

County Commissioners reverse stand on annexation

The Tuscola County Board of Commissioners apparently did an about-face Tuesday and voted, on advice of legal counsel, to notify the state that it would not stand in the way of approval of a petition to annex land to the village of Caro.

In what appeared at times to be a confused meeting, the board went on record in favor of the annexation of about 18 acres of land to the village of Caro. George Holmes, legal counsel to the board, advised the commissioners that they had no authority to rescind their approval of the original petition. Approval to rescind came May 8.

At Tuesday's meeting, Donald Smith, a local building contractor, presented the commissioners with a petition stating that 10 of the 18 property owners involved in the land in question, favor annexation to Caro. Earlier, William Scott, Intermediate Superintendent of Schools for Tuscola county, acting as a private citizen, contended that perhaps the village did not have a majority. Smith's petition holds no legal status.

At the May 8 meeting, Scott charged that the village had misled the board into thinking that a majority favored annexation. He contended that a majority did not favor the move. He said at that time that he did not necessarily oppose annexation—he merely questioned the means involved.

In effect, the annexation petition as originally presented, will stand.

Commissioner Maynard McConkey characterized the whole situation as confusing, saying that the issue is not really settled yet.

"I have maintained that this should have gone before the village council in the first place," McConkey said.

In other business, the board approved the purchase of a Pontiac police car for the Sheriff's department. The automobile, specially equipped with high performance components, will be purchased from the Bell Greig agency in Caro and will cost $3,650.00.

Money for the purchase of the automobile will come from federal revenue sharing funds.

Another set of bids, originally scheduled to be opened today, were left untouched for the time being. Bids on radios for a civil defense band system linking all law-enforcement agencies in the county were left unopened due to confusion on the part of the bidders.

According to Commissioner McConkey, the various bidders submitted quotations on different components of the system. Not all bid on exactly the same items. As a result, the board is asking all bidders to re-submit bids on the project. Opening for these bids was set for June 26.

In other action, David L. Parsh, representing a group of citizens which assembled a complete directory of service agencies in Tuscola county, requested additional funds for financing the project.

Parsh requested an additional $676 to defray expenses in publishing the 142 page document. It lists individually, every service agency in the county.

The board earlier donated $130 toward the project.

Complete cost of the booklet came to $1,359.00. Parsh commented that the expense might have gone higher, had it not been for volunteer work in preparing it.

The board referred the request to its claims committee for study.

The commissioners also heard a report from George Holmes, prosecuting attorney for Tuscola county, who recommended that the post be made a full time position.

Holmes did not name a specific dollar figure in his request, but urged the board to take the matter under advisement. The commissioners referred the request to the finance committee for further study.

The board also approved the contract with court house employees and accepted the report of the personnel committee urging acceptance. The report was based on an extensive study by Yaeger and associates of Falls Church, Va., who classified each position in the court house and made recommendations regarding compensation.

Among the issues settled involved longevity compensation, coupled with performance and work records.

Salaries for the following department heads were set:

Equalization director, $11,835; Friend of the Court, $9,277; undersheriff, $10,733. In addition, deputies in all offices received $7,280, and appraisers salaries were set at $9,277.

The board could not give a percentage of increase figure over previous salaries. Clerk Elsie Hicks said these figures would be ready by the board's next meeting.

The commissioners also authorized grading and black-topping at the Social Service grounds on W. Caro Road. Money for this project will come out of federal revenue sharing funds and amount to $6,000.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES at L & S Standard Service in Cass City. The station will be closed on Sundays due to a shortage in gasoline supplies from Amoco Oil Co.

Cass City, Thumb feel pinch as gasoline supplies start to dwindle

If you are a steady customer of L & S Standard in Cass City, and plan to fill your car on Sunday, you are in for a disappointment.

Starting this Sunday, the station will be closed, due to the nation's gasoline shortage. Large white letters explaining the situation were painted on the front window of the station Monday night.

Station manager Floyd Luetke explained that, while supplies of gasoline from Standard Oil remain the same as last year, his business volume is up between 10 and 15 per cent. He explained that if the station did not close its doors on Sunday, his allotment of gasoline could be gone by October.

"Louie and I won't know how to act having two Sundays in a row off," Luetke laughed. Louie is his partner in the business, Louis Salas. Together, they have run the business for eight and one-half years, never missing a Sunday until now.

Luetke explained that most of the station's Sunday business involved transit traffic, not local, steady customers. He said he wanted to make sure these latter patrons could be served continuously, and so the decision was reached to lock the door each Sunday.

Luetke said the recent two-cent-per-gallon tax increase on gasoline has not appreciably affected business at the station, adding that it was not until a short time ago that he began charging the second cent of the tax on the pumps. Previously, he said, he absorbed part of the tax hike, which amounted to nearly $350.

Luetke said price is becoming less of an issue, now that the shortage of fuel is making its presence felt.

"I haven't heard any complaints on price in the last two months," he said. "Our price is now just about the same as it is in Detroit. Before, we heard complaints that we were as much as 10 cents a gallon higher than the city."

A spokesman for Amoco Oil Company in Detroit characterized the current shortage situation as "extremely serious."

Wayne Piper, manager of pricing for the firm, explained that as of May 1, all allocations to Amoco dealers, jobbers and commercial customers would remain at 100 per cent of their 1972 purchases. With demand up some seven per cent over last year in the state, this spells shortage, according to Piper.

"This will force some dealers to curtail hours or close on certain days altogether," Piper said. He indicated that no Standard oil service station in Michigan has yet been faced with the possibility of closing down for lack of fuel supplies.

He said the company has embarked on an ambitious advertising campaign to urge conservation of gasoline supplies until more crude oil can be obtained and more refineries can be built.

Piper called the situation a crisis and added that there are no quick solutions to the problem.

"We are using up gasoline 10 per cent faster than it is being made," he said. "Without some kind of conservation, the possibility of run-outs is a very real one."

He said that, along with increased imports of crude oil and refined petroleum, more deep-water ports are needed for giant oil tankers.

Additionally, Piper says the oil industry needs some considerations from environmental groups so that more offshore drilling can take place.

"Right now, offshore drilling has almost come to a standstill," Piper contended.

He said that, in one sense, the crisis is over because the public has become aware of the situation and is beginning to act.

The advertising campaign by Amoco focuses on the fact that if every driver used one gallon less of gasoline, there would not be a gasoline shortage. Additionally, driving at reduced speeds is advocated by the firm as a method of conserving fuel.

Asked about the charge that the large companies are creating an artificial shortage in an attempt to drive the independent operator out of business, Piper refuted such claims.

"This shortage is as real as anything," he said. "In fact, the shortage is why the independent is in trouble. Before, independents bought up surplus supplies of gasoline to market at a reduced price. Well, now there just aren't any more surpluses."

Other stations in Cass City are also beginning to feel the pinch.

Clare Mellendorf, manager of Clare's Sunoco, said that, while his supplies for the remainder Owen-Gage district's quandry: Where do we go from here?

Comment wants out of Owen-Gage

Clare Comment, 3750 Bay City-Forestville Rd., Gagetown, is mad.

He's upset about the quality of education offered high school students in the Owendale-Gagetown High School and wants out of the district.

In fact, he's so upset that he, along with several of his neighbors, are taking their sons and daughters to Cass City High School, which will take them on an open-door arrangement, free from any tuition charges.

Currently Cass City High School operates an open admissions policy which allows students from fringe areas of surrounding districts to attend classes here. No tuition was charged last year and, while tuition-free education cannot be guaranteed, according to Supt. Donald Crouse, it has been part of the policy for a number of years.

Comment says he will do everything in his power to get what used to be the old Gagetown district into the Cass City system.

"We want out," Comment states emphatically, "and we'll do anything to get over to Cass City. We'll do our damndest to get out of Owen-Gage."

Comment says that currently Owen-Gage property owners are paying $20.55 per thousand of assessed valuation for school support, while Cass City owners are paying $20.31 per thousand. He compared the situation to buying an automobile.

"It's like having a choice between buying a Chevy at $3,000 or a Cadillac for the same price," he said. "Of course, you'd take the Cadillac. Well, here, the Cadillac is Cass City High School and the Chevy is Owen-Gage."

