe his condition is, or what is likely to happen to him. Dr. Klagsbrun says that often a doctor behaves queerly with a severely and terminally ill patient, because he feels a sense of impotence, and perhaps guilt, because he cannot cure.

Fortunately, today in medical schools, young doctors are being taught how better to care for dying patients, so as not to make them feel isolated and cut off from everyone, or to give the impression that the doctor has given up on them. But still too many doctors treat their patients -- even those who will get well -- silently, as if they were idiots, unable to listen or talk, and as if they didn't have any human rights once they entered the hospital.

I will never forget one evening when, going home unusually late from my office, I dropped in at the hospital to see how things were going with a patient of mine -- a very fine and able schoolteacher who that morning had had a breast removed for cancer. When I found her crying, I asked, "What went wrong?" And she said that her surgeon had just been to her room, but when she asked him if he found the cancer and got it all out, he just turned and walked out of the room. As she said tearfully, "I was never treated so discourteously."

When, the next day, I remonstrated with my surgeon friend, who usually was a nice, friendly man, he said, "I am paid to do the operation, not to talk to the woman." This attitude shocked and distressed me. If a doctor has a heart in him he will stop long enough to give the patient honestly the information that he or she has asked for.

One thing that I think is very unwise is to tell a patient how long he is likely to live. Too often, the physician who does this makes a serious miscalculation which deeply offends the patient. It is impossible to say -- even to a cancer patient -- how long he or she is likely to survive, because different people have different degrees of resistance to cancer, and also, there are different grades of cancer, some of which tend to kill quickly and others which allow the person to live for many years with little discomfort.

As young doctors, particularly surgeons, need to know, there is much more to caring for a patient than just using technical skills. What the patient needs is a good emotional contact with a warm-hearted, kind person who is interested in him, his condition, and his recovery.

I will never get over being grateful to my old friend, the late Dr. Chuck Mayo, who operated on me for cancer in 1960. Late that afternoon, when Chuck was going home, he dropped in to see how I was doing, and I immediately asked him, "What did you find? Was it cancer? Was it scattered? What grade was the malignancy?" I was so relieved when Chuck said he had seen no metastases (scattered cancers) and he was satisfied that he had gotten all of the tumor out. Best of all, the degree of malignancy was low. When Chuck gave me this good news, I was satisfied and happy. But if he had refused to talk to me, or had said "We'll talk about it later," or in any way had been reticent, I would have been uneasy, and would probably have suspected the worst. As it was, I was so relieved that I promptly went to sleep.

Parkinson's disease is a slowly progressive disease which is characterized by much stiffness and slowness of movement. Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

Dear Mister Editor:

They ain't no end to the valuable information you pick up from reading the papers. I read em, but I can't hold a light to Ed Doolittle. He reads like he's doing research on the world, and he keeps a file of clippings ready to whip out and use as evidence for the defense of whatever case he's making at the time.

Saturday night at the country store, for instance, Ed was talking about how America allus seems to pull herself out of the holes she digs herself into. Ed said this is because the country looks for someone different and a new way to do everything, and he said this goes back to afore she was a country. He had this clipping where a Samuel Morison had said America was discovered accidentally by a sailor that was full of curiosity and was looking for someone else.

Actual, Ed said, America got in the way of Columbus's plans, and after he run into it explorers for the next 50 year kept trying to get through it or around it to get somewhere else. Course, allowed Ed, history is full of stories about how great discoveries is made while folks was looking for someone else, but he said it seemed to him that more than other countries America ain't satisfied with nine ways of skinning a cat, she is looking for another better way.

Clem Webster was full agreed with Ed, which is unusual. Clem does his homework afore he comes to the sessions at the store, and he bring a report where some wimmen had invented the Nixonburger. Clem said that is a meatless sandwich, and they held a contest to see who could come up with the best concoction. Another report Clem had was where a butcher was mixing hamburger and soybean paste about half and

Traditional funeral practices defended by local morticians

By Jim Ketchum

Death is a part of life—the last part. It comes naturally as the rising and setting sun and, eventually, touches us all in one way or another.

In the past few years, a controversy has arisen in the United States over the customs associated with funerals and, in some cases, the funeral itself has been held up to careful scrutiny. Most observers not directly connected with the business of burial conclude that much needs to be done in the way of reform.

Several years ago, Jessica Midford's book "The American Way of Death", created a sensation with its general indictment of funeral directors and, moreover, with the cost of dying.