He said he and his neighbors will work hard to dissolve the district. He commented that the Owen-Gage board has thus far refused to even discuss the possibility of property owners in the Gagetown area annexing to Cass City.

Comment explained that the notion of a petition drive to split the Owen-Gage district was presented to Glen Sanford, superintendent of the district, who turned the idea down, favoring the building of a new school.

"They couldn't build the school building 15 years ago," Comment said, "and how do they think they can do it now?"

Comment listed two reasons for preferring to send his children to Cass City High School.

"First of all, it won't cost any more to become part of the Cass City system," he said. "And we'd be in a better school. I talked to one boy who went onto college from Owen-Gage and he told me that, even though he's doing all right now, things would be a little easier for him if he could have taken some of the

OWEN-GAGE HIGH SCHOOL, center of controversy in the financially beleaguered school district.

Owen-Gage board member still optimistic

Owen-Gage Board of Education member Ronald Good, S. Pohanz Rd., Owendale, sees the next few months as probably the most important in the future of the district.

The board, armed with two statements from the electorate saying what voters do not want, now must come up with an answer that will satisfy critics who charge that nothing has been done to save the system.

"We just completed a 10-year study of the area," he says. "And with the last vote, it appears clear that the voters want to keep the district."

Good explains that now the focus of the board shifts to the possibility of building a new high school. Architects met with the board this week to lay the framework for a vote on the question, perhaps coming in September or October, according to Good.

"We're moving as fast as we can," Good says, "and we're doing everything humanly possible to satisfy the voters. Most of the criticism comes of course from people who aren't satisfied."

Good says the district is split badly in terms of opinion toward the school system and that this makes it extremely difficult to satisfy everyone and make them happy. He says it puts the board in an awkward position.

"No taxpayer is looking for higher millage," he explained, "but we have to have a school and this seems the only answer right now."

Good explains that the board itself was split for a time on the question of merger with Unionville-Sebewaing. That question was turned down by a three-to-one margin April 30.

Good says a new building program depends on how the board puts together the question of building.

"If we could come in with a proposal to build at $1.5 million, people might buy it," he says cautiously. If it goes as high as $2.5 or $3 million, then it would probably be defeated.

He maintains that the board has moved rapidly attempting to do what the people wanted, but advises that any action takes time and that voters must be patient. He sees a definite future for Owen-Gage.

"If this district wants to survive, it can for a good number of years," Good says. He cited a number of other smaller districts in the Thumb which are sound financially, and thinks Owen-Gage can follow suit.

"If the taxpayers want this district," he says, "it can go on."

Good cites one point on which practically all factions agree—the old high school building cannot continue to be used much longer. He agrees that it is beyond repair and says renovation of the structure would end up costing as much as a new building.

Good says personally that he is enthusiastic about putting the question of a new building on the ballot.

"The results of the last two votes seem to say that the two a year until the facility is completed.

Wissner says it all boils down to administration.

"The leadership is very poor," he claims. "If there was some push from the top, things could happen."

Wissner says that a new building could solve part of the facility and morale problem among taxpayers in the district.

"Right now there isn't any motivation in the system at all," he says. "It needs a shot in the arm and this could do part of it."

The rest, he contends, rests on the board of education. So far, Wissner says, the board has shown a consistent "lack of backbone" in dealing with school problems, claiming it has not worked for the best educational interests of the district.

He says that, among students at the high school, spirit is high. It is with the adults that problems lie, he maintains, stemming in part from what he sees as a lack of action on the part of the board.

Wissner says that taxes are currently high enough and that any extra levies for building probably could not pass at this time. Yet, he said that these same taxpayers could work with what is already there and strive to improve it.

"This district has potential and can be made to work," he says. "It has something to offer if it can get some leaders who will fight for it and make it work."

He maintains that the board can begin building a new high school without another tax increase. The old structure,

"If It Fitz . . ."Where is my milk?

BY JIM FITZGERALD

The day started bad and ended worse, with late milk. Everyone has a pet peeve.

I had lathered my face for shaving in a Holiday Inn in Detroit. I reached in the toilet case for my razor. It was hard to find among my wife's bottles, tubes, brushes, combs, curlers, coffee pot and indoor grill. In fact, I couldn't find it.

"Where is my razor?" I screamed politely.

My wife made a hurried search and confirmed she'd done it again. She'd forgotten to pack my razor.

"Don't worry about this shaving cream on my face," I said, "my tears will wash it away."

Then we went to the ballpark to see the Tigers lose again. My daughter insisted we sit in the centerfield bleachers so she could get the sun. I don't like to sit in the sun because my face turns red and people call me Cherry Nose. But my wife said there was no need to worry. She pulled a tube of suntan lotion out of her gigantic purse and slopped grease all over my face.

Immediately the sun went down and never reappeared.

Just call me greasy whiskers. The only decent way to sit in the bleachers is with elbows on knees, and chin in hands. My chin kept slipping through my hands and hitting my knees.

But fruitless lube jobs are not my pet peeve. Stay aboard, we're getting to that now. . . .

That evening we went to a fancy restaurant for dinner. And the waitress did it to me again. I told her I wanted milk with my dinner but she didn't think I meant it. Waitresses never believe I am serious about milk. They will pour me 15 cups of coffee an hour. They will pot me with tea and jug me with wine. But they won't bring me a glass of milk.

Because of my wife's affliction (allergic to Betty Crocker), our family eats out a lot. The kids and Ma always watch with great trepidation as I attempt to get milk. When the waitress, as usual, fails to bring it with the main course, I remind her with great politeness that I ordered milk. I want to scream and pound the table but I don't.

After all, this one waitress is not responsible for what a thousand other waitresses have done to me through the years. So, obviously impressed by my charming manners, the waitress says she'll bring the milk right away.

And then I don't see her again for 3 days.

I like to wash my food down with cold milk. So, at first, I don't eat anything, hoping the milk will appear. But the food is getting cold. So I eat it slowly, snarling all the time and eyeing the kitchen door with increasing anger. By now I know my waitress has gone out the back door to catch a train for Wisconsin where she will enroll in an agricultural college and learn how to handle a cow and she will bring my milk the day after she graduates.

And the milk will arrive in an unopened carton, along with a soda straw. Real class. But it doesn't matter. By now my family has carried me outside and dumped me in the car, a sobbing, beaten, hollow shell of the man I used to be before I was weaned.

Onward and upward.

Weapons come and go, but the most potent weapon in life will always be public opinion.

"Some people's budgets," notes Sunshine Magazine "are in such a mess that you'd think they were getting advice from the government."

Owen-Gage school quandry

built in 1903, cannot be expanded, most authorities agree.

Wissner cites serious problems with the junior high program as well, mostly centering on discipline. Again, he blamed the board indirectly for the difficulties.

"Teachers become a product of their environment," he said. "and the environment here doesn't lend itself to support. The board will not act on these problems and people are simply fed up with the junior high."

Wissner agrees with most observers that the system cannot go on with the business of education without some major steps toward improvement. He says that a building of some kind must be built in order for the district to survive. If it fails, then the question of dissolving Owen-Gage will become a very real possibility.

"The board should have pushed for a building earlier instead of talking merger," he says. "When we merged, we were told that there would be a new high school built. Then, after the votes were counted, they went over to Unionville-Sebewaing and started talking merger."

Essentially, there has been no real work to develop the district, according to Wissner, due to lack of commitment on the part of the board. Yet he remains optimistic about the future of Owen-Gage if a building and changes in attitude of board members can be brought about.

He speculates that, if the vote were held today, the question of a new high school building probably would not pass.

In addition to changes in attitude on the board, Wissner thinks board members should be limited to no more than one eight year term. He feels this would bring some new thinking into the administration of the district and make change more possible.

Wissner maintains that people in the district do not want to lose their identity, and that, with more involvement in school affairs, Owen-Gage can be made to work.

COMMENT

extra subjects he could have gotten at Cass City."

A second reason he cited involved a better vocational training program available at Cass City. He said courses in mechanics, for example, would be invaluable to many Owen-Gage students, if they were available with quality instruction.

Comment, together with neighbor Keith Goslin, said they both will send their youngsters to Cass City regardless. They accused the Owen-Gage board with taking residents backward in education.