In response, the National Funeral Directors Association began an advertising campaign in national magazines designed to tell the funeral director's side of the story. That response has generally come in the form of the general explanation of services offered. The idea of empathy has been stressed.

A local supporter of the directors association and its campaign of education is Harry Little of Little's Funeral Home who, along with his son Roger, believe the American funeral serves a much-needed purpose.

"This is a very personal business," Little said last week as he sat in his paneled office. "People like to have an older man on the job. Being a funeral director is almost like being the family doctor."

Little said there are many services most people either don't understand or don't know about that are performed at each funeral. He said that, on a comparative basis, funeral charges are really not that expensive.

"If we based our prices on what a hospital operating room gets and if we charged for a room what a hotel charges and charged taxi fees for the number of miles we travel for each funeral, people couldn't afford it at all," Little said.

He said, in addition, that over 100 hours of labor go into each funeral service. The home is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, he added, and stressed the importance of this kind of service.

Little's son, Roger, who joined his father's business a number of years ago, stressed the psychological importance of the funeral. He holds a degree in mortuary science from Wayne State University and a business administration degree from Alma College.

"The body is a holy temple—the thing we know and love," he said. "We, as frail human beings, have to have something to relate to, and the body is it. It is a reverent thing and its preservation is very much like preserving a cathedral."

He emphasized that this must be done without regard to expense. The important thing is that the service be handled with reverence and that it convey an empathy which will allow everyone to share the grief, he added.

"We live in a death denying society," Little said. "People are now trying to avoid the service altogether. This is nothing more than a denial of reality."

He explained that the job of the funeral director is to manifest that grief in some physical way. Psychologists have discovered through studies made at several universities, that 50 per cent of their patients had problems resulting from not fulfilling their grief.

This has led to a deeper study of grief psychology by funeral directors, who conclude that the best way to face the loss of a loved one is to face the reality squarely. They recommend viewing of the body which is designed to create a pleasant mental picture of the person who has died, rather than having to remember the person as ravaged by disease or disfigured by an accident.

"People owe it to friends and relatives to hold and participate in funerals," Little said.

Little said most rejection of the conventional funeral is related primarily to cost. He emphasized that this is definitely not the important thing—that a much higher psychological bill, in terms of guilt, depression and unfulfilled grief, could be paid without the funeral. He said most critics do not have first hand knowledge of death or of funerals, and do not understand it as an institution.

The elder Little said it takes something out of him each time he conducts a service.

"If you care, it can't help but affect you," he said. "I guess you'd call it empathy. We just feel an obligation to serve."

He added that it takes a special kind of psychological make-up to be a funeral director, just as it takes a special kind of person to join the Peace Corps. Basically, he said, you must care about people very much.

Little began his career in his hometown of Yale when he went into a partnership with a funeral director who owned a radio shop at the time. He explained that in those days, most directors ran second businesses because they usually had to for financial reasons.

Little's trade was electronics and, in the store, he repaired radios. One day, the funeral director asked him if he would be interested in going out on a call. He said his curiosity got the best of him and went with him. From there he decided to learn more about undertaking and eventually went into apprenticeship, eventually gaining a license as a mortician.

Little worked in the Detroit area for 15 years before coming to Cass City in 1946.

He said the profession has upgraded itself a hundred times over since he began, over 43 years ago. New techniques, better facilities and more competent people in the business have contributed to these improvements.

Little said the average cost of a funeral today is about $1,000 and is less touched by inflation than anything else. He said the cost rises only about 2 per cent a year, compared with the cost of living generally which rises from six to eight per cent each year.

He said he handles about 90 funerals each year.

Little said many people will come in, subscribing to the theory that they want the cheapest service possible, which he admits he will readily handle.

"But when they see what they actually get, their minds usually change," he said. "I remember one woman who came in wanting a Jessica Midford casket and when I showed her just what she would get, she said, 'I wouldn't put a dog in that,' and ordered a better casket."

He said people will realize, once it hits home, that the funeral is the one way they have to show respect for the person who has died. It also serves, he said, as a place to share the common grief and to find strength in each other.

Cass City driver escapes injury

A Cass City woman escaped injury Sunday afternoon when the car she was driving struck a boy on a bicycle on Caseville Road about a half-mile north of M-25.