"Anyone who thinks we can build a new school building has got to be out of their minds," Comment stressed. "If they couldn't build it 15 years ago, they sure can't build it now."

Comment, who lives on a 360 acre farm just west of Gagetown, said he would like to see a petition drive instigated to split the district and send the Gagetown students to Cass City. According to sentiments expressed by his neighbors, he said, most of the Gagetown people would vote for annexation to Cass City.

He has a seventh-grader and two fifth-graders currently enrolled in the Owen-Gage system. He said they will eventually go to Cass City when the time comes. Goslin has three students who will attend Cass City.

While Comment and Goslin are not sure what the outcome of a petition drive will be, they both agree that they will not send their students to Owen-Gage High School, even if it means getting in the car and driving them to and from school each day in Cass City.

Meanwhile, they will still continue to pay school taxes to a system they have both refused to use or acknowledge as the institution of higher learning for their children.

Good says a last resort move might be to put the existing building up for sale and use monies derived from such a disposal toward a new facility. If this cannot be done, then he sees the whole situation going before the intermediate board for action.

Good summed up the position the board finds itself in by saying that the voters seem to want their district to remain a separate entity, but are divided sharply over just exactly what they want in terms of facilities, programs and taxes.

"We don't seem to have any clear-cut answers," Good says. "Apparently the voters want to build, but just how much they want to build, we aren't sure."

The board, according to Good, will try to find out with the building vote, hopefully by autumn.

FROM THE

Editor's Corner

It was a good day for the Chronicle when M. F. (Mac) Schell retired.

Mac's in his 60's and if I had to work as hard as he does now when I quit, I'd never retire. I couldn't stand the pace.

Mac is an expert in bindery work. . . . one of the off-shoots of the printing trade. Recently the Chronicle print shop installed a large, contrary folding machine that is as temperamental as Michigan's weather and just as hard to control.

Hard that is unless you understand its whims and idiosyncrasies. Its mood of the day.

When it works it's a thing of delight. It can take a flat sheet of paper and fold it 5 different ways so that it comes out a 16-page booklet ready to staple and it turns them out faster than you can count.

When it doesn't work it won't fold a letter-sized paper even once.

It won't for us at the Chronicle. It always does for Mac Schell who gives it a pat here and a touch there and presto it's a machine of delight again.

But the discussion here is Mac Schell, not printing.

Mac is a slim, greying senior citizen that looks younger than he really is. He's a restless dynamo always moving, always hurrying. Most of the time talking away a blue streak as he works.

He's in business now in Cass City, rebuilding folding machines so they look and run like new.

That's what he does when he's not in Chicago, or Wisconsin or somewhere in Michigan baling out printers with folding problems.

He'll be gone 20 hours, 30 hours, 40 hours with virtually no sleep except what he catches on the plane on his way to work and back.

Then he'll pop into the office and see if we needed him while he was away. Not for the money. Just because he likes us here and wants to help out.

You've heard it: "You can take the boy out of the country, but not the country out of the boy." . . . that's Mac.

He likes it in small towns like Cass City. Likes the people, likes the area.

I've a hunch that's why he quit as a foreman of a large Detroit bindery although he says it's because he was "tired of punchin' a clock." He tried the easy life in Hawaii before moving to Caro to live. . . . and to work.

And I think that his little home owned business is just the retirement "hobby" for him.

He's of the old school where 10-hour days were routine and the spectre of the depression of the 1930's are still real. Where you learned to really work or you were quickly on the street and in the breadlines.

More than that his work for printers has to make him feel needed, perk up his ego, his self-respect. All of us need that.

In the few short months I've learned a lot about Mac Schell. Where he worked, his relatives, his career.

I feel I know him well. But you know something? When I started writing this I realized I don't know his real first name.

But I won't forget the favors he's done for me and I'll bet there are dozens of printers around the country who feel the same way.

There are worse ways to retire.

Rabbit tracks

By John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help)

In case you haven't looked that way recently, silently folding its tent and slipping away from Cass City is the branch office of the Secretary of State. That's the license bureau, in case official titles leave you mystified.

What's more, Cass City's car dealers are convinced that the bureau won't return and drivers will have two options. One is to get plates by mail and the other is sweat it out at a neighboring larger town.

A snide sorehead might point out that this is what economy in government is all about. Higher wages to politicians and less service to taxpayers.

Miss Joanne Eskilsen caught me at a dinner the other night and made me slightly uncomfortable by thanking me for the "nice" article about the school board candidacy. I'm simply not used to this kind of treatment.

Things were normal last Thursday when the paper was under fire for several stories including the one about the water charge outside the village limits and the Gagetown outlook review.

Many of the good people at Gagetown felt that the paper gave a false impression of the town with the "quietness" reference to the community. . . . and told us so. One of them was Elery Sontag who said that he feels that Gagetown is a bustling community right now and that the paper should say so.

With the upcoming vote for the annexation of the property now owned by Dr. H. T. Donahue and under option to the school, the Chronicle wanted to present the plans for development to its readers.

However Supt. Donald Crouse says there are no plans at the time other than to use part of the area for expanded playground when the tax money comes rolling in.

About $30,000 of the expected $120,000 to be garnered from the tax has been tentatively earmarked for this development. One thing positive: there will be no work this summer as the money won't be available, if authorized June 11, until 1974.

How can the school earmark $30,000 for a "no plan" development? Good question. The answer is a faith that the money won't be squandered and a realization if the full amount is not needed, it's not necessary to levy the authorized millage.

Three weeks ago Chronicle foreman Jim Moore stuck his thumb in a press and the injury has sidelined him since and is expected to keep him from work for another week.

He reports in periodically from his trailer home and confides that he's about to go stir crazy sitting around the television doing nothing and that he'll be happy to get back on the job.

As a guy who gets bored just sitting around the house on Saturday afternoon and Sunday I can understand his complaint. A little work is good therapy.

A little, I said. Since Jim's been gone I've been getting more of that "therapy" than I need and, I suspect, so has the rest of the staff which pitched in to take up the slack by working extra days and extra hours to meet rigid Chronicle deadlines.

Speaking of deadlines, Monday is the day that Memorial Day is celebrated. Monday holidays cut off an important production day at the paper so it's necessary to advance news and ad copy deadlines to publish the paper at the usual Wednesday hour.

Your usual good cooperation will be appreciated.

Gasoline supplies start to dwindle of May are still plentiful, next month is another question. He indicated that his allotment of fuel could be down as much as 14 per cent and suggested that he, too, might either have to close on Sunday or curtail hours in the evenings.

He blamed part of the shortage on industry which has switched from coal to oil as a major source of fuel. This, he said, has taken more crude oil which would ordinarily have been refined into gasoline.

"I've been in business for 14 years and this is the first time I've ever seen anything like this," Mellendorf said. "For the time being, we'll have to play this thing by ear."

He added that new cars now get only about half the gasoline mileage that older vehicles obtain, which adds to the already tight situation.

At Ken's Mobil, manager Ken Hayes indicated that he has no supply problems this summer because he bought the allotments of gasoline from two stations which have gone out of business in the Thumb area. He said that, had he not been able to do this, he, too, would be feeling the pinch.

"Right now, I've got no problems," Hayes said. Duane Chippi of Cass City Oil and Gas Co., indicated that he, too, will have no supply problem this summer. He said a check with his supplier confirmed that he will be furnished all the gasoline he can use for the foreseeable future.

Konrad Konwalski, manager of Konrad's Bay Service, said he is having no trouble getting his supplies of gasoline from Dow Chemical Co. A check with his supplier last week indicated there would be no supply problems for his station, located at the corner of Leach and Church Streets.

He indicated, however, that he could not guarantee what the future might bring.

Move to freeze legislators salaries bears second look

A group of irate citizens has been busy the past year circulating petitions around the state calling for a constitutional amendment to cut back the pay of members of the Legislature. The proposal would set a base pay of $15,000 and require a vote of the people to raise the amount above that.

The idea has been met with a very receptive audience in numerous places. Since the legislature is largely involved as an entity, except when people want something from it, this presents a chance to "get" all 148 members at once.

But the idea bears a closer look, since it would make a very significant change in state government over the long period.

Basically, legislative salaries represent only a drop in the bucket of state government spending. The budget for the state for the coming fiscal year will total more than $5 billion when all taxes, federal money and other revenues are added up. Legislative salaries will total less than $3 million—only 6.10ths of one per cent of the total budget.

Indeed, legislative salaries make up less than one-sixth of the legislative budget, which tops $19 million. So a cut in salaries, even if they were completely abolished, would have little effect on the budget or on taxes.

Then there is the question of what effect the forced cut would have on the legislature. Would it produce better legislation or better legislators? The answer has to be no.

Now, $15,000 a year is nothing to sneeze at. Most Michigan families live on less than that. But it is less than many people make, and if the highest quality of person is going to be expected to serve in the legislature, he or she can't be asked realistically to take a financial bath to do it. It's the old truism about getting what you pay for.

At $15,000 a year, the lawyers and other professionals would either quit altogether or spend less time on legislative work. In other words, they'd either leave altogether or spend less effort in order to make more money on the outside. Few can be expected to serve for little money for long out of public spirit.

It might be true that some members of the legislature wouldn't be worth the money if they had their check cut in half. But many put in long hours and do not get rich.

If people are truly upset with what the legislature does, they can show it at the next election by defeating their state representative or senator. It's not as if members were locked in for life.

The salaries now are set by the State Officers Compensation Commission, which showed last November that it is responsive to how people think around the state by not raising the legislative salaries at all. It was a bit ironic when that happened, since some of the legislators who conceived of the SOCC had thought of it as a means of raising their salary without being blamed for it.

It boils down to the fact that the movement to cut salaries is based on emotions. It is an emotional response to what is perceived by some to be misconduct or lack of productivity by the legislature.

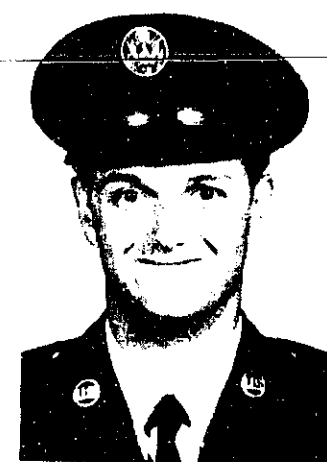

Everyone has a right to get emotional. Everyone has a right to vote against an incumbent if he wants to throw the incumbent out. Everyone even has a right to try to petition a pay cut proposal into the constitution.

But the Constitution is the foundation for principles of government. It is hard to change, and it should be. It isn't

KETCHUM'S KNAPSACK

Down with bagpipes

By Jim Ketchum

There is no sound more grating on these poor over-debilitated ears than that of a set of bagpipes. These infernal contraptions have never ceased to produce grimaes of pain, waves of anguish and a general tendency to move to other parts.

Bagpipes continuously whine. This sound resembles, almost exactly, that sound produced by the venerable Hoover vacuum cleaner as it performs the invaluable service of sucking up dirt from my floor.

A bagpipe, so I am told, cannot even begin to do this. I have wondered on occasion, about rigging a vacuum cleaner in such a manner so that I could play it, start a new fad and become a millionaire overnight. But I'm not so sure I could stand it.

No one ever knows whether a bagpipe is being played off-key or not. It doesn't really matter, because regardless of who plays them, at what tempo or in what direction the wind is blowing, the bagpipe still sounds like someone attempting to vacuum up a housecat they no longer desire.

I am told that a U. S. Open Bagpipe Band championship contest will be held in Alma on May 26 and 27. While I don't know just how many sets of the infernal pipes will be involved, I do know it will be too many.

I can picture nothing more ludicrous than seeing a grown man dressed in kilts, knee socks and tam-o-shanter, holding something patterned after the bladder of some ancient pig, with wooden pipes attached, blowing into the contraption which produces a sound that shatters glass as well as nerves.

The story goes that the Irish invented the bagpipes and then sold them to the Scots as a joke. The Scots simply haven't caught on yet, it seems.

When they do, it will be a devastating blow. Imagine a whole nation turning red in the face all at once. Imagine the laughter which will build up over the Emerald Isle at that moment. It might even stop some of the senseless killing in the north for a few minutes anyway.

My wife cannot seem to understand this inherent dislike of mine for bagpipes. One of the first things she discovered after we were married was that the best and only time to play her bagpipe records was when I was not home. She loves those blasted things and I know the house must rock with the sound of old Scotland when I'm not around.

I know this is true because sometimes, when I call home, I can detect the screech and whine of pipes in the background. "I hear the vacuum cleaners, dear," I'll say politely. "Well, you aren't here and I wanted to play them," she'll reply. "And they aren't vacuum cleaners, either," she retorts as the pitch of her voice begins to rise.

That's what you say, I'll add, and the argument is once more on.

About a year ago, a version of the venerable old hymn, "Amazing Grace," was recorded by an outfit called the Royal Scots Dragon Guards. I used to wonder each time, as that song began over the radio, just how many listeners reached for the knob and unceremoniously switched the device off. I'm sure there were more than just yours truly.

What can be done to stamp out this menace to my eardrums and, to a lesser extent, society as well? Perhaps we could form an organization dedicated to the eradication and extinction of the bagpipe. If formed, I would appoint Arthur Godfrey, another bagpipe hater from years back, as the coordinator of activities. His job would be to clean up the musical atmosphere by removing the bagpipe from general consumption. We could line a series of the contraptions up and he could run over them in a new Chrysler.

We would find the mad artist who manufactures these things and try to get him into another line of work. Perhaps the Hoover company could use him in vacuum cleaner design.

We could hold contests, giving away as many as 600 bagpipe records for first prize, along with a four-pound hammer. Former pipe players could be converted to glass blowers, adding immeasurably to that art.

With what could we replace the bagpipes? Any instrument you can name would do for me. I heard a record on the radio this morning done by a group called Duelling Tubas. We could export a shipload of these to Scotland, in exchange for reloading that same ship with bagpipes, to be set adrift in the mid-Atlantic and destroyed by a torpedo practice crew from any nation that wished the honor.

Kaynos are also nice, because they take absolutely no intelligence to play. Perhaps we could institute this instrument as a Scottish pastime, while concurrently opening a few trouser factories to cover all those naked knees.

Whatever the answer, one must be found. It won't be easy, but I stand ready to accept the challenge.

And a one, and a two, . . .

BETTER HEALTH

Nephrosis and growing old

BY DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

Nephrosis is a common disease of children, which usually appears between the ages of 2 and 4 years, but may appear any time from birth until well into adult life. The cause of the disease is not known, but it affects the kidneys, so that they do not filter the blood as they should. As a result the child's body fills up with fluid and becomes swollen.

Until recently, there was very little that could be done for children with nephrosis, and according to Dr. Warren E. Grupe, associate pediatrician at the University Hospitals of Cleveland (Ohio), "About one-third improved on their own, one-third died, and one-third had on-going kidney disease."

Now, Dr. Grupe reports that he has been treating 23 nephrotic children with a combination of a drug called prednisone (which acts much as does cortisone) and another medicine, called chlorambucil. This addition is important, because prednisone, given alone, and over a long period of time, can have devastating side effects; the children taking it, often do not grow to their normal height and they may have the tendency to be too fat. The problem has been to find a way to get the children off of the prednisone.

Dr. Grupe has found that when he gave the chlorambucil with prednisone, 96 per cent of his group of 23 patients had a complete remission of the nephrosis for from 6 months to 5 1/2 years, the duration of the study to date. Further, they did not suffer from the usual side effects of the prednisone, and children who did not respond to the prednisone alone, got good results when they took it with the other drug. The medicines are taken every day for from 8 to 12 weeks. The children don't have to be put in a hospital. This is wonderfully good news.

GROWING OLD

Many a time, a person will come to my office, with many discomforts and no definite cause that I can find, except that he or she is past 70 and getting old. Often, such a person's problem is that he or she lacks the will to keep actively interested in life, and busy doing worthwhile things.