Ladonna Jean Brown, 17, of 5694 E. Cass City Rd., driver of the auto, told Huron County Deputy Sheriff she was driving south and saw a boy on a bicycle, going in the same direction. She said she was not able to pass because of oncoming traffic. At that point, she told officers, the boy appeared to lose control of the bike, moments before the collision.

David Eimers, 11, Caseville, the cyclist, suffered bruises and abrasions of the head, was treated at Scheurer Hospital, Pigeon, and released.

Over 1500 Sanilac grads seek jobs

In the next two months approximately 1,500 Sanilac county students will be seeking part and full time summer jobs. Among the active job seekers will be over 700 1973 graduates. Some will be seeking permanent jobs as they enter the labor market, others will be seeking work for the summer only which will provide income to finance post high school training.

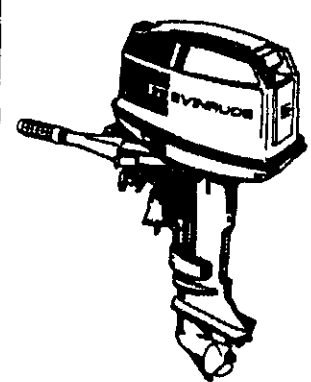

The summer job seekers will expand the Sanilac county labor force by some 15 per cent. It is anticipated that only sixty per cent of the summer job seekers will be successful and find employment.

With a surplus labor situation existing in Sanilac county it is suggested that summer job seekers begin their search prior to school closing. High school students not only have to compete with returning college students for summer jobs but with adults who are currently out of work.

A follow-up survey of 1972 Sanilac county graduates performed in December 1972 by the Manpower Office clearly indicated that the aggressive job seekers are the ones who ended up with the jobs last summer. Seventy per cent of last year's graduates obtained a summer job. The method of job search which proved to be the most successful according to the survey was "asking employer on own", the survey indicated that 43.2 per cent of the graduates found their job by this method. The next most successful job search method, 28.3 per cent, was "through a friend or relative".

Factory work provided jobs for 39 per cent of the summer job seekers in 1972. Clerical and clerking jobs accounted for 19 per cent of summer job offerings. Service jobs such as waitress, hospital work, baby sitting etc. provided 16 per cent of the summer youth labor force with jobs in 1972. Farm work and construction work provided jobs for 13 per cent and 12 per cent of the summer workers.

Girl Scouts clean up Cass City Saturday

Cass City has a cleaner look about it this week, thanks to the village girl scouts.

Saturday, some 60 girls collected four pickup loads of trash from streets, parking lots and alleys. The girls worked from 9:00 a.m. until noon.

At the same time, a group of girl scout cadets spent the entire day cleaning the Elkland Township Cultural Center. These girls scrubbed floors, walls, windows and blinds and worked until 5:30 p.m., according to Karen Fischer, scout leader.

The effort was part of a nationwide action by girl scouts to clean up villages and cities across the country.

Cass City businessmen donated money for a hot dog picnic following the clean up for the girls involved.

Cass City J.C.'s distribute red ball fire stickers

Cass City J.C.'s are currently distributing red ball window decals that may save a life in case of a fire.

"Operation Red Ball," sponsored by the Michigan J.C.'s as a state wide project, is designed to distribute red warning decals to invalids, infants and anyone who would be trapped in a room in case a fire broke out. The decal, pasted on a window, warns firemen of the situation and has been credited with saving the life of a Detroit woman.

According to Roland Pakonen, president of Cass City J.C.'s, around 2,000 red ball decals will be distributed in the village. So far, 1400 stickers have gone out through the schools.

Red ball stickers may be obtained by calling Roland Pakonen at 872-4117 or Jim Mastie at 872-3634. The stickers are free of charge.

Edison files to end free repair service

Those free appliance repairs that Detroit Edison customers have enjoyed for so many years will be coming to an end soon, if the Michigan Public Service Commission sees it the utility's way.

Edison has filed a request with the commission to increase rate charges and institute a fee schedule covering parts and labor on all major appliances now serviced free.

"We hope the free service might be eliminated," George Anderson, District Office Manager for Detroit Edison, said this week. "We are not eliminating repair service, however. We simply want to charge enough to recover our costs."

Anderson explained that free repair service is something the company has done since its beginning, nearly 70 years ago. In those days, he said, about the only appliance in existence was the flat iron, and so the company could afford to repair these free of charge.

As appliances have increased in complexity over the years, costs for parts and labor have climbed steadily upward until the service has become too costly to continue.