All of us, as we get older, tend to have more aches and pains, but it is how we react to these aches and pains that makes the difference: if the person has the will to turn his thoughts away from his physical distresses, and to help others and take an active interest in others, he can be like my old friend, the Reverend Frank C. Gale, for years a missionary to China, who a while ago, at the age of 84 wrote me so enthusiastically and so obviously with all of his marbles and all his sense of humor, that I was sure that age had not yet touched him. He enclosed a brief poem, written by Mrs. Marion Blydenburt of Ohio, who used to be in Nanchang, China. The poem is so full of wisdom, that I am reprinting it here:

HOW OLD ARE YOU?

Age is a quality of mind --
If you have left your dreams behind,
If hope is lost,
If you no longer look ahead,
If your ambitions' fires are dead--
Then you are old.

But if from life you take the best,
And if in life you keep the jest,
If love you hold --
No matter how the years go by,
No matter how the birthdays fly,
You are not old.

AN OBSERVATION

In that fine little journal, Today's Health, put out by the American Medical Association, there is a note saying that according to the American Hospital Association, a recent study shows that from 25 to 30 per cent of all adult medical and surgical patients in big city hospitals, regardless of diagnosis, have been found to be suffering from alcoholism.

While 120 patients in one year in a New York Hospital were admitted with the diagnosis of alcoholism, the house staff, upon further investigation, found 4,000 patients to be alcoholics.

How sad it is that we in America can do almost nothing to help the hundreds of thousands of our people whose lives, directly or indirectly, are ruined by alcohol.

One of the difficult problems in medicine is to find out why an older person has started to fail in health and strength. Dr. Alvarez tells you what he looks for in his medical examinations in his booklet "Why an Older Person's Health Is Failing." You may have his booklet by sending 25 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request for it to Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, Dept. CCC, Box 957, Des Moines, Iowa 50304.

Local herd sets production records

The registered holstein herd of Clare J. and Robert J. Carpenter of Cass City, has been recognized by the Holstein-Friesian Association, Brattleboro Vt. for individual lactation records enrolled in the Dairy Herd Improvement Registry official testing program.

Cows recognized for their exceptional food producing ability are: Betheldale Climax Lois 6526903, a five-year-old, produced 15,850 pounds milk and 541 pounds butterfat in 305 days. Betheldale Climax Juler Alice 7023801, a four-year-old, produced 16,960 pounds of milk and 722 pounds butterfat in 305 days. C. Crozdale Royal Arab 7670988, a seven-year-old, produced 17,040 pounds of milk and 665 pounds butterfat in 305 days. Betheldale Jule Standby Lily 6146719, a seven-year-old, produced 15,870 pounds of milk and 500 pounds butterfat in 305 days.

Michigan State University supervised the sampling, weighing and testing operations in cooperation with the Holstein organization's herd and breeding improvement programs.

Frankenmuth trip planned by Farm Bureau women

The Tuscola County Farm Bureau Women will enjoy a bit of Bavarian hospitality at Frankenmuth for their summer outing June 6, according to Mrs. Clare Carpenter, Cass City, Information Chairman.

They plan to see wood carvers at work and brewing techniques of the old German masters. As a special highlight, the group will lunch at the Bavarian Inn where the famous Glockenspiel Tower is housed.

The schedule is to meet at 9:30 a.m. in the parking lot of the Savings and Loan Bank, located at the stoplight corner in Frankenmuth. Mrs. William Hohman and Mrs. Henry Hohman of Vassar, in charge of arrangements, will also serve as guides for the tour.

The afternoon activities will include tours of the shops of both German and American charm, such as Bronner's, The Country Store, St. Lorenz church and other places of interest.

Participants are urged to form car-pools for transportation but the committee will pay for the luncheon. All Tuscola Farm Bureau women are invited to take part in the tour and reservations for lunch should be made with Mrs. William Hohman, 7719 Ormes Rd., Vassar, MI. 48768, by May 30.

AROUND THE FARM Prospects for fuel shortage grow

By William Bortel

The energy crisis is not just a conversation topic. It could be a severe problem for many farm operators in Tuscola county in 1973.

All midwest states are behind in spring work—plowing and planting. Michigan is no exception and also is delayed with spring work. However, we are further ahead than states to the south of us. Fuel requirements will be high.

Tuscola county has expanded its on-the-farm crop drying facilities during the last two years and a few more farmers are adding new facilities in 1973. Farmers have been forced to build on-the-farm driers as the corn acreage in Tuscola county expanded. Crop drying particularly may be hard-hit with a shortage of bottled gas this fall.

We do not suggest a panic situation but there are a few suggestions that farmers may wish to check:

- (1) Farmers should estimate their total fuel needs for spring and fall.
- (2) Farmers should contact fuel suppliers and get firm commitments if possible.
- (3) Farmers should determine fuel needs and availability before making additional major investments in new equipment.
- (4) Contact your fuel supplier and determine the local situation for fuel oil, diesel fuel, gas, natural gas or diesel fuel.

Suppliers and determine the local situation for fuel oil, diesel fuel, gas, natural gas or diesel fuel.

(5) Visit with your fuel suppliers and work out a program with them of your fuel needs and the peak demands for your operation. You may wish to purchase additional tanks to carry you through the next few years during the fuel shortage.

Many farmers in Tuscola county have checked with their fuel suppliers and have a program worked out with them. I believe we are going to be in a good situation in Tuscola county this spring. However, we may find ourselves with fuel shortages towards fall, especially if the corn is wetter than normal. Excessive moisture in corn will take additional quantities of gas and we are not prepared to meet this situation.

Sirup production

in Michigan

Michigan sugar bushes produced only 66,000 gallons of maple sirup this season, 20 per cent less than in 1972, according to the Michigan Crop Reporting Service. This was the smallest quantity of sirup produced since 1967 when only 60,000 gallons was produced.

Weather conditions this spring varied from favorable in the Upper Peninsula to most unfavorable in the southern Lower Peninsula. For the State as a whole, the season was not as good as last year. In the Upper Peninsula, there was relatively little snow in the woods to hamper tapping of trees and collection of sap, and about the right amount of freezing weather. Good runs were obtained.

It was a different story in the southern Lower Peninsula. Unseasonably warm weather in the first half of March, with no frost in the ground or freezing weather, sharply reduced the quantity of sap obtained from early runs. Many sugar bushes were closed early and the quantity of sirup produced was down sharply from last year. Conditions were more favorable in the northern Lower Peninsula and several bushes produced more sirup than last year.

The Secret That Was

Copyright 1973 Ketter Advertising Service, Inc., Strasburg, Virginia

When someone shares a secret, it's on its way to becoming no secret at all. And yet it doesn't cease to be a secret until you have shared it.

When Jesus preached in the wilderness, hundreds came miles to hear Him. They wanted to share His secret . . . the secret of God . . . the secret of Man and God.

So right there in the wilderness, it was on its way to becoming no secret at all. Except that, even today, not everyone has shared it.

Academically every intelligent person knows what Christianity is all about. But each Sunday all over this world someone is finding in church a new strength, a new purpose, a new faith. For the heart of Christ's message brings a human soul into harmony with a mighty and loving God . . . whose power gives our lives direction . . . whose concern gives our lives meaning.

The secret that was is still a secret, until YOU share it too.

The Chronicle

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

Dear Mister Editor:

The fellers discussed the matter up one side and down the other at the country store Saturday night, and when the motion final got to the floor a split vote sided with the candidate that was running for reelection as mayor of Los Angeles on the stay-away ticket. Speaking for the majority, Clem Webster said usual the best thing a politician can do for his country is be in another country.

The feller that wanted to keep the mayor's job built his campaign on all the trips he had took to Ireland and Africa; not to mention a regular vacation in Switzerland. He pointed out to the folks how slick everthing run in the mayor's office with him gone, and he allowed that all he wanted was a chance to keep up the good work. Clem said they is a lot to be said for that kind of a platform.

For instant, went on Clem, a feller that's in Africa can't be back home in his state legislature dreaming up a bill that would put a tax on excess sleep or somethin'. No congressman in Zanzibar can be in Washington voting for a increase in grants to retired generals that want to study peace time use of surplus hand grenades, went on Clem, and a judge that's attending a world conference in Paris ain't likely to hand down a ruling that women is eligible for aid for their younguns afore they're born.

Actual, broke in Zeke Grubb, strange things happen to people that git elected, and getting out of the country ain't allus a cure. Zeke said he had saw a piece in the paper about the "Congressional Handbook" that lists all the free services and privileges that come with the job. A seat in Congress is equal to a throne of them crowned heads in Europe, was Zeke's words. A Congressman gits 16 people to help in his office and $157,000 to pay em, he gits $42,500 for himself and everthing, including 31 different health plans, to be sure he is well took care of.

Ed Doolittle was ruled out of order when he rose to speak in favor of keeping congressmen on the job. The fellers agreed they was giving Ed executive privilege from testifying on account he voted for Nixon. Bug Hookum said from what he's reading in the papers about the Watergate case it looks like everybody with any connection to Nixon has got the no-talk privilege.

Practical speaking, Mister Editor, I got sympathy fer our Congress. Them congressmen got a heap of decisions to make on everthing from how to run their next campaign to trying to git part of the moon put in their district so they could visit there to. I see where folks in Swain County in North Carolina still can cuss legal. The legislature voted down a bill to put Swain with all but one other county where it's agin the law to cuss. Maybe, Mister Editor, voting agin some bills is as good as staying away.

Yours truly,
Uncle Tim

AGENT'S CORNER

Safety important in the home

Judy Marks — Extension Agent

Did you know more women fall than men? A fall not only is embarrassing, but it can cause serious injury or death.

The National Safety Council says - falls are the leading cause of accidental deaths in the home.

Over 19,000 persons die from falls annually - second only to motor vehicle fatalities. It isn't a very pretty picture, is it?

People take many things for granted and do not exercise an ounce of prevention. When was the last time you put something on the stairway to save you a trip? Oh yes, you did plan to bring it down on your next trip to the basement. All too often whatever you put on the stairs remains a little longer than planned. No one got hurt - you say to yourself. You might add - no one got hurt yet! Are you willing to take that chance with yourself and family?

Many people demand safety practices be observed in such places as schools, place of work, and public buildings. At the same time, these same people are taking all kinds of chances in their homes. Doesn't make good sense, does it?

You have an obligation to yourself and family to follow safety practices in your home. Accidents don't just happen!

On Friday, two deer-car crashes were reported. Around 6:30 a.m. a car driven by Ingrid Egey Samu, 6948 Richie Rd., Gagetown, struck and killed a deer as she was traveling west on M-31 at the intersection of Handy Road.

She told officers the animal ran out of the woods near the north edge of the pavement and darted into the path of her car. She was not injured.

Later that same day, another deer was killed when a car driven by George Hawley, 4405 Seeley, struck the animal when it jumped from the south ditch on M-31 a quarter of a mile west of Colwood Road. He was not injured. The accident took place around 9:25 p.m.

On Saturday, another deer was killed at almost the same spot on M-31 when Herbert Lobdell, 629 Lincoln, Caro, struck the animal around 9:15 a.m.

Cass City police report two traffic mishaps in the village last week.

On Tuesday, May 15, a car driven by Muriel Romig, 4293 Leach St., collided with a car driven by Michael Sieradzki, 1310 N. Crawford Rd., Deford. Officers said the Romig car was headed south on Seger Street at the same time that the Sieradzki car was traveling east on Pine.

Ms. Romig told officers she saw Sieradzki coming and pulled over to her right in an attempt to avoid a collision, but Sieradzki struck the Romig car in the right rear fender, spinning the vehicle completely around.

Neither driver was injured seriously. Sieradzki was ticketed for failure to yield the right of way.

On Friday, Charles Hughes, 6219 Houghton, reported to police that his car was struck by another vehicle while he was parked in the alley in back of the Western Auto store. Police have no clues in the hit-and-run accident.

Letters to the Editor

Reader blasts use of liquor

Dear Mr. Haire,

What intelligent people we Americans are!

The headline feature of last week's paper reads, "State police begin crackdown on drunk drivers in county."

The article tells of 275 arrests last year for drunk driving and that Tuscola has the highest rate of fatalities in the state in proportion to its population. 47 per cent of the deaths are due to drinking drivers and 34 per cent of all injuries to the same cause.

Ten extra state police are to be sent in with time and a half for overtime including appearance in court as witnesses. Judge Kern says that the court will be physically unable to handle the extra load.

Problems! Problems! Let's educate the public is suggested. We've been trying to do that ever since 1918 when Eleanor Roosevelt advised women to learn how to handle their liquor. In spite of all the education things grow worse.

If we could only wake up and cut the dog's tail off right behind the ears. No! No! We would lose his bark (revenue).

Just below this headline article we are informed that another outlet for beer and wine has been licensed.

When I started High School sixty-six years ago the back part of this building was called a saloon. The windows were high so the public could not see in. Eighteen year olds were not allowed. No decent woman ever entered the place and men who did were not respected in the community. The saloon keepers and bar tenders were considered the lowest form of employment.

We can legalize sin including gambling. Strong pleas are being made to legalize drugs and Nevada has done it for prostitution. But no laws can do away with the moral decay caused by sin or cancel its punishment. Ezekiel 18:4 declares, "the soul that sinneth, it shall die." Romans 14:10 "for we must all stand before the judgment seat of Christ."

God's laws do not change to suit the whims of men.

As long as there is a drug store, a grocery or a restaurant that stay out of the beer and wine or hard liquor business I will patronize them.

One more word of appreciation for ministers and school board members who dare to speak up and be counted. God give us more.

Yours to be counted
Jason A. Kitchin

Train serves Farm Bureau

Gagetown, Mi.
May 16, 1973

To the Editor:

I'm sure it was purely an oversight that Mr. England forgot to mention in his tour of quiet little Gagetown, that the quiet little train with the grass between the tracks, also supplies The Farm Bureau Fertilizer plant in addition to Mr. Turners J. P. Burroughs and Mr. Sullivan's Evans.

Yours truly,
G. Kehoe

Nothing personal in 'Gold' fight

May 21, 1973

Dear Editor:

Now that the school board has made a decision about the book which was recently under discussion, I want to put some things into perspective lest there be confusion in the minds of people.

First, I would not want the community to think that there is any personal animosity on my part towards Mr. Crouse or Mr. Richards. Both of these men are good and competent administrators, dedicated to their profession. I reject some of their school philosophy, but I do not reject them as persons. I disagree with them, but I do not dislike them. I believe they are doing a good job, generally, even if I disagree with certain school policies.

Much of this could also be said of the school board members. I wish them well too.

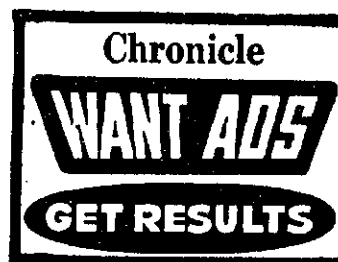

Secondly, as a minister of the Gospel, I have a responsibility to work for that which I believe to be right. The Scripture is the absolute standard by which I determine right. Without a militant church to press for that which is right, a community will go down and down. So discussion is healthy if kept on the right plane and if slander of individuals is avoided.

Thirdly, the community should not lose sight of what we were trying to accomplish in the recent debate. We were not so much concerned about getting one book removed from the library as we were with establishing a library policy about what type of books should be included. As it is now, there is no policy, hence no standard. No one knows where to draw the line on pornographic materials, because there is no policy. We believe it is for the good of the whole community that there be a policy prohibiting pornographic materials, and we will continue to press for one.

Sincerely,

Lloyd L. Streeter
Pastor

Arraign 2 in Tuscola Circuit Court

Two pleas were taken in Tuscola County Circuit Court Monday. Judge Norman Baguley presided.

Dean Emery, 214 S. Almer, Caro, was arraigned on a charge of larceny. He is charged with the March 18 break-in at Anderson's Appliance store in Caro in which a television set was taken.

Emery entered a plea of guilty and it was accepted by the court. Judge Baguley ordered a pre-sentencing investigation be conducted. Sentencing was set for June 18.

In another case, Rodney Mason, Beaverton, entered a plea of guilty to the second count in a two-count indictment charging him with taking a safe from a home in Arbutus township January 9.

The court dismissed the first count of breaking and entering at the home of Ervin Manchester, citing a lack of substantial evidence on the part of the prosecution.