"Currently, we figure the costs of repairs into our electrical rate charges," he said. "In effect, we are making everyone pay for a service used only by some of our customers."

Anderson said the new system of charges would be more equitable in that only those using the repair service would pay for it. He said the company is not able to quote projected rates until the schedules are approved by the MPSC.

Currently, the company repairs electric ranges, dryers and hot water heaters at no charge to customers. Smaller appliances such as toasters, irons and electric frying pans are repaired at only a small charge for parts. These, too, would come under the new rate structure.

Anderson said the company will continue to exchange light bulbs at no charge.

"This is simply good business," he said.

Anderson said the entire rate increase package should be acted upon by the MPSC by October and that repair charges for appliances could be instituted before that time.

Meanwhile, most Cass City residents do not seem to mind losing the free electrical service.

Mrs. Clyde Wells, 6632 M St., said that, while she has appreciated the free service, she would rather pay a service charge rather than shell out more for electricity, if that is what it would take to keep the benefit.

"I would just as soon pay for the repairs," she said. "Besides, older people would suffer if the rates went up any higher."

Mrs. James Baker, 6489 Garfield, agreed, saying a charge for service calls would not be unfair, while higher rates would be.

Mrs. Donald J. Miller, 4727 Seeger, said she does not believe service charges will be unaffordable. She would rather pay for service and keep electrical rates at present levels.

Mrs. Stan Guinther, 4445 Oak, said she would not miss free service because she has not had occasion to use it often.

"Still, it's nice to have in case you need it," she said. Mrs. Guinther would not be opposed to service charges.

Where the Deer and the Antelope Play

I should have known everything would be all right when I took Bob home to the ranch during spring break. One of the nicest things about our falling in love has been finding that we agree about almost everything under the sun.

Bob won Mom's heart the minute we got there. Laurie, my little sister, asked, "Come see my bird's nest?" "Sure," Bob said, and away they went. Mom beamed. She thinks anyone who likes children and birds is all right.

Later, Bob played basketball with my brothers and tinkered with the tractor, getting black and greasy right along with Dad. Everybody loved him.

Sunday we all went to church. Standing there, singing with Bob, my family close by, I thanked God for His goodness.

I'm glad that God and his church have been an important part of my life and of Bob's. Our life together will be enriched by this shared reverence.

Your church offers joyous fellowship. Why don't you go—and take your family with you?

Area Big Brothers reaches out to help

By Jim Ketchum

A young boy gets teased by his friends because he doesn't know how to play baseball. He doesn't know how to rig a fishing pole or build a birdhouse or the first thing about why a car runs.

His mother tries to help, but the job is simply too great. He needs a father, and when he does not have one, where can he turn?

In this area, he can turn to the Big Brothers of Tuscola county. The organization has been in existence a little over three months and, according to director David L. Parsch, 27 referrals have already come into his office. In Cass City, two boys are currently waiting for a big brother.

One man from the village is about to be matched with a little brother. A map in Parsch's office graphically demonstrates the situation. Blue pins designate boys waiting for a big brother, while red pins show the number of big brothers.

The blue pins outnumber the red pins by nearly three to one. "What we need right now are good men," Parsch explained. "By that, I mean someone able to give time, maybe once a week for at least a year."

Parsch said that the big brother is not called upon to do spectacular things with the boy. The idea is to expose the youngster to an older male who really cares about him.

Parsch's office occupies a small part of the Caro State Savings Bank building. He indicated that after this organizational year, more modest surroundings might be required.

In this first year, the organization is operating on an $18,000 grant from the state, along with money from fund-raising activities, the greatest of which is an annual walk-a-thon sponsored by Big Brothers. Next year, the organization will have to go it virtually alone.

Parsch stressed the importance of the big brother to the success of the program.

"The big brother is the key," Parsch stated as he leaned back in his chair. "Without him, we just don't have a program."

Boys in the program range in age from six to 15, but the majority of youths fall into the nine through 11 bracket.

Ideally, Big Brothers likes to match a boy with a man, who is at least 20 years old, for one year. Parsch indicated, however, that there is no time limit. One match in Lapeer has been going on for the last six years.

Parsch indicated that an effort would be made soon through the Cass City High School to interest area men as well as boys in the program.

"We have no trouble finding kids," he said. "It's the men that we need."

Big Brothers screens men for the program carefully so that a boy with similar interests may be found. The program is not run on a first-come-first-served basis, but works at finding men and boys who can get along well together.

Geographic location is also important, Parsch added. For example, a man from Cass City would not be matched with a boy in Vassar.

Parsch pointed out that the boys involved with Big Brothers are not juvenile delinquents. They are boys without fathers.

"We can act as a preventative kind of influence in his life," he said. "But these boys we have now are not in trouble with the law in any way. They simply need a strong, positive kind of male influence in their lives."

The first Big Brothers organization was founded in New York City in 1904 by Ernest Coulter, a clerk in the children's court of that city.

In 1946, Big Brothers of America was formed and now has over 200 agencies in its organization. While the Tuscola agency is not directly associated with the national Big Brothers, it does receive materials and advice from it.

Statistics published by the organization show that presently there are over 300 fatherless boys in Tuscola county. In addition, boys from broken homes are six times as likely to appear in juvenile court. His chances of becoming a high school dropout are four times greater than the boy living with both parents.

Parsch is not new to Big Brothers. Several years ago, he aided in founding a highly successful chapter in Lapeer. He became involved after he graduated from Michigan State University and served a two-year hitch in the Navy.

Parsch also served as coordinator for Operation Mainstream, a program financed through the Office of Economic Opportunity which worked to retrain and find jobs for unemployed workers in the county. This program ended earlier in the year due to the lack of funds.

He gestured strongly as he emphasized his belief in the work of Big Brothers. "I wish I could communicate just what this means to me," he said. "It's very much like a spiritual experience to be involved with these kids and know you're helping."

As he talked, the telephone on his desk rang. It was a call from Millington with another referral. Another blue pin on the map waiting for another red pin to go beside it. "We're kind of like the Marines," he smiled. "We want a few good men."

Church sets special services

Detord Community Church announces special children's services beginning May 7 to 11 each evening at 7:00 with Rev. Muel Eastman of DeWitt, Michigan.

Rev. Eastman specializes in gospel music. On May 5 a special Sunday School rally will be held for the children at 11:00 a.m. All services are open to the public and anyone needing transportation may call 872-4055 in DeWitt or Mr. Lewis Tibbitts at 872-2380 in Cass City. Adv.

Gavel Club sponsoring performers

A combination of some of the merriest forms of clowning that have kept audiences laughing for 21 centuries, since they first set Romans to guffawing in the Colosseum in 200 B.C., is to be presented by the Performing Arts Company of Michigan State University, Friday, May 11, at Cass City High School.

This is the music comedy called "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," which scored a 23-month run in New York from 1962 to 1964, brightened life for theatre-goers in 44 other American cities during a road tour, and in London and Paris.

John Grassilli will be starred as Pseudolus, the central figure in the Roman romp, a slave with a shrewd mind and desire to obtain his freedom by playing on the desires of his young master and the young master's lascivious though aging father, for the same girl. Named Phyllis, she is the most delectable item among a girl-purveyor's stock in trade and the plot's complication is that she has already been optioned by a Roman warrior and is being kept on reserve for him by the girl-trader pending his return from some war or other.

Robert Klassen is the director of this rib-tickler, whose chief chore is to space its laughs for the sake of audience safety.

The presentation is sponsored by the Gavel Club and begins at 8:00 p.m. Admission is $1.50 for adults and $1.00 for students. Tickets may be purchased from members or at the door.

Proceeds will go for club activities including cub scouts, girl scouts, park improvement and Cass City medical facilities.

Emergency flood

loans approved

President Nixon has announced that Emergency Loan Assistance will be provided to those who suffered damages and losses caused by severe storms and flooding beginning about March 16.

Tuscola county has been designated for emergency loans. Applications will be received until June 19, 1973, and any pending on that date will be completed. Emergency loans will have interest at the rate of 5 per cent. Applicants will have to show that they cannot obtain credit elsewhere. There will be no principal cancellation.

Anyone who suffered damages and losses caused by severe storms and flooding about March 16, 1973 should contact the local Farmers Home Administration office serving Tuscola county at 352 South Hooper Street, Caro, for assistance in applying for Emergency Loan Assistance.

Parents without Partners sets May 9 meeting

Thumb Area Parents Without Partners will meet Wednesday, May 9, at 8:00 p.m. in the basement of the Community Bank in Uby.

A group discussion will be held at that time. Other events for May include a spaghetti dinner May 18 in Port Austin. May 20, the family activity will be a bowling outing in Kinde.