Sentencing was set for June 18 and a pre-sentencing investigation was ordered. Bond was continued.

Harvey questionnaire asks for constituent opinion, advice

"I don't think there is any question that the response to our 13th annual Congressional Questionnaire will be the greatest ever. Our Washington staff is getting geared up for a return from over 20,000 individuals. It could be even higher."

Congressman Jim Harvey, Michigan's Eighth District, announced today the release of his annual Questionnaire - 14 key questions - with an added twist of asking constituents for legislative ideas and how he might be able to serve them better in the Congress.

"I am certain these additional inquiries on legislative ideas and my service in Congress will generate even more returns. And, hopefully, there will be very constructive and sound suggestions. At least, that is my intent although both could be considered controversial and inviting crude criticism. I am willing to run that risk for a good legislation proposal or a solid suggestion that I can utilize in providing even stronger representation both in Washington and our Eighth District," Congressman Harvey commented.

Harvey also pointed out another major change in the Questionnaire as it includes for the first time a separate voting column for 18 through 20 year olds. "I think it is important that the votes of our young women and men be noted. It should be interesting to compare the votes made by this group with older adults."

The leadoff question deals with whether the United States should provide assistance for the post-war reconstruction of North Vietnam. In addition, Congressman Harvey wants to find reaction to pending legislation that would prevent the President from committing U. S. troops to combat for more than 30 days without Congressional approval.

Other questions deal with amnesty, wage and price controls, health insurance programs, OEO, Federal funds to private and parochial schools, food stamps to striking workers, capital punishment, legalization of marijuana, and present postal service.

In addition, Congressman Harvey wants to find out if the people support the President's refusal to spend funds appropriated by Congress when he, the President, believes they are excessive. Also he inquires as to legislation to allow news reporters to keep their sources of information confidential and Federal help for day care centers.

Harvey said that in the past returns average from 12,000 to 20,000. "With most of our District newspapers printing the ballot as a public service, we are always assured that every single resident of our District, nearly 470,000 people, has a chance to vote."

HERE'S A CHANCE TO "VOTE IN CONGRESS"

As a reader service, we offer the following questionnaire prepared by Congressman Jim Harvey. All replies, to be mailed to Mr. Harvey, 2352 Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, D. C. 20515, will be held in strict confidence.

Correction

The Chronicle wishes to clear up any confusion created by last week's story concerning water service to lot owners residing outside the village limits.

The village council's policy regarding the situation is that a new line will be extended to replace the deteriorating water line and any lot owner wishing to annex to the village may tap into it. When the existing line finally fails, those lot owners not wishing to tap in may face the possibility of interruption of service. Other lot owners not on this line will not be affected. In addition, Mr. James MacTavish, mentioned in the story, is not affected by this water line.

We apologize for any confusion.

Car-deer accidents continue to rise

If you have been one of the unfortunate motorists who have struck and killed a deer with your car recently, you are not alone. According to Carlton "Bud" Jarvis, biologist at the Department of Natural Resources, between 200 and 300 deer are killed each year in Tuscola county.

On a statewide basis, the number of deer-auto collisions ranges about 10,000. While most of this problem lies in the central and southwest portion of the state, Tuscola kills its share.

"The deer kill in the county has been going up for the past 15 years and probably will continue to rise," Jarvis commented.

He said the food supply is more than adequate for deer to thrive, explaining that the animals can feed on corn and soy bean leftovers they find in fields, as well as natural food in the woods.

He said the state rate on car-deer collisions is actually far lower than other states. For example, he said that Pennsylvania drivers kill between 20,000 and 30,000 deer each year. He added that Tuscola county's kill ratios less than many other counties in the state.

He attributed this to the fact that the network of major highways in the county is not as highly developed as it is in the southern part of the state.

Jarvis said he expects to see another antlerless deer season next fall in Tuscola county, due to the size of the herd and the amount of cover in which they thrive. This, he explained, is a method of keeping a finger on the highway kill, which wastes animals that could have been taken by the hunter who buys his license.

Jarvis advised anyone who strikes and kills a deer with an automobile to notify either the sheriff's office, the state police or a conservation officer immediately in order to have the accident documented.

He also pointed out that the motorist may take possession of the animal after filling out a permit for it.

Ruth Hoffman reports favorable cancer crusade

Education is the major thrust of this year's crusade sponsored by the American Cancer Society in the Cass City area.

According to area chairperson Ruth Hoffman, about 35 area women are involved in a door-to-door campaign to acquaint and educate persons regarding early detection and cure for the disease which will kill over 14,000 in Michigan this year.

Thus far, the response has been good, according to Mrs. Hoffman, who has been involved with the program for the past two years.

While fund raising is not the major goal of the crusade, money is being collected by volunteers. So far, Cass City residents have donated $1,351, while another $706 has come from surrounding townships. The crusade began the Monday after Easter and Mrs. Hoffman said that most households will probably be contacted by the end of May.

Mrs. Hoffman explained that up to $10,000 of all monies collected on a statewide basis can come back to Tuscola county in the form of educational programs and patient facilities. For example, the society will buy an electrically controlled bed which can be loaned to a cancer patient at no cost to him.

On a countywide basis, the goal for funds was set at $20,400. Mrs. Hoffman said that as a direct result of the crusade last year, two volunteers who had check-ups found they were suffering from the disease. Subsequent surgeries proved successful.

"Awareness is the most important factor we can stress," Mrs. Hoffman said.

Volunteer coordinators involved in this year's crusade are: Mrs. Del Profit, Cass City; Mrs. Ed Golding Sr., Elkland township; Mrs. Fred Sullivan, Elmwood township; Mrs. Jill Kilbourn, Novesta township, and Mrs. Sadie Randall, Kings-ton township.

Volunteers in these areas will be making rounds through the end of May.

THE NEW PROVINCIAL HOUSE extended care facility continues to take shape as workmen build the brick front at the entrance. According to Richard Palm, vice-president of Provincial House, Inc., the facility should be completed sometime in mid-July. Weather caused initial construction delays, but according to Palm, workmen are on schedule.

Larceny, vandalism reported in village

Cass City Police report one larceny and one act of vandalism in the village last week.

Friday, Donald Finkbeiner, 4137 Maple St., reported to police that sometime during the previous week, someone took a mini-bike from his yard. The bike was valued at $75. Police have no clues and continue the investigation.

That same morning, police found the windshield of a truck owned by the Utility Service Company of Richmond had been broken by a stone. Officers said the truck, parked next to the municipal building sustained two holes in the windshield about two inches in diameter each. Glass was found scattered inside the truck.

Police have no suspects and the investigation continues. Tuscola County Sheriff's Deputies arrested a Cass City man Thursday and charged him with being drunk on a public highway.

Deputies said they arrested Gerald Spencer, 3024 Kelly Rd., after he had been reported slumped over the wheel of his automobile which was parked at the intersection of Van Geisen and Purdy Roads in Indianfields township.

The deputies report indicated that Spencer was found to be intoxicated. Beer was also found to be in the car. They stated that a man living in a house near the scene told them Spencer had been sitting at the intersection some 20 minutes before police were summoned.

Soil stewardship week set in county

Soil Stewardship Week, a nation-wide observance which places emphasis on man's obligation to God as stewards of the soil, water and other resources, will be observed May 27-June 3, according to Maynard McConkey, Tuscola Soil Conservation District Director.

"Changing Challenges", the theme of this year's observance, underscores the responsibility which each citizen has in fulfilling his or her roles as caretaker of the earth.

The Tuscola Soil Conservation District and some 3,000 companion Districts throughout the nation along with their State and National Associations are sponsoring the event for the 19th consecutive year. The Tuscola District has distributed, upon request to 43 churches of all faiths in Tuscola county, over 7,000 bulletin inserts, created especially for this year's observance.

Alabama Jubilee returning to Ubyly in June

Due to its overwhelming success during two week ends in April, the Ubyly Lions Club will again present the Alabama Jubilee's version of The Big Circus for four performances in June.

The performance, directed by Dian M. Holdship, played to over 7,000 persons during its two week end stand last April at the Ubyly High School.

Persons still holding tickets for prior performances can turn them into Hanson's Party Store in Ubyly for exchange tickets, according to the producers. Ticket holders will be able to indicate which night they wish to see the performance, eliminating long lines.

Performances are set for Saturday, June 2, at 8:30 p.m., a Sunday Matinee, June 3, at 2:00 p.m., and Monday and Tuesday, June 4 and 5, at 8:30 p.m.

The Big Circus will be performed by the same cast that starred in the production in April.

Caro lawsuit

Memorandum briefs will be filed in the next two weeks involving two cement firms involved in a $17,000 lawsuit.

The original suit, filed in February of 1972 by Carrollton Concrete Mix, Inc., charges Caro Redi-Mix Co., of Caro, with not paying for concrete that was allegedly ordered from the firm in order to complete work at a food store warehouse. The amount of that bill is claimed to be $17,000.

The agreement, a verbal one, was allegedly made sometime prior to October 21, 1971, when Redi-Mix agreed to pay for the concrete, according to the suit.

The suit is being tried before Circuit Court Judge Norman Baguley.

Hawks top USA to roll into finals

Cass City rolled into the final of the district Class C baseball tournament Monday with a convincing 6-3 victory over highly regarded Sebawa-Unionville at Cass City recreational park.

The win places the team in the finals Saturday against Uby.

Uby is considered better than its record. The team features one of the best pitchers in the Thumb and the report is that his sore arm is just now rounding into shape. When right, he throws bullets.

A four-run spurge in the third inning iced the victory for Cass City. The Hawks had moved in front in the opening inning when Dan Mellendorf hit a line drive into right center for three bases and then rode home on a single by Gene Salas.

The Hawks almost salted away the game in the second inning. With the bases loaded Kip Hopper hit a line drive that was speared by the USA second baseman and turned into an easy double play.

But the next inning the Hawks were not to be denied. Don Galbraith opened with a walk and Salas bunted and took first on an error by the third baseman. Pete Frederick then picked up a Texas League single over the infield and Scott Guinther made a perfect bunt and beat it out for a hit. Salas scored and Frederick dashed to third when the sack was left uncovered.

Frederick scored as USA attempted to tag out Guinther

after a pick-off play at first. Guinther dashed to second on the throw to the plate and scored a moment later as Jerry Toner singled.

That rally was all Toner needed as he was as effective as he had to be to keep the hard hitting Patriots in check. It was the first loss of the year for Brad Haist, the USA pitcher.

The win keeps Cass City's record of never having lost the opening game of the State tournament in baseball intact.

DEFEAT FRANKENMUTH

The Hawks went into extra innings last week to post a narrow 9-8 victory over Frankemuth to successfully defend the school's Thumb B Conference championship. This year the Hawks shared the title with Vassar, each with a single defeat.

Girls compete in first track meet

Cass City High School's girls track team captured a first, second, third and two fourth place finishes at the invitational meet held Thursday in Vassar.

This was the team's only meet this year, having been organized too late to participate in regularly scheduled competition.

Kathy Kerbyson took first place in the 50 yard dash with a time of 7.1 seconds. Her teammate, Lena Woodruff, captured second in the same event with a time of 7.3.

Kelley Gee finished third in the high jump with a leap of 4'2". She also finished fourth in the 80 yard hurdles with a time of 13.6.

In the long jump, Lorna Mellendorf sprang 13'8", good enough for a fourth place finish.

Softball throw competition saw Sue Corl place fifth with a throw of 144'9".

Participants in the 400 relay were Becky German, Laurie Decker, Nancy Koepfgen and Kathy Kerbyson.

Coach Brenda Breidinger commented that her squad performed well in their first real competition and she hoped that a regular varsity schedule could be established for next year.

Other schools participating in the invitational meet were Vassar, Reese, Millington, Caro and Unionville-Sebewaing.

CASS CITY HIGH SCHOOL'S Girls' Track Team participated in only one event this year, the Invitational Meet at Vassar last Thursday, and made a good showing.

FOUR-YEAR VETERANS on Hawk baseball teams who compiled a 25-3 record are Gene Salas, left, and Kip Hopper.

Senior pair pace Hawks to 25-3 record

For Cass City High School baseball the last four years has been an epic period.

Consider the record: During these helicon days the Hawks posted a 25-3 record won or shared three Conference titles and never lost a pre-district tournament game.

And two mainstays of each of these championship caliber players have been Kip Hopper and Gene Salas.

Salas has played in every game since joining the squad as a Freshman. He became a starter after about the first four games and has been a fixture at shortstop ever since. Hopper has been a starter since the first game of his Freshman year when he moved in to fill a breach caused by the serious head injury to Lee Taylor.

Coach Fred Hurlburt points to these two boys as one of the very important reasons that the Hawks are still in the race for another pre-district toga and have the best win-loss record of any school in the Thumb B Conference while they helped anchor the team.

Both boys are a little vague about personal accomplishments... but observers point to their fine defensive play over the years as very important to the over-all success of the team.

Both are adequate stickers and both have quickness on the base paths.

Hopper and Salas feel that the best of the teams they have been associated with was the outfit that played together when they were Freshmen.

They give this team the edge over the others because of the pitching. The year the Hawks' one-two mound punch has seldom been equaled in Thumb high school ball. The staff included Rob Alexander and Kim Hopper both accomplished hurlers with control and speed.

While enjoying their diamond success, neither boy has plans for school organized baseball after graduation. Kip says that he has no plans for college.

Gene will enter Michigan State next fall, but has given no serious consideration to playing baseball there.

Summer rec program begins June 18

The Cass City Summer Recreation program will begin June 18 and run through August 5. Arts and crafts will again be offered, along with many recreational activities for all school-age children.

Anyone interested may contact Kelly Pine or Jim MacTavish at the Cass City Intermediate school or Jim Maharg at 872-2532.

NO INITIATIVE

Well-meaning parents who do too much for their children rob them of the chance of learning to do things for themselves.

Although Cass City Junior High track team lost their Thumb B Conference track crown Monday, the young Hawks went through the regular season undefeated. The last dual meet of the year was held Wednesday, May 16, when the Hawks slipped by Marlette, 66 2/3 to 60 1/4.

The results were: 60-yard high hurdles won by Lowe, CC; Phillips, M. Palazzola, CC.

60-yard dash won by Ziegelman, M.

75-yard dash won by Chapin, M.

40-yard run won by Schweninger, M.

800-yard run won by Eubank, CC.

100-yard low hurdles won by McGinnis, M.

100-yard dash won by Chapin, M.

1 mile won by Hendrick, CC.

220-yard dash won by McGinnis, M.

800-yard relay won by Cass City - Walsh, Bader, Hollis, Selby.

440-yard relay won by Cass City - Coryell, Tuckey, Warner, Kaweck.

Pole vault won by McGinnis, M.

Shot put won by Lowe, CC.

High jump won by Eubank, CC.

Long jump won by Hollis, CC.

Cass City fifth in Thumb B meet

Cass City finished far down in the final standings in the annual Thumb B Conference track meet this year as the Vassar Vulcans dominated the meet with 102 1/2 points. The Hawks were fifth with 26 1/2 points.

Rick Harwick of Caro won the Clare McDorman award as the outstanding performer at the meet held in Caro last Wednesday.

Harwick won the 440-yard dash and the 220-yard dash.

One new track record was set when James of Vassar went 21 feet, 4 1/2 inches in the long jump to eclipse the old record set by Dave Clabuech (20 feet, 11 inches) of Lakers.

Cass City's lone first place finish was won by Curt Strickland in the mile. He posted a 4:53.3 mark. Other point winners for Cass City were Kip Hopper, who tied for sixth in the 400; Ed Stoutenburg, who finished fifth in the 100-yard low hurdles, and Steve Selby, sixth in the two-mile run.

Cass City also won points in the relays. The Hawks finished second in the mile relay and fourth in the 400 relay.

Vassar placed first in five of the 15 events. The complete results:

Vassar, 102 1/2; Caro, 63 1/2; Bad Axe, 55 1/2; Frankemuth, 50 1/2; Cass City, 26 1/2; Sandusky, 22; Marlette, 9 1/2; Lakers, 0.

CASS CITY'S JUNIOR HIGH track team was undefeated in dual meets this season but finished third in the Thumb B Conference meet Monday.