Appearing in Caro

The Palermo brothers, tagged the "Apostles of Cheer," will appear at Caro High School Cafeteria Friday night, May 11 at 6:45 p.m.

As special representatives of Youth for Christ International, they have sung, played and charmed their way through 45 countries in the last 25 years. Four of their twenty-three overseas tours have taken them to Viet Nam, and others have brought them deep into the Ecuadorian jungle. Their most recent trip to the Orient included crusades in Cambodia, Laos, Thailand and Hong Kong. On this trip they were sponsored by World Vision International.

Hawks chop Bad Axe to stay in title race

The Cass City Red Hawks stayed in contention for the Thumb B Conference title last Thursday as they notched their second diamond win in three tries with an 8-6 slugfest victory over the Bad Axe Hatchets.

Cass City stretched its margin to six runs in the second and added two more in the fourth to hand Gary Meredith the loss.

Bliss went the first 4 2/3 innings and was charged with all six runs and eight hits. Jerry Toner, back with the team, mopped up in the final 2 1/3 innings pitching hitless ball to preserve the victory.

Dan Mellendorf and Kip Hopper with three hits each led the attack for Cass City. Cass City hammered out 11 hits and was charged with only one error.

Vocational Office Block helps students choose business careers

The project, according to Woody.

Woody said the program may have been too successful in one aspect. The number of people in the program planning to attend college or business schools has dropped to almost zero.

"We have scholarships available for students in the business area, but I can't seem to interest anyone in them," he commented.

"One girl received an award of about $900 to advance her training and she turned it down because she landed a job. I can't seem to generate any interest and we have scholarships available."

Woody said part of the problem comes from the fact that a job holds more security than further education. In addition a general backlash to higher education seems more apparent.

"When we went to school, if you weren't bound for college, you were out of it," Woody said. "Now it appears to be just the other way around."

The availability of jobs in the business area has grown and the program hopes to help high schoolers find the field into which they fit by exposing them to all aspects of it.

Woody judges the program a success in its initial year and wants to see it continued and expanded.

Acapulco Gold is porno, says pastor

April 28, 1973

Dear Editor:

After the attention given in last week's Chronicle to the pornography at the high school library, perhaps a few observations on my part would help clarify my position.

First, I did read the book, Acapulco Gold, in its entirety. If the students, who wrote to the Chronicle, had been at the school board meeting, they would not have jumped to the conclusion that I had not read the book. I do not agree, however, that a book has to be read in its entirety in order for one to know its character.

Certainly, one would have to read only enough of a book to see its plot, its vernacular, and its dominant theme to know if it were pornographic.

Secondly, the students' statement that Acapulco Gold is neutral on the subject of smoking marijuana is in error. Marijuana is clearly presented in the book as an aphrodisiac (sex stimulant) and therefore desirable. Incidentally, the whole plot of the book is built on a false premise, since marijuana has been proven to be, not a sex stimulant, but a depressant.

Thirdly, the book is pornographic. The dominant theme of the book is premarital and salacious. There is no other major theme. A girl who could not be seduced otherwise, is portrayed as easily seduced after smoking marijuana. Vulgar four-letter words are used to describe sexual intercourse, public hair, and male and female sex organs. Vile, obscene expressions are found on practically every page throughout the book. To compare the book to The Canterbury Tales, or even The Godfather, is like comparing beef stew to a bucket of slop. The licentiousness in Acapulco Gold could more properly be classified with Deep Throat and Curious Yellow. In page after page, sexual intercourse is described in such detail that absolutely nothing is left to the imagination. Between the sex scenes, there is only drivel which belongs in the same class with Porky Pig. There is no reliable educational material in the book, nor is there, by the widest stretch of the imagination, any social redeeming qualities about the book. Acapulco Gold is a depraved piece of filth.

modesty, fornication and vile language is still sin. It is time for decent people everywhere to take a stand for righteousness.

Sincerely,

Lloyd L. Streeter
Pastor

Soil district thanks Chronicle for coverage

Cass City Chronicle
Cass City, Michigan 48726
April 27, 1973

Dear Sir:

The Tuscola Soil Conservation District would like to say "Thank You" for the fine coverage you have given our news articles.

Recently the Tuscola Soil Conservation District distributed 234,000 tree seedlings to over 400 people to be planted in the spring of 1973. Due to the fine coverage we received, the Tuscola District had another successful tree program.

This is an excellent way of getting conservation on the land. Thanks again.

Sincerely yours,
Leon Keinath
District Chairman
